The bread-wasters include, of course, all who prey upon society, producing nothing themselves, and lying in wait to obtain without equivalent what has been won by the industry of others. There is the army of thieves of every description, from the burglar, with his "jimmy" and dark-lantern, to the trustee or official, with his forged securities and "cooked" returns. There are the professional gamblers and speculators who seek to live, not by creating wealth, but by adroitly abstracting it from the unwary and the unfortunate. The path of many such (and even that of single swindles or corners or "transactions" of one kind or another) has been like a cyclone over whole communities of humble homes and hard-earned savings.

There is the whole swarm of sharks which follow in the wake of society, seeking whom they may devour, and snapping up every unguarded morsel or exposed limb. The number of those who thus hang upon the skirts of society, with keen and greedy eyes, and ravenous and reeking jaws, is a dreadful thing to think of. In barbarous or semi-civilized countries, they appear as savage hordes, or as brigands. But where industry is organized, and society is policed, and wealth has been accumulated, their methods are more concealed and ingenious. They approach us, in fact, as contributors to the gayety of life. They are bread-winners for themselves and families, they would claim; but it is as a man who should make wages by carting a maniac's stores and shovelling them into sea. Such are all who pander to men's lusts and follies, and who tempt them to dissipation, extravagance, and idleness. And such are all those, in turn, who spend their money for that which is not bread—in other words, for that which adds weakness instead of nourishment to manhood, and which renders men less able, or less disposed to contribute to the elements of human wealth and welfare. This definition, it will be seen, opens up a wide range of occupations and of expenditures, which we would shrink from dwelling upon, even if space allowed. But one or two of the most prominent and apparent may be enumerated.

The main body of the army of bread-wasters is, of course, the millions who are engaged in the growing, manufacturing, selling, transferring or drinking of liquors. It is estimated that $1,000,000,000 are thus swallowed up every year in this country. Suppose this amount were added to the expenditures for food, clothing, reading and other agencies of comfort and self-improvement, and it will be seen how much less pauperism, ignorance and crime we should have. We spend more for intoxicants than for bread, meat, and education. Judge Noah Davis estimates that nine-tenths of the crimes in New York city are traceable directly to grog-shops, and the London Lancet attributes nine-tenths of disease to the same source. Great Britain drinks up liquor enough every year to pay all the house-rent and buy all the woolen and cotton goods used, with millions of surplus besides. In Liverpool, the consumption of drink equals the entire earnings of fifty thousand laboring families. In New York city alone, there is a larger number of men employed in the sale of liquor than the entire army of the United States. Germany and England spend four times as much for drink as for their vast military establishments, and France three times. War is a fearful enough bread-waster, God knows; but even its enormous withdrawal of labor and of capital from productive into destructive uses, grows small beside the steady, increasing, universal devastation of the liquor trade.

On a minor scale, and with less far-reaching results, is the waste occasioned by the use of tobacco. An industrious, sober mechanic confessed that probably $50 of his earnings went every year for "smoke." What with the beer and the cigar, and perhaps, the rum and the "fine-cut," it is needless to look any farther to explain the depression, if not the "oppression" of labor. If we could only have a good workingman's union organized, with a general system of strikes and boycotts against these "giants of tyranny," we should hear far less of "labor troubles."

As it is, however, we are obliged to deprecate strikes as among the worst agencies in bread-wasting. There doubtless are cases where the interests of underpaid and overworked labor have been furthered by this means, but in the majority of cases, the result is not only failure, but disaster, and the loss falls ten times as heavily upon labor as upon capital. Even had some concessions been won during the strike on the Southwestern railroads, they could not have compensated for the millions upon millions of loss extending through every ramification of society, the destruction of property and of business which had been long in building up, the spending of workmen's earnings to support this army of idlers, and, above all, for the cessation of productive industry and the acquirement of lazy and dissipated habits on the part of the thousands of employes. And as it is clear that the exclusion of the greater part of the strikers from these roads will be permanent, it is frightful to think of the recruits who will ultimately be added to the ranks of vagabondage and crime by those who will drift into the life of tramps and outlaws and drunkards.

Every saloon in Butler County, Pa., has been closed by the persistent remonstrances of the W. C. T. U.

Chicago papers are ciphering out the cost of supporting the 3,500 liquor saloons of this city. The city license is $500 each, or $1,750,000; Government tax $25 each, or $87,500; rent at $600 each, $2,100,000; support of five persons, each $400, $7,000,000; sundries at $200 each, $700,000; first cost of liquor, $11,637,500; making an annual total of $23,275,000. Who pays the bill?

Only a few weeks ago a London Jewish Rabbi said to the editor of the Methodist Times of that city: "Jews never use fermented wine in their synagogue services, and must not use it on the Passover, either for synagogue or home purposes. Fermented liquor of any kind comes under the category of 'leaven,' which is proscribed in so many passages in the Old Testament. I have read recently the passage in Matthew in which the Paschal Supper is described. There can be no doubt whatever that the wine used on that occasion was unfermented. Jesus, as an observant Jew, would not only not have drunk fermented wine on the Passover, but would not have celebrated the Passover in any house from which everything fermented had not been removed. You will allow me, perhaps, to express my surprise that Christians, who profess to be followers of Jesus of Nazareth, can take what he could not possibly have taken as a Jew—intoxicating wine—at so sacred a service as the sacrament of the Lord's Supper." Does such testimony count for nothing as to what kind of wine should be used at the Lord's Table? Does it throw no light whatever on the kind of wine made by our Lord for the wedding feast at Cana?

PROHIBITION STATE CONVENTIONS.

Kansas: July 13 and 14, at Emporia. (A change from the previous announcement that the convention would meet at Bismarck Grove, July 23.)
Connecticut: July 28, at Hartford.
Michigan: July 28, at Lansing.
Wisconsin: July 28, at Madison.
Ohio: July 28 and 29, at Canton:
Nebraska: August 18 and 19, at Lincoln.
Pennsylvania: August 25, at Harrisburg.

LITERATURE.

Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature. Presenting Biographical and Critical Notices, and Specimens from the Writings of Eminent Authors of all Ages and all Nations. Vol. III. Pp 496. Price, 60c. John B. Alden, New York.

The third volume of "Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature" includes all the names of noted writers between Boileau and Byron, with brief biographical sketches and selections from their works. This work will deserve a very extensive sale, not only on account of its cheapness, but because it gives in compact and convenient form a reasonably complete survey of the literature of all ages and peoples. The popular oblong form, large, clear type, handy size and general attractiveness of the volume make this one of the best of the literary encyclopedias. The biographical part is rather too brief, but the selections are carefully edited.

Persons contemplating building will be interested in the July number of Shoppell's Modern Houses, an illustrated architectural quarterly published by the Co-operative Building Association, 191 Broadway, N. Y. It contains, among other useful features, fifty-five designs for modern residences, ranging in prices from $600 to $18,000. The frontispiece is an exterior view of a modern cottage in colors. Miss Maria Parloa contributes an article on the "Model Kitchen," accompanied by a sketch of its plan and furnishings; and a page is given to cistern-building, illustrated by views of the best method of constructing a cistern-filter. A very attractive addition is a translation by Benj. Bucknall, from the French, of the "Habitations of Man in All Ages". A heavy supplementary sheet contains a fine house-plan, which can be cut out and erected into a small model.

"The Breadwinners," a story first published in the Century and attracting wide attention from its anonymous character and its attack on the secret labor lodges, is again remembered as the name of the author becomes known. The latest intelligence in regard to "The Breadwinners" is presented by the Cleveland Sun in these words: "'The Breadwinners' was written jointly by Captain Frank H. Mason, formerly of the Cleveland Leader, and now United States Consul at Marseilles, and his wife. It is not necessary to ask how we know this to be a fact, but the reader can rest content in knowing it to be a fact. The book was written during their first year abroad, and was brought to this country by Colonel John Hay, who found for it a publisher, the latter not knowing to this day the name of the author. All the business has been carried on through Colonel Hay."

Among the leading articles in the July Century are contributions by Theodore Roosevelt and Henry Cabot Lodge on the steeple-chase or fox-hunting in this country, which is now being condemned by Henry Bergh, the philanthropist, for its cruelty. A finely illustrated article on Homing Pigeons follows. "A Day in Surrey with William Morris," the English poet, artist, and socialist, introduces some interesting theories respecting the condition of the laboring classes. The War papers are profusely illustrated, the first of them being a conclusion to the Antietam articles of the previous number and, under the title "In the Wake of Battle," giving a woman's recollections of Confederate hospital work at Shepherdstown during Antietam week. From such a point of observation we get the most real and terrible view of the great struggles of war. Three other papers deal anecdotally with the capture of New Orleans. Captain Beverley Kennon, who commanded the Confederate steamer, the Governor Moore, gives a thrilling description of the fighting and loss of his ship: Commander Albert Kautz, then a lieutenant on the Hartford, describes "Incidents of the Occupation of New Orleans," and Marion A. Baker, then the mayor's private secretary, treats the same subject from Confederate point of view. "France and Indo-China," by Augustine Heard, deals with the causes and fruits of the recent French war in Asia; and Rev. Leighton Parks, in "A Bozu of the Monto Sect," describes a visit to a monastery of one of the Buddhist sects of Japan. "The Labor Question" is ably treated from the point of view of a Western manufacturer, by Edward L. Day; while Theodore L. De Vinne, who prints the Century and St. Nicholas, gives his views on the question of "Co-operation." There is also a letter on the industrial question by William Morris.

The English Illustrated Magazine has some beautiful specimens of the graver's art in the illustrations of "Modern Falconry" and "Charles Kingsley of Eversley," the former being a very full account of the present condition of an old and very popular English sport, the latter tells us of the home life of the author of "Anton Locke," "Hypatia," and "Westward Ho." "On Handwriting" introduces us to the chirography of some of England's celebrated authors, and "Ostrich Farming in Cape Colony," to an enterprise founded on the capricious fashions of Europe and America.

The July St. Nicholas carries its young readers back to the days of the Revolution in articles on Lafayette and Washington, the latter being the continuation of Scudder's "George Washington" which contains the history of the Conway Cabal, Monmouth and Valley Forge. "The Wonders of the Alphabet" is continued, and "Boat-building" is the topic on trades for American boys.

Jarrold and Sons, No. 3, Paternoster Buildings, London, publish a series of tracts, "Friendly Letters" by Miss V. M. Skinner, addressed to workingmen, business men, and professionals of different callings, giving to all kindly advice and giving excellent hints about making their chosen business a power for God. We do not know that these tracts are to be had at any repository in this country. It would be an excellent work to introduce them.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Dr. L. W. Munhall, of Indianapolis, began a month's evangelical work in Denver, assisted by Charles Herald, the singer, of this city. Some 800 persons have signified their desire to the various pastors to unite with their churches.

—Rev. T. F. Hallowell writes to the Conservator from Los Angeles, California, saying that at the quarterly conference for Los Angeles mission, California conference, resolutions were passed condemning the United Brethren commission and its work.

—Colleges of twenty-three States will be represented at the summer school of Bible study to be conducted by Mr. Moody at Northfield.

—Mr. W. T. Russell, a Scotch gentlemen formerly resident in Calcutta, has given $85,000 recently for Christian female education in India.

—In the Province of Shantung, China, the birthplace of Confucius, there were no Christians twenty-five years ago. Now there are 5,000 adherents to the different missions, more than half of them in the churches established by the American Presbyterians. There are thirty ordained and thirty-three female missionaries, and three hundred places of worship.

—The masses are being reached in France to a large extent. It is estimated that more than 400,000 persons attended the McAll mission in Paris alone last year, while Mr. Gibson reports 35,000 and Miss DeBroen, in the Belleville mission, counts 20,000 a year.

—The Sunday-school statistics of the Methodist Episcopal church are now in and footed up for 1885, with the following results: Schools, 22,490; officers and teachers, 246,054; scholars, 1,818,032. This is an increase of 314 schools, 8,582 officers and teachers, and 57,596 scholars.

—The first local Sunday trains on Massachusetts railroads were run to accommodate people who had moved into the country and wished to continue to attend church in Boston.

—A church for the sole use of the Chinese in Brooklyn will probably be erected. Some sixty converted Chinese were present at the recent opening of rooms in Raymond street for worship.

—A memorial church to William H. Vanderbilt is to be erected by the Board of Trustees of the Mission for the Seamen of the City and Port of New York, with the $50,000 which Mr. Vanderbilt bequeathed to that Mission.

—The Dean of Westminster states that in England and Wales there are 600,000 Sunday-school teachers and 5,200,000 scholars; that is, one-fifth of the whole population are in the Sunday-schools.

—The Paris Religious Tract Society proposes to publishes a weekly sermon for the many French Protestants who are prevented from attending regular public worship. This plan has been successfully adopted in Berlin and other places.

—The National Camp-meeting opened at Clear Lake, Iowa, July 9th, and will continue for two weeks. The services are conducted by the Rev. William McDonald, of Boston, President of the National Camp-meeting Association, assisted by a number of eminent divines from all parts of the country. The indications point to a grand and successful meeting.

—The Chicago Congregational Club, at a late meeting, passed a resolution against closing the public schools to allow the children an opportunity to attend the horse-races at agricultural fairs, as was done last fall.

—A United Presbyterian mission, under encouraging prospects, has been organized in Dalton, Georgia. Dalton is a city of northwestern Georgia, capital of Whitfield county, within about 28 miles of its northern boundary, containing a population of about 3,500 people, of whom one-fifth are colored.

—The United Presbyterian church has retired from the Pan Presbyterian Council. The reasons assigned for the withdrawal are two. First, that in the Council held in Belfast in 1884 hymns and paraphrases of Scripture were freely used, contrary to the conscientious convictions of the ministers and elders of the United Presbyterian church then present, and in opposition to its public testimony; and second, that in the reception of churches to its confederation, the Alliance has shown a disposition to interpret in a very lax, and in the view of the United Presbyterian church, an improper way the consensers of the Reformed churches.

—Rev. W. W. Kelley, who went from this city to Inhambane, southeastern Africa, as missionary about a year ago, has determined to return home. He has been sick with malarial fever for months, and is satisfied that he cannot endure the climate, although he delights in the work, and has been blessed with a cheering measure of success. Bro. R. Shemeld and wife, and Harry Agnew, all from St. Paul, went out with Bro. Kelley. They will probably remain.

—The corner-stone of the South Congregational church, at Fortieth street and Drexel boulevard, Chicago, was laid Thursday, in the presence of a large number of people. Rev. Dr. E. F. Williams, the pastor, appropriately opened the exercises. Passages of Scripture bearing on the dedication of a house of prayer to the service of the Lord, were read by the Rev. J. M. Caldwell. Rev. Flavel Bascom, Drs. E. P. Goodwin, Arthur Little, and others took part. The church will seat 1200 and cost $50,000. The membership now numbers 261.

—The American Missionary Association, whose main work is the education of the colored race in the South, to which is added the care of some tribes of Indians in the interior and of Chinese on the Pacific slope, is enabled to show a better income than for years past. For the first eight months of its current fiscal year it has received $174,690.64, whilst the same months of the previous fiscal year yielded only $158,757.17, showing a gain of $15,933.47, of which eleven thousand dollars were from living contributors to its funds.

—The new building of the Young Woman's Christian Association, one of the finest buildings in New York, is rapidly nearing completion in East Fifteenth street, near Fifth aveune. All women of Protestant denominations over sixteen, whether married or single, are eligible for membership. Boarding places are found for all those who desire, and outsiders, who can furnish proper reference, are given the same advantages. In the new building, there will be free classes for cutting and fitting, draping, free-hand drawing, plain sewing, German and French, and singing by note. These will be all under the care of efficient teachers. The building, when completed, will cost $100,000, the whole amount having already been collected. An extensive library of several thousand volumes is one of the attractions of the Association.

—The question of non-attendence at church on Sunday by such large numbers, is claiming attention in England. A meeting of laymen was held recently at Bradford, the gentlemen comprising it belonging to one or other of the evangelical bodies. It was agreed that undenominational churches would not meet the difficulty. It was thought that each church should join in some general plan and favor such a course as would meet the requirements of the day. The following recommendations were agreed upon: Earnest and simple preaching of the Gospel; hearty singing, in which all can join; free seats; constant efforts on the part of Christians in the way of tendering invitations to others to come and worship with them, or to go where taste directed; deeper interest in the spiritual welfare of the young, and the necessity for prayer for the outpouring of Holy Spirit.

—The following is a summary of the American United Presbyterian church as prepared for the meeting of the Assembly: Synods, 9; presbyteries, 60; pastors and stated supplies, 515; without charge, 221; total ministers, 736; ministers deceased, 10; ministers received, 2; ministers dismissed, 8; ministers ordained, 21; ministers installed, 70; ministers released, 71; licentiates, 51; licensures, 25; students of theology, 58; ruling elders, 3,454; congregations with pastors and stated supplies, 616; congregations vacant, 265; total congregations, 881; congregations organized, 20; dissolved, 7; mission stations, 139; new stations during the year, 29; houses of worship erected, 28; total cost of houses, $102,022; average cost; $3,664; congregations having no house, 82; parsonages, 154; erected during the year, 12; total cost of parsonages, $17,000. Members received on profession, 6,247; on certificate, 4,411; deaths and removals, 8,443; total members, 91,086; adults baptized, 1,016; infants baptized, 3,950; Sabbath-schools, 887; officers and teachers, 9,030; number of scholars, 81,595; contributions, $46,206. Contributions for salaries of ministers, $488,926; for congregational purposes, $276,406; for the Boards, $148,166; for general purposes, $49,309; for quarter-centennial, $14,617; total contributions, $977,424; average per member, 11.18; average salary of pastors, $945. These figures show a gratifying advance in almost every particular.

DONATIONS.

Received in cash from May 16th to July 10th, 1886:

For sending the Cynosure to Southern Ministers:

John Dorcas	$ 5 00
J. Rutty	10 00
A. Hamilton	4 80
N. Martin	20 00
H. A. Fischer	1 00
For General Work:
Geo. Warrington	1 00
Hiram Preston	1 00
Josiah Shaw	1 25
Estate of H. Smith	300 00
For Free Tract Fund:
N. Martin	20 00

W. I. PHILLIPS.
Treasurer.

LODGE NOTES.

The Chicago Council of the Conservator's League of America met at the Sherman Thursday evening and adopted a constitution and initiated ten new members into the secret order. They are taking steps toward instituting councils in Iowa, Indiana, and Wisconsin.

The Nobles of the order of the Mystic Shrine gave a benefit for the Masonic Orphan's Home at the Academy of Music Thursday night. The house was packed, and between $2,500 and $3,500 were realized. The feature of the evening was the presentation of a diamond jewel, by Medinah Temple, to Noble Dan Shelby. through the medium of Illustrious Grand Potentate J. H. Thompson. Mr. Shelby introduced Mr. Thompson who said: "We wish to thank you, and you—" and then stopped. Dan Shelby rushed out and asked: "Are you stuck, Jim?" [Shouts of "cow bell."] In accepting the jewel, Shelby said: "I shall ever endeavor to wear it with an honor, and if any one ever wants anything of me I'll try and get there."—Inter Ocean.

Thursday afternoon about thirty union carpenters assembled on Thirty-ninth St., in this city, and marched into the Stock Yards. On the way they compelled every carpenter they found at work to lay aside his tools and join them. They proceeded to Emerald avenue, on which G. F. Swift is building a house for his son. While they were endeavoring to induce the men employed by Mr. Swift to quit work the police were sent for. When the patrol wagon filled with officers arrived, the strikers had left the scene. Pursuit was given, and twenty-five of them were found in a saloon.

Joseph Fricke, the leader of all the socialists and anarchists of western Pennsylvania, was arrested Thursday at the instance of the postal authorities, on a charge of sending written matter inclosed in newspapers through the mails as lower class mail or printed matter. Fricke was agent of Herr Most's paper, Der Freiheit, and the written matter was inclosed in that paper. The postal authorities opened a number of packages sent by Fricke and also discovered incendiary circulars calling upon workmen to arm themselves, and revenge the deaths of the six men killed during the riots at McCormick's works in Chicago. It is the intention of the postoffice authorities to push the case, and United States District Attorney Stone said it was very probable that Fricke would be indicted for each offense, which would insure a heavy fine and long imprisonment.

Forty-four members of the St. Louis council of the Knights of Labor have been charged with conspiracy by the Missouri Pacific railroad, and warrants issued for their arrest. It is stated that the organizers of the Knights have been at work among the servant girls of St. Louis, with the result that a local assembly has been organized, and they will be admitted to the Knights of Labor as part of a National District Assembly, to be composed entirely of servant girls. The assembly already numbers in the neighborhood of 150 members, and is increasing at every meeting.

NOTICE.

The last page of MASONIC OUTRAGES will be in type by the time this paper reaches you, and (D. V.) all orders will be filled next week.

BUSINESS.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 28 to July 10 inclusive:

R A Foster, W S McClanahan, Wm H Reed, S M McCononghey, I B Stowell, H Haywood, Jos Pixley, Wm H Myers, D L Morgan, F Shaver, S S Granuis, N Callender, B Hester, D W Butler, G T Markey, J B Wells, M Fitch, S B French, J Compton, J H Brown, D A Richards, J G Scott, S I Barrett, I Marlow, Mrs F Collins, A K Harden, H Wykhuysen, W Sperry, W M Beden, J K Weber, Mrs L R Boone, Jno Russell, J McKelvey, C P Hinman, Mrs C A Pardee, S Jackson, Jas Thatcher, Jno Morrison, R S Woodward, C B Shirk, D B Sherk, J J Cox, Reuben Cole, G T Dissette.

Orders for "Masonic Outrages" have been received from the following:

James C Allix, Chas T Collins, Wm H Robbins, Jas Rignold, W H Parker, Mrs Rufus Parker, Jno Hines, D R Mitchell, J Ramsey, Mrs Haire, H H Cannady, S A Pratt, Mrs E A Rowley, C M Strickler, W M Ames, J C Young, F R Griffin, M Ingalsby, Jr, Chas W Morris, L T Fuller, W Lockhart, P Findlay, A C Snyder, W H Blakeslee, J Chadwick, Rev. F H Gates, H Plummer Sr, M L Howe. Prof W L McGowan, Rev E J Clemens, P Howe, H. Siemiller, J Fait, J Ring, N Miner, W Caldwell, Wm Grossman, Mrs. B F Searles, T Gibb, D J Santimier, S Bingham, A C Bundy, Rev Rice, J R Alcock, A Lagerquist, C H Evans, Wm McBride, A S Boyd, T S Walter, Mrs A I Salisbury, John Harvey, J A Van Epps, J Barnes, Sr, R W Chapman, R F Hurd, J Prothero, J Decker, James Harvey, Rev I P Smith, Dr H S B Smith, J H Hunting, E Smith, W Fenton, D Hyde, Henry Ramsey, J Stratton, J Cassidy, N D Rose, D Simon, Mrs E Kay, C Smith, H G Judson, J Weaver, W J Feemster, C D Hoyt, Sr, R McNair, W Vine, J E Mathews, Amanda Banks, J M Adair, J P Osborn, C Winter, John Dorcas, Rev E Cronemvett, N Callender, R Cole, A Andre, R Loggan, C S D Cowles, T Townshend, Thos Gilmore, T Stewart, W Stewart, H S Limbocker, K A Orvis, J C Card, S Simpson, R J Williams, W W Leighton, J W Raynor, Mrs L M Hoyt, E Bascom, D Marshall, D G Foster, J Smith, I Jackson, H D Jones, Robt Jones, W H Reed, A Hamilton, W T Bonstell, H Johnson, H Preston, Mrs E Tuttle, E P Townsley, B Williams, H N Waldo, R McClelland, B Hester, W P King, Mrs S B Allen, S Avery, W Sperry, H Wykhuysen, S C Taylor, G T Denman, Rev Jno Allison, T E Cunningham, J Ralston, A C Moffatt, Mrs R Schnellbacker, R Miller, Mrs L Hinsdale, W M Beden, J K Weber, J S Shock, Geo Brokaw, A Pifer, F A Oldis, J M Clark.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and postoffice address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS
AND
FRIENDLY GREETINGS

Is a forty-page, illustrated, monthly family magazine, edited by J. F. AVERY Halifax, N. S.

Price 75 Cents per Year if Prepaid.

Its columns are devoted to Temperance, Missionary Intelligence, Household Hints, Short Stories and Illustrations, making twenty-eight pages of reading matter suitable and profitable for young and old, with an average of twelve illustrations in each number, this will give a magazine of 40 pages monthly for 75 cents a year, and will, therefore, be one of the cheapest sold. Moreover it can be relied on as containing wholesome litrature for the home and family. Our object is the extension of purity and knowledge among the people

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.
BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.
—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;
OR
Memory Culture.
By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

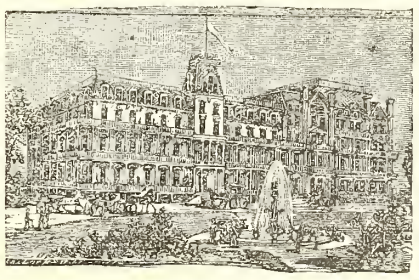
We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject. —INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING."
THE
Man Traps of the City,
BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of



The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills

The Medical and Surgical SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artifical climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.
Sing the Reform Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular hooks against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page hook of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS
FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY, to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT,

20 Cents each.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2			77½
No. 3			78
Winter No 2	76½	@	80
Corn—No. 2	36½	"	37
Oats—No. 2	29	@	33¼
Rye—No. 2			62
Bran per ton	9 00	@	9 25
Flour	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@	10 00
Mess pork per bbl	8 80		9 00
Butter, medium to best	08	@	15
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	50	@	1 35
Eggs			12
Seeds—Timothy	1 75	@	2 00
Flax	1 06	@	1 10
Broom corn	04	@	09½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@	14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@	18 00
Wool	12	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 60	@	5 50
Common to good	2 25	@	4 40
Hogs	2 75	@	4 85
Sheep	2 25	@	5 25

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter	87	@	94
Spring			88
Corn	40	@	48
Oats	33	@	49
Mess Pork	10 00	@	11 75
Eggs			12½
Butter	10		17
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 00	@	4 85
Hogs	4 15	@	4 65
Sheep	3 50	@	3 75

HOME HINTS.

To inquirer for remedy for kerosene in carpet. Lay a blotter or soft brown paper over the spot, and press with a warm iron. Repeat with fresh papers till the spot is removed.

If your lamp burners become clogged and dim, boil them in water in which a good-sized lump of salaratus and a small quantity of soap has been dissolved. When well boiled, rub quickly while hot, and you will be pleased with the effect.

Means for extinguishing a fire, which have been used, are di sulphide of carbon, liquefied sulphurous acid, the gaseous products from under the boiler, water-glass, salt, magnesium chloride, sulphate of aluminium, ammonia gas, borax, sodium phosphate, Glauber salts, soda, etc. Burning fats, resins, pitch, etc., can be successfully extinguished by placing wire gauze of very fine mesh over the burning mass. The reason for this, which explains also the efficiency of the Davy safety lamp, is that flames are not transmitted through wire gauze, as the wire, being a good conductor, conducts away the heat, preventing the flames from passing through it. Sand is a very good agent for extinguishing fires originating in pitch, tar, petroleum and its products; in this case water will be of little value, while sand, when piled upon burning substances, cuts off the supply of oxygen from the air, causing the flames to be extinguished.

Sunflowers are used in Wyoming Territory for fuel. The stalks when dry are as hard as maplewood, and make a hot fire, and the seed-heads, with the seeds in, are said to burn better than the best hard coal. An acre of sunflowers will furnish fuel for one stove a year.

Oil-cloth may be improved in appearance by rubbing it with a mixture of a half ounce of beeswax in a saucerful of turpentine. Set this in a warm place until they can be thoroughly mixed. Apply with a flannel cloth and then rub with a dry flannel.

Wipe mica that has become soaked, with hot vinegar, and it will repay you for your labor.

The use of borax or ammonia instead of soap, in washing blankets, will help to preserve the softness of the blankets and the brightness of the colored stripes.

TO SOFTEN HARD PUTTY.—To soften putty that has become hard by exposure, so as to remove it easily from a sash, take one pound of pearlash and three pounds of quick-stone lime; slack the lime in water, then add the pearlash, and make the whole about the consistency of paint. Apply it to the putty on both sides of the glass, and let it remain for twelve hours, when the putty will be so softened that the glass may be taken out of the frame with the greatest facility.

The following is given as a cheap mode of rendering fabrics uninflamable: Four parts of borax and three parts sulphate of magnesia are shaken up together just before being required. The mixture is then dissolved in from 20 to 30 parts of warm water. Into the resulting solution the articles to be protected from fire are immersed, and when they are thoroughly soaked they are wrung out and dried—preferably in the open air.

BITES AND STINGS.—Almost all these are destructive from their acid nature, consequently the cure is an alkali. Spirits of hartshorn is one of the strongest, and is kept in almost every household, and you have only to pour some of it out in a teacup and dabble it on with a rag. Relief is immediate.

If you have no hartshorn, then saleratus is a suitable alkali. Every cook in the land has saleratus, and we are daily eating ourselves into the grave by its extravagant use—the use of half a thimbleful a week is extravagant.

Moisten it with water, and use as in the case of hartshorn; or, pour a tea cup of boiling water on as much wood ashes, stir it, and in a few minutes you will have an alkali. The lye of ashes will answer a good purpose while the physician is coming.

Remember the principle—bite is an acid, the cure is an alkali.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Terms cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1 must be sent with order as guaranty that the books will be taken.

[Unless otherwise designated these works are bound in paper.]

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated, a complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of each degree, by Pres. J. Blanchard of Wheaton College; 640 pages, 75c, cloth $1. First three degrees, 376 pages, 40c, cloth 75c.

Knight Templarism illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the council and commandery, 341 pages, 50c, cloth $1.

Mah-Hah-Bone, comprises the Hand-Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance, bound in one volume; 589 pp, cloth $1.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge; 420 pages cloth, 75c.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. An illustrated ritual of the five degrees of female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; 20c.

Light on Freemasonry, by Elder David Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a member of the craft." Cloth, $1.50. First part, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, paper, 75c.

Freemasonry Exposed, by Capt. Wm. Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished; 25 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance, illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees; 6c.

Grand Lodge Masonry, its relation to civil government and the Christian religion, by Pres. J. Blanchard; 5 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois; 15c.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trials; also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush; 10c.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry; 338 pages, 40c, cloth 60c.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted, by E. Bonayne; 207 pages, 40c.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry; 25c.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned, by Rev. J. W. Bain; 20c.

Masonry a Work of Darkness. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees; 15c.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil, by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook; 15c.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, M. E. Presiding Elder, a seceding Master Mason; 10c.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. A. L. Post; 5c.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion; 5c.

Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian Should not be a Freemason, by Rev. Robert Armstrong; 5c.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry; 15c.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the lodge encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees; 50c, cloth $1.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own Utterances; its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word, by Rev. J. H Brockman; 25c, cloth 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver; 10 cents.

OTHER SECRET SOCIETY RITUALS.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. The two bound together; 10c.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor; 25c.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated; 15c.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin; 25c.

Temple of Honor Illustrated; 25c.

Good Templarism Illustrated; 25c.

Five Rituals bound together—Odd-fellowship, (old work), Knights of Pythias, Good Templars, the Grange and Grand Army of the Republic; cloth, $1.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated—Temple of Honor, Adoptive Masonry, United Sons of Industry and Secret Societies Illustrated; $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"Between Two Opinions, or the Question of the Hour," by Miss E. E. Flagg, a reform story founded on fact, told with wonderful strength and interest, showing the power of the secret labor and temperance societies, and the prohibition movement. Cloth, $1.00.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of secretism in the various relations of every-day life. Cloth $1.50

Holden with Cords; or, the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg; 50 cents, cloth $1.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry, by Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin; 35 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Broken Seal; or, Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan, by S. D. Greene; 40c, cloth 75c.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, by Gen. J. W. Phelps; 50c.

John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties; 35c, cloth $1.

General Washington opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Gov. Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies." 10c.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. 25 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher; 15c, cloth 35c.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Captain Wm. Morgan; 25c.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times, by Eld. David Bernard; 10c.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. 5c.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies; 10c.

Freemasonry a Fonrfold Conspiracy, address of Pres. J. Blanchard before the Pittsburg Convention; price 5c.

A Masonic Conspiracy, by Mrs. Louisa Walters; 20c.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. 5c.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason; 25c.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies; a powerful address; 10c.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury; 10c.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of of secret societies with the constitution and laws, by Francis Semple; 15c.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. J. D. Brownlee; 5c.

History of the National Christian Association; 25c.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies (bound together); cloth, $1.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Wasnington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 8th to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

IN BRIEF.

Still another African expedition is to be undertaken. Count Samuel Teleki is at the head of it, and will soon start for Zanzibar, after having conferred with Crown Prince Rudolph, of Austria, who is greatly interested in the enterprise.

Since 1874, over 23,000 savings-banks have been opened in the schools of France, in which the children have deposited nearly $2,500,000. Birmingham, England, which in 1876 had two school penny-banks, had eighty-six last year, in which $15,000 was deposited.

A Maine farmer was dragging stones and lost his fid or stick to put through the links of the chain to hold its grip. The story goes that he absent-mindedly used his finger as a fid, that when the chain tightened up of course his finger snapped off, and that he afterward gravely remarked to a friend: "I saw my mistake the minute I did it."

The New York Times Alaskan exploring expedition sailed from Port Townsend, W. T., June 14th. Its object is the exploration of the almost wholly unknown St. Elias Alps. The commander of the expedition is Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka, who has already explored Alaska's great river, the Yukon, and led the expedition of 1879 over the route of Sir John Franklin's party. The scientific work of this expedition will be in charge of Professor William Libbey, Jr., professor of physical geography in Princeton College.

The product of the State of Colorado for 1885 is estimated to have been $4,669,899 in gold, and $15,427,973 in silver, making a total of $29,097,872, or a decrease of $202,128 when compared with the report of 1884.

The total production of gold in the United States for the thirty-one months, ending with January, 1886, was about $69,000,000, which added to the $11,228,117 of net imports, makes a total of $80,228,117. From this deduct say, $10,000,000 consumed in the arts, leaving a net increase of gold in thirty-one months of $70,000,000. For the same time the production of silver was about $127,000,000, from which deducting $37,000,000 of exports and $12,000,000 used in the arts, would leave about $78,000,000 increase of silver in thirty-one months.

Old lady (who has met with an accident, but is coming out all right) to her son: "Josh, ye didn't beller none when you thought I was dyin.' I don't b'lieve ye care no gret fôr me." "Thet ain't no sign as I know on," says Josh. "I was too busy over ye to beller. I hadn't no no time." "Wa'al, ye mought a bellered a little fur look's sake. I weren't so fur gone but what I'd a known't." "I mought beller a little now ef 'twould mend matters any." This with a merry twinkle in his eye. The old lady seemed to think there was more to this than appeared at first, and, after studying the matter a little time, said. "'Pears to me 'twould look a little as though ye were sorry I come out on't.

The commissioners having charge of the erection of a monument over the grave of General Israel Putnam at Brooklyn, Windham county, have decided to build the monument on the postoffice site, near the Mortlake House. The site is the gift of Thomas S. Marlor, and the postoffice building will be moved back some eighty-five feet to accommodate the structure. The commissioners have decided upon an equestrian statue, if one can be provided within the appropriation of $10,000. General William H. Putnam, a great-grandson of the Revolutionary hero, has offered to move the body of his ancestor from the cemetery in Brooklyn to the site selected by the commissioners.

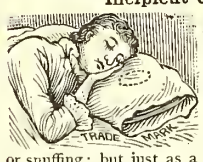
Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY,



of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	3
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men,	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	6
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100. $3.60. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MAH-HAH-BONE,

COMPRISING IN ONE VOLUME,

HAND BOOK OF Freemasonry,

Which gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the oaths, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained:

The Master's Carpet

Which explains the true source and meaning every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, by showing the principles on which the order is founded: and

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

Which illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, and gives a brief explanation of each, making a most valuable compilation of information concerning Masonry. Bound in fine cloth covers. 589 pages. Price $1.00. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS; —OR— The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The Department of Agriculture, at Washington, reports that the outlook for the cotton crop is unfavorable. The avesrge is below that of last year. Corn is one point better and promises a fair yield, though the Nebraska crop is suffering from drouth.

The United States Senate, in executive session Friday, rejected the nomination of John Goode, of Virginia, to be Solicitor General of the United States.

Mr. Call offered a resolution in the Senate calling on the President to direct the American representatives in Mexico to investigate the statements made in the newspapers, that citizens of the United States are confined in Mexican dungeons without trial for alleged offenses against the laws of Mexico, and that their final trial has been postponed without cause.

President Cleveland Tuesday sent to the Senate the name of Fitz John Porter to be colonel in the army of the United States, the commission to date from May 14th, 1861.

Congressman William H. Cole was buried in Baltimore Sunday afternoon. Shortly before the funeral Mrs. Eleanora Cole, mother of the deceased, died from the shock occasioned by his death.

COUNTRY.

Two unknown men perished in a fire at the Benton House, No. 154 South Clark street, Chicago, at an early hour, last week Monday morning.

Some 300 letters were received at the Chicago Postoffice, a part of the mail of the wrecked steamer Oregon, which was found in a bag off Cape Hatteras. The mail has laid in the water for months and has drifted over 480 miles, but all of the letters but one can be delivered, the addresses being so that they can be read. A few packages of merchandise were also in the mail bag and they also can be delivered.

Pioneer Press specials from various points in Dakota, report intensely hot weather, the thermometer standing at 105 in the shade, July 5th. At Pierre a violent hot wind blew down several houses and drove the people to cellars to avoid suffocation.

A heavy rain at New Orleans Sunday last damaged the strees, and flooded basements. Two colored children were drowned by falling into gutters.

Durant, in Scott county, Iowa, is becoming notorious for the number of suicides occurring there, no less than four self-murders taking place in the last few weeks. The last victim was Hans Thiel, who hanged himself in his woodshed Wednesday.

The use of natural gas in the manufactories of Pittsburg has done away with the consumption of 189,800 bushels of coal a day, and has thrown about 5,000 men out of work in that region.

In the trial of the seventeen Bohemian boycotters of Mrs. Landgraf, the New York baker, the jury Thursday brought in a verdict of guilty against six of them. Four of the prisoners were sentenced to ten days' imprisonment, and two of the most violent ones to thirty days.

It is now believed that arsenic had been placed in the ice cream which poisoned 175 persons at a church festival at New Germantown, N. J June 17th. One of the suspected persons has disappeared.

The Republicans of Kansas, in convention at Topeka Thursday, re-nominated Governor Martin, Lieutenant Governor A. P. Reddle, and Secretary of State, E. B. Allen. D. M. Valentine was nominated for Judge of the Eleventh District. The platform indorses a protective tariff and prohibition, arraigns the Democratic party, and expresses sympathy with the Irish home-rule movement.

Robbers invaded the postoffice at Minneapolis, Minn., Thursday night, and carried off $20,000 in money and stamps.

Wind and hail storms at Benson and Sleepy Eye, Minn., Thursday night wrecked buildings and destroyed crops. Freight cars were blown from the tracks, and thousands of acres of grain ruined.

There are at present 310 blast furnaces, with a capacity of 121,650 tons of pig-iron in operation, and 335 with a capacity of 68,015 tons out of blast. While the demand is restricted, and stocks at the furnace have been increasing since March, the weekly production of pig-iron is reported greater than ever before.

The fourteen months' drought in Western Texas remains unbroken and cattle are starving. Settlers are selling their farms for mere trifles and leaving for the East in dire poverty.

A fierce rain, hail, and thunderstorm swept over the Scranton (Pa.) section Wednesday evening, wrecking windows, leveling trees and fences, unroofing houses, and destroying crops.

The Prohibitionists of Minnesota in convention Wednesday nominated J. E. Childs for governor and J. Finkham for lieutenant governor.

Seven men, who were boycotting a bakery, were Wednesday, at Cincinnati, held to the Grand Jury in $1,000 each on a charge of blackmail.

Seventy persons were poisoned Monday at Coulterville, Ill., by eating picnic ice cream, four of the victims dying a few hours later.

Colonel George B. Corkhill, who conducted the prosecution of Guiteau, died Tuesday at Mount Pleasant, Iowa.

FOREIGN.

Full quaranteen has been ordered at Alexandria against all arrivals from Austria and Italy, because of the increase of the cholera.

In the French Chamber of Deputies Friday a man supposed to be insane fired a revolver, the bullet passing close to the head of the President of the Chamber.

Russia has informed the powers that Batoum, an the Black Sea, is no longer a free port. The Berlin press concurs in the belief that this announcement is the first step in the Czar's denunciation of the treaty of Berlin. Fifteen thousand Russian troops have passed through Odessa and are massing in Bessarabia.

The massing of Russian troops in Bessarabia causes great anxiety in military circles on the continent. The Constantinople correspondent of the London Telegraph states that there is a general belief in Turkey that war between Russia and Austria will not be long delayed.

The sum of 16,000,000 roubles has been set apart for improving ports on the Black Sea and Sea of Azoff, to enable them to admit the largest Russian ironclads.

Rioting broke out Thursday afternoon in Cardiff, Wales. The police charged the crowd and wounded over 100 persons. Twenty of the injured were seriously hurt, and were conveyed to the hospital.

Panama Canal shares are depressed and have declined to 418 francs. M. De Lesseps has requested Prime Minister De Freycinet to withdraw the Panama Canal Lottery Loan bill, but he reserves the right of appealing to the people to subscribe to a fresh issue of Panama Canal shares. The Panama Canal Company has decided to issue bonds instead of raising a lottery loan.

The London Standard says: "A speedy settlement of the Afghan frontier question seems hopeless. The Russians are claiming Khamiab, which, as is well known, has been an Afghan possession for thirty-five years.

News comes from New Zealand via Australia of fearful volcanic eruptions in the Auckland Lake district. The disturbance began with vivid lightning and an earthquake about 4 A M. Successive shocks took place for several hours, when a leaden-colored cloud of fire-dust burst over the doomed villages. Mount Tareivera was the first volcano to break forth, and hardly were flames seen issuing from its crater than the entire Paeroa range of mountains belched forth in sympathy, hurling flames of burning lava and stones over the surrounding country. For the first time in tradition the extinct volcano of Ruapeha was awakened into activity. The entire country over an extent of 120 miles long by twenty in breadth was nothing but a mass of flame and hot, crumbling soil, which in places rose to a height of four thousand feet capped at the highest point by the Te Kopha geyser, said to have been of the grandest in the world. During all this time showers of dust continued to fall until it became so dense as to make the day as dark as night, and not until the second day did the dust cease falling. It was noticed that the dust emitted a strong sulphurous smell. Numerous small native villages were totally destroyed.

THE SAFEST FOOD IN SUMMER

For Young or Delicate Children.

A Sure Preventive of

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives where no other food would be retained. Its basis is SUGAR of MILK, the most important element of mothers' milk.

It contains no unchanged starch and no Cane Sugar, and therefore does not cause sour stomach, irritation, or irregular bowels.

It is the Most Nourishing, the Most Palatable, the Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

Sold by Druggists—25 cts., 50 cts., $1.00. Send for pamphlet giving important medical opinions on the nutritious of Infants and Invalids.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,

of the Chicago Press.

THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.

ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,

143 LaSalle St.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.

Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President, BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

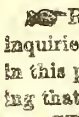
CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Pat'd Dec. 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc. Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufacturers of stamped Rug Patterns and dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo O

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.



SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest,

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mf'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 44. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1886. WHOLE No. 847.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Powderly on Temperance. 8
College Societies..... 8
The Knights of Labor in Illinois..... 8
The Trial of the Anarchists..... 8
The Secret Law-and-Order Lodges..... 8
The President and the Cardinal..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Lord's Burden..... 1
Civil Government vs. Secret Societies..... 2
The Sabbath..... 2
A Better Policy..... 2
Is it Consistent?..... 3
SELECTIONS:
Civil Liberty and Equal Rights..... 3
Parade and Work..... 3
The Armament Plague... 3
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
LECTURE LIST..... 7
THE SECRET EMPIRE:
The Anarchist Lodge on Trial..... 4
Press Comment..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
The N. C. A. National Convention; A Good Word from New Jersey. 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Presbyterians vs. Presbyterians; The Sabbath and the Law; In Morgan's Time; Vote as You Pray; Pith and Point.....5, 6
OBITUARY..... 7
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES... 12
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
THE N. C. A..... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
LODGE NOTES..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16

It will prove a happy day for Louisiana if the passage of the bill prohibiting the opening of shops, stores, saloons, and other places of business shall be carried out in faithfulness and godly fear. The public sentiment in favor of the law is greatly encouraging, and quiet Sabbaths are promised. Yet there is reason to fear that in the exemption of newspapers, places of amusement, and some other classes of business, there has been left too much for the adversary of souls, and with these agencies he will soon practically revoke the law, by making all men indifferent to it. If it has not a foundation in truth and righteousness it is worthless.

Just before the sanguinary riots of May the Knights of Labor order began the publication in this city of a weekly journal and soon after purchased a controlling interest in a small morning paper, the Sun. Both were printed by the Chicago Sun Co. Last week the Sun, which had become an evening sheet, suddenly set in a threatening cloud and will not appear again, it is said, until a $10,000 mortgage is cleared off. The employes claim they have not received their earnings for a week and fear that the promises of the order are not always kept. That is the opinion of many other people.

There is a profound significance in the fact that among the first and most important witnesses in the anarchist trial in this city was a man who cannot speak English. Yet he was an anarchist, presided at their meeting, was a member of one of their "groups," and belonged to the "Lehr and Wehr Verein." This latter is a secret society for instruction in the use of arms, and numbers some two hundred in Chicago. It was a training school for violence, misrule and murder. Here is a man, representative of a considerable class, who has come over from Europe to destroy society and massacre its defenders, and before he can learn our language is actually engaged in his desperate work. The serious question in this matter lies between the liberality of our laws respecting aliens, or our private neglect of these misled and savage foreigners. Shall we drive them back, or put them to school at quarentine?

Governor West, of Utah, has issued a proclamation that will cause some gnashing of teeth about Temple Square in Salt Lake City. Since the Mormon missionaries are continually sending in new levies to be swallowed up in this malestrom of superstition and lust, he proclaims to all the world that the laws of the Territory will be impartially executed upon all, and immigrants who propose joining themselves to Mormondom render themselves liable to their penalties. A few weeks since the Mormons were flattering themselves that in the new governor they had found a friend, and they breathed with relief when the firm hand of Governor Murray was removed from the helm of territorial government. But they must learn that laws founded upon justice, honor and truth must be obeyed, and those who rebel will be crushed under the rod of an outraged and indignant nation.

The refusal of the Grand Army lodges to heed the request of the Womans' Christian Temperance Union, that intoxicants be forbidden at the approaching general meeting of that order in San Francisco, will discourage any attempt to persuade the Knight Templar Masons meeting in St. Louis, in September, to frown upon the wine cup. The saloonists of that city are cheerfully awaiting their guests, remembering with deep satisfaction the experiences of Chicago and San Francisco. Elwood E. Thorne, of New York, a prominent Knight Templar, says that the California Masons have arranged for a car-load of fruit and wine to arrive in St. Louis every day of the conclave. Nevertheless, as "knights" must be gallant and obedient to the wish of fair ladies, Miss Willard and Mrs. Lathrap may venture a letter and a speech to the grandees of lodgery.

There are other items of extravagance connected with this conclave beside the wine bills of Montgomery St. Temple, San Francisco. One California commandery has ordered a peculiar badge from Europe costing $1,500, and the Grand Commandery of that State has voted $5,000 to its officers to spend in entertaining friends in St. Louis. With such premonitions the carousal at St. Louis promises to surpass any previous experience.

A powerful political ring, backed by a Masonic ring, has been well smashed in Iowa. Mr. Brown, elected Auditor of the State, aroused the antagonism of the home insurance companies by his rigid examination into their management, and refusal to endorse official crookedness. He was thereupon assailed by Clarkson, of the State Register, of Des Moines, a Freemason, who once attempted to prove St. John a greater rascal than himself. Buren R. Sherman, the governor, a member of Albert Pike's 32-degree lodge, was drawn into the ring and asked Brown to resign, and finally, without legal right, attempted to put one of his own tools into the office. Brown resisted, and Sherman called out his militia. But the people who elected both were inclined to see fair play; so a sham and secret investigation was made by the ring, at which some of Brown's witnesses were not allowed to testify. This failed, and the persecuted auditor at length secured a trial before the State Senate under articles of impeachment. After eight weeks' trial the vote last week Tuesday acquitted Brown on every charge, on several unanimously, and on but two the vote was 15 to 35. This vindication does honor to the great State of Iowa.

The Catholic Review seems anxious that our navy and sea-coast fortifications shall be greatly increased, and without delay, to enable us to resist an attack from the British government, which it describes as the "most conscienceless great power the world has ever seen." We are not set for the defence of the British government, but the Review ought to, and does know, if not blinded by prejudice, that aside from all moral considerations the commercial ties of these two great nations render war with each other almost impossible. Since the war of 1812–14 there have been many occasions for international animosities which were all happily averted without war. Never in the history of the two nations was there on the whole a kindlier feeling and less reason to fear a conflict, and never would an invasion of our country be fraught with so great danger to the invader than to-day. We are sorry to see a great journal prostituting its influence to promote a war spirit between nations kindred in race and religion, and cemented by mutual interests.

THE LORD'S BURDEN.

BY REV. J. C. MCFEETERS.

The liquor traffic is counted a burden. A crushing burden it is. The weight lies heavy on humanity; heavy on the nation; heavy on the home; heavy on the heart. It is heavy upon all that it touches. But the Lord is under it all. The prodigious load falls upon him to be carried. And the exclamation arises from millions of homes, "Lord, how long?" When will justice come to the relief of patience?

His generous providence must sustain its entire weight. He must furnish the wheat, and the corn, and the rye, and the barley, and the hops. The dew drop kisses the fatness of his soil, and the breeze fans it, and the delicate fingers of light gather it up, and pack it away in the golden grain. Then the harvester harvests it; and the thresher threshes it. Now are the mills ready to grind it; and mothers are waiting to bake it; and children hungry to eat it. But the brewer comes; with his key of gold he opens the granary; he empties the bins; he extorts the life of the beautiful grain through the still, or poisons it in the vat, and from his tanks baptizes the world with death; while the mill stands still, and mothers wring their hands in agony, and starvlings wail in want, or live on coarser fare. Is this not a burden upon the Lord?

The trade is supported by the finances of the Lord. There is no money on earth but his. He owns the world and its fullness. The gold is his, and the silver. He has made the precious metals; he distributes them to whomsoever he will. But each must give account according to the trust invested in his hands. And is it not a burden to the Lord to see his funds used in this nefarious business? To see his investments so employed as to produce bloated bodies, broken hearts, vulgar tongues, gory streets, squalid homes, blackened characters, dissipated sons, abandoned daughters, hopeless deaths, and dishonored graves? Is he not grieved to see his treasures, instead of making the desert blossom as the rose, making the fruitful field wither?

The liquor trade is a burden upon God's goodness. Divine goodness deals out her blessings with prodigal hand upon our country. Our fields are fertile; our sky is gracious; our north wind is crystal with health; our south wind is fragrant with fruit; our mountains are storehouses of wealth; our plains are covered with flocks and herds; our lakes are dotted with sails; our rivers are belts of commerce. The God of nature, our God of Revelation, has most highly honored our land. Here he has combined the greatest advantages, to make this the home of peace, plenty, and prosperity. But the trade of intoxicants has come to poison his mercies, to waste his blessings, to devour his goodness. And this it does in a fiendish manner. It devours the mercies that make home beautiful; and the mercies that make man honorable; and the mercies that make wealth abound; and the mercies that make life happy. And with all its rapacity, is ill-favored as before. It brings disease where would be health; and want where would be plenty; and sorrow where would be joy; and crime where would be virtue; and strife where would be peace; and despair where would be hope; and delirium tremens where should be heavenly felicity. It flings a curse over divinest blessings.

God has planted the tree of prosperity in this country. It is large enough, and has root enough, and branches enough, to furnish fruit in plenty to all our millions. But intemperance, like a wild vine, has coiled around the tree. The heavy coil is plowing deep curves round and round. The channels of life are being choked: the branches are being suffocated: the fruit is in danger of growing scarce and bad. How long will the Lord thus see his mercies dwarfed?

The Lord is required to carry this monstrous trade. From his family of human beings must come the men who run the business, and the men who become the drunkards, and the women who are despoiled of all that woman prizes, and the children who are lost amidst its multitudinous crimes. From this family it gets the names it dishonors, the characters it defiles, the morals it dissipates, and the souls it damns. Here it comes for all the talents it destroys, the bright genius of the poet, of the author, of the statesman, of the mechanic. It goes to God's casket for every gem it flings into the bottomless pit. Out of his resources all its expenses are supplied. It draws instruction from his sciences for the mingling of its poisons, fills his days with the scenes of the saloon and the gutter; makes his mercy the clean canvas upon which to throw the blackest pictures of human conduct; reaches for his name that it may have profanity equal to its malignity; uses his religion as a cloak of respectability. His earth must furnish ground for the business, and graves for its victims. Such is the glaring impudence, and the Satanic imposition of the trade in intoxicants. Surely nothing but the infinite patience of God, and the consummate folly of man, could carry such a burden. And God will not always carry it. The words of the prophet will again ring in the ears of man, saying, "Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies." Our race advances into the age of love, when "nothing shall hurt or annoy in all God's holy mountain." The wolf shall lie down with the lamb; the lion shall eat straw like the ox; the brutality of man shall disappear from humanity; a joyful earth shall reflect the peace of heaven. And as we move into the dawn of the twentieth century, it seems as if God was arising in his strength, to fling the curse and its advocates out of the arms of his merciful providence, and ease his patience of the burden, and avenge himself for the provocations of this trade.

Parnassus, Pa.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT VS. SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY J. BIGNOLD.

The relation of secret societies to civil government, and their influence in promoting rebellion in the state, are questions not sufficiently discussed. We may safely assert, that no wide-spread rebellion against the government in any country can be brought about except by secret organization. Some extracts having a bearing upon this subject, taken from "Personal Adventures During the Indian Rebellion," may interest the readers of the Christian Cynosure. Mr. Edwards, the author of the book, was judge of Benares and late magistrate of Budaon, a Christian man and British magistrate, whose life was providentially spared while wandering months in the jungle during the Sepoy insurrection against the British government.

On page 12 Mr. Edwards says: "By fraud or chicanery a vast number of the estates of families of rank and influence have been alienated either wholly or in part, and have been purchased by new men, chiefly traders or government officials without character or influence over their tenantry. These men, in a vast majority of instances, were also absentees, fearing or disliking to reside on their purchases, they were looked upon as interlopers and unwelcome intruders. The ancient proprietary of these alienated estates, living as tenantry on land once theirs, were by no means reconciled to their change of position; but maintaining their hereditary hold as strong as ever over the sympathies and affections of the agricultural body, who were ready and willing to join their feudal superiors in any attempt to recover their lost position and regain their estates. For more than a year previous to the out break, I had been publicly representing to superior authority the great abuse of the power of civil courts and the reckless manner in which they decreed the sale of rights and interests connected with the soil in satisfaction of petty debts, and the dangerous dislocation of society which was in consequence being produced. My warnings were unheeded.

"Little did I think at the time that my fears and forebodings were so soon to be realized. The leaders and promoters of this great rebellion, whoever they may have been, knew well the inflammable condition from these causes of the rural society in the northwestern provinces, and they, therefore, sent among them chupaties (little cakes) as a kind of fiery cross to call them to action. Where they came from it is impossible to say, but I believe Barrackpore was the starting point, where large masses of mutinous Sepoys were congregated. The chupaties entered my district from the adjoining one of Shajehaupore, a village watchman of that place giving to the watchman of the nearest Budaon village two of the cakes, with an injunction to make six fresh ones, retain two for his own, and give the others to watchman of the next village, who would follow the same course, and continue the manufacture and distribution. I truly believe that the rural population of all classes among whom these cakes spread were as ignorant as I was myself of their real object; but it was clear they were a secret sign to be on the alert, and the minds of the people were through them kept watchful and excited.

"As soon as the disturbances broke out at Meerut and Delhi the cakes explained themselves, and the people at once perceived what was expected of them. In Budaon the mass of the population rose in a body, and the entire district became a scene of anarchy and confusion. The ancient proprietary body took the opportunity of murdering or expelling the auction purchasers, and resumed possession of their hereditary estates."

On page 127 Mr. Edwards says: "I am fully satisfied that the rural classes would never have joined in rebelling with the Sepoys, whom they hated, had not these causes of discontent already existed."

Thus, although misrule and injustice were undoubted causes of this great rebellion against British rule in India, yet the secret sign (apparently without secret organization) appears a potent agent in spreading wide the rebellion in the rural districts, otherwise beyond the influence of the Sepoys (native soldiers), who first began the insurrection by a massacre of their British officers. When we consider the evil influence of secret societies in foreign lands, and in a measure condone their existence as being only punishment for the injustice and oppression of tyrannical governments, we, as citizens of these United States, with our free government and institutions, should pause and ask, Why is our society completely permeated with secret associations? We should ponder the ramifications of these secret labor unions. What do they mean? When will American voters awake to the importance of this great question, the relation of secret societies to the civil government?

THE SABBATH.

BY REV. E. W. HICKS.

In the Cynosure of May 20th, in reply to a correspondent, the following reasons are given for our observance of the day of rest on the first day rather than the seventh day of the week: "1. It is the spirit rather than the letter of the law that demands our observance. 2. Christ rose from the dead on the first day of the week, and we have the apostolic example of meeting for worship and alms-giving on that day."

This, I think, sums up the whole question, but may I be allowed to open them up a little, not by way of proof, for they are Bible statements which need no proof, but by way of enlargement. The whole matter is here summed up because we are concerned wholly with Scripture. What the church fathers did, or what Constantine did, we may know little and care less. But the mind of the Spirit, in the Word, we need very much to know.

1. "It is the spirit rather than the letter of the law that demands our observance." This Bible statement is the citadel. It is the key to the situation. On one side is Hagar, and Ishmael, and Israel after the flesh, and the ritualist, and the world, and the carnal nature, the unregenerate man. On the other side is Abraham, and Isaac, and the typical Israel, and the spiritual believer, and the new world, the new nature, the new man. By the law, in the New Testament, is meant the legal principle having its head and representative in the Decalogue. This legal principle, the "ought" and "ought not," is at the foundation of all morals; it is the backbone of the moral world. And the moral world is the world of mankind. It is this world, as distinguished from the heavenly world. In this world the realm of morals is the highest realm, and moral duty is the highest duty. It is the basis of conscience. It pertains to right conduct—nothing more. It is the religion of this world. The natural man conceives of no religious principle higher than moral principle.

But the believer in Jesus is a citizen of a better country. He belongs to heaven. See John 17, and the book of Ephesians. He will be there visibly and bodily bye and bye; he is there spiritually now. His spirit is there. He is in the spiritual realm, beyond the moral, and his law is Jesus Christ. His relation to the Decalogue is that of a dead man. See Romans and Galatians. May he therefore break it? No, indeed. On the contrary, only he can truly keep it, for the moral depends for its power upon the spiritual. This is broadly illustrated in every epistle. The first part of each epistle is about Christ, and the last part is moral. Note: In each epistle moral duty is based not on the Decalogue, but on Jesus Christ. We are dead to the old law in order that we may live to the new one. Note, secondly: In this way only is the Decalogue honored, viz., by our death to it. We were sinners, condemned to die by God's holy law. Jesus came. He did not say, "The law is hard on you. I will bear your penalty, and make up what you lack." This is, practically, the theory of seventh-day believers. But he said rather, "The law is just. It condemns you and you must die. Its righteous verdict must be honored. But I will die with you, and for you, and because I live you shall live also. Come, take your cross and follow me without the camp!" This spiritual death is not imaginary. It is actually realized by the energy of the Holy Spirit in every renewed soul. And as the result we stand now with Jesus on the resurrection side of his tomb. But the law is on the other side, and his tomb is between. In Christ, then, we are dead to the law. We obey it as no others can; yet not that, but Jesus, is our highest rule of action. We stand with Jesus, to leave him nevermore! By the spirit of the law, then, we mean the law as interpreted to us by Jesus Christ, beginning with the Sermon on the Mount and continuing through the Testament. The law thus interpreted is "the spirit;" the law uninterpreted is "the letter."

2. "The example of Christ and his apostles." By this example we discover the relation of the foregoing to the question of Sabbath keeping. Jesus met his disciples on the first day of the week. We are told the day of the week because it is important for us to know it. Why? To show that he rose the third day? If this was the reason we would have been told the day of his burial. We say it was because he met his disciples on that day. And in proof of this he tells us he met them again on the next first day of the week, omitting the Sabbath in the record. For proof that "after eight days" means a week, see the same expression in Luke 9: 28, called "after six days," in Matt. 17: 1. While remarking our Lord's example remember that we are standing with him. Before his death he was "in the world," and kept the seventh day. After his resurrection, so far as the record goes, he kept only the first day. And the record was so prepared as to be our guide. We are, as revealed to us in the epistles, standing with Jesus, beyond his tomb, and as he does so must we do. We must do this or leave him. We, therefore, continue to meet for worship on the first day of the week.

The example of the apostles agrees with this example of Christ. They never, in the record, observe the seventh day except in Jewish meetings. In Troas it is expressly said that they met on the first day of the week. It has been claimed that by Jewish time, that was on Saturday evening, and Paul went away on Sunday. But Troas was a Roman city, a Roman "colony," and why should it observe Jewish time? And as to the church, the only name mentioned in the church or congregation is Eutychus, a Greek. That name, surely, is small proof that the people to whom Paul preached brought their calendar from Judea Roman time was like ours, beginning at 12 o'clock.

The seventh-day Sabbath occupies the same place and represents the same principle in our day, that circumcision did in the days of the apostles, and thorough study of the whole question would be of very great spiritual profit to every Christian. We should not only hold, but know the truth.

Toulon, Ill.

A "BETTER POLICY."

BY REV. C. E WALKER.

When Dr. DeLong wrote the question for the United Brethren church ("What attitude should we as a denomination assume and maintain with reference to secret societies?") he little thought, perhaps, that some one might question his knowledge of the history of the U. B. church. What, a college president and D. D. manifest ignorance of the position of the U. B. church on secrecy! But that is precisely the situation. He asks—what child-like simplicity—what attitude should we assume? as though the question had never been brought up in this church and was about to be agitated. A D. D. and college president not acquainted with the fact that his church has a law on "secret combinations" which has been a law in sentiment, since in Otterbein's days, and the law of the church, in her constitution, since 1841. Now Dr. be careful to think before penning your next "policy."

The question for the U. B. church to discuss is, How may we save the church from being swindled into the lodge? We have taken the "attitude" and "maintained" a law—and have it yet, thank God!—these years; but in so trying a time as this when Satan is "transformed into an (apparent) angel of light," how to hold the church-body under the law, while the leaders, who claim to have the brains, are acting, in General Conference and elsewhere, in open rebellion to the long-established constitution, is a question not so easily settled. But, one thing is certain, the loyal members will be found at their posts of duty, even when the sale takes place, and when the lodge comes for the property, we will not go over. That's all.

But as to the "policy." Let Christian people learn a lesson from the U. B. church. Be careful to elect loyal members to fill positions of influence and trust. Be awake to the interests of the church spiritually. The same "trick of trade" may be practiced on other branches of our Master's church, as on this. May the lesson never be repeated, however, and true and tried men ever fill all the important stations in the Lord's house.

Reader, your attention is drawn to this article to set you to thinking; and when "thinking" please pray and act in the interest of the purity of our Master's kingdom here—and you may have your reward.

IS IT CONSISTENT?

A certain editor in reply to a question concerning holy men being identified with secret societies says: "No man can mix up with these worldly associations to his soul's profit." We say, if he cannot "mix up," etc., how can he remain holy if he does? Or, if he is what his profession seems to indicate, can he ever enter a lodge? And how could they belong to them if they "never were in a lodge"? Such dodging is not consistent, whether a sanctified hand writes it or not. If associations make one cry out: "See how we grovel here below fond of these earthly ties," can it be any part of wisdom to enter them or be identified with them, unless it be the "wisdom" that "descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish"? James 3.

We know just one such a lodge-apologizing holiness instructor (any man can preach and write about holiness) who said to a certain preacher, "You are insane." The brother had sometime previously, in a kind, spirited manner, for the glory of God, and through pressing divine influence, referred to the groveling influence and effect of Freemasonry before a large audience at Round Lake, which seemed to have left a lasting impression. All denouncers of these "grovel-here-below" societies are insane, of course.

The writer knew a good holiness advocate who had taken the royal obligation, of the royal order, of Royal Arch Masonry—that shocking obligation including "MURDER AND TREASON NOT EXCEPTED." He said he could not discover any incompatibility between holiness and Masonry. Well, he died very peaceably, full of years, and we all hope he has gone home—not to the Grand Lodge above, for there is no such place—but to heaven. But oh! the stultifying effect of secretism! How it injures my present charge! How faithful to the lodge! How neglectful of the church! What bordering on apostacy! What conspiracy everywhere in church and state! How strangely inconsistent to apologize for such desolating companionships! How ruinous to virtue and pure religion such manhood-ruining combinations! ANDRONICUS.

CIVIL LIBERTY AND EQUAL RIGHTS.

We quote the concluding sentences of a timely editorial with the above title in the July Century:

"We have prided ourselves on the fact that our society was mainly composed of workingmen; and the great mass of our workingmen have an American horror of the coward who stabs in the back or throws dynamite. But there are professional agitators, who are ignorantly inciting workingmen to acts which differ only in degree from those of the anarchists; and some of their disciples, having no better instruction than the agitators are in the habit of furnishing, are inclined to apologize for or defend acts committed in the name of labor which they would condemn at once if a professed anarchist were the doer. They should learn the meaning of civil liberty, that it is the measure of natural freedom which society considers to be consistent with the equal freedom of others. Let it be shown, at any time, that the measure of civil liberty is so large that some are using it to abridge the equal liberty of others, and society must and will abridge civil liberty so far as is necessary to secure equal rights.

"Can society, at least in our American form of it, accomplish such a task as this if it should become necessary? The anarchist thinks not; he evidently has but a meager notion of the war-power of democracy; for, forcible resistance to society must be considered as war. Only monarchies and aristocracies make war and peace with facility. A democracy seldom prepares for war, always begins it with a succession of costly blunders, and usually succumbs only through absolute exhaustion. The manner in which republican France threw back Europe from her borders in 1793 and assumed the hopeless contest with Germany in 1870–71, the desperate nature of the struggle between the United States and the seceding States, and between the two republics of Peru and Chili, are but examples of the intensity with which democracy rises to the height of an increasing danger. The poet's simile of 'a wild-cat mad with wounds' is none too strong for a democracy when it is pushed into a dangerous position. Is there any reason to suppose that the American democracy has changed its nature in twenty-five years?

"The courts are open for all; the laws may be altered peaceably. If laws are bad, if rich oppressors exist, powerful labor organizations are just the element needed to reform the one and to prosecute the other. But let the work be done decently and in order, without infringing the recognized and equal civil liberty of others. Above all, let the organizations impress upon their members, as the very first lesson, that violent resistance to society can only be of evil omen for these organizations, for society itself, and for civil liberty."

PARADE AND WORK.

Parade and pomp have a great deal of influence in this world, but permanent results are accomplished by hard work. A thousand men equipped in all the glory of fuss and feathers, may strut around the streets, and march up the hill and then march down again, while the newspapers may report what a great time they had, and what great things they have done; but one little, barefooted, sunburnt boy, hoeing all day in the cornfield, may, when the harvest comes, have more to show as the result of his day's labor, than all the plumed paraders who so attract the public gaze.

It will be found that a very large proportion of the real work done for God and humanity in this world, is accomplished by these quiet and persistent workers, who make no reports, who are never seen on dress parade, but who still keep toiling on, seeking to finish the work that God has given them to do.

Great discoveries are not made by men in crowds; useful inventions are not produced in mass-meetings; the world is not run by resolutions, nor are souls saved by great societies and associations. The Lord has given to "every man his work, and in the day of judgment the question will be, not how many organizations you have joined, or how much money you have subscribed and contributed, but what you have personally done in the cause of the Master. Annual reports will count but very little when the great God of heaven shall summon man to render up the last account. In that day, it will be found that every man shall bear his own burden; that no crowds will hide from the gaze of the all-seeing eye, and that each must meet his own individual responsibility, in the presence of the Judge of quick and dead. Blessed are they who in that hour shall hear the Master say, "Well done!—The Christian.

THE ARMAMENT PLAGUE.

A Dutch nobleman, Count Adolphe de Hompesch, says the London Herald of Peace, has recently written a work, which merits the thoughtful consideration of readers in other countries than his own. It is entitled "Pauperisme et Militarisme," and is published at Maestricht, by M. W. Rosenkrans.

The author first passes in review the almost world-wide depression in trade and agriculture, and the general inconvenience arising from the excessive and continually increasing pressure of taxation. In some countries this has reached a point which is almost intolerable. Thus in Germany, or at least in the Prussian portion of it, from one-eighth to one-quarter of the incomes of private individuals is now forcibly appropriated by the State. The national debts of Europe are meanwhile increasing at a frightful rate, and are colossal in their amount. The cause of these evils is in large degree, or mainly, to be attributed to the curse of excessive armaments, through which even the condition of peace has become fraught with danger to the nations. As Montesquieu long ago observed, the treasures and commerce of the world fail to keep pace with the demands of armaments. The peoples are becoming impoverished, in spite of all their industry; for private economy is counteracted by vast public waste.

Count Hompesch says: "Excessive militarism is draining the last resources of Europe. It is absorbing half, and often more, of the revenues of nations. It is this alone which is causing the annual augmentation of our debts and of our taxation. It is this which is withdrawing from labor millions of men in the flower of their age; and it is this which keeps suspended over our heads, like the sword of Damocles, the always recurring dread of some fresh outburst of war."

Europe has, in fact, become a gigantic camp; and the French General Ambert, a careful investigator, estimates that the army troops and reserved forces of all Europe now reach the number of nearly ten million men.

The official statistics of the European nations show an alarming rate of increase in the burden of armaments. The well-informed "Almanach de Gotha" states that the increase in the annual expenditure, on the army and navy alone, has risen, from the year 1856 to 1884, in the chief nations, as follows: Great Britain, 15 millions sterling additional per annum; Germany, 14 millions; France, 16 millions; Austria, 2 millions nearly: Russia, 21 millions; Italy, 5 millions; Holland, nearly 2 millions; Turkey, 5 millions.

The total annual budgets of Europe amounted, in 1856, on the conclusion of the Crimean war, to 335 million pounds. In 1884 they had risen to 658 millions, or nearly double!

The general expenditure of all European nations, exclusively on their armies and navies, in 1856, was 95 million pounds; in 1884 it was 183 millions, or just double in the 28 years.

The national debts of Europe amounted, in 1856, to 2,516 million pounds; in 1884, to 4,749 million pounds—again nearly double.

It is obvious that this state of things points to one conclusion, national bankruptcy, a termination, indeed, which has been already nearly reached by more than one of the European powers.

Count Hompesch alludes to the vast losses of life and of money involved by the wars of the latter half of the 19th century. He estimates that the six European wars of that period, namely, the Crimean war of 1855, the Franco-Italian war of 1859, the Germano-Schleswig war of 1864, the Prusso-Austrian war of 1866, the Franko-German war of 1870, and the Balkan (Russo-Turkish) war of 1876, involved altogether, the sacrifice of 1,841,000 lives, and cost 1,320 million pounds; and he does not appear disposed to exaggerate his estimates. For example, he denies Mr. Kinglake's statement that the Crimean war caused the loss, to all parties concerned, of a million lives. Count Hompesch reckons the number at 889,000.

How vast an amount of good might have been effected for Europe and the world, by the men and the money thus terribly squandered in these twenty-two years, from 1855 to 1876! What immense constructions of railways, roads, houses, machinery, hospitals, museums, schools, asylums, libraries! Only one-tenth, if rightly applied, might have revolutionized the world for good.

Whereas the result has been to make matters, in many respects, worse than ever. Race hatreds still continue. The burdens of the people, both rich and poor, are greatly enhanced. The conscription presses, with terrible force, on all classes. The masses of the population are being embittered and driven to Socialism, Communism, and Nihilism. Their protests and cries being disregarded by the military monarchies and courts, they are beginning in their desperation to have recourse to riot, dynamite, and assassination.

These evils of poverty, depressed trade, bad times, and social disturbance, are mainly the result of the wicked waste by this cruel militarism prevailing throughout Europe. Such are the results of the policy embodied in that foolish and false motto, "Si vis pacem, para bellum."

Count Hompesch points out that it is in such nations as Russia, Germany, and France, where the conscription is most rigorously enforced, that the worst social outrages take place. The youth of these nations are being ruined, both as to their morals and their industrial prosperity. Their compulsory military service spoils them for civil life, deprives them of their opportunities of other needful training, robs them of their best years, and if they are ultimately returned to their families and friends, they have too generally become discontented and demoralized for life, and henceforth they swell the dangerous populations of their countries.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

THE ANARCHIST LODGE ON TRIAL.

OPENING ADDRESS OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEY GRINNELL IN THE CRIMINAL COURT, CHICAGO, JULY 15, 1886.

Gentlemen, for the first time in the history of our county are people on trial for their lives for endeavoring to make anarchy rule. In that endeavor many lives were destroyed. I hope that while the youngest of you lives your memory shall recall this as the only such attempt. Another will or will not take place as this case is determined.

On May 4, 1886, a few short weeks ago, there occurred at what is called the Haymarket the most fearful massacre ever witnessed in this country. You are to find the perpetrators of the crime which culminated there. The charge against the defendants is that they are responsible for that act. We have been inclined to believe in this city, as we have throughout the country, that however extravagantly men might talk about our laws and institutions, the great good sense of our people would never permit to rise above the surface acts based upon sentiments which meant the overthrow of law. We have been taught from infancy that our institutions, founded upon the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, were above and beyond all anarchy. The 4th of May demonstrated that we were wrong, that a certain class of men, some of them recently come here, believe that in this country our institutions are lies. Insults are offered to the Declaration of Independence. The name of Washington is reviled and traduced, and we are taught by these men, as the testimony will show, that freedom in this country means absolute license to do as they choose. In the light of the 4th of May we now know that the preaching of anarchy for years has been directed in earnest against our institutions, and that wherever they cried murder, anarchy, and dynamite, they have meant what they said.

We will prove that Spies said last February, that they were armed in this city for bloodshed and riot. We will prove that Spies said then that George Washington deserved hanging as much as he did. For the last year and a half Spies, Neebe, Schwab, Parsons, and Fielden have said, in public meetings in Chicago, that the only way to adjust the wrongs of any man was by bloodshed, dynamite, and the pistol. On October 11, 1885, in a public meeting on the west side, August Spies and his confreres introduced a resolution to the effect that the eight-hour movement would do the laboring men no good, but that they must arm, prepare themselves with rifles and dynamite, by the 1st of May, 1886, because then anarchy was to come. I will prove that Parsons, in an infamous paper published by him, called the Alarm, has defended the use of dynamite, told how it should be used, how capitalists could be destroyed by it, how policemen could be absolutely wiped from the face of the earth by one bomb, and published a plan of street warfare by the use of dynamite. Leaders in any great cause are either heroes or cowards. The testimony in this case will show that Spies, Parsons, Schwab, and Neebe are the biggest cowards I have ever seen in my life. Last January Spies said that they were going to precipitate the matter about the 1st of May, and he told a reporter how they could clean out the police. He said they would have a meeting near the intersection of two streets; that they would be provided with bombs; that when the police came the bomb-throwers would be stationed on different sides of the streets.

"But," said the reporter to Spies, "that sounds like braggadocio and vaporing nonsense." Spies said to him in answer: "I tell you I am telling the truth, and, mark my words, it will happen on or about the 1st of May, 1886."

Mr. Spies at that interview and at that time handed that reporter a dynamite bomb empty, one almost the exact counterpart of the bomb that Lingg made that killed the officers, and said to this witness, "These are the bombs that our men are making in the city of Chicago, and they are distributed from the Arbeiter Zeitung office because the men who make them have not the facilities for distributing them, and we distribute them here (the Arbeiter Zeitung office)." The foundation of the whole matter was the nest of snakes in the Arbeiter Zeitung office, on Fifth avenue. The first open publication of the plot was at the Twelfth Street Turner Hall meeting, Oct. 11, 1885. It was there said by Spies, when Belz was chairman: "The time for argument has passed. The only argument by which to meet these things is dynamite and the rifle."

On the 3d day of May, on Monday, there was difficulty at McCormick's factory. A committee was appointed by the strikers to make a peaceful proposition to the employers, and the committee was to report back to a meeting to be held on the Black Road. Spies and one other man whose identification has not been established, went down there uninvited by any of the committee, and made an inflammatory speech for the purpose of precipitating that riot. Spies then went to the corner of Desplaines and Lake streets, at Zept's Hall, and there told a large gathering of strikers that twelve of their brother workmen had been killed at McCormick's by the bloodhounds of the police. He knew that was a lie. But he so inflamed the people that they were ready to go with the torch and sword and destroy everything before them. He left them between 4 and 5 o'clock, and went to their nest of treason at No. 107 Fifth avenue, and then, about 5 o'clock, arrived and told his men (printers) not to stop work as he wanted to use them, and then and there wrote the "Revenge" circular. It is written in English and German. We have the circular and the type and the manuscript from which the type was set up. The manuscript is in Spies' handwriting. The English portion of that circular was tame, but the German part was the most infamous thing I ever saw in print. It is not only treason and anarchy, but a bid to bloodshed and war. It said that six men had been killed by the police at McCormick's; another lie.

The circular was hurriedly passed out through all the German settlements in the town by every possible means. Neebe and others distributed them. On the third day, Tuesday, the day the bomb was thrown, everything was ripe for ruin. Bombs were to be thrown in all parts of the city. Everything was to be done that could be done to secure the overthrow of law and order. The conspiracy was so large—the number of criminals interested in the conspiracy was so appalling that I had distrust in my own judgment. I believe that at least thirty men, and perhaps more, should have been indicted for murder, but all the connecting links could not be ascertained. The character of the Arbeiter Zeitung and the Alarm will be shown to you by reading to you their incendiary articles advocating anarchy and bloodshed and the throwing of bombs, and telling the people how to make and use bombs.

On the evening of May 3, Spies wrote his own account of the McCormick riot. We have his manuscript. He said that the riot was a failure, but that if there had been one bomb, the result might have been different. That one bomb was supplied for the next night by his inflammatory circular. On that Monday afternoon appeared in the Arbeiter Zeitung a secret word for the meeting of the "armed men." It was the Greek letter Upsilon, and the words "Come Monday night." When the conspirators saw that secret letter they were to go to the place of meeting. I am informed that Balthazar Rau wrote that signal. Rau is the confidential friend of Spies, working in his office, but he is not a writer. The "armed men" of the anarchists is simply the nest. They are divided into groups, and are distributed from Pittsburg to San Francisco. Neebe and Spies and Parsons have advised how to make up groups. These groups are composed of men who are willing to throw bombs and fire pistols. The armed men did assemble pursuant to call. They knew where to go. They went to Greif's hall, at 54 West Lake street, on Monday night, and met in the basement to the number of thirty or more. Fischer, Lingg, and Engel were there. Schnaubelt was there. He is not here. He ran away. They asked the proprietor for a hall. The latter said that all of them were engaged but that they could meet in the basement under the saloon and there they met. Between thirty and sixty men met there. The plan of warfare was there divulged by Engel, that man smiling there, on the end of the row. His hairs are turning gray, and he has lived many years in America. It was the most fearfully declared plan that I ever heard in my life. It meant absolute destruction to this town. Engel said: "When you see printed in the Arbeiter Zeitung, under the Letter-Box, the word RUHE, that night prepare for war." Ruhe means rest, peace. The manuscript of that is in our possession, and is in the handwriting of August Spies. That word, on Tuesday, May 4, appeared in the Arbeiter Zeitung in large type. Engel said to Fischer at the meeting: "Is not that the order of the northwest groups?" Fischer answered "Yes." Fischer carried that word to the Arbeiter Zeitung office, where he was foreman.

Lingg said he would make the bombs. We have traced to him at least twenty-two of these infernal engines, one of which passed from his hands to the man who threw it at Haymarket square. I will prove to you that Lingg made the bomb that killed the officers. Lingg lived at 442 Sedgwick street, in Seliger's house. Seliger has been indicted, but he is not on trial. I am not yet prepared to say whether the State will use him or not. On Tuesday these conspirators went to Lingg's house, where he had already sixteen half-bombs—eight whole ones—but he wanted more, and they were to be filled with dynamite that Tuesday afternoon. Then these people were informed where they could obtain them. Between 7 and 8 o'clock he should go to Neff's hall, at 58 Clybourn avenue. Seliger helped fill the bombs that afternoon. I do not think Lingg was at the Haymarket that night. He may have been. It was hoped to have 25,000 laboring men at that meeting. The very spot of holding the meeting—not in the open square, but in the narrow part of Desplaines street where the alleys are—was discussed at the conspiracy meeting on Monday night. The men with the bombs were to distribute themselves in different parts of the city. They were to destroy the station-houses, to throw bombs at every patrol wagon they saw going to Haymarket square. The police must be taken care of and not permitted to go there. Lingg pranced around with bombs in his pocket that night, and was restrained from throwing them at patrol wagons only by the interference of friends. They were to build a great fire toward Wicker Park. Some buildings were to be fired there in order to attract the police away to that part of the city. Others were to do the same thing in other parts of the city, so that the police would be distributed.

To get the crowd to the meeting Fischer had 20,000 circulars printed and distributed. We will show that circular to you. When the laboring man saw the circular and the call to arms he remained away. This circular closed with the words, "Workmen, come armed." After about 5,000 of these were printed, Spies ordered that clause stricken out. It was come too near home to him. The meeting was a failure in size. There were probably not 2,000 men there. When Spies opened the meeting he said: "We will not obstruct the travel on Randolph street, but will go up here on Desplaines street." So he got just where he said last January he would get.

[Mr. Grinnell then described how the various steps leading to the meeting, and the assembling of the meeting, and the presence there of several of the accused would be proven, and how several of them spoke; and then proceeded as follows:]

The officer gave the order for the meeting to disperse. Fielden stepped from the wagon and said: "We are peaceable." At that moment a man who, the moment before, had been on the wagon, stepped to the corner of the alley, lighted a bomb, and threw it into the ranks of the police. Fielden stepped from the wagon and commenced firing. The meeting was called for 7:30. The police did not come until 10:30. The conspirators in other parts of the city did not receive the signal at the expected time. That part of the plot fell through. It was only the waiting for a large crowd which did not come that saved the city from a greater disaster.

PRESS COMMENT.

One of the Baptist anniversary incidents which deserves further thought was this: Miss Daniells, a missionary from China, told of "the tender faithfulness of a Chinese woman who attended her in the helpless state in which she came to America. This woman was not even permitted to land on our shores." This is the kind of a Christian people that we might seem to be if we were judged by the shameful surrender of our politicians to hoodlums and foreign voters.—The Watchman.

The Winchester rifle is not an ordinary part of a rolling-stock outfit, and the sight of train after train of cars manned by resolute-looking sharp-shooters, as was to be seen last week in Chicago, is a strange, and properly a rare one. The measure was happily effective, however, in this case. It may be deemed by some that a great and worthy principle is at stake when a company refuses to discharge certain non-union workmen, but it has not sufficient hold upon the mind and conscience to nerve a man to face a Pinkerton agent with a good rifle in his hand. When men go to war, they must have some higher interest at stake than insistance on the petty, if not pernicious, regulations of a fraternity.—Standard.

The saloon is the chief breeder of all those things on which anarchism and all social and political heresies take root, and feed and grow. Idleness, ignorance, poverty and uncleanness are the soil which the saloons prepare for the nourishment of crime and every public evil. The saloon has no rightful place in our industrial system, no good cause for being anywhere. Its prosperity means ruin to all things else; its increase means decrease for all things right and good. It thrives on decay; it fattens on ruined homes and ruined lives. The saloon must go. The people of Maine and Kansas, of Iowa and Rhode Island, of Vermont and Georgia have said it; a thousand times ten thousand men and women in Christian lands are saying it to-day. The saloon must go. The prayers of generations of wives and mothers whose lives have been darkened with the woe of strong drink shall be answered at last—fully and completely answered.—N. Y. Observer.

The spirit of secrecy is trying another turn to catch the wary and rope them into ritualistic Christless worship. The plan now is to organize a secret society for the proposed object of "maintaining the peace." Prominent men from the leading lodges are taking hold of it together with many prominent merchants of the country. The Daily News, of Chicago, states that the best points from the large secret societies of the country were culled out and consolidated, and that the order is being rapidly fathered by the leading Masons of the country. Why the citizens of a State could not organize into a law and order league without adopting oath-bound ritualism, is not stated. Those fatherly Masons know. They can rope into the coils of secrecy by this means many merchants and business men who would not otherwise touch the lodge.—Western Crank.

There is deep seated in the human breast an almost universal love of gay attire. In women this finds natural expression in rainbow-colored dresses, adorned with ribbons, shining beads and dangling fringes. The bonnet alone permits a liberal gratification of the love of color, as feathers succeed flowers, and flowers follow upon the heels of feathers with the changing seasons. In the lord of creation the innate love of finery has little chance to display itself. Coats and trousers are inartistic in shape, and must be sober in hue, the hose and necktie alone permitting a display of individuality in the particular of color. It is undoubtedly in this limitation that secret societies and bass-ball and lawn-tennis have originated. The soul panting for something bright finds dull checks and stripes and speckled tweeds unendurable, and rushes into the Red Men and Brothers of the Sun and Ancient Order of United Growlers that they may relieve themselves by wearing aprons trimmed with silver fringe, collars of red, blue and purple, tinsel stars, radiating suns and chapeaus loaded down with trailing ostrich feathers.—Chicago Evening Journal.

A short time ago the labor unions of this country thought they would be a law unto themselves. They had only to command and be obeyed, however unjust the command might be, or however defiant of the laws of the State. A general feeling in favor of workingmen and regard for their votes caused the police and magistrates to allow infractions of law and justice, to a dangerous extent. But when these outrages continued and increased, the laws had to be enforced, and the courts have been occupied for some time with trying, convicting, and punishing the leading law-breakers. At each trial the court has explained the laws concerning boycotts and strikes in the plainest manner. A strike is lawful so long as strikers refrain from violence or conspiracy to injure others. A man has a perfect right to quit work himself, but no right to interfere with any other man's working. A has a perfect right to refuse to buy from B, but he has no right to join a conspiracy to prevent others from trading with B. The penitentiary is a severe lesson for the men who allow their wishes to get the better of their judgment.—N. Y. Witness.

REFORM NEWS.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley began canvassing in Iowa last week, to see what encouragement would be given for the State lecture work. In four days he obtained several subscriptions for the Cynosure and pledges amounting to about $40. This is cheering, and we fear the Illinois executive committee will have to find another lecturer. Friends in Iowa need not wait for a personal request for pledges for the State work. Send to your corresponding secretary, Rev. C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun, Iowa, your pledges. He will report and hand to the treasurer whatever contribution comes to his hand.

THE N. C. A. NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Christian Association provides, by its fourth by-law, that there shall be a national anniversary held during each year. The Board of Directors, in accordance with the action of the corporate body, are arranging for such an anniversary during the coming fall or winter, somewhere in the State of Tennessee. Knoxville, Nashville or Memphis were suggested as appropriate places, and cember or later as the best time.

The reasons that led to the selection of a city Tennessee as the most appropriate place were many, of which the following are a part:

1. The wish to make our movement national and enlist the friends of reform in all parts of the country. Heretofore all our conventions have been held in the North

2. There is a great and growing reaction against the domination of the lodges, especially among the colored churches of the South. No class of people have been so thoroughly misled and defrauded by the secret lodge system as the freedmen of the ex-slave States, and many are beginning to see the evil and danger of that system. The time seems specially favorable to warn them of their danger.

The leading officers and teachers in the colleges and institutions of learning, established for the benefit of the colored youth of the South, are with us in their convictions, and will doubtless aid us, as they have heretofore, in influencing for the right the future leaders and educators of the people.

The great and rapid spread of the temperance reformtion in the South has prepared the way and made practical other great moral reforms that require the co-operation of all Christian citizens, without respect to race. Correspondence is now being carried on with the friends of the reform in the South, and it is expected that the General Agent and others will visit Tennessee and spend some time previous to the convention. The movement is one of great hopefulness, but it involves also much effort and expense. I trust it may have the earnest thought, sympathy and prayer of the friends of the reform.

H. H. HINMAN.

A GOOD WORD FROM NEW JERSEY.

Rev. George Warrington, of the Birmingham, Iowa, Free Press, while sojourning briefly among the scenes of former labors in the East, sends back to his paper some cheering evidences that all is not swallowed up of the lodge in New Jersey:

"During the period of general defection there were found seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to Baal. In this time of subjection to the Secret Empire, the editor finds many among his old acquaintances in the East outside the lodge and opposed to its spirit and methods. There are others who have become wearied with the system which succeeds by the deceivableness of unrighteousness, and have left.

"One very merry greeting from an old friend at Manalapan, N. J., was this: 'I am glad to see you; you were the one that got me out of the Odd-fellfellows.' It was pleasant to find one's words bearing fruit after so many years, especially as that young man had followed up his good beginning by joining the church and endeavoring to lead a consistent Christian life.

"One man at Englishtown, N. J., has left the K. of P., but he has not shaken off the shackles of his former slavery. When he is asked about the signs and grips, he merely laughs and is afraid to acknowledge the truth of the expositions. It is a fearful bondage which holds a man to silence when he should speak out with all boldness.

"There were some in the Presbyterian church at Englishtown who were determined that free speech should not be abridged, and the editor was most cordially invited by the pastor of that church to lecture on the subject of Freemasonry. Due notice was given on Sabbath, and on the first Tuesday evening of July a few earnest people gathered to hear the truth. Some of the slaves of the Secret Empire promised to be present, but from lack of courage or in obedience to the orders of the lodge, they stayed away. But the discussion has been started, light has been thrown on a dark subject, and curiosity has been aroused. May the good work go on, and may progress be made in new fields."

CORRESPONDENCE.

PRESBYTERIANS VERSUS PRESBYTERIANS.

CHICAGO, July 16, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I was happy to see in your last issue the article headed "The Perils of Our Nation," an extract from a sermon preached by S. J. McPherson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Chicago. "One of the greatest perils of our nation," says the speaker, "is Romanism, I believe, though there are many really devout Christians in the church." If I had been Mr. McPherson I would have said, "I know," instead of "believe," and I would also have said, "Though there are many really sincere, devout pagans worshiping God under a Christian name," instead of saying, "devout Christians." For we all know that, while the church of Rome admits of the facts of a saving Christianity, denies at the same time the consequences of that saving power by establishing purgatory, the sacraments, as confession, communion, extreme unction, beads, scapulars, holy waters, indulgences, etc. I wish that Dr. McPherson would study a little more the doctrines of Rome, before calling its worshipers "devout Christians." But not to discourage him in his ways of finding out that Rome is our greatest peril, I must concede him a good point and bid him God speed in his new departure. It is something better than what was said by his Presbyterian brother of the New York Observer, in connection with the following, clipped by that paper from the Catholic, of Pittsburgh:

The following, clipped from "The Catholic" of Pittsburg, will be of special interest. It says:—

"For centuries Protestant writers in every land drew up the most terrifying pictures of Catholicity. The adoption of downright infidelity was preferable, according to Protestantism, to affiliation with Catholicity. In European countries wherever Protestantism grasped the secular power, persecution and exile became the lot of Catholics. The change of religion in England was effected by the Mormon wife-slayer Henry VIII, and bloody Queen Bess, by the confiscation of all church property, and dire persecution and expulsion of Catholics. Churches were destroyed or perverted to the use of the established pet, which, by the way, the English people are now tired of maintaining, as was made evident in the late elections.

"All this is now changed, and the 'horrors of Rome' is no longer a 'taking' subject to dwell upon, except by some ignoramus, who confines his abilities to the backwoods. Henry Ward Beecher advises one of his flock who approached him for information to go and become a Catholic and she would be safe in doing so. Sam Jones calls long and loud for heavenly benedictions upon the work of the Catholic church, and many other distinguished divines pay the church marked respect though following different doctrines.

"As an evidence of the change of Protestant opinion in this matter, witness the fact that lately occurred in a Presbyterian church when they sang "Ave Maria." and when the attention of the Presbyterian Observer was drawn to it, that paper said it was all right. This, like the elections in England, as Gladstone said, 'is wonderful;' Presbyterians honoring the Blessed Virgin by singing this most Catholic hymn, 'Ave Maria,' is a 'wonderful change.' Soon we will have them calling out with Catholics, 'O clement, O pious, O sweet Virgin Mary, pray for us, oh Holy Mother of God.'

"All these are good omens of the progress of our holy religion, while if we look across the garden wall of Catholicity, and view the turmoil in which the rest of Christianity is engaged, having abandoned all dogmatic religion, and, 'carried about by every wind and doctrine,' 'reading Scripture to their own destruction;' their churches falling into decay, or sold for other purposes; their congregations failing to worship, or bear the expenses, their press calling upon the people to pay the preachers, otherwise they will not be able to meet the expenses of their families. All these omens are sad in the extreme, and portend speedy dissolution at the hands of infidelity, which is fast filling up its ranks from the disorganized condition of our Protestant citizens. We do not rejoice because of this exhibition of failing religion on the part of our separated fellow citizens, but we would invite them to study the claims of Catholicity."

Last year when I was lecturing in Michigan, Ohio and Upper Canada, how many times Protestants, weak-minded ones, of course, told me that I ought to be ashamed to expose Rome and its perversions. They thought there was enough of Christ in that church to save men. Readers, believe me, the deadly wound given to the Papacy at the Reformation is fast being healed (Rev. 17:5); and mother and daughters, secret societies and denominations, all condemned by the Scriptures, are coming to realize more and more their mutual relations. Therefore, we have need of many more McPhersons crying aloud, "Come out of her," for Rome is full of perils, of dangers. P. A. SEGUIN, Pastor.

THE SABBATH AND THE LAW.

BROWNINGTON CENTRE, Vt., July 12, '86.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Bro. Cawkins has about two years the start of me in age, but we have probably both learned that though age adds to our experience it does not always perfect us in wisdom. Like him, I have from my youth been an enemy to liquor, slavery, and oath-bound secrecy; but unlike him, the Sabbath has been a very precious day to me from my youth up. God's sensible presence has been with me on other days, but the Sabbath day has been peculiarly precious, as a day of holy convocation with God and his saints. I have always thought it was needed by all men, for both soul and body, and that for this reason God appointed it, for he says, "The Sabbath was made for man."

He thinks it was not given until Israel came to Sinai. But I find that at the creation God sanctified the seventh day. To sanctify is to set apart for holy purposes. Every seventh day, therefore, was set apart for holy purposes from the creation, and was for Adam and all his sons. When the "Daughter of Jacob" was in Egyptian bondage, she forgot this Sabbath day. So when God spake to her from Mt.

Sinai he said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." She could not remember what she had never known before, but because she had known and forgotten it, he cautioned her to "Remember the Sabbath day."

He thinks the Ten Commandments were given to the Jews only. If this was so, the Gentiles were not bound to keep them, and did not sin in not keeping them, for "Sin is the transgression of the law;" and "Where there is no law there is no transgression." If they worshiped idols, or swore, or committed adultery or murder, they did not sin, for God had given them no law forbidding these things? When they come to stand before the judgment throne, by what law will they be judged?

J. A. GIBSON.

IN MORGAN'S TIME.

In the time of Morgan, who wrote the first exposition of Freemasonry at the cost of his life, as now, the order had rendered itself popular by its machinations, and my father, then a young man, related that he asked my grandfather's advice about joining them. The latter replied, "Freemasonry be d—d!" an expression, it is to be confessed, more forcible than elegant or moral.

Soon after, my father learned of the exposure and subsequent murder of the author on a visit to Schuyler's Lake, N. Y., and on his return informed his parent of the occurrence. The latter, a few days later, after a call at the village, told the former that he was glad he had been placed on his guard, as the villagers crowded around him to give the grip; but he turned them off by saying he guessed they were Morgan Masons.

The lodge at this place disappeared for thirty years, and was only re-established in 1857, by the removal of one at Richfield Springs, on petition of home members, when Odd-fellowship, the copy, which had been instituted here a few years previous, gave place to the original as more congenial.

My grandfather was a member of a lodge of Mark Master Masons, at Cooperstown, then perhaps the only chapter degree prevalent in this portion of the country, as it is said to be still in England, and I have preserved his apron and mark as an heirloom and curiosity. Members attended this chapter for thirty miles around. *

VOTE AS YOU PRAY.

FAIRFIELD, Wis., July 10, 1886.

While at Baraboo, yesterday, I took out of the office the two best papers printed in the country, the Cynosure and the American. I read the position of the American party as adopted at Chicago, in that they refuse to be led by secretists, or vote for them. When I read that I said, Amen; but when I read J. W. Wood's article I felt somewhat discouraged. I want to pray, to work, and to vote for the downfall of that worst form of sin that curses this earth, the works that are seen through the hole in the wall. I want to vote for clean men, men that are not tied to idol worship; and I care but little to get rid of whisky at the expense of putting in power men who are in league with the saloonists, for in that I see but little gain.

Bro. Wood grandly says, our principles are absolutely sound; and I say for our soul's sake, we must vote for them, whether we hope for success or not. We may not kill Goliath, but we can throw stones that way. The heathen said, What do these feeble Jews? and if a fox but go upon the wall it will tumble down; but Nehemiah went right on and the wall was finished. WALLACE PORTER.

PITH AND POINT.

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS OF THE LODGE.

Throughout the writings of the lodge, we read that man has in himself the ability to make himself a moral man, and an heir of heaven. The most important uses and aims of Oddfellowship are declared to be the imbuing of the minds of our brethren with proper conceptions of their capacities; that a true Odd-fellow belongs to the highest style of man; and that such live with a conscience void of offence toward God and man, and their departure from earth is but a translation to a blissful immortality. Does he who believes this feel any need of Jesus as their Saviour?—N. TROEDSON, Casper, Cal.

CANADA AND THE U. S.

The annexation of Canada seems to be an idea very pleasing to the Cynosure, if one may judge of its short article of 1st July. It is true that affairs in the United States ought to be well administered, and if so, compel admiration from all nations, but when we read in the same paper that the penitentiary superintendent of Albany, N. Y., can offer judges a bribe of fifty dollars a head for long-term convicts, it would be difficult to imagine anything more likely to awaken horror and disgust, the very opposite of admiration in Canada, whose pride it has ever been to believe in the purity of her ermine. Nor would it be credited that any of her judges could be approached corruptly even by a penitentiary superintendent. That Judge Nott exposed the fellow is honorable to him and a lesson of warning to other tempters. But there must be "something rotten in Denmark" when such things can occur. Did the superintendent think the judge a brother Mason? Lodgery is more likely to promote annexation than anything else I know, and you oppose it!—ANTI.

PROVIDENCES FOR PEOPLE THAT "HAVE NO KNOWLEDGE."

As I look abroad there seems to be a lack of nobility in the men of our day. I see a proposition by a member from Kentucky to appropriate $10,000 to put a marble or granite shaft to mark the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln; and the honors conferred on Grant, I think, amount almost to idolatry. God is working wonders in our day, and the scientist cannot account in any natural way for hot winds, cyclones, earthquakes, floods and freshets. Man fails before these providences of the Almighty. If we would take it to heart he might spare us.—JAS. RAMSEY, Greene, N. Y.

LIQUOR AND LODGE; RULE AND RUIN.

Thank you for your indulgence in continuing the visits of my old friend the "Guiding Star." I think this is the fourteenth renewal. Can't keep the armor on without the Cynosure. Permit me to say I had some hope that my discharge would be on hand; but I may be of some use yet in the conflict with the powers of darkness. God's blessing on your labors in this great conflict for reform. Heaven bless those noble souls that do so face the foe. I think I see good results in their wake. In union there is strength. In this the opponents are greatly strengthened, as we can not fail to see their concert of action. The lodge power and the rum power are closely allied; bound for rule, and that means ruin. Ruin marks their footprints all along. But possibly the most ruinous influence is upon thousands of professed Christians that have joined in fellowship with those anti-Christian combinations; leading the uninformed by their example into the cesspool of moral leprosy.—ABRAHAM HARTZELL, Denver, Colo.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON V, August 1, 1886.—Jesus Honored.—John 12: 1—16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.—John 12: 13.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. We honor Jesus in different ways according as our individual temperaments, capacities or tastes may differ. vs. 1—8. Martha's heart, as she looked at the beloved brother, seated again among the strong and living at their home board, was no less full of grateful love to Jesus than Mary's; but she, with her domestic gifts and active, bustling temperament, finds a congenial outlet for it by serving at the feast made in his honor. Mary's finds expression in the broken box of ointment. Christ accepted the one service as he accepted the other; and as he accepts all true service. It is enough for him that we show our love, and it does not matter to him how we show it. He delights in every form of Christian activity by which we seek to honor him, but none the less does he delight in the simplest, love-prompted offering which a little child or a helpless cripple may bring. Martha's service is generally appreciated; it is service like Mary's which never stops to count the cost and seems to be of no practical value, at which the world, to say nothing of Christ's professed followers, cavil. Why was not this ointment sold for much and given to the poor? Why this waste of life and health on the part of our missionaries in going to savage lands to spread the Gospel? But the sincere and loving heart never asks such questions; never weighs any sacrifice made for Christ in the scales of such low materialism. Real affection is spontaneous in its offering. It denies itself for its loved one from the instinct of its nature,—because it cannot help it. The worker for Christ who brings his gold and purple and scarlet for the spiritual tabernacle will never look with contempt on the one able only to bring a simple offering of goat's hair. The influence of this uncalculating spirit of Christian devotion has a real, tangible value, far beyond that of the mere dollars which the richest can cast into the treasury.

2. Christ honored by the multitude. vs. 9—16. That the chief priests could conspire to put Lazarus also to death—this living witness to Christ's divine power, proves that no miracle or sign, however wonderful or incontestable, can convince men blinded by bigotry. But its effect on the multitudes then thronging Jerusalem for the passover feast was to waken an outburst of popular enthusiasm. Christ knew how evanescent were these shouts and acclamations rending the air in his praise, yet he welcomed their hosannas. They were sweet in his ears—even the unthinking, unreasoning praise of the little children in the temple. One objection urged against popular revivals is that the work is only temporary in its effects; but it is much that multitudes even for a moment are lifted on to a plane above their everyday life of worldliness and self-seeking where they recognize Christ. We cannot measure or weigh the final results. We can not know with our finite knowledge the impetus towards higher and holier living which it may have given many a soul. Let all patient workers who sow the seed of truth in discouragement take heart. It is God, not they, who keeps watch of the buried seed with his sun and his showers.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

From what Messianic psalm were their hosannas taken? Ps. 118: 25, 26. What saying of Christ's was verified when the chief priests conspired against Lazarus? Luke 16: 31.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"There they made him a supper." It was probably the next day after the arrival of Jesus, i. e., on Saturday (Sabbath) evening, after the close of the Jewish Sabbath rest, which ended at sundown. Edersheim says it was the special festive meal of the Sabbath.

St. Mark (14: 3) and St Matthew (26: 6) tells us that it was in the house of Simon the leper, who had possibly been healed by Christ, and probably was a friend or relation of Lazarus and his sisters. Martha's serving (compare Luke 10: 40) in his house is evidence of the latter point.—Cambridge Bible.

"Very costly." It was worth 300 denarii (ver. 5) or Roman shillings, called "pence" in our translation, and worth about 15 cents each. The nard was therefore valued at $45. But as a Roman denarii was the price of a day's labor in those days, the amount would be equivalent to $300 or $400 in our day. It was the costliest anointing oil of antiquity, used by the wealthiest families of the Roman empire.

"And anointed the feet of Jesus." She broke the alabaster box (Mark 14. 3), i. e., the narrow neck of the small flask, and poured the perfume, first on the head (Mark 14: 3), and then on the feet of Jesus (the oriental custom of reclining at table made the latter easier than the former).—Maclear.

"And the house was filled." The service rendered to Christ did not stop with him alone. Such service never does; it becomes fragrant to all who are within the reach of its influence.—Abbott.

"And given to the poor." The real source of Judas' opposition was hidden under a mask of benevolence. The wolf puts on the sheep's clothing. Thus usually the opposition to good wears a mask of virtue; religion is opposed in the name of liberty; faith, in the name of free thought; prohibition, in the name of temperance. [This is most true of the secret lodges. ED. CYNOSURE.]

"This he said, not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief." Take notice that it was not in selling our Saviour that Judas began to lose himself. The evil began long before; he had been a long time a thief; and his body only followed Jesus Christ, while his heart was far distant from him.—St. Austin. Wherefore, when you perceive that any religious person has grievously fallen, believe not that the evil began only then; for, without doubt, it had been a long while that his mind and heart were no more in religion.—Rodriguez.

"For the poor always ye have with you." It is the want of love, not of money, that allows any poor to suffer; so that all gifts to Christ which increase our love will increase the gifts to the poor.—P. It is the successors of Mary of Bethany, and not of Judas Iscariot, who really "care for the poor."—Ryle.

"But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death." All the rulers, including the Pharisees, would wish to destroy this rising sect, which which would take away their power and undermine their influence. This standing public proof of Jesus as the Messiah must be put away at any cost. But the chief priests, who were mostly Sadducees, would have an additional reason, in that Lazarus was a living refutation of their doctrine "that there is no resurrection" (Acts 23: 8).

"Much people." From all parts, especially Galilee, who had known much about him and his works there. Josephus estimates the numbers present at one passover as three millions; and the Pharisees on this occasion say, "Behold, the world has gone after him." The whole narrative must be compared with Matt. 21: 1 ff.; Mark 11: 1 ff.; Luke 19: 29 ff., in order to gain a sense of the tumultuous excitement of the scene.

"Jesus was coming to Jerusalem." This is the only known instance in which Jesus rode. He mounted that he might enter the holy city with all the significance of a triumph. He was the prince of peace, and yet he was a conqueror and a king. All the ideas that were incarnated in his career, and emblazoned in his final sufferings, death and resurrection, are destined to be triumphant.—Morison.

"Blessed is the king of Israel." They expected their Messiah to be a king, and now they would welcome him as the promised king. And if Jesus could do such wonderful miracles, and had such power from God as he had shown, he could easily overthrow the Roman power, and give the kingdom to Israel.

"But when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they." The ignorance of the disciples was corrected by experience. What they did not understand now, they understood when the resurrection and ascension had taken place. They saw then in what sense he was a king, and how much more gloriously royal, with how much wider a kingdom, than if he had reigned a temporal king at Jerusalem, as the people had hoped at the time.

OBITUARY.

MRS. N. K. NUTTING, wife of Rev. J. D. Nutting of Wauseon, O., died Tuesday morning, July 6th, aged 24 years and 11 months, after a brief illness. She was born in Yellow Springs, O., in 1861, and was the only daughter of William K. Miller.

Mrs. Nutting attended the preparatory department of Antioch College during the year 1877-78, and in August 1878 with her mother removed to Oberlin. In 1879 she entered the Literary course of Oberlin College, from which she graduated in June, 1883. The following college year, 1883-4, she studied piano and vocal music in Oberlin Conservatory; the following year, 1884-5, teaching in Oberlin Union schools. On June 23, 1885, she was married to Rev. John D. Nutting. In her home at Wauseon she has been the earthly center and sunlight for one bright, brief year, until she passed into the presence of the Master for whom she lived and joyfully labored while on earth.

Mrs. Nutting was from a child religiously inclined. In the winter of 1878-79, at Oberlin, she was converted to Christ and united with the First Congregational church, of which Dr. Brand was the pastor. She manifested a strong and consistent Christian life and character during her college days, being actively connected with Christian work both among the students and also for some years as a teacher of the large infant department of the Sabbath School. Coming to Wauseon with her husband and mother she united with the Congregational church, of which he was pastor; on Oct. 4, 1885, taking an active part in all Christian work as long as she was able, and continuing her interest therein unabated up to the last conscious evening of her life.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE'

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A. Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

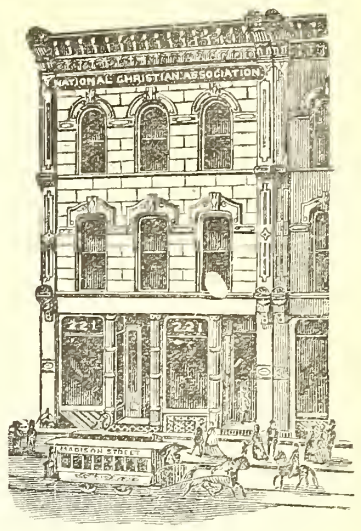
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.



The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Latbrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Terrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres. Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec., John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1886.

"A BIG FIGHT," say the papers, is going on between Powderly and John Swinton, the socialist agitator, of New York, the first seeking to unite the labor unions with the Knights of Labor, the other opposing. The whole history of secret orders is that of a "troubled sea which cannot rest." This keeps the masses in parties, their minds blinded, and "their foolish heart darkened."

THE ANCIENT ORDER OF UNITED WORKMEN, their secretary informs us, have sixty thousand members in Chicago alone. This, like The Royal Arcanum, to which Abbot E. Kitredge belonged, is a secret life-insurance company, which opens and closes its meetings with prayer. Think of sixty thousand people in Chicago opening and closing their meetings with prayer, belonging to no churches, no communion, no Decalogue, no Christ.

THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL COUNCIL of Virginia say: "The colored race have withdrawn in overwhelming majority from the churches in which they once worshiped with the whites," and urges the church to found separate churches for them. A few months since, President Cleveland sent a letter to a colored man with a white wife informing him that himself and lady were expected at the State dinner, given to the diplomatic corps. Why should not religion do as much as the desire of votes to abolish caste?

MR. POWDERLY offered, and the Cleveland General Assembly of the Knights of Labor adopted the following as his temperance confession of faith:

"While we recognize the right of every man to indulge in the use of liquor to such extent as he may deem necessary for health or comfort, yet we do recommend on that day each workman to refrain from the use of liquor of all kinds, so that he may exercise with a clear head his prerogative as a citizen in selecting proper men to represent the people."

We call the attention of the Union Signal to the above. As Miss Willard and the organ of the W.C.T.U. have once and again endorsed and complimented these secret bodies as friends and promoters of temperance, the friends of prohibition have a right to know whether Mr. Powderly's temperance creed, adopted by his general assembly, as given above, is satisfactory to them. A secret society is a contempt of Christ's example and his precept; the moral code of such a body is hollow, empty and meaningless.

THE INDEPENDENT, commenting on a speech of Leverett Saltenstall, at Harvard Commencement, says:

"We could give him more facts if he required them. We could tell him, for example, of a college where young men, whose bills to the college treasury were remitted on the ground of poverty, have paid from $100 to $150 a year for secret society charges."

And yet these "charity students," paying $100 to $150 a year, will be brave, honorable young gentlemen; while, if they opposed secret societies, they would be reproached with their poverty and lack of spirit. There is something in the ceremonies of a secret lodge which reverses the moral nature of men and their actions, making meanness honorable and moral goodness despised. In a Christian college where the Greek letter societies were excluded from church fellowship by the discipline of the church, five secret oath-bound societies had clandestinely grown up, and candidates for the ministry, supported by its charity and by hard-working fathers and mothers, were found to be members; and yet the ritual lectures of these societies were stuffed with lofty sentiments of honor, virtue, and goodness!

"Oh, what authority and show of truth,
Can cunning sin cover itself withal."

So the Bible side-worshipers made evil good and good evil; and they were priests of false religions who did it.

THE TRIAL OF THE ANARCHISTS.

Our readers know that seven policemen were killed by a dynamite bomb, and more than fifty others wounded at the Haymarket, Chicago, May 4th last. The men indicted for this mass of crime or crimes are now on trial before Judge Joseph E. Gary, in this city. Twenty-one days and a half have been occupied in selecting twelve jurors, and 979 citizens were examined before the twelve were obtained; in all about 1,200 were summoned into court, but over 200 were excused without examination.

We give elsewhere, from States Attorney Grinnell's opening, what he expects to prove. As the case develops we shall endeavor to put our readers in possession of it, and of the relations which these gloomy moral maniacs bear to the family of secret orders in this country and throughout the world.

This being the first case of its kind, renders it specially important, as it is to become a precedent case. The speeches of the men now on trial have been regarded as swagger and bluster. So it seems Mayor Harrison and others have so regarded them, and the Lake front meetings have not been heretofore broken up for that reason. But now that a wholesale massacre has been perpetrated, the point is settled that the object of these men was not bluster, notoriety, and intimidation of employers, but deliberate intent to kill officers of the law in the hope that the fight once begun would become general.

The assassins, of course, intended to conceal the man who threw the bomb on May 4th, and hoped that unless the hand that threw it was discovered, no one of them could be convicted of murder. Their attorney, Mr. Foster, admitted the existence of a conspiracy to kill the police, but said: "If we embark in this conspiracy and somebody else at another place murders somebody, are we to be held responsible [for the murder]?"

Judge Gary decided thus:

"If there was a general combination and agreement among a great number of individuals to kill policemen if they came into conflict with parties with whom they were friendly, meetings of workingmen, and bodies of strikers; if it was the combination and agreement to kill the police in their attempts to preserve the peace; if there was such a combination and agreement among a great number of men, the object of which was something beyond mere local disturbance, whether it was their object to offer a new form of civil society or not; if there was such an agreement to kill the police upon some occasion that might occur in the future, whether the proper time had occurred being left to their judgment; then if that violence was used and resulted in the death of the police, then those who were a party to the conspiracy are guilty of death."

This ruling puts the necks of every proved conspirator of the Haymarket murder into the halter. A series of meetings are proved in which the purpose was declared, justified and avowed to murder the police in case of a conflict by their attempt to disperse the Haymarket mob. Not only was the conspiracy formed, but bombs were distributed for the purpose of the killing of those policemen as the agents of the government when the melee should occur. It did occur, and one of the bombs, being thrown in the dark, killed and wounded over fifty officers. Judge Gary therefore properly rules that every one proved a conspirator at former meetings, and especially every distributor of the bombs for the purpose of killing, and they were used for no other purpose,—that every one of the conspirators being there that night, was part and parcel of the conspiracy, and so guilty of murder. If Beauregard's battalion, enlisted and trained for the avowed purpose of overthrowing the Government, were present at the opening on Sumter, though but one gun had been fired and that particular gunner had hid or run away, that one shot was an overt act of treason and every man of the battalion liable to be hung as a traitor. So Spies, Fielden, Parsons and the rest were part of the force which deliberately threw that bomb, and were each guilty of the seven murders. To clear them will be a mere legal quibble. Well may Judge Gary ask, "Are not all of these persons equally guilty?"

The eyes of all America and Europe are gazing intently on this trial; and the property, safety, and life of every one is bound up in the issue.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR IN ILLINOIS.

The Chicago Tribune says: "The actual membership of the order in the State is about 60,000, one-half of which is located in Cook county. The majority of the members have joined since January. Some figures in State Statistican Seib's report are important as showing what has been accomplished. He received reports from but 92 out of 275 assemblies, and from only 22,034 members. There were 46 strikes in the 92 assemblies during their existence, in which 16,000 members took part and lost a grand total of 745,000 days, which, computed at the average of $1.62 per day wages, caused a loss of $1,206,000. Of these strikes 18 were compromised, 18 lost, and the remainder doubtful."

That is to say, about one in thirty of the whole population of the State. Yet the secret executive board having absolute dictatorial power over this one-thirtieth, assume to dictate to the other twenty-nine whom they shall employ and what wages they shall pay. And Mr. Powderly says, "When our organization is completed we shall have no need of laws;" that is, shall be withdrawn from the State, which five or ten invisible, irresponsible despots will rule, and our entire population must then practice "secrecy," "obedience," "patience," and "assistance,"—Mr. Powderly's four requisitions.

But there are hundreds of other secret orders requiring the same, and they all practice worships which estrange the heart from God, as their rules withdraw men from the State.

THE SECRET LAW AND ORDER LODGES.

Our readers have noticed the new secret lodges started at Sedalia, Mo., and Chicago by Rev. Edmonston, and N. S. Bouton, and their associates, to organize, arm, and drill minute-men over the United States, to suppress boycotting, labor-mobs and strikes. The press notices the facts, generally, without comment. A slight glance at history will show that attempting to suppress the mobs of secret societies by organizing other secret societies against them, is attempting to cast out devils by Beelzebub, which Christ declared impossible.

"It is a profound question to answer," said Coleridge, "Why, since the middle of the sixteenth century, the Reformation has not advanced a single step in Europe."

The answer has been given: "Luther fought for the truth; his followers for Lutheranism." And this is doubtless true. But Ulric Von Hutten used to attend the diets of the Protestant princes, armed cap-a-pie as a knight ready to battle for Christ; and knighthood was, and sham knighthood is now, a secret order; and some principalities in Germany are now papist which were once Protestant. In later times Mazzini and Garibaldi were Freemasons. The result is stated by Coleridge above.

Guy Fawkes's gun-powder plot; the teaching of the Douay Seminary that it was right to satisfy Protestant princes; the wholesale assassination of Protestants by papists in Ireland, so terribly avenged by Cromwell; the massacre of St. Bartholomew in France; and, indeed, religious murders, generally, the world over, have been the work of secret societies. The Orange lodges, like these Missouri and Chicago law-and-order lodges, were formed to protect Protestantism, and put down popery. The Orange men to-day are secret assassins organized to suppress secret assassination. Since William the Third, their celebration of the battle of Boyne Water, has been a signal for broils and blood, and popery has literally grown green under the shadow of Orangeism. Papist mothers have sung their babes to sleep with,

"They hung both men and women
For the wearing of the green."

And O'Connell said truly, "Ireland has passed through three centuries of Protestant persecution, and still clings to her religion;" and, in our day, the Know Nothing party was but a bungling copy of Orangeism to antagonize popery by secret oaths and obligations.

One would suppose that this attempt to propagate and protect light by darkness, sun-light by secrecy, had been tried often and long enough, but "the rulers of the darkness of this world" are neither dead, idle nor sleeping. A secret society has but to adopt a new name and forms of worship, and as the Edmeston trick of suppressing labor-mobs, and protecting property by filling the United States with secret, armed guerrillas, boasts its seventeen thousand dupes in as many weeks. Though a very little sense and reflection would convince even weak minds that such methods always have done, and always must, aggravate the evils they are meant to cure.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE CARDINAL.

Not only did our mis-representative authorities at Washington send out a government vessel to get the little red hats sent over here to one of his priests by the Pope, but the Papal flag was run up on the vessel, and a few days later President Cleveland sent Lamar, Secretary of the Interior, to represent the Cabinet at the installing of the new Cardinal Gibbons, and himself sent a personal letter to that prelate by the hand of a priest named Chappell, of St. Matthews Roman Catholic church, Washington. Mr. Cleveland has "long enjoyed" it is reported the acquintance and personal friendship of Mr. Gibbons. When, it is worth while to inquire, did this beautiful relation begin to exist? While Mr. Cleveland was sheriff of Buffalo or governor at Albany? Doubted. The Catholic prelate had no particular use for Mr. Cleveland until he got to Washington, and he seems to have then cultivated his acquaintance to some effect.

President Cleveland, in this humiliation of the nation before a foreign and hostile ecclesiastieism, has only followed the example set for him by all the members of evangelical churches who practice the Masonic religion at the same time. He is a regular attendant at the Presbyterian church, but his best respects are reserved for the Romanists. Prof. C. L. Loos, president of the University of Kentucky, in a long and able censure of this act of Mr. Cleveland in the Christian Standard, says:

"The humiliating spectacle of the Federal authorities hastening to comply with the proud demand of the Catholic church in doing this slavish homage to the papacy, is a foul blot on the American name, a sad revelation of the grip the papal power has on the politics of our country. When this demand came, the threatening specter of a vast multitude of Catholic voters at once rose before the frightened souls of the politicians, and, constitution or no constitution, the American was sunk in the politician, and with bowed head and—we were going to say with troubled conscience, but politicians have none—the haughty behest of spiritual Rome was hastily obeyed; the order was issued to a government cutter to meet the Pope's delegates; and the cutter sailed up the North River to its landing with the papal flag flying at the fore—a most edifying spectacle, surely, to the non-American Catholics of New York, a grand, new victory for the papal power in the United States; but a profound humiliation to every other free citizen except the politicians. It was a deep, burning and lasting dishonor to our country. How the free men of Europe, those who have looked with hope and pride on our Republic, must have been humbled, and have felt their hearts within them burn with indignation and their cheeks blush with shame, when this prostration of the American government before the spiritual power of Rome, this guilty violation of the supreme law of our land, was telegraphed to the Old World!"

—Secretary Stoddard left Chicago Saturday morning to attend the United Brethren convention at Fairmount, Ind., and to speak at other points in Indiana.

—At the St. Charles, Ill., camp meeting this year one sister spoke who is worthy to be the mother of heroes. "I had to start for the family," she said. "I told husband that if he went to hell he must go alone. I told him to leave the lodge and I would support the family. He did. The Masons followed him to keep him from getting work, but I took my brush and scrubbed, in a city where my husband had received $1,600 a year, and I had worn my silks."

—Elder J. F. Browne writes to the N. C. A. Treasurer that he expects to be ready to begin work for the Wisconsin State Association on the 22nd, and letters requesting his services should be sent to this office.

—Secretary Stoddard is announced to speak on Freemasonry in the Evangelical Tabernacle, No. 135 Van Buren street, in this city, next week Thursday evening. Pastor Seguin has opened at this mission a hopeful Chinese Sabbath-school, for which he needs devoted lady teachers, and has also resumed the French service Sabbath afternoons.

—Judge Rogers, of the circuit court of this city, is an Odd-fellow, and has been at the head of the order in the State. He is active in looking after the interests of his lodge companions who are in government employ, seeing that politics does not prevail over the lodge and they be discharged. The obligations of Postmaster Judd to him serves the lodge a good turn for the order.

—Miss Willard writes to the Signal from West Virginia that between the W. C. T. U. and the Good Templars in that State, "there is the best of good will," and that "this ought always to be so, and will be, so far as I can help to secure a result greatly to be desired." This broad commendation of a secret order is more emphatic possibly as others read, than the writer intended; but it is a serious declaration, and will be followed, we fear, by more serious results. In Missouri the W. C. T. U. and the Good Templars are gone into partnership in a series of camp-meetings. The result will be to fill up the lodge ranks, just as the Good Templars followed in the wake of the Murphy meetings, sending circulars to all who signed the pledge, with the endeavor to deceive them with the falsehood that the Good Templar is the only organization which temperance men can join to make their influence with that reform effective.

—The Grand Army of the Republic turns a deaf ear to the wooing of the W. C. T. U. In reply to a kindly expressed wish of the National W. C. T. U., that no wine should be served at the banquet given at the annual encampment, to be held in San Francisco, Commander-in-Chief Burdett says he believes "that wine is a blessing, and its every-day use by all classes of people would be a good to their health."

—A friend criticises the statement of last week that the Good Templar lodge rejects Christ from its creed and prayers. This was literally the fact, and is yet so practically. A Grand Lecturer of the order in this State says that the name of Christ was inserted in the prayers a few years ago, because of the censure of opponents of secret societies. A recognition of Christ to stop the mouths of enemies is not such as will be reckoned of any account at the judgment. The creed to which every Good Templar assents is Unitarian or Jewish, and the prayer which follows cannot be construed as contradicting it, and giving offense to such members as do not believe in Christ. "How call ye me Lord, Lord! and do not the things that I say."

—In the list of donations reported last week a very considerable proportion was credited to the fund for sending the Cynosure to colored ministers in the South. Our publisher has yet a large list of such ministers to whom he would be glad to send the paper so soon as the friends send the means. The experience of the past two years shows that this is one of the very best means for extending the reform, and no investment seems to produce such immediate and excellent results. The contributions will hereafter be reported weekly. Note them carefully, and let each reader of the paper be sure to have his name in the list of contributors. There should be at least 1,000 copies of the paper sent out this year from this fund.

—The special correspondent of the Inter Ocean seems to have been favorably impressed with the Illinois State Prohibition convention. He says of it: "As for the convention as a unit, it is for a separate policy of action; as for its make-up, it is more than two-thirds of Democratic antecedents; as for its future prospects, no man can say. These 400 or 500 people, men and women, are not cranks; they are not disturbers of the public peace; they do not seek to disrupt society. On the contrary, they are reputable citizens and tax-payers. Of my own knowledge I can say that not less than 300 out of the 500 in this Senate chamber pay taxes on from five to $50,000 worth of real estate. The delegates are enthusiastic, but they are honorable, law-abiding taxpayers, and Major Christian and Governor Oglesby touched the popular chord when in their speeches they said this prohibition movement was in sympathy with the great American idea that this is a free country."

—The conferences in this city provided by the N. C. A. committee on the interdenominational congress on the lodge system has resulted in the appointment of a responsible and able committee of pastors and others, representative men in seven different denominations who have held two meetings and are preparing a formal call and arranging the topics and speakers. This movement is daily assuming an importance beyond our hopes a year ago.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Dr. S. Collins, president of the N. C. A. National Convention, has nearly recovered from a severe illness, and is now at Ocean Grove, New Jersey.

—Rev. George Warrington, editor of the Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa, is taking a vacation in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and before his return home will visit Newcastle, near Pittsburg, and speak against the lodge.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley has been spending a fortnight in Minnesota with good results for the Cynosure list, and as a direct result we hope, a wider interest in the reform. He goes to West Union, Iowa, soon.

—Col. Elliott F. Shepard, from whose pamphlet, "Labor and Capital Are One," the Cynosure has quoted excellent advice to workingmen against secret societies, has offered to pay off the debt of the Seventh Presbyterian church of New York city on condition that none shall be made hereafter.

—Elder J. F. Browne of Berea, Ky., has been visiting his old home is New Hampshire, and was expecting to spend last Sabbath at Willimantic on his way West.

—Wendell Phillips, the great reform orator, was buried on the spot he selected for his grave many years ago—a wooded rise of ground at Milton, Mass. Mrs. Phillips is laid beside her husband, and their names are inscribed just as he used to like to write them—"Anna and Wendell Phillips."

—Mr. T. E. Kennedy, with whom the assistant editor of the Cynosure spent a pleasant week at Visalia, California, in May, has lately entered into a law partnership with William M. Tirtlot in rooms 6 and 7, 217 Sansome street, San Francisco. These earnest Christian men will supplement each other in their profession, and while they will endeavor to conduct an honorable business, we hope it will be no less prosperous. Whoever wishes business done in San Francisco will find this firm reliable.

—The dispatches of Monday morning inform us that the large lumber yard of Knapp, Stout & Co., at St. Louis, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon, and 25,000,000 feet of lumber consumed. The company's stables were also consumed. The loss on lumber alone reaches $400,000. The total insurance is estimated at $375,000. Captain William Wilson, of Menomonie, Wis., was the founder of this company which has its headquarters yet at that place. Capt. Wilson and his son, T. B. Wilson, are active members of the firm. It is hoped that this loss will not seriously cripple their business.

—Mr. A. I. Root, Medina, Ohio, who employs 100 hands in the manufacture of agricultural apparatus, does not give work to any person who uses liquor or tobacco. Moreover, he offers to each smoking or chewing reader of his Gleanings in Bee Culture a "smoker" (an instrument for quieting the honey gatherers) on condition that he quit the degrading habit. In the latest issue of the magazine appear letters of several subscribers accepting the gift and agreeing to pay the price of it if ever again they fall victims to the weed from which even the scavenger hog turns away.

CYNOSURE AGENTS.

The times have never been more favorable for introducing the Christian Cynosure than now! The rapidly multiplying secret lodges, with their political significance, their labor-disturbing elements, boycotting, and bomb-throwing, disgusts and alarms the best citizens who will hail the Cynosure as pointing to the remedy for these frogs of Egypt that have covered the whole land. Who will devote a portion of his time to explaining to his neighbors the object of the Cynosure?

L. Raymo writes: "I intend to try and get some subscribers for the Cynosure. I cannot commence till about the first of next month to work, and if I can get some pay for my labor, I will keep at it."

It is intended to make the terms to those getting up clubs, and spending a portion of their time in the school districts near their home, more liberal than ever before made by the Cynosure. But now we wish the address of all old agents and new who will enter the field for real work in this reform, especially for your paper. Let us hear from you soon.

"MASONIC OUTRAGES."—This pamphlet was thought to be completed last week, but the desire of the publication committee that another chapter be added to make the work more effective has led to a brief postponement. The orders for the pamphlet are increasing daily, and we hope for a very wide circulation of a useful document.

LABOR AND CAPITAL ARE ONE.—At the request of a number of the leading business men of the country, Col. Elliott F. Shepard, of New York, embodied his views on the labor question in a letter entitled, "Labor and Capital are One," which has been printed in pamphlet form, both an English and German edition, for gratuitous distribution among the workingmen, by Christian folks interested in their welfare. Col. Shepard is a recognized friend of the laboring man, and an earnest expounder of justice in its strictest sense, and presents sound Christian and economical principles for the settlement of current difficulties. He deals only with facts, presenting strong points and living truths which cannot fail to strike deep into the mind of any thoughtful person, and will tend to harmonize the interests of labor and capital. The pamphlet may, therefore, be read with interest and profit by all parties. Mr. J. J. Moore, who is now staying at the Continental hotel in this city, is actively engaged in circulating the pamphlet, and will be pleased to supply copies to parties who will distribute them to advantage.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY.—The house and forty-five acres of good land owned, and till lately occupied, by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill., is for sale on reasonable terms and time payments. It is a beautiful high spot in a grove of sugar maples and other trees, with quick-set hedges surrounding flower-beds; barns fit for a small dairy; orchard and fruit trees; and but about a hundred rods from the college. A farmer who has a family to educate would find everything ready to his hand; and a business man who wishes beauty, comfort and convenience, but fifty minutes from Chicago, could make it a domestic paradise. The fall term opens Sept. 7th. Write to Pres. C. A Blanchard, Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

THE HOME.

BETTER THINGS.

Better to smell the violet cool than sip the glowing wine;
Better to hark a hidden brook than watch a diamond shine.

Better the love of a gentle heart than beauty's favor proud;
Better the rose's living seed than roses in a crowd.

Better to love in loneliness than to bask in love all day;
Better the fountain in the heart than the fountain by the way.

Better be fed by a mother's hand than eat alone at will;
Better to trust in God than say, "My goods my storehouse fill."

Better to be a little wise than in knowledge to abound;
Better to teach a child than toil to fill perfection's round.

Better to sit at a master's feet than thrill a listening State;
Better suspect that thou art proud than be sure that thou art great.

Better to walk the real unseen than watch the hour's event;
Better the "Well done!" at the last than the air with shouting rent.

Better to have a quiet grief than a hurrying delight;
Better the twilight of the dawn than the noonday burning bright.

Better a death when work is done than earth's most favored birth:
Better a child in God's great house than the king of all the earth.

—George Macdonald.

THE SILENCE OF THE SCRIPTURE.

In an address before the Bible Society, in Exeter Hall, London, May 5, 1875, Dr. Wm. M. Punshon said:

"The silence of Scripture may be quoted as an evidence of its inspiration. It is silent by design. The subjects upon which Scripture is silent are precisely those which irreverent curiosity would fain probe to the uttermost. We ask about the dead; what are the conditions of their existence in the world to which they are gone, and in that Paradise which is but a suburb of heaven? We do not know; the Word is silent. . . . There is a tendency to leave old beliefs behind, and press to some imagined beyond of truth that nobody has ever yet tracked. And it is considered a proof of manliness to have outgrown the faith of our childhood. But men are dying, and if the old faith be true—and in no battle-field has it ever been worsted yet—they go somewhere. Yes, and we are dying too; and are we to have no fringe upon the cloud of the sepulchre? Are we to pass away, as we must do, if you take from us our Bible, with the cheerless conviction that life is a balance of chances, and that death is a leap in the dark, and all this when we may be at any moment summoned into a glory that is richer than golden? There is a great deal of impermanence attaching to all human systems of teaching; but the truth that God has written remains upon the face of the rock undefaced and permanent forever. 'The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of the Lord endureth forever.'"

If the silence of Scripture in these matters is good evidence of divine inspiration, then the vain talk of many teachers affords convincing evidence of their lack of that gift. For there are those who will tell us more about the condition of the dead in one sermon than we can find in the whole Bible from Genesis to Revelation. If any one desires to know the full particulars concerning the condition of those who have died, we would refer them to the pages of almost any modern hymn-book, where they will find all the details. But if they only seek to know what God has revealed, they will have to content themselves with statements far less elaborate, but vastly more trustworthy.

It would seem most desirable that Christian ministers should confine themselves, in preaching, within the limits bounded by inspired revelation. Where God's word is silent, they should be silent; where the Lord speaks, they should speak also. But if they conform to this rule, they will say little about death, and much about the resurrection; nothing at all about preparing for death, but much about the coming of the Lord to judge the world in righteousness, as the great motive which should influence human action.

Unfortunately, this is not the line of thought which many preachers pursue. They talk much of those things concerning which Scripture is silent, and little of those things where the testimony of Scripture is full and explicit. One familiar with the writings of Plato would almost think, while listening to some modern sermons, that the old philosopher had appeared again; while he would find but faint intimations of the doctrine of Jesus and the resurrection, as taught by Christ and the apostles.

Says Dr. Adam Clarke, in his notes on 1 Cor. 15: "One remark I cannot help making; the doctrine of the resurrection appears to have been thought of much more consequence among the primitive Christians than it is now! How is this? The apostles were continually insisting on it, and exciting the followers of God to diligence, obedience, and cheerfulness, through it. And their successors in the present day seldom mention it! So apostles preached, and so primitive Christians believed; so we preach, and so our hearers believe. There is not a doctrine in the gospel on which more stress is laid; and there is not a doctrine in the present system of preaching which is treated with more neglect."

In proportion as men preach that which the Lord has not revealed, they will neglect that which he has taught in his word. If they will be content with the Lord's silence they will then be in a position to proclaim the Lord's word. But if they undertake to be wiser than he is, they will doubtless find in the end that "the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men."—The Christian.

RUSKIN'S MISTAKE.

Looking back upon my writings for the last twenty years, I believe that their failure has been in very great part owing to my compromise with the infidelity of the outer world, and my endeavor to base my pleading upon motives of ordinary prudence and kindness instead of on the primary duty of loving God—foundation other than which no man can lay.

I thought myself speaking to a crowd which could only be influenced by visible utility; nor was I the least aware how many entirely good and holy persons were living in the faith and love of God as vividly and practically now as ever in the early enthusiasm of Christendom, until, chiefly in consequence of the great illness which for some time after 1878 forbade my accustomed literary labor, I was brought into closer personal relations with the friends in America, Scotland, Ireland, and Italy, to whom, if I am spared to write any record of my life it will be seen that I owe the best hopes and highest thoughts which have supported and guided the force of my matured mind. These have shown me, with lovely initiation, in how many secret places the prayer was made which I had foolishly listened for at the corners of the streets; and on how many hills which I had thought left desolate, the host of heaven still moved in chariots of fire.

But surely the time is come when all these faithful armies should lift up the standard of their Lord—not by might, nor by power, but by his Spirit, bringing victory; that they should no more be hidden nor overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. If the enemy cometh in like a flood, how much more may the rivers of Paradise. Are there not fountains of the great deep that open to bless, not destroy?

And the beginning of blessing, if you will think of it, is in that promise, "Great shall be the peace of thy children." All the world is but as one orphanage, so long as its children know not God, their Father; and all wisdom and knowledge is only more bewildered darkness, so long as you have not taught them the fear of the Lord; not to be taken out of the world in monastic sorrow, but to be kept from its evil in shepherded peace.—John Ruskin.

CHERRIES.

"Oh, Uncle Hugh, you are just in time!" exclaimed Edmond Earl as his uncle, Hugh Carlton, entered the yard. "See what a lot of delicious cherries I've just picked!"

"Delicious, indeed!" replied their uncle, after tasting a few. "The best I have seen this season."

"Uncle Hugh, if you will come in the arbor and pay toll you may have as many as you can eat," sang out Harry Earl.

"Toll, you rogue! I know what that means. Well, these cherries are tempting and worth being victimized for. Now, what shall it be about? for a story, I suppose, is the toll I must pay."

Harry laughed, seated his uncle, placed a basket of cherries by his side, and replied, "You may tell us where cherries first came from."

"From two species of the wild cherry, cherry avium and cherry vulgaris, it is supposed all the fine cherries of our gardens and orchards have been obtained, and both are generally regarded as natives of Britain and of the middle and south of Europe. In a wild state they are frequently planted, and not only because they are exceedingly ornamental when in flower, but also for their timber; the tree being of rapid growth, with firm, close-grained wood, suitable for the purposes of cabinet-makers, turners, and musical instrument makers."

"I remember that at grandma's they have a whole set of bed-room furniture made of cherry-wood."

"Yes, Edmond, and it was from timber off father's own land. I must tell you that according to some botanists it is thought that there is only one species of the wild cherry from which the variety are derived; according to others, cherry vulgaris is a native of Syria and other parts of Western Asia, and is only naturalized in Europe, having been first brought to Italy by Lucullus, after a victory over the Mithridates, 74 B. C., from Kerasunt, on the coast of the Black Sea.

"Our cultivated varieties, you know, vary considerably in size, color, and flavor. The fruit of the cherry supplies the inhabitants of some parts of France with a principal article of food, especially to wood-cutters and charcoal burners of the forest; and among their modes of preparing it is that of making it a principal ingredient in soups. This fruit is said to ripen in Norway and East Rothina as far north as latitude 63°. Varieties of cherries with double flowers and with pendulous branches are frequently planted for ornament in shrubberies, and few trees' shrubs are more beautiful.

"The All Saints cherry produces flowers almost all summer and even in autumn. Its fruit is small and rather acid. Some species are low, or even prostrate shrubs, as the ground cherry of the south of Europe and Liberia, and the sand cherry of North America; then there is the American wild cherry, valued for its medical bark, the mataleb from the south of Europe, famous for the fragrance of its flowers, and the capollim of Mexico and Peru, noted for the fragrance of its fruit, and the cherry-laurel. Besides their use for dessert and preserves, the cherry, I am sorry to say, is extensively used for making liquor, cherry bounce and cherry brandy.

"In some parts of Germany the public roads are lined for many miles together with avenues of cherry trees. This reminds me, boys, to tell you that once upon a time branches of cherries saved a city."

"How so, Uncle Hugh?" asked Harry.

"A French writer says, in the early part of the sixteenth century, cherries were very rare in Germany. There had been a rot, and it was with the utmost difficulty that any could be procured. But a citizen of Hamburg, named Wolf, had in the middle of the town a walled garden, and in the garden he had gathered the rarest of cherry trees, and those in great abundance, being the juciest cherries. All who wished cherries must go to him for them and he sold them at the highest prices, so that at every season he reaped a great harvest of gold for his cherries. Far and near Wolf's cherry trees were known, and he grew richer and more famous.

"One season, when his cherry trees were in blossom, and giving promise of an abundant crop, a war broke out in the North of Germany in which Hamburg was invaded. The city was besieged, and so surrounded by the enemy that no help could reach it. Slowly they consumed the provisions that were garnered, but famine was staring them in the face. Nor did they dare yield to the enemy, for in those days there was little mercy shown to the conquered; and while any hope remained the people held out, making vain rallies into the enemies camp, and growing weaker daily, as less food remained to them.

"Meanwhile the enemy had grown more fierce without. The heat was intense, and had dried up the brooks and springs in all the country about, so that the besiegers were becoming wild with thirst. It made them savager, and the commanding general would listen to no terms, but swore to destroy the city and to pull all the inhabitants, soldiers and old men, women and children, to the sword.

"But would it not be better thus to be killed outright than to suffer the slow death of famine? Wolf thought of these things as he returned one day to his garden in the middle of the city, after a week of fighting with the enemy. In his absence the cherries had ripened fast in the hot sun, and were now superb; fairly bursting with the red juice, and making one's mouth to water at the sight. A sudden thought came into his head as he looked at his cherries, and a hope sprung up that he might save his fellow townsmen. There was not a moment to lose, for twenty more hours of suffering would make the people delirious.

"He brought together all the children of the town, to the number of three hundred, and had them dressed wholly in white. In those days and in that country funeral processions were thus dressed. He brought them into his orchard and loaded them each with a branch heavy with rich, juicy cherries, and marshaling them sent them out of the city, a feeble procession to the camp of the enemy. The dying men and women filled the streets as the white-robed children passed through the gates and out into the country.

"The besieging general saw the procession drawing near, concealed by the boughs they were carrying, and suspected some stratagem. Then he was told that they were children of Hamburg, who had heard that he and his army were suffering with thirst, and here were luscious cherries to quench it. Thereat he was very angry, for he was of a cruel and violent nature, and said that they had come to mock him, and he would surely put them to death before his eyes, even as he had sworn he would do to all the people of the city.

"But when the procession came before him, and he saw the poor children so thin, so pale, so worn out by hunger, the rough man's heart was touched. A spring of fatherly love that had long been choked in him broke forth; tears came to his eyes, and what the warriors of the town could not do the peaceful children in white did—they vanquished the hard heart. That evening the little cherry bearers returned to the city, and with them went a great procession of carts filled with provisions for the starving people; and the very next day a treaty of peace was signed.

"Now, boys, I have paid sufficient toll for all the cherries I have eaten?"

"Indeed, you have! Thanks for all you have told us about this fine fruit."—Ex.

VACATION SONG.

I have closed my books and hidden my slate,
And thrown my satchel across the gate.
My school is out for a season of rest,
And now for the school room I love the best!

My school room lies on the meadow wide,
Where under the clover the sunbeams hide;
Where the long vines cling to the mossy bars,
And the daisies twinkle like fallen stars;

Where clusters of buttercups gild the scene,
Like showers of gold-dust thrown over the green,
And the wind's flying footsteps are traced, as they pass,
By the dance of the sorrel and dip of the grass.

My lessons are written in clouds and trees,
And no one whispers, except the breeze,
Who sometimes blows, from a secret place,
A stray, sweet blossom against my face.

My school-bell rings in the rippling stream
Which hides itself, like a school-boy's dream,
Under the shadow and out of sight,
But laughing still for its own delight.

My schoolmates there are the birds and bees
And the saucy squirrel, less wise than these,
For he only learns, in all the weeks,
How many chestnuts will fill his cheeks.

My teacher is patient, and never yet
A lesson of hers did I once forget,
For wonderful love do her lips impart,
And all her lessons are learned by heart.

Oh, come! oh, come! or we shall be late,
And autumn will fasten the golden gate.
Of all the school rooms, in East or West,
The school of Nature I love the best.

—Katharine Lee Bates, in the Moravian.

GRAMMAR.

It is a pathetic sight to watch the meanderings of a childish mind through the intricacies of English grammar. Little Jane had repeatedly been reproved for doing violence to the moods and tenses of the verb "to be." She would say, "I be," instead of, "I am," and for a time it seemed as if no one could prevent it. Finally Aunt Kate made a rule not to answer an incorrect question, but wait until it was corrected.

One day the two sat together, Aunt Kate busy with embroidery, and little Jane over her dolls. Presently doll society became tedious, and the child's attention was attracted to the embroidery frame.

"Aunt Kate," said she, "please tell me what that is going to be?"

But Aunt Kate was counting, and did not answer. Fatal word, be? It was her old enemy, and to it alone could the child ascribe the silence that followed.

"Aunt Kate," she persisted, with an honest attempt to correct her mistake, "please tell me what that is going to am?"

Still auntie sat silently counting, though her lip curled with amusement.

Jane sighed, but made another patient effort.

"Will you please tell me what that is going to are?"

Aunt Katie counted on, perhaps by this time actuated by a wicked desire to know what would come next. The little girl gathered her energies for one last and great effort.

"Aunt Kate, what am that going to are?"—Youth's Companion.

Benefit your friends, that they may love you still more dearly; benefit your enemies that they may become your friends.

TEMPERANCE.

BABY BLUE.

A TRUE STORY.

Slam, bang!

Baby Blue opened his big blue eyes and looked around, but it was not morning yet, neither had the noise sounded like thunder, it was more like something falling. He sat up in bed; the lamp burned dimly on the mantel, and by its feeble light he distinguished among the things scattered on the floor several chairs and—his father. Yes, I intended to class him among the things, for by what more appropriate name could he be called in his present intoxicated condition?

Baby Blue heard a moan, and looking in the direction from whence it came, he saw his mother crouched in a corner of the room.

Baby Blue's father heard it also, and struggling to his feet by the aid of the chair over which he had fallen, he staggered toward the trembling woman, while Baby Blue, in his four-year-old wisdom, gained by past experience, slipped quietly down into bed again, just as his father threw wide the door, admitting the twenty-degree-below-zero breath of a Northern Wisconsin winter. "I'll teasch ye to be ashkin' quessions 'bout whazziver makshe me lashe home; come, I'll show ye whoshe massher o' thish houshe."

And with a cruelty impossible to one not possessed of that "invisible spirit of wine" for which Shakespeare found no more appropriate name than "devil," he thrust her out into the bitter air, and behind the closed door slipped into its place the long, heavy bar which the people on the frontiers were wont to fasten their doors against their worst enemies, the wild Indians. Then, with an oath worthy of one who had done such a deed, and all heedless of his wife's pleading for admittance, he turned from the door and reeled to the floor in a drunken stupor. Dead drunk, and his wife who, only five short years ago, he had promised to love and cherish, was barred out into the bitter night by the very hand that had held hers so lovingly then, and cursed by the very lips which had made that sacred promise.

Oh, thou "invisible spirit of wine," what other name can we find for thee but the one chosen by the poet?

Out in the cold, the bitter cold of an unusually severe winter, and clad only in her house garments, miles from any other human habitation, what should she do? She could hear, through the barred door, her husband's loud breathing, which all too plainly told her that he was unable to help her now, even if he would.

Only one hope was left, and that a very faint one.

"Baby, Baby Blue, get out of bed quick, and lift up the bar so that mother can come in."

Hurriedly the little feet came pattering over the floor.

Climbing on a chair, Baby Blue tugged and pulled at the heavy bar, but it required the strength of an adult, and so his best endeavors were vain. Soon he ceased to hear his mother's voiee, and supposed she must have gone away. The fire burned low, the room was getting cold, the lamp went out, and Baby Blue crept back into bed and cried himself to sleep.

Hours afterward he awoke with a start to find the sun streaming into the room, and his father, now sobered, bending over him, with a face almost as white as the snow outside, and asking:

"Baby, where is mother?"

"Out dere," said Baby, pointing to the door.

For the first time, the father noticed that the door was fastened on the inside, and in a choked and trembling voice, he hurriedly demanded:

"How came she out there?"

"Poor mamma, oo opened 'e door and banged her right out!"

"Poor mamma," indeed. Had he got to such depths of cruelty that he could treat his beloved Nelly in this way? Had he allowed the demon, of which she had so often warned him, to possess him soul and body?

Still, not realizing how cold it had been during the night, he supposed he should find her at some neighbor's house. Yet an undefined feeling of dread oppressed him as he hurried out to trace in the snow the direction she had taken. Dear Nelly, who had borne so bravely all the hardships consequent upon her frontier life; who had been so patient with his shortcomings, and who had loved their darling boy as her own life, how his heart smote him when he saw her tracks round and round the house—their house, hers as well as his—and yet from which he had driven her into the bitter night!

Finally he traced them down a pathway toward the main road, and—but what was that lying under the old oak tree where Baby Blue loved to play in the long, bright summer hours? Could it be? Yes, it was his Nelly; that is, it was all there was left to him of her—her frozen form. Nelly herself had gone not to a neighbor's house, but to her own home, "a house not built with hands," and in a land where neither drunkards nor drunkard-makers are allowed to enter. Can you wonder that Baby Blue, when he grew to man's estate, was outspoken and firm against our Nation's curse?—The Pioneer.

The New York police last year arrested, for drunkenness, 2,248 boys and 1,056 girls, all under fourteen years of age.

Breweries are found to be poisoners of air as well as producers of poison for the human body. They diffuse quantities of carbonic acid gas—a deadly poison—into the atmosphere. It is estimated that the breweries of England set free twenty-five billions of gallons of this poisonous gas every year.

In an ancient English book called "Gardiner's Grievance in Relation to the Coal Trade," we read that "in the time of the Commonwealth the magistrates of Newcastle-upon-Tyne punished the drunkards by making them carry a tub, with holes in the sides of it for the arms to pass through," and so appareled they should march through the public streets, that all persons might see the disgrace.

The House of Delegates of St. Louis, on Friday night passed a bill granting the Iron Mountain Railroad Company the exclusive right to build an elevated railroad from the bridge to the Union depot in that city. The St. Louis Republican of Saturday morning says: "While putting the bill through its final consideration, the members of the House drank the railroad company's whisky and smoked its cigars. After the bill was passed the entire body proceeded to the nearest saloon and indulged in a royal carousal at the expense and under the auspices of one of Mr. Gould's lobbyists."

In response to many requests the following list of States and Territories which have passed scientific temperance instruction laws is given. Those marked with a star are not satisfactory: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, North Carolina*, Alabama, Michigan, Wisconsin, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri*, Maryland*, Dakota, Oregon, Mississippi, Wyoming, Washington. Nationally the bill has passed the Senate unanimously, and has been favorably reported by the committee of the House, before which body it is now pending, and to whom thousands of petitions for its passage have been sent.

A resolution has been adopted by the British Women's Temperance Association, making it auxiliary to the World's W. C. T. U., lately organized through the efforts of the 'round-the-world emissary, Mrs. Mary Clemant Leavitt. The sister of John Bright, Mrs. Margaret Lucas, having been requested by the National W. C. T. U. of the United States to accept the presidency of the World's organization, has given her consent. An invitation has been extended by Miss Willard and Mrs. Buell to this lady to attend the thirteenth annual convention of the National W. C. T. U., to be held in the fall at Minneapolis; and it is announced that it is quite likely she will be present. Miss Ellice Hopkins, founder of the White Cross movement, is also expected to be at the convention.

How comes it that there is so much sensitiveness among the users of alcoholic liquor? If these liquors are good creatures of God and promotive of health and strength, why is every saloon carefully screened from observation of passers-by? Why do drinkers steal into liquor-shops by the side-door, which apparently belongs to another house? Why, if a person dies of drinking, is it reported that he or she died of something else? Why, if any drinker is asked if he drinks, does he either deny the fact altogether or explain that it is just a little drop that he takes for his health? Do not the secrecy and the false pretences used by drinkers stamp the selling and using of intoxicating drinks with deep disgrace? Is there no lesson in this? Of course there are plenty of men, and, sad to say, women too, who are hardy enough or ignorant enough to boast of their drinking; but see what they reply if, when seeking a situation, they are asked, "Do you drink?" or how indignantly they will deny that any one of their family drinks, though all may be in the constant use of alcohol in one shape or another. No one should continue a habit that he or she is ashamed of, or has to indulge in by stealth or explain away by false pretences.—N. Y. Witness.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

—It is reported that Rev. L. S. Cornell, of Denver, Colorado, has been elected president of Otterbein University, of Westerville, Ohio, in place of Dr. H. S. Thompson.

—One man in every 5,000 in England takes a college course; in Scotland, one in 615; in Germany, one in 213; in the United States, one in 2,000.

—During the commencement exercises at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., Benjamin Frankland, manager of the Seaman's Aid Society, of Chicago, gave an address before the Missionary Society of the students. There were seven graduates.

—Mt. Holyoke Seminary, the pioneer in the higher education of women in the Connecticut Valley, has nearly completed the first half century of its unique and excellent work.

—At Princeton College Dr. McCosh reports a larger number of applicants than ever before, numbering 167. The number entering will probably exceed 200.

—The twentieth commencement of Tabor College, Iowa, took place on June 27th–30th. The corner-stone of Gaston Hall was laid on June 30th. This will be the central college building, and it is hoped that it will be completed and paid for by next New Years. Eleven were graduated.

—At Oberlin the commencement occurred the last week in June, with a graduating class of thirty-six, ten of whom were ladies. Twenty-five ladies graduated from the literary course. Dr. Withrow, of Boston, was one of the speakers. The alumni address was by Prof. L. F. Parker. President Fairchild, in his baccalaureate, spoke on the Labor question.

—Rev. E. B. Graham, of Omaha, addressed the religious associations connected with Hastings College, Neb., on the theme, "The Unspeakable Speaker," at the recent commencement.

—Thursday last was the great day of the National teachers' meeting, at Topeka, Kan., fully 8,000 teachers being present. A sudden fall in temperature made the day very enjoyable, and the various States held reunions.

—Industry has been encouraged by the governor of Michigan in a novel manner. To each girl inmate of the Adrian Industrial Home who was perfect in deportment for the month of April he presented a fan, and to each girl who had a perfect record for April and May he gave a clock.

—Bishop Weaver gave the address at Westfield College this year, an honor which he has not enjoyed for years, and might not now had President Allen yet been at the head of the institution. The movement to erect a monument to the memory of the latter, begun on the occasion, calls to mind Luke 11:47: "Ye build the sepulchers of the prophets and your fathers killed them."

—The Berea Evangelist says of the commencement of Berea College: "On Tuesday evening Hon. John M. Langston, of Washington, D. C., delivered a striking address on 'The Relation of American Scholars to the State.' The commencement on Wednesday, June 23, was a grand day at Berea. At an early hour the spacious Tabernacle was filled with quiet, orderly people, called together by the ringing of the college bell and music by the brass band. The essays from the young ladies were vigorous in thought, well written, and well read. The orations from the young men were practical, well prepared, and well delivered—not a failure or hesitancy. The music, vocal and instrumental, we think was never equaled at any preceeding commencement in Berea. The address of Hon. A. S. Berry, of Covington, on the subject of popular education, was full of interesting facts, forcibly delivered, and enthusiastically received by an attentive audience of two thousand people. Other addresses followed. It was estimated that not less than two more thousand people were outside the Tabernacle. The quiet good order of the whole people was observed by friends at home and visitors from abroad."

—Burmah is now exciting great interest and attracting much attention, and in Burmah there were found many years ago certain wild tribes called Karens. They were immersed in ignorance and superstition till the Bible came among them, brought by devoted missionaries, principally American. At least 50,000 of these tribes have become Christians, 20,000 being communicants, and a group of them came to the Calcutta Exhibition under the guardianship of Dr. Vinton, an American missionary, who with no possessions and no badge of sovereignty but a well-worn Bible, is regarded as a sovereign among them.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Bro. B. Loveless, who, with others, conducted for several months the very successful mission in the N. C. A. building, returned last Thursday from Tipton, Iowa. He began a series of meetings in a country church some eight miles from that place, about June first. The blessing of the Lord came down and the church became too small for the crowds. A tent holding 600 was ordered from Chicago and was often filled. The work went on thus for weeks, until the country for miles around was moved, and some 250 professed conversion. The meetings closed last week.

—In the Salem Presbyterian church in West Virginia, the evangelist, the Rev. C. M. Howard, has been laboring very successfully. Several churches have received new members, and the Presbyterian church has gathered sixty-eight persons into its fold as a result.

—At a recent meeting of the Philadelphia Baptist Union of Philadelphia the Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D., of Bethany Presbyterian church, read a paper on "Faith Cure," holding that prayer was of no use to a man who habitually violated the laws of Nature.

—The religious interest at Plainfield, N. J. in connection with the special meetings recently held there by Major Whittle and Mr. Moody has resulted in additions to all the evangelical churches. The two Baptist churches received nearly fifty to their fellowship.

—Mr. Ferdinand Schiverea, an evangelist, having been prevented from street-preaching in Brooklyn, has procured a "Gospel Wagon" and a peddler's license for selling Bibles and distributing tracts from it. It is decorated with Scriptural mottoes and provided with a platform from which he can preach to the people who are drawn to get his wares.

—In Northfield, Conn., July 7, Dwight L. Moody opened a summer school for the study of the Bible. It is attended by 225 college students, drawn from the Young Men's Christian Associations of the leading colleges in this country and Canada. While Mr. Moody will be in general charge of the school, he will be assisted by leading clergymen, among them Rev. Dr. Moorehead, of Xenia, Ohio; Dr. J. H. Brookes, of St. Louis; A. T. Pierson of Philadelphia, and Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston.

—The British consul at Mozambique says: "My experience of ten years in Africa has convinced me that the mission work is one of the most powerful and useful instruments we possess for the pacification of the country and the suppression of the slave trade."

—Mr. Robert Cust says Mohammedan law does not prevail in India except in regard to marriage and inheritance, and that high caste Hindu converts to Islam do not follow it even in those regards; and that it is more than doubtful if these are in full force in Turkey and Persia.

—A native of Madagascar who studied medicine in Edinburgh, and returned home, now has 70 young men studying under him and a large class of women whom he is training for nurses. He is in great favor with his Queen, and is about to marry the Prime Minister's daughter.

—In June the missionaries of the American Sunday-school Union, in the Northwestern district, established eighty-five new Sunday-schools and brought 315 teachers and 2,480 scholars into them, besides aiding 123 old schools which have a membership of 518 teachers and 4,230 scholars. They also held 243 religious meetings, distributed $551 worth of religious literature, and conducted some twenty-five conventions.

—A German paper states that in Vienna last year not less than 263 Jews became Christians; another authority states that "at no period since the first century have conversions from Judaism to Christianity been so frequent as at present."

—The churches of Mobile have held special services since the visit of Moody and Sankey, and have gathered in many converts. To the Methodist churches 99 have been added; to the Baptist, 81; to the Presbyterian, 83; to the Episcopal, 59—making a total of 317.

—The natives of the Society Islands are remarkable for the progress they have made in self-help in religious matters. Raiatea, with 1,500 inhabitants has contributed $1,224; Tahaa with 900 inhabitants, $563; Pora Pora with 1,000 people, $1,153, and yet there has been no resident missionary on these islands the past year. At their missionary meetings, the people are in the habit of making offerings in memory of deceased friends. The British and Foreign Bible Society sent last April a consignment of sixteen cases of Bibles in the Fijian language to the islands, but so eager was the demand that the supply failed to satisfy it.

—A convention of representatives of the Psalm-singing churches is to be held in Holland during the coming autumn. The churches in Ireland, Scotland and America, who bear the name of Reformed Presbyterians, have appointed deputations, and while the convention will not probably be large, it will be very determined in support of the principles for which the Psalm-singing churches stand.

—Rev. E. B. Graham lately received nine new members into the United Presbyterian church, Omaha. He is now absent from that city on a trip to the Black Hills.

—According to the Baptist Year Book there are 1,500 students preparing for the ministry in the various schools of the denomination.

—The Boston Congregationalist reports 2,047 additions at the May communions, and the Chicago Advance reports 10,129 additions to the churches since January 1.

—In Louisville, Ky., situated in the heart of what has been the gambling center of that city, is the Steve Hancock Mission. Its founder and leading spirit was formerly a notorious gambler; but he became converted; and since that time he has been doing successful mission work among the lower classes.

—The next Pan-Presbyterian Council is to be held in London, beginning June 26th, 1888. The American section recommends that fewer papers be read, and more time be given for discussion, in the next council than heretofore.

—The congregation of Rev. M. S. McCord, United Presbyterian, of Providence, R. I., have given him a two months' vacation. The church is in a flourishing condition, and has received of late large and hopeful additions.

—A singular complaint is made by the clergymen of St. Louis, to-wit, that they are delayed in the return from funerals by the carriage-drivers stopping at the beer houses to get their beer, and drawing up in procession in front of the saloons, and so near that the inmates of the carriages can hear the clink of glasses within. We do not wonder at the protest, for nothing could be more unseemly and irritating.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly at Minneapolis thus defined its relation to Swedenborganism: "In view of the great doctrinal difference between the Swedenborgians and ourselves, the Assembly regards the reception of church members upon certificate from them as inadmissible. It is not intended by this deliverance, however, to deny the Christian character of many who are known as Swedenborgians."

—By the Augustana Synod, during its late meeting, thirteen young men were recommended for ordination. The old officers of the Synod were re-elected, namely, Rev. Carlson as president, Prof. Olsen as vice-president, Rev. Lindahl as secretary, and Mr. Thulin as treasurer. During the year 31 new churches have been received into the Synod, making a total of 488 congregations. There were 24 new churches built. In the several institutions of learning 45 professors were employed, instructing 598 students. In the several orphan homes 147 children have been taken care of, and the hospital at Chicago had 97 patients.

—The London Times correspondent at Madrid says the tide of feeling against the priesthood in Spain still keeps rising, being powerfully aided by the acts of the priests themselves. It has long been felt by all true Roman Catholics in the country that the immorality which has reached an almost incredible point in their religious teachers must be swept away. The fear of damaging the Apostolic church has kept them silent. Recent events have broken this treacherous calm, and a storm that will shake the church to its foundation, seems imminent.

—Rev. John Edwards, a missionary among the Choctaws for a number of years, is engaged in translating the Bible into the Choctaw language. He has gone to Salem, Va., to spend some time in order to have the assistance of Mr. William H. McKinney in translating the book of Psalms into Choctaw. Mr. McKinney, who is a full Indian, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts at Roanoke College in 1883, his graduating address being delivered first in Choctaw and then in English. On the 20th of last month he received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from the Theological Department of Yale College, presenting as his thesis a translation of the book of Malachi in Choctaw, with a critical and exegetical commentary on the same. On his return to his home in the Indian Territory in the fall, Mr. McKinney will assist Rev. Edwards in completing the translation of the Bible into Choctaw.

LODGE NOTES.

M. L. Youngs, of Milwaukee, has been appointed Masonic grand lecturer for Dakota, and holds a like office in Wisconsin.

The Grand Master of the Masonic Lodge of Quebec, J. Fred Walker, has issued a Masonic edict proclaiming that all Masonic intercourse be suspended from July 14th between the Quebec Grand Lodge, its subordinate lodges, and all brethren in obedience thereto, and the Grand Lodge of England and all lodges and brethren in obedience thereto. [Universal brotherhood!]

The Supreme Lodge of the World, Knights of Pythias, met last week at Toronto, Ont. Howard Douglass of Cincinnati, was chosen Supreme Chancellor. The parade numbered 6,000, as is claimed by the lodges. A ritual for a ladies' degree is being prepared.

The lodge folly among the ex-soldiers has caused the organization of a new lodge in San Francisco as an offset to the Loyal Legion, which admits only commissioned officers, their eldest sons and distinguished citizens. The new organization is called "The Rank and File" and admits only enlisted men and those who rose from the ranks to a commission and are not members of the Loyal Legion.

Richard Powers, a labor agitator of this city and leader among the lodge unions, P. E. O'Neil, John F. Mahon and David Clohessey are the incorporators of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Illinois.

The carpenters' union in this city is still thirsting for blood. Last week this lodge assailed a force of non-lodge men at work on a building, hurling at them saws, hatchets and other tools and severely injuring several. The foreman began firing on the secretists, who fled precipitately on the approach of a patrol wagon.

The Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic is a kind of camp follower degree which was incorporated in this city a few days ago. What with it's Woman's Relief Corps and the Junior Lodge and now this new prop the G. A. R. evidently intends to be self-perpetuating.

The International Moulders' Union, in session at London, Ont., passed a resolution denouncing Captain McCullagh's course in breaking in upon a meeting of Knights of Labor, in New York, and also appointed a committee to demand his discharge.

S. A. Kean & Co.
Bankers.
(Successors to Preston, Kean & Co.)
100 Washington St., CHICAGO.
ACCOUNTS of Bankers, Merchants and others solicited; also COLLECTIONS. Foreign Exchange, Land Warrants, U. S., State, Municipal & leading R.R. BONDS
Send for Lists of Investment Securities.
Branch Office, Home Insurance Building.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	77⅛		80
No. 3	65		70
Winter No 2	79½	@	80
Corn—No. 2	38		39
Oats—No. 2	29	@	34
Rye—No. 2			53½
Bran per ton		@10	25
Flour	2 00	@ 5	00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@10	00
Mess pork per bbl	8 80		9 00
Butter, medium to best	08	@	15
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	50	@ 1	35
Eggs			12
Seeds—Timothy	1 75	@ 2	00
Flax	1 06	@ 1	10
Broom corn	04	@	09½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@	14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18	00
Wool	12	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 50	@ 5	80
Common to good	2 25	@ 4	20
Hogs	2 75	@ 5	10
Sheep	1 50	@ 4	20

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@ 5	50
Wheat—Winter	87	@	92
Spring			87
Corn	44	@	48
Oats	36	@	45
Mess Pork	10 00	@11	75
Eggs			12½
Butter	10		17
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 00	@ 5	10
Hogs	4 35	@ 4	70
Sheep	1 50	@ 3	00

BUSINESS.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from July 12 to July 19 inclusive:

J B Miller, J E Pierce, R H Orr, A Fenton, R Gorley, F C Herring, L Baldwin, A Burgess, F A Armstrong, L D Brown, J Ramsey, Mrs C Shank, R Dow, J Brandt, L M DeVilbiss, L G Almen, J M Wylie, A Dwight, A G Anderson, C W Potter, W H Sawyer, C M Strickler, I Penington, R Dickinson, J R Wylie.

DONATIONS.

For sending the Cynosure to Southern Ministers:
Mrs. N. E. Kellogg.....$1 50

Orders for "Masonic Outrages" have been received from the following:

James C Allix, Chas T Collins, Wm H Robbins, Jas Rignold, W H Parker, Mrs Rufus Parker, Jno Hines, D R Mitchell, J Ramsey, Mrs Haire, H H Cannady, S A Pratt, Mrs E A Rowley, C M Strickler, W M Ames, J C Young, F R Griffin, M Ingalsby, Jr, Chas W Morris, L T Fuller, W Lockhart, P Findlay, A C Snyder, W H Blakeslee, J Chadwick, Rev. F H Gates, H Plummer Sr, M L Howe. Prof W L McGowan, Rev E J Clemens, P Howe, H. Siemiller, J Fait, J Ring, N Miner, W Caldwell, Wm Grossman, Mrs. B F Searles, T Gibb, D J Santimier, S Bingham, A C Bundy, Rev Rice, J R Alcock, A Lagerquist, C H Evans, Wm McBride, A S Boyd, T S Walter, Mrs A I Salisbury, John Harvey, J A Van Epps, J Barnes, Sr, R W Chapman, R F Hurd, J Prothero, J Decker, James Harvey, Rev I P Smith, Dr H S B Smith, J H Hunting, E Smith, W Fenton, D Hyde, Henry Ramsey, J Stratton, J Cassidy, N D Rose, D Simon, Mrs E Kay, C Smith, H G Judson, J Weaver, W J Feemster, C D Hoyt, Sr, R McNair, W Vine, J E Mathews, Amanda Banks, J M Adair, J P Osborn, C Winter, John Dorcas, Rev E Cronemvett, N Callender, R Cole, A Andre, R Loggan, C S D Cowles, T Townshend, Thos Gilmore, T Stewart, W Stewart, H S Limbocker, K A Orvis, J C Card, S Simpson, R J Williams, W W Leighton, J W Raynor, Mrs L M Hoyt, E Bascom, D Marshall, D G Foster, J Smith, I Jackson, H D Jones, Robt Jones, W H Reed, A Hamilton, W T Bonstell, H Johnson, H Preston, Mrs E Tuttle, E P Townsley, B Williams, H N Waldo, R McClelland, B Hester, W P King, Mrs S B Allen, S Avery, W Sperry, H Wykhuysen, S C Taylor, G T Denman, Rev Jno Allison, T E Cunningham, J Ralston, A C Moffatt, Mrs R Schnellbacker, R Miller, Mrs L Hinsdale, W M Beden, J K Weber, J S Shock, Geo Brokaw, A Pifer, F A Oldis, J M Clark, Rev C E Walker, Mary A Waterman, J E Pierce, J B Miller, R Dow, L D Brown, E Branch, J Brandt, W R Morley, H G. Witham, J Ramsey, A Burgess, F Morath, G W Pritts, Dr J N Norris, J M Wylie, S A & J C Noe, J J Kyos, A Dwight, A P Lanterman, D P Cawkins.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY,

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;
OR
Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

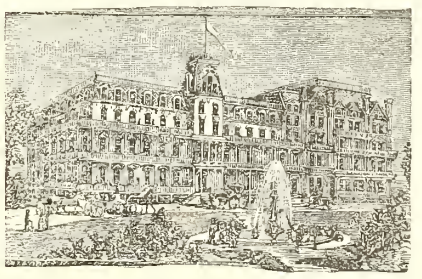
We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING."
THE
Man Traps of the City,

BY THOS. E. GREEN.



Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

The Medical and Surgical
SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS
FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY, to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT,

20 Cents each.

A Wonderful Woman,
A Wonderful Life,
AND
A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Ill.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

HOME HINTS.

Egg shells will settle coffee as surely as eggs, but they do not impart the richness and flavor.

In warm weather refrigerator closets should be washed with soda and cold water once or twice a week.

Pails and all vessels used in chambers should be rinsed thoroughly in cold water, never in hot or lukewarm.

Stale lard can be made sweet by bringing to a boil, with slices of cold raw potatoes thrown in. The impurities will rise at the top and can be skimmed off.

If one quart of milk is set in a cool place for twenty-four hours it will yield enough cream, well whipt with a Dover egg beater, to furnish ten cups of strong coffee.

Pulverized borax, sprinkled on shelves and in corners of store closets, is a safeguard against ants. If pulverized borax is mixed with Persian powder, the powder will be more effective.

Cold water and plenty of it, properly applied, with a fair amount of soap or pearline is the best thing to clean a kitchen floor. The regulation "boiler suds" is apt to make a kitchen floor greasy.

Feather beds and pillows would be very much freshened and lightened if left out in a drenching rain every spring; they should then be exposed to the sun and air on every side until perfectly dry.

HARMONY OF COLORS.

By harmony of colors we understand colors placed side by side in such a manner that they do not injure the effect of each other; rather, on the contrary, complete each other, i. e., they gain in intensity.

Those who are familiar with the harmony of colors can, by using objects of familiar use, make such selections in fitting up apartments, in dressing, etc., so that with the greatest simplicity they are able to produce a more favorable effect than is possible with the most extravagant expenditure without a sense of harmony in color.

A merchant dealing in colored goods, can very greatly improve the appearance of his stock by knowing how to group them in such way as to produce a harmonious effect. Very often, owing to a lack of taste with reference to colors among dealers, it will be found that the silks in one shop will appear much fresher and brighter than in another. This difference in effect of the colors is, however, nothing more or less than that one merchant arranges his goods so that the colors are in harmony, while the other does not follow any definite plan. In the first instance the goods gain, while in the second they lose in intensity of color. The attention of the ladies is particularly called to the importance of harmony in colors, for most of them in the selection of their colored dresses, bonnets, and trimmings, produce the greatest discord in the composition of the colors. Harmony in color does not depend on the will or caprice or personal taste of an individual, but it is based on the unchangeable laws of nature which we shall immediately discuss.

Red and Green.—A red body reflects green rays, while on the other hand, a green body reflects red rays. Therefore, green is the color which completes red, and similarly red is the color which completes green. Both colors, therefore, gain in intensity.

Blue and Orange—A blue body often reflects orange rays, and inversely an orange body will frequently reflect the blue rays. Orange is, therefore, the complementary color of blue, and vice versa, therefore, each color intensifies the other.

Violet and Greenish Yellow.—A violet body reflects greenish yellow, and inversely a greenish yellow body reflects violet. Both colors, therefore, complete each other, and intensify each other.

Indigo and Yellow.—Indigo reflects yellow, and yellow indigo rays, hence, they are complimentary and intensify each other.

It would carry us too far to describe all the other colors which are complimentary.

All spectral colors are complimentary, that is, the two colors lying opposite each other; for instance, the upper carmine and the intermediate green.—Lithographer and Printer.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Terms cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1 must be sent with order as guaranty that the books will be taken.

[Unless otherwise designated these works are bound in paper.]

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated, a complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of each degree, by Pres. J. Blanchard of Wheaton College; 640 pages, 75c, cloth $1. First three degrees, 376 pages, 40c, cloth 75c.

Knight Templarism illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the council and commandery, 341 pages, 50c, cloth $1.

Mah-Hah-Bone, comprises the Hand-Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance, bound in one volume; 589 pp. cloth $1.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge; 420 pages cloth, 75c.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. An illustrated ritual of the five degrees of female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; 20c.

Light on Freemasonry, by Elder David Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a member of the craft." Cloth, $1.50. First part, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, paper, 75c.

Freemasonry Exposed, by Capt. Wm. Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished; 25 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance, illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees; 6c.

Grand Lodge Masonry, its relation to civil government and the Christian religion, by Pres. J. Blanchard; 5 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois; 15c.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trials; also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush; 10c.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry; 338 pages, 40c, cloth 60c.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted, by E. Ronayne; 207 pages, 40c.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry; 25c.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned, by Rev. J. W. Bain; 20c.

Masonry a Work of Darkness. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees; 15c.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil, by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook; 15c.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, M. E. Presiding Elder, a seceding Master Mason; 10c.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. A. L. Post; 5c.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion; 5c.

Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian Should not be a Freemason, by Rev. Robert Armstrong; 5c.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry; 15c.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the lodge encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees; 50c, cloth $1.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own Utterances; its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word, by Rev. J. H. Brockman; 25c, cloth 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver; 10 cents.

OTHER SECRET SOCIETY RITUALS.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. The two bound together; 10c.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor; 25c.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated; 15c.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin; 25c.

Temple of Honor Illustrated; 25c.

Good Templarism Illustrated; 25c.

Five Rituals bound together—Odd-fellowship, (old work), Knights of Pythias, Good Templars, the Grange and Grand Army of the Republic; cloth, $1.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated—Temple of Honor, Adoptive Masonry, United Sons of Industry and Secret Societies Illustrated; $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"Between Two Opinions, or the Question of the Hour," by Miss E. E. Flagg, a reform story founded on fact, told with wonderful strength and interest, showing the power of the secret labor and temperance societies, and the prohibition movement. Cloth, $1.00.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of secretism in the various relations of every-day life. Cloth $1.50.

Holden with Cords; or, the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg; 50 cents, cloth $1.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry, by Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin; 25 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Broken Seal; or, Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan, by S. D. Greene; 40c, cloth 75c.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, by Gen. J. W. Phelps; 50c.

John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties; 35c, cloth $1.

General Washington opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Gov. Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies." 10c.

College Secret Societies, Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. 25 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher; 15c, cloth 35c.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Captain Wm. Morgan; 25c.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times, by Eld. David Bernard; 10c.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. 5c.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies; 10c.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy, address of Pres. J. Blanchard before the Pittsburg Convention; price 5c.

A Masonic Conspiracy, by Mrs. Louisa Walters; 20c.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. 5c.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason; 25c.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies; a powerful address; 10c.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury; 10c.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of of secret societies with the constitution and laws, by Francis Semple; 15c.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. J. D. Brownlee; 5c.

History of the National Christian Association; 25c.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies (bound together); cloth, $1.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform!

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for probibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 8th to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

FARM NOTES.

A NATURAL DISINFECTANT.

The fact is now believed to be fairly well established, that growing sunflowers are disinfectants, or serve as a preventive of miasmatic fevers. A case is reported in which a gentleman, owning property upon a river bank, planted sunflowers extensively, and as a result not a case of miasmatic fever has occurred among his tenants for years although in his neighborhood that disease prevailed to a great extent. It is claimed that the sunflower in its growth absorbs large quantities of impure gases, feeding very largely through or by means of its large leaves. It absorbs nitrogen more rapidly than other plants, and will evaporate large quantities of water daily.—Ex.

HOW TO DESTROY THE CABBAGE WORM.

A Virginia correspondent to the American Garden has come to the conclusion that the true method for disposing of the green worm so destructive to the cabbage crop in all sections of the country is to catch the parent butterflies while they are flying over the fields seeking places to deposit their eggs. The butterflies are not very rapid in their flight, and may be easily caught in nets in the hands of active, faithful boys or girls. We came to the same conclusion last summer after watching and studying the habits of this European visitor to our shores. The butterfly deposits her eggs singly upon the leaves of the cabbage, but may place a half dozen or more upon one plant in the course of a few days. After the worms hatch they are too nearly the color of the leaves to be easily seen, and after a few days they hide themselves among the leaves beyond the reach of any application that might kill them if touched by it.

If the effort were made general through out a district, we have little doubt that this would be a comparatively easy pest to overcome. There are two broods in a season, and the first being destroyed there would be no second to annoy us. When the farmers and gardeners are all organized in granges and clubs, a combined effort of this kind would not be difficult to manage. Taken at the right time a boy with a ten-cent net could earn as much as a man would be able to earn later in the season at any kind of farm or garden work. The rule for fighting insects, like all other enemies, is to attack the weakest point. The weak points of the life of the cabbage worm is in the butterfly stage.

THE CURRANT PEST.

The currant pest is now on hand for its first attack upon the tender foliage of the currant bush. I have been watching for their appearance for several days. The present state of development for the pest I find to be a few full-sized worms, and mostly in an unmatured condition, the latter the most favorable for destruction, since they are all found on the under side of the leaf, and are detected by the little holes they eat through By simply removing the leaf we remove a host of the infant besiegers.

As a destroyer of the worm I use hellebore and land plaster—one pound of the former to forty of the latter, and it never fails to do the biz. For the benefit of those who are afraid of the poisons, tobacco water may prove effectual. As an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, it would be better to use as a preventive tobacco stems, by covering the ground under the bushes with them.

The second crop of the pests is worse than the first; since the fruit is about ripe, it is not desirable to put poison on the foliage. I have a plan for capturing the chaps that deposit the eggs upon the bushes, and thereby "nip them in the bud." If it proves successful I will feel confident in disclosing it. However, we must go over the bushes almost daily and carefully search for the infant worms, which are easily discovered since they eat small round holes through the leaves as soon as hatched.

Some recommend hard-coal ashes put around the bushes as a preventive. Last year the worms came before I was aware of it, the second time, and beat me, and I notice this spring that the bushes that were the worst infected have much less vitality than those that were not so much injured last year. I grow the Victoria currant almost exclusively and think that is equally productive and much hardier than some of the other sorts.

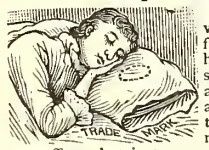
Some recommend the use of water in connection with hellebore, or hellebore tea—a tablespoonful of the poison to a gallon of water. I have a prejudice against using water thus, believing that plaster has a tendency to counteract the effect of the poison upon the plant, although not upon the pests.

The production of the currant, in many cases profitable, has many drawbacks. Currants are not grown extensively in this locality, and generally bring paying prices and quite often high prices. They are in good demand generally.—Cor. Ohio Farmer.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a snuff. 50c.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Beware of Imitations.



Imitations and counterfeits have again appeared. Be sure that the word "HORSFORD'S" is on the wrapper. None are genuine without it.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,

Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.

MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men,	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	8
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	4

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship," the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated," the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies," a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MAH-HAH-BONE,

COMPRISING IN ONE VOLUME,

HAND BOOK OF Freemasonry,

Which gives the correct or "standard work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the oaths, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained:

The Master's Carpet

Which explains the true source and meaning every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, by showing the principles on which the order is founded: and

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

Which illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, and gives a brief explanation of each, making a most valuable compilation of information concerning Masonry. Bound in fine cloth covers. 589 pages. Price $1 00. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS;
—OR—
The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland has issued a proclamation for the benefit of Federal office holders in which he warns "all subordinates in the several departments and all office-holders under the General Government against the use of their official positions in attempts to control political movements in their localities. Office holders are the agents of the people, not their masters. Not only is their time and labor due to the Government, but they should scrupulously avoid in their political action as well as in the discharge of their official duty, offending by a display of obtrusive partisanship their neighbors who have relations with them as public officials. They should also constantly remember that their party freinds from whom they have received preferment, have not invested them with the power of arbitrarily managing the political affairs. They have no right as office-holders to dictate the political action of their party associates or to throttle freedom of action within party lines by methods and practices which pervert every useful and justifiable purpose of party organization."

After a lengthy debate Monday last the U. S. Senate passed the Hennepin Canal amendment to the river and harbor bill by a vote of 31 to 22.

Professor Dodge, of the National Agricultural Department, estimates the losses in spring and winter wheat during June from drought and other causes at 11,000,000 bushels.

The House Wednesday passed the Morrison joint resolution requiring the disbursement of the Treasury surplus in excess of $100,000,000 in the redemption of interest bearing bonds. The vote was over 3 to 1, the yeas being 209 and nays 65. Of the affirmative 59 were Republicans. Mr. Hewett very pertinently informed his Democratic colleagues during the debate that the passage of the resolution would be regarded as a want of confidence in President Cleveland's administration of the fiscal affairs of the government.

The Senate Monday passed the House bill granting pensions to soldiers and sailors of the Mexican war. The bill directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension roll the names of surviving officers and enlisted men, including marines, militia, volunteers, and surviving widows.

COUNTRY.

Heavy and continuous rains throughout North Carolina have caused the greatest flood since 1867. Farmers on the Cape Fear river have lost all their crops and many have been forced to leave their homes on account of the flood. Many turpentine distilleries are under water, and stores and dwellings are deserted. All the low-land crops in the State are injured, and only in a few sections on stiff uplands is there much prospect of any sort of crops. The damage in many sections is well nigh total, and in others from one quarter to one-half.

Eight thousand delegates were gathered at Topeka, Kan., last Tuesday night for the National Educational Association's Convention. It was found necessary to erect 200 tents in Capitol square, it being impossible to lodge all the visitors in hotels and private houses.

The convicts at the Dade coal mines in Georgia have revolted, and 150 of the men have intrenched themselves. An artillery and a militia company have been ordered to the scene.

The lockout in the fifty-four tanneries and currying shops of Peabody and Salem, Mass., was begun Tuesday morning, rendering over 3,000 men idle.

A proclamation was issued Friday by Governor West of Utah, warning immigrants or others from coming to the Territory to maintain any marriage relation other than that sanctioned by law, and setting forth that violators of the statute will be subjected to condign punishment.

An extra session of the California Legislature has been called to meet July 20, to legislate on irrigation.

The severe drought still continues over nearly the whole of the Indian Territory, and prairie fires are burning in every direction. The range is rapidly being ruined, and murrain has broken out among the cattle and many are dying. Unless rain falls soon an epidemic among the stock is feared.

Four cars of the Forepaugh circus train were wrecked Friday morning at Vasselborough, Me., several men being injured and twenty-five horses killed. Two men are believed to be under the wreck.

James Dacey, who murdered Alderman Gaynor in Chicago in 1884, was decently hanged at Woodstock, McHenry County.

Timber and crops have been destroyed by forest fires near Cedar Springs, Mich. Seven acres of wheat and four farm houses were burned in the vicinity of Mound City. Around Whitehall and Montague the forests are aflame, and the smoke is so thick that it is difficult for the inhabitants to breathe.

Smoke from forest fires is so dense at Muskegon, Mich., as to be almost suffocating The woods are burning in the Twin Lakes, Holton, Whitehall, Fruitport, and North Holland sections, and the prolonged drought is reported unbroken.

A windstorm and water spout at Baltimore Thursday night night unroofed several houses, tore up trees, and flooded basements. The losses are heavy.

Two hundred acres of cranberries, near Tomah, Wis., have been burned by forest fires, entailing a loss of $50,000.

Twelve thonsand tons and five cars of wheat in Hoffman's warehouse at Merced Cal., were burned Wednesday, entailing a loss in excess of $250,000.

The Provident Savings Bank at St. Louis closed its doors Wednesday, owing to the defalcation and flight of its cashier, Almond B. Thompson, a prominent Mason, member of the Light Cavalry, and President of the Harvard Club, he being a graduate of that university. His embezzlements will exceed $40,000, but it is said that the depositors, who are principally poor people, will be paid.

The Dakota Constitutional convention at Sioux Falls Wednesday declined to submit to a vote of the people the question of at once declaring the territory a State.

FOREIGN.

The expulsion of the Duc d'Aumale was the cause of an exciting scene in the French senate Thursday. M. Chesnelong said the Duke's letter to President Grevy in no wise justified his expulsion. General Boulanger, Minister of War, replied that he would not tolerate the insolent letter of the Duke. An uproar ensued. Baron Larienty shouted the expulsion of the Duke was an act of cowardice. General Boulanger declared that he would not permit such an expression to be applied to the Minister of War, and quitted the tribune. Boulanger afterward challenged Larienty.

An extradition treaty between England and the United States has been signed. In addition to the customary clauses the treaty provides for the surrender of dynamite miscreants. It is generally thought in diplomatic circles in London that the socialistic troubles in Chicago largely influenced our government in making the treaty.

Serious rioting broke out last Monday evening between Catholics and Protestants in Belfast. Many stones were thrown and revolvers freely used. The military was called out to restore order. Many persons were injured and sent to hospitals.

London dispatches state that an agreement has been arrived at by which Lord Salisbury accepts Lord Hartington's home rule policy, which involves the maintenance of the full powers of the Imperial Parliament. The Parnellites say they will never accept Hartington's scheme, but will fight and wait until they have secured the passage of the full Gladstone measure.

The general feeling in English Union Liberal circles as to the course to be pursued toward Ireland seems to be in favor of increased energy in magisterial administration and stronger action on the part of the Dublin executive authorities. The suppression of the Irish National League is not advocated. The net polling up to Saturday evening shows 1,386,985 anti-Gladstonian and 1,296,853 Gladstonian votes. The Tories have now elected 317 candidates and the Liberals 187. Thus far there is a majority of 122 against Mr. Gladstone on his Irish policy. But on all other questions Gladstone has a large majority.

THE SAFEST FOOD IN SUMMER

For Young or Delicate Children.

A Sure Preventive of

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives where no other food would be retained. Its basis is SUGAR OF MILK, the most important element of mothers' milk.

It contains no unchanged starch and no Cane Sugar, and therefore does not cause sour stomach, irritation, or irregular bowels.

It is the Most Nourishing, the Most Palatable, the Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

Sold by Druggists—25 cts., 50 cts., $1.00. Send for pamphlet giving important medical opinions on the nutrition of Infants and Invalids.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,
of the Chicago Press.

THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.

ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
143 LaSalle St.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.

Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President,
BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline
BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost, Horatius Bonar, Henry Morehouse, George C. Needham, D. L. Moody, D. W. Whittle, J. H. Brookes, A. J. Gordon, William Lincoln, J. H. Vincent, Chas. M. Whittelsey, R. C. Morse, L. W. Munhall, Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be heard as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Pat'd Dec. 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc. Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufacturers of stamped Rug Patterns and dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo O

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 6. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mf'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1, $3 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 45. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1886. WHOLE No. 848.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:		LITERATURE	4
Notes and Comments	1	Press Comment	4
A Sad Mistake Somewhere	8	REFORM NEWS:
Purdue University	8	Colporteur Work in Michigan; Summer Notes from Kansas	5
Christ's Final Coming	8	CORRESPONDENCE:
The "Advance" on the Lodge	8	The United Brethren Convention; A Word for the Orangemen; The Children's Case; A New Orleans Tract Publisher; Pith and Point	5, 6
The Anarchist Trial	9	BIBLE LESSON	6
Personal Mention	9	THE N. C. A.	7
CONTRIBUTIONS:		AMERICAN PARTY	7
The Dark Side	1	CHURCHES VS. LODGERY	7
The Liquor Traffic	2	THE HOME	10
The Canada Grand Master.	2	TEMPERANCE	11
Conscience	2	RELIGIOUS NEWS	12
SELECTIONS:		LODGE NOTES	13
An Enemy of Salvation	2	MARKETS	13
Complicity with Evil Doers	3	FARM NOTES	14
To Die for the Country (Poetry)	3	IN BRIEF	15
Religion in the Schools	3	NEWS OF THE WEEK	16
Boycotting in the Bible	3	BUSINESS	16
The New Building at Wheaton	4

An exchange notices the discovery of a well-thumbed Bible in a Leadville saloon and gambling den, with the hope that the silent witness of a mother's prayers and a father's counsels might call back some prodigal. It is quite possible. The evangelist has sometimes gone into such places and snatched thence a brand from the burning. But whoever heard of a soul being saved from hell by the open Bible on a Masonic lodge altar, or borne by some bloated saloon-keeper at a Masonic funeral?

Mr. Vilas had his little trouble with the railway postal clerks, and now we learn that President Cleveland has been obliged to order some of the leading officials of the Treasury department to disband a "Dan Manning Club," which had a social body but a political tail which the President feared might come to "wag the dog." It was not, perhaps, a secret society, but a private one to which none but Democrats were invited, and in which none but ex-Confederates were officers. The society rented a house and were enjoying each others society, when the matter got into the papers and Mr. Cleveland sent word that he did not approve of any organization of officials, for any purpose, that was not open to all.

The Illinois penitentiary at Joliet has lately received an accession from Wyoming. A number of horse thieves from that Territory, among them a Crow Indian chief, formed the company. It is said that the squaw of the old chief offered the Wyoming sheriff a heavy bribe of eighty ponies to wink at the escape of her spouse, but that officer refused to be corrupted with scabby Indian ponies, and we hope would be unmoved had the bribe been the weight of the animals in gold. The poor squaw never learned how much more powerful than ponies was a Masonic grip or sign of distress. Old Allen Pinkerton, the founder of one of the most powerful detective agencies in the world, though he had taken many Masonic degrees, yet would never allow his sturdy Scotch integrity to be overborne by the lodge. During the war he was often approached "on the square", sometimes by governors and other high dignitaries, but he spurned their Masonic approaches, and threw off their grips with indignation.

In the same spirit of arrogance which lately humiliated the United States flag and government before the power of Rome, the Catholic Review of New York, in a long editorial, condemns the Century, and the American people it is supposed to represent, because it does not interline its war sketches with bravos for the Irish (that is, the Catholic) soldier. Well, this would be remarkable, indeed, if there were no German or English or French or African or Yankee troops engaged in the war for the Union. But the excellence and fairness of the Century articles is manifest in the very fact that they do not turn aside from their legitimate object to bestow flattering laudations on this or that class of the army in order to make a better sale for the magazine. The Review betrays itself by an unreasonable complaint.

Several of our exchanges are commenting with severity upon the difficulty of Judge Gary's criminal court, in this city, in securing a jury to try the eight anarchists. Some attribute it to the cowardice of the people, who yet fear the secret dagger of the lodge; others to public apathy and selfishness. "The spectacle," says the Independent, "of hundreds of men in Chicago wriggling in every way to prove themselves disqualified was very discreditable to the citizens." These judgments are entirely gratuitous and erroneous. People never fear caged hyenas, and when this trial is over the citizens of other cities may thank Chicago for having tamed their own wild beasts of anarchy and secrecy. There are few busy people, to be sure, who care to be shut up for a month or two on a jury. But the fact is, the public mind here had already passed upon this case, as was most evident. Few were the men who could say truthfully that they could sit with unbiased judgment upon the authors of such an enormous conspiracy as is being unfolded by prosecuting attorney Grinnell. Twelve hundred men is a small number from which to pick a dozen for such a trial.

The Kansas Prohibitionists met two weeks since in Topeka, and nominated a State ticket headed by C. H. Branscombe, of Lawrence, for Governor. C. H. Langston, a colored man, is nominated for Auditor, and Mrs. Dr. Cuthbert, of Belle Plain, for Superintendent of Public Instruction. The platform contains first, a recognition of God as the Sovereign of nations; then a strong article on prohibition, especially noticing the features of the struggle peculiar to Kansas; then advocates various reforms in the civil service, and the tariff, double coinage, payment of the national debt, greenbacks, equal suffrage to females and the colored race, anti-polygamy, anti-monopoly, a general pension law instead of the special enactments vetoed by the President, civil rights, railroad restrictions, the rights of labor, maintenance of the Sabbath, and thanks to the W. C. T. U. The platform, of which this is the briefest epitome, might just as well have contained a plank favoring open methods in temperance work. It could then have been endorsed and supported by the anti-lodge reformers of Kansas. Aside from this omission it is a statement of principles that makes the heart rejoice to mark how the leaven of Christianity is becoming a power in politics.

Mr. Gladstone and his cabinet having finally agreed unanimously to resign, Queen Victoria has a second time called the Marquis of Salisbury to power. The new government comes into power with a death sentence hanging over it. Lord Hartington, the leader of the so-called Unionist party, has refused the overtures of coalition with the Tories, and Salisbury thus begins with a minority and can depend on the seceded Liberals only on very precarious conditions. The Gladstone Liberals will, moreover, be a strong and united opposition, and can with the Irish vote secure an early appeal to the nation. Gladstone has been criticised for resigning before Parliament meets and forces an issue. It is urged that it would have been better had Hartington, Chamberlain and their Unionist party been compelled to give the final blow if their courage was equal to the occasion. But perhaps not. If they are saved the finality of forcing Gladstone from his place, they may soon return to their fealty to the great leader. The election rather proves Gladstone's great popularity than otherwise. He fought the battle under the discouragement of the desertion of nearly all his lieutenants, Morley alone of the eminent Liberals standing firm. The opposition of John Bright was the heaviest blow. The sturdy old Quaker nearly equals Gladstone in years, and is only second in the esteem of Christendom as a statesman of sound judgment and advanced views. That he should differ with Gladstone called a halt in the minds of many who would have voted for Home Rule. But the discussion has passed the boundary of private opinion. It has become a great national question which may be unsettled for years, but the decision will come at last for reform.

The legality of the recent papal demonstration in Baltimore, at the installation of Cardinal Gibbons, is very properly called in question by the Christian Intelligencer, thus: "A cardinal is a prince of a temporal power. The Pope is just now shorn of his temporal sovereignty, but he still claims to be a sovereign, and the cardinals are the princes of his government. The cardinals, under the Roman constitution, are no less political than religious officers. Now, it is the law of the United States that no citizen shall receive a title of nobility or princely honors or anything of the sort from any foreign power; and to allow a citizen to receive a cardinal's cap or hat is a violation of the constitution of the United States. If the appointment were only religious it would be bad enough, since it comes from a foreign Pope and his Consistory; but as it is also political and comes from one constantly asserting his temporal authority, his supremacy over all governments, and as it makes the recipient a Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, it is squarely antagonistic to both the letter and spirit of American law." But Mr. Cleveland is safe in permitting this violation of our national laws, for no member of Congress will venture to challenge it while both Democrat and Republican is eager to secure the Catholic vote. The three R's of Dr. Burchard are yet powerful.

Humility is perpetual quietness of heart. It is to have no trouble. It is never to be fretted or vexed or irritated, or sore, or disappointed. It is to expect nothing, to wonder at nothing that is done to me, to feel nothing done against me. It is to be at rest when nobody praises me, and when I am blamed and despised. It is to have a blessed home in myself, where I can go in and shut the door, and kneel to my Father in secret, and be at peace as in a deep sea of calmness, when all around and above is troubled.—Selected.

THE DARK SIDE.

We often hear the advice given, "Look upon the bright side." Sometimes we should look upon the dark side also.

During an eclipse, the story goes, the moon complained to the sun that he did not shine upon her as usual. "I do not cease to shine," said the sun; "but I perceive the dirty planet, called earth, has got between us."

We regard the Christian church, when she endeavors to follow the footprints of her Master, as having a bright side. She may not be "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." She is often seen to have a very dark side. The clouds of carnal war, of various corruption, of evil affiliation, and worldly love darken her character. The Sun of Righteousness shines not upon her because the dirty planet, the earth, has got between.

Various organizations of men may have a dark side as well as bright, and often we see things so dark or black throughout, we perceive no other color. Corporally, a genuine son of Ham has no bright side, and some men think he has, therefore, no rights they are bound to respect.

"Why do you regard a negro?" said Boswell to Johnson. "I dislike only the villain who has a black soul," said the stern, unwieldy philosopher.

Secret lodges—O infandum!—are sworn to conceal their dark side. "There is nothing hid that shall not be revealed." Individuals may "love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." The lodges fear the light. Many church members, that have been allured to join them, fear the light. I have seen some of these quake in soul and change in countenance because of exposure. Hundreds of thousands, from Washington to St. John, have become non-affiliating. Wherefore? They saw the black side. Some, as Finney, Bernard, and others, saw no side bright. Atra nox might be written upon every charter. A curse from Ebal might be pronounced upon those churches who baptize, and pretend to sanctify, those black sojourners in Mesheck and Kedar.

It would be an aspersion upon the character of the Wesleys, or early Quakers, to attribute to them any sentiment favoring the oath-bound lodges of our time. All the preachers could not make the Wesleys favor slavery or the lodge. "The sum of all villainies, and the essence of black night, favored by Wesley" No. Macauley tried to give William Penn a dark side. Although an Ajax with his stone he could not batter such a character. It was a mistaken attempt. Fox was intimate with Cromwell, Penn with King Charles, Grellet and Allen with the Czar and his family: never for evil; no, never. The grace of God, the religion of Christ, gave them favor with kings, princes and courtiers. They needed no aid from the lodge.

Has any Quaker preacher or Methodist sought the benefit and friendship of the Christ-rejecting lodges? Is the authority of such not weakened or wholly impaired in the church? If the church for the sake of members baptizes fictitious converts, has she not a dark side? Let the mask be torn away.

Satan, the father and god of the lodges, has intrinsically a dark side. Like his delectable offspring he is able to present a bright one. According to Milton he presented his bright side to Gabriel standing in the light of the sun.

The doctrines of Christ have no dark side. Men without the Spirit in power cannot fulfill his advanced or higher teaching. It may be preached from the stand, but not illustrated in the life. They may be presented as Satan presented himself to Gabriel. The spiritually-minded should be able to perceive the deception. They might then exclaim, "Procul, procul, este profani!"

It has been said that every man of sane mind has an influence for good or evil. Especially we think those may have who have known a true conversion. But how many church members ignore reforms if they are not popular! They exert no influence in their favor. They say, in effect, to Christ, Let us eat our own bread and wear our own apparel, and be called by thy name to relieve us of reproach. What a dark side! Do they think, like a Pharisee, they will be heard and respected for their long and frequent prayers?

The things of earth having a dark side are numerous. Wherefore, then, wage an unequal warfare? You are puny against us, say the marshaled hosts of evil. What can you do against the gigantic lodges? says Rob Morris and his party. Are the narratives of Deborah, Samson, Gideon, true? Are the narratives of Clarkson, Garrison, and others true? Do you believe them? Answer ye with faltering?

QUAKER BOY.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

BY REV. J. W. HIATT.

The liquor traffic is the mammoth sin of the age. It is a loathsome, moral pestilence, wasting at noonday as well as in the midnight shadows, and in its path there is more than the ruin of the grave; there is the abomination of the united decay of soul and body. It is the fountain head of the darkest catalogue of crime that ever polluted earth since the fall of man. The mildew blight, the tears of heart-broken sorrow, starvation's vacant gaze, the cries of the lost, and the shrieks of the damned, follow in its horrid train.

The groans of a captive nation mingling with the murmur of Babylonian waters, had no anguish in their tones that might compare with the heart-rending wail that is going up continually from the liquor traffic. It is a festering cancer on the heart of a fallen, depraved humanity. Worse than barren waste of a desert land, or the blistering dew from poison fen. The groans and tears from worse than murdered wives and mothers, the piteous cry and helpless wail from more than orphaned children, abject poverty, wretchedness and woe, are but the legitimate fruit of the liquor traffic.

Worse than pirates on the high seas of commerce; more dangerous than the midnight assassin or the highway robber; the reptiles and scorpions of earth, the beasts of prey and the vultures of the air all combined, and turned loose upon a community, to tear and devour, would not devastate, or produce such desolation and irreparable ruin, as does the liquor traffic, permitted without restraint to deal out the seething fire of the still.

I speak forth the words of truth and soberness, when I say that our most vivid conceptions of hell, the lake of fire, and the loathsome worm that dieth not, gives but a faint glimpse of the fathomless depths of sorrow, and the indescribable anguish that fills the heart of the wife, the mother, and the child, who are brought under the curse of a once kind, affectionate husband and father, but now permeated with alcohol, and under the highest state of excitement, lunacy, and madness, urged on by an irresistible impulse from the world of woe, to commit the most atrocious crimes.

Kind reader, what do you think of the man that engages in this infernal traffic, or of the law that protects him in such a nefarious business; or of the political party that makes such wicked, ungodly laws; or of the government that tolerates this most ruinous, degrading, and soul-destroying traffic? Consider this question carefully.

Larwill, Ind.

THE CANADA GRAND MASTER

ON THE AGNOSTIC, THE CATHOLIC AND THE LIBERTINE PRINCE.

BY GEORGE W. CLARK.

About 400 of the aproned delegates to the Grand Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Canada, who have held undisputed sway in Windsor since Monday last, filed into Essex Music Hall yesterday morning, and at 11 o'clock the thirty-first annual communication was opened in ample form, Grand Master Hugh Murray on the throne.

The regulations for the government of the Grand Lodge having been read, and the proceedings of the last regular and intervening communication confirmed, Grand Master Murray delivered his annual address. Referring to the case of a member of the order, who was suspended on the ground of being an agnostic, and who appealed against the punishment, the Grand Master said: "Masonry is tolerant, but there is no place in Masonry for the stupid atheist, or the irreligious libertine. Masonry is tolerant, and will never admit the right of any man to persecute his brother man for his opinion, but there are certain landmarks which cannot be changed, the most important being the belief in God, and the immortality of the soul. There can be no doubt upon this question, for this Grand Lodge has over and over again shown its adherence to this landmark. A suspended Mason who does not believe in a personal God, who cannot say that he believes in the immortality of the soul, or in a future life of rewards and punishments, and who believes that our first great light, the Bible, is inapplicable to the intelligence of the present day, should not, in my opinion, be restored to good standing in Masonry."

The most important feature of the address was the reference to the mandament recently promulgated by Cardinal Taschereau, and subsequently adopted by all the Roman Catholic bishops of Quebec. Among other things, the mandament says, "that the Masonic body is a society of irreligious men, handed together under an organization and by horrible oaths, under the secret guidance of invisible leaders, for the purpose of making war upon the church and upon society, and for resuscitating paganism, under the specious pretext of establishing liberty, equality and fraternity throughout the world."

"You do not need to be told that this characterization of Masonry is cruelly unjust," said Grand Master Murray. "That we might not appear in the eyes of the world to assent for a moment to such injurious and unwarranted assertions, I have thought it my duty, not with any desire to enter into controversy, but wishing simply to protest against the wrong done our order, to say that the aims and teaching of Masonry are pure and peaceable. We place the Word of God before the neophyte. We ask him to accept it as his guide, to reverence it as the sure revelation of Divine will, to seek its counsel, and to obey its precepts. Tolerant of other men's views, we demand that all Masons shall profess faith in the Supreme Being, in the immortality of the soul, and in a state of future rewards and punishments. Our counsels tend to peace, brotherly love and charity. To aid the widow and the orphan, to succor those in distress, to help those who need counsel and assistance—these are our duties We give respect and obedience to the constituted authorities, strive to promote order, and love our most gracious Sovereign. The best and the greatest of men have been Masons. The illustrious heir to the British throne is the Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England, and men, the foremost in arts, in literature, in arms, in the state, and in the church, are his brethren and ours. I dare not say that a bad man may not be a Mason, but I am very bold in saying that a good Mason cannot be a bad man. I regret that Cardinal Taschereau should have been so ill-informed respecting Masonry, as to prepare and publish the document in question."—Detroit Paper.

The statement made by Cardinal Taschereau in regard to the nature and character of Masonry, in which all the Roman Catholic Bishops of Quebec united, and which has so deeply stirred the whole secret fraternity of Canada, proves that the cardinal was not so ignorant or ill-informed on the subject of Masonry as represented; and why should he not be informed as well as everybody else, when the pretended "secrets" of the craft have been revealed by hundreds who have renounced and exposed the whole thing? Mr. Grand Master Murray should know that teaching a belief in "a supreme being" merely is not Christianity. Even the heathen teach the same, and stand in awe of the real Architect of the universe.

But Mr. Murray fails to tell us how the great and only name given under heaven whereby men can be saved is excluded from the lodge and is thus by Masonry put to an open shame. "He that denieth mebefore men, him will I also deny before my Father in heaven."

Mr. Murray's modesty dare not say, "a bad man may not be a good Mason." I have known many bad men, drunkards, libertines, murderers who were Masons; and it is not much to the honor of Masonry nor is it much to the credit of Mr. Murray to boast of the high standing in the "order" of such a character as Prince Albert!

Mr. Murray also talks of Masonic charity! It is a purely selfish charity! A paid-up charity which it owes to its own members and dependants. Christianity teaches a broader, an unselfish charity. Mr. Murray does not fail to make capital out of the old and stale "good men" argument. That some "good men," so-called, have been drawn into secret, oath-bound, Christ-rejecting lodges is not much to their credit, and their connection therewith has never proved beneficial to their "goodness," their judgment, or their honor. Many very "good men" have been drawn into very bad "scrapes," but I never heard of their reputations being improved thereby, or that their connection therewith justified or sanctified the association.

Mr. Murray speaks of Masonry's "respect and obedience to constituted authority, its love for order, peace," etc. I have known of foul murders by Masons, and such murders justified by Masons, and the authorities and the laws of the land set at defiance both in the commission of the crimes and the screening of the murderers from justice. See the oath that binds a Mason. Mr. Murray must have forgotten the murder of William Morgan.

Detroit.

CONSCIENCE.

BY ELDER ISAAC HYATT.

Conscientious men sometimes err in judgment, hence they are not always successful; but no one is truly successful who is not conscientious. A defect in one or more of the wheels of a watch prevents it from keeping correct time; but when the main spring breaks, it is altogether useless as a timekeeper till repaired. So a defect in judgment or education causes mistakes, but a defiled or seared conscience makes it impossible to serve God acceptably. Only a good conscience enables us to do any thing that is pleasing to our Heavenly Father. With this fact before us, how important that we understand the character and functions of a good conscience.

Conscience is the faculty of the soul through which we hear the voice of God. Conscience has been defined as the voice of God. This is an error. God never speaks incorrectly. Conscience may: as when it tells the mother to throw her babe into the Ganges, or urges men to persecute and kill the saints of God. Satan transforms himself into an angel of light, and so do his ministers (2 Cor. 11: 14, 15). And while acting in this hypocritical way, they often deceive the very elect and more often the unsaved.

Whoever draws the bow skillfully across the violin produces sweet and thrilling music. So a skillful play upon the affections causes pleasing emotions to spring into exercise. And in this exercise we may conscientiously think that we are very devout without true loyalty to Christ or saving faith in his blood. Under the delusion of erroneous teaching and spurious religious experiences many have thought American slavery a divine institution; and so now many think that attendance upon the theater an innocent amusement; the rum traffic a legitimate business; tobacco a gift of God to be received with thanksgiving; dancing a joyous, healthy and Christian exercise; and Freemasonry, with other kindred oath-bound secret societies, compatible with the teachings of Christ.

Hence, there is necessity that we exercise great care and seek the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit that we may distinguish between impressions coming to us from God through the conscience, and the deceptions of Satan or his agents playing upon this tender, delicate and intricate part of the soul.

AN ENEMY OF SALVATION.

EXTRACT FROM PRES. FAIRCHILD'S BACCALAUREATE SERMON, BEREA.

Another enemy of salvation, wide-spread and powerful, is secretism.

Secrecy has its place; it may be harmless and sometimes advantageous. Families have their privacies, lovers need not reveal all their plans and sayings, surprises are often pleasant. Detectives and policemen often make good use of it. There are many well meant but mistaken secret societies. It was thought that the charm of secrecy might induce many to join the temperance ranks, and so it did.

Many of our best Christian workers went into it. But it divided the temperance host, and always seemed to me a source of weakness.

Secret benevolent societies give relief in sickness and a decent burial. But there is a better way. Be good to all; comfort the afflicted, relieve the distressed; and friends from pure love, will watch about your bed and weep at your grave, far more tenderly than hired nurses and mourners. Through a secret order the vilest wretch in a community may be interred with parade and honors, who deserves, like Jehoiakin, to be "buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem."

Secrecy may be a powerful instrument of evil. When a committee consulting in secret can and do, for reasons unrevealed, compel a hundred thousand men to stop work a month at a loss of millions, it is a great evil and sin. When laboring people are so deluded and duped as to commit their industrial welfare to such a conclave, they yield to a despotism worse than any government or corporation. No greater harm can come to laborers than a declaration of war with their employers, shutting out from their councils a sympathizing public, always ready to take their part, in a just cause. What an obstacle to salvation are the excitements, the bitterness, the poverty, and the distress of such a contest

When secret orders divide neighbors, making distinctions where there are no differences, control politics, corrupt courts and juries and witnesses,inform criminals of indictments before the sheriff can reach them, set constables on the track of criminal brothers, in secret orders, cheat justice of its victims, teach that partiality is benevolence, and sinners can be saved without a saviour, and take time and money and energy due to religion, they hinder salvation. Such secret orders are intrinsically bad. The name of Christ, which they reject, could not sanctify them. The less sacred things are connected with their ceremonies the less there will be of sacrilege and delusion.

Secrecy itself, under some circumstances, is cause and just cause of jealousy aud suspicion. Openness. frankness, transparency, are better. My advice is, —Avoid all secret organizations as hindrances to salvation.

COMPLICITY WITH EVIL DOERS.

There are some teachings in Scripture which seem to be little heeded in this age. Among them are such as these, "Be not partakers of other men's sins," "If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine receive him not into your house,neither bid him God-speed,for he that biddeth him God-speed is partaker of his evil deeds." So, again, there is the precept "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?"

In many respects these words of inspiration are ignored. It is reported that recently in Philadelphia, at the opening services of a Unitarian church in which the most advanced deriders of evangelical doctrines prominently officiated, pastors of orthodox churches gave their presence and greetings. Such things are becoming not infrequent, and are regarded as proof of the growing "catholicity" of men who walk in the "old paths." But, especially in literature it is manifest that there is a "yoking" with and, impliedly, a "God-speed" given to errorists. The "symposiums" of some reviews are the latest manifestations, and although it may be said that as the opportunity is given for the best gladiatorship in argument to the most diverse views that there is nothing "unequal," yet it is generally a very unwise way of serving the truth.

Just now a new periodical is launched, in which articles by an Episcopal bishop and a Presbyterian clergyman are presented with a paper by a Liberal clergyman travestying orthodox principles, and productions by other writers whose acknowledged ability is only surpassed by their hostility to the common faith of evangelical churches. What are these things but an evident attempt to make "concord" for Christ and Belial?

It may be claimed that it is well to send out an antidote with poison, but if the distribution of the poison is largely helped by the antidote it does not appear that such a course has much of wisdom in it. The fact is that many articles full of venom against Christianity would fall almost still-born from the press if they were not helped to live by being joined with others in its defence. Many people who would not buy a pamphlet or book by an avowed infidel or errorist are led to read their productions by finding them alongside of those of eminent Christian writers.

If a Christian man feels called upon to refute infidelity it is his duty to do so, but he takes a very doubtful course when he helps to float infidel writings. Mr. Spurgeon declares that the proprietor of a Continental gambling resort told him that he desired men of character and opposed to gambling to visit his grounds and saloons. It helped to draw in others who were open to temptation. It is just the same with Christian writers who are willing to furnish articles to be bound up with infidel productions. On the same principle, a company of Christians might occupy a corner of a Sunday beer garden for a prayer meeting and hope to do good, or a clergyman might accept an invitation to hold a Gospel service in a theatre as a prelude to a farce. There is scarcely a more effective way in which popular evangelical writers can serve the evil one than by consenting to make infidelity respectable by placing their contributions beside those of its apostles.—Baptist Weekly.

"TO DIE FOR THE COUNTRY."

"Peace hath her victories, no less renowned than war."

To die for the country! When dying comes
It is not for the flag, it is not for the land,
It is not for the glory, the battle grand—
For all the cannon and roll of drums!

The prayer is not for the flag in the fight,
But ever for home, for babe and for wife;
For life and the loved ones—life, sweet life—
And that is the prayer in the battle's night!

I tell you, to see the man at your side
Sink down as you hear that sickening thud—
To look in his face, to see the blood
Slow ooozing from lips that have lost their pride!

I tell you, to see his brimming eyes swim!
I tell you, to see him clutch to the mold
And grasp at the grass, as if to hold
The earth from passing away from him!

Oh, ye who have witnessed the dying in heaps—
The Northerner heaped with the Southerner,
Just as the hastening reaper reaps
Blossom and corn and cockle burr!—

Answer and say if ever a breath
Was heard of delight to die for the land?
Nay, only the reach of a helpless hand
To hold each back from the banks of death.

Nothing at all, in that last despair
Of the one last shot in the desperate strife;
But only a prayer, a low last prayer
For her at the last, and for life, sweet life!

Nothing at all of a sword from the sheath
For the one last blow on the field afar,
But only a prayer; then grinding of teeth,
And a curse upon those who caused the war.

For, oh it is hard for the man to go,
So many are waiting him far away;
He can hear his kindly-eyed cattle low;
He can see his wife with her babes at play.

So he who says it is sweet to die
For country has never yet felt or seen
The shock of a battle or deaths between,
And tells you a pitiful pagan's lie.

—Joaquin Miller.

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS.

In the current number of the Forum, Pres. Seelye, of Amherst College, has some utterances on the right and duty of the State to teach religion, which ought to attract wide attention from educators. After noting that the school property in the United States is valued at $200,000,000, and that we pay over $1,000,000 a year for teachers, the question is raised touching the benefit of this enormous outlay to the national life. Simple illiteracy is by no means the darkest phase of our problems. Reliable figures show that the ratio of insane in our population has increased from one in 1,486 in 1850, to one in 549 in 1880; in 1850, one in every 2,365 was a deaf mute, while in 1880 there was one in every 1,197, while thirty years ago the census reported one blind person in every 2,367, our last census reported one blind in every 1,033. After making due allowance for the difference in census accuracy, the result is sufficiently alarming. The increase of insanity during the present century has been steady and large through the civilized world, while in England the list of idiotic and insane has well-nigh doubled in the last twenty years. Universal education is not a remedy for these evils, for among the Scandinavians, where education may be said to be almost universal, the rate of insanity is three and four-tenths to 1,000, while among the uncultured Slavonic peoples it is only six-tenths to 1,000.

But still more startling is it to learn that similar figures can be produced in relation to the increase of crime, pauperism, divorce, illegitimacy and vagrancy; if figures are to be trusted, these evils are all on the increase in our best educated States. Pres. Seelye shows that the two institutions upon which the existence of society depends, viz., property and the family, are antagonized to-day among educated people as never before, and that leaders in this war on society are to be found among the choicest products of our universities. The salvation of any people, he claims, depends not on their knowledge but on their virtue, and the morality of a community can never be secured by moral precepts alone. "Men are not made virtuous by instruction in virtue. No moral renovation of society has ever been accomplished by teaching a morality alone, however pure." Plato's saying, that to act justly and wisely you must act according to the will of God, is quoted approvingly, and the deduction is drawn that moral reform is wrought by religion alone; that religious quickening furnishes the only efficient moral inspiration to any people.

Pres. Seelye believes that, reasoning from the facts of human nature or of history, an atheistic people could not have enough virtue even to maintain themselves in existence; that some religious instruction is of vital national moment. He thinks that we cannot leave such instruction to the family alone. It is sufficiently evident to any one who has investigated the subject, that many, perhaps most, families utterly neglect that duty. Should the State enter upon the work, the conscience of some of its subjects would unquestionably be invaded, but this is also true when the State undertakes to levy war, and it is not more an injustice to tax irreligious persons for religious instruction, than to tax non-combatants to maintain war. The greatest mistake which any State could make concerning religious instruction, says our author, would be to have none; any faith is better than no faith.

The conclusion is, that as the fundamentals of all religion are to be found in the four Gospels; the New Testament Scriptures should be made textbooks in our schools. "Why," it is pertinently asked, "should we teach our children concerning the life of Julius Cæsar, and almost nothing concerning the life of the Lord Jesus? Which is the grander character of the two? Which is the more potent factor in the history of the world?" The life of Jesus is no less authentically recorded than that of Julius Cæsar. And if we make scrutiny concerning the teacher's qualifications for instructing in grammar, mathematics and ancient history, why is it less a duty of the State to inquire into his moral and religious qualifications?

We are glad that this whole subject has been lifted into new prominence by so responsible a hand as that of Pres. Seelye. We have not yet as a people come to appreciate the duty of the State toward the citizen. The Greeks were far in advance of us in this respect. They laid a strong hand on the popular amusements, and a council of their wisest men determined what plays should be witnessed by their youth They openly proclaimed that this was for the purpose of guarding the morals of the people, and any Greek sage who should arise to-day would be surprised at our carelessness and indifference concerning those who teach our public schools, or who inculcate principles in our theaters, concert halls, and on lecture platform. We believe there is to be yet a close surveillance of all such educators as popular amusements, songs and books, and specially of the common school system where our children may be instructed in the ways of righteousness and peace.—Advance.

BOYCOTTING IN THE BIBLE.

An Irishman writes from the south of Ireland: "The introduction into the world of boycotting has, I think, hardly attracted sufficiently the attention of the students of prophecy. We observe that eighteen centuries ago it was predicted that just at the end of the age, boycotting should be one of the principal instruments of coercion which anti-Christ will use, the words of Scripture being as follows: 'He causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, that there be given them a mark in their hand or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark,' etc. Rev. 13: 16, 17. As a matter of fact, now in some parts of Ireland unless a farmer has the Land League ticket as a mark in his forehead, that is, stuck in the front part of his hat, he could not sell a single beast. I have myself seen it so placed. Thus this method of coercion has been introduced and its power established beyond all question, so there it is, prepared and ready whenever anti-Christ shall appear to use it. Is not this, then, a very remarkable sign of the approaching end of the age? It may be added as of further important significance, that this form of coercion and fulfillment of prophecy is thus utilized in a land and amongst a people which are in spiritual and ecclesiastical subjugation to the Papacy, which has shown so many other signs of kinship, if not identity with the anti-Christ.—Selected.

THE NEW BUILDING AT WHEATON.

BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

Readers of the Cynosure will remember that a few weeks since I mentioned, under the head of "Two Incidents," the fact that one hundred dollars, given very wonderfully, had been set aside for the east wing of the college building at Wheaton. That all may understand, I will ask the editor to insert the cut of our present building.

It will be seen that on the left of the central building there is a connecting wing, and then another towered front which is called the west wing. This building is one hundred and forty feet front, built of stone, and entirely paid for.

It has long been our wish to put up an east building, substantially the same as that on the west, so that the entire building will have a front of two hundred and thirty-five feet. It was for this new building that the one hundred dollars mentioned was set aside.

Shortly after the article was printed a lady handed me three hundred and fifty dollars for this purpose, and now an old classmate and dear brother sends a subscription of one hundred dollars more. We have thus, it will be seen, some five hundred and fifty dollars for this new enterprise. The question has arisen, What shall be done with this money? Shall we deposit or invest it and wait for more? or shall we make a beginning, get in the foundation and go up with the wall as far as money is furnished and then stop? What do our friends say? There are yet three months during which building operations can be carried on, and in that time if one hundred only of the readers of the Cynosure should "sit down quickly" and send one hundred dollars each, the walls could be put up, the roof on, and the windows in.

There is one thing more I would like to say before closing. There are more than four thousand homes which receive the Cynosure. I suppose that four hundred persons leave these homes in the early fall for school. Let me urge all who have a share in choosing the college or school for these persons, be they more or fewer in number, to select institutions where their own principles will neither be ignored, despised or assailed. If the homes in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and Indiana, where the lodge is known to be the antagonist of God and man, would send us their young men and women for the next ten years we would fill, God helping, the schools and churches of this region named with those who should unite intelligence, religion and zeal so that the way might be more speedily and perfectly prepared for our coming Lord.

I do not intend to urge a single person to attend at Wheaton who would attend any other college where open war is waged on the Christ-rejecting, man-slaying lodges of our day. But I do urge all who read the Cynosure to patronize schools which are decided and active in opposition to the evils which abound in our own day. Our fall term opens September 7th, and I shall be glad to answer any inquiries or aid in any way those seeking schools for their wards or themselves. Ministers in active service and missionaries can send their children on payment of incidental fees—two dollars per term, six dollars per year.

The letter giving notice of the last subscription is so pleasant that I will share it with the readers of the Cynosure.

——— ——— 1886

DEAR FRIEND—I have been reading the Cynosure this morning, and with interest observe your notice of the "Two Incidents." I also note your decision to make the one hundred dollars given by the Christian lady a "nest egg" for the "east wing" of the college. My mind went back again to my early days, days spent at Wheaton. My feelings for the college and desires for its success have always been strong, and all information of its prosperity has pleased me.

I hope and pray that this enterprise may be a success, and that the Lord may bless you in your efforts. Allow me to add my little by saying I will give one hundred dollars at ten days' notice, when you get ready to commence work. The only condition of the gift is that the money be used for the east wing. I should like to know that it was built, and would feel pleased to give a little to help on the work. I am glad that I was directed to go to Wheaton to school. I learned many things there that have done me good, and any success I have attained in life is to some extent due to the teaching I received at Wheaton.

There are other interesting paragraphs in the letter, but these must suffice for the present. Will not many of our readers lay this matter before the Master, and if moved to aid in the work, act promptly.

Wheaton College.

LITERATURE.

FIRST LESSONS ON MONEY, by B. T. Roberts, A. M. Pp. 160. Price 50c. Published by the author in Rochester, N. Y.

It is a rare coincidence that a man who has been a busy and successful leader among the churches can find the opportunity, much less has the talent, to write a book on the abstruse and intricate question of money. Few topics that approach so near the practical life of every man, woman and child are so little understood. The power to get it and keep it is enough for most people, and they leave to theorists and legislators the rest. But there are few intelligent men who would not be thankful to any writer who could so bring the subject into the light, with all its hard questions solved, its intricacies unraveled, that the mind can readily grasp the fundamental principles of the money question. Such is this little work of Mr. Roberts. Clear, logical, concise, the mind easily goes on from page to page, from chapter to chapter, without confusion or losing interest in the subject. Mr. Roberts is a warm advocate for the continuation of our silver coinage, although the question of values he does not discuss. He ably defends the greenback also, and maintains the American platform in its position that the government should furnish the money, and all of it. He does not, however, clearly enough enunciate the fact that the confidence of men is a factor in the money value, as well as the fiat of the state. Gold and silver have an intrinsic value to be considered, and paper money is as worthless from a government as from a "wild cat" bank, if there is not something better back of it. We doubt if the statement that there is no legal limit to the inflation or contraction of currency by the national banks should be taken literally; and we are not told in connection with the amount of contraction already attributed to the banks, whether the loss to the general circulation is not more than made up in some other way. There is need of the greatest care in discussing financial and economic questions, that essential facts be not omitted and the attempt be made to establish principles on half truths. The closing chapters of the book are full of sound advice and business and moral maxims which should govern all the interchange of trade.

THE HAND BOOK OF FREEMASONRY, revised and enlarged. By Edmond Ronayne, late Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No 639, Chicago, Illinois. Tenth Edition. Pp 274. Price, limp cloth, 50 cts. T. B. Arnold, publisher, Chicago: and for sale by the National Christian Association.

This remarkable book first appeared in the columns of the Cynosure some ten years ago, and has since gone through the various editions to the present, when the plates having beeome worn the publisher has had new plates made from larger type, greatly thus adding to the attractiveness and usefulness of the book. Some of the introductory and explanatory parts have been re-written and a large number of illustrations have been introduced. The standard work is unchanged, conforming to the ritual in use in Illinois. May this work of Bro. Ronayne continue to serve the high purpose for which it was first written—of enlightening the public respecting the abominations of the lodge.

Demorest's Magazine for August is a good number aside from its long stories. Mrs. Croly writes of Genevive Ward, the actress, an interesting sketch of an interesting woman, whose talents and perseverence, had they been given to God, might have blessed the land, instead of fostering one of our greatest moral curses—the theater. Emma M. Tyng furnishes a good paper on "South Kehsington and its Neighborhood;" and W. Jennings Demorest has two prohibition articles, "What is Prohibition?" and "Liberty and Prohibition." There are several good poems, one of the valuable series, "From Pencil to Brush," and "The World's Progress." The frontispiece is a fine steel engraving called "Harmony."

The current number of the Library Magazine, New York, presents the following as part of its table of contents: "The Factors of Organic Evolution," by Herbert Spencer; "Deep-Sea Soundings in the Atlantic;" "The Statistics of Population;" "Mind Acting on Body," by Prof. Richard A. Proctor; "Scores and Tallies," "Is the Ocean Surface Depressed?" "Whence Come the Comets?"

The July August number of the Missionary Review, Princeton, N. J., contains Rev. John Wilson, D. D.; Maricha Warka, Wakasa and the Floating Testament; Meriah Sacrifices in India; Missions in Siam. The reports of Foreign Mission cover the work of the Seventh-day Adventists, Christians, Church of God, Dunkers, Friends, Moravians and others; also the independent or faith missions in Gazipur; Basim, India; Joppa (Jaffa); and Telugu, India. A valuable tabulated report of fifty American societies shows the amount of increase or decrease in the home strength, missionary receipts, etc.

The five hundredth anniversary of the founding of Heidelberg University will be celebrated at Heidelberg in August of this year. A historical sketch of the old town, the Castle and the University, by Mrs. Lucy M. Mitchell, will appear in the "Midsummer Holiday" Century, the August number. Seventeen illustrations from drawings and photographs will accompany the article.

When Webster's Unabridged was first published in one volume, it was a comparatively small book. Some years after, an addition was made of 1,500 Pictorial Illustrations, A Table of Synonyms, and an Appendix of New Words that had come into use. A few years later came an entirely new revised edition of larger size, with 3,000 Pictorial Illustrations; then, after an interval of a few years, a Biographical Dictionary of nearly 10,000 names, and a Supplement of nearly 5,000 new words were added, and now there has come a new and most valuable addition, A Gazetteer of the World, of over 25,000 titles. The work is now not only the Dictionary, par excellence, but a Biographical Dictionary, a Gazetteer of the World, and a great many other good things in its valuable tables.

PRESS COMMENT.

Twenty-five gypsies who landed at Castle Garden on Saturday are to be sent back to Europe on the steamer by which they came. But why should gypies be sent back to Europe, while we welcome Mormons by the boat load, and anarchists and dynamiters every week of the year? The one class at most are but petty thieves, as their hunger prompts; the others are conspirators against the love of God and man, and the open enemies of civilization.—Inter Ocean.

The letter [to the new Cardinal Gibbons] affords no proof that the President has become "broader and more tolerant." It will be generally regarded, with the other courtesies extended by the Government to the Papal messengers, bearing the "cap," and the serenade by a Government band, as a bid for the votes of Irish Romanists. The affair in all its parts stands alone. No Protestant denomination, no head of any Protestant body, such as a bishop, Episcopal or Methodist, or a moderator of a general assembly, or president of a Congregational council or convention, or president of a synod of any Reformed or Lutheran church, has sought or received such official recognition from the head of the nation, or has received attentions in any degree approaching those rendered to the Papal delegates and the recipient of Papal honors. The simple fact is, as pretty much everybody will believe, that Mr. Blaine has many Irish friends, has recently made a speech on Irish affairs which has tended to win a still larger number of Irish friends to his support. To counteract this, to retain Irish votes for his party and perhaps for himself, the officers of the Government and the President receive and conduct the Papal delegates on their way and present congratulations with unusual, it may be properly said, with extraordinary attention, to the recipient of Papal honors.—Christian Intelligencer.

A late German historian says acutely that the peculiarity which stands out most clearly in the study of the history of the English nation, is not so much their love of liberty, as it is their love of law. It is this quality, which we have inherited, which makes us sure that the German anarchists of Chicago, who are so defiantly assailing justice, will get full measure of law in the trials now going on. Our people believe in submission to law. Spies and his crowd believe that law is tyranny. It is not tyranny but liberty. Anarchy is tyranny. Our people look on with great anxiety to see what Illinois justice will do with these bomb-throwers and murderers. Peaceable people submit willingly to law, and these ruffians must, whether they will or not.—Independent.

On the other hand, that a band of men, self-constituted and in secret conclave, should decree who shall break bread and who shall not—how long a certain man shall work and for whom he shall work—then boycott or break up—such things are simply outrageous; and good men, civil society and just government should suppress—suppress speedily. For men to gather together in secret conclave and assume to regulate the civil relations that shall subsist between the members of civil society, without the deliberations and actions of such being open to the inspection of society, and that the action and liberty of the individual member shall be subject to the control of a grand master, or central lodge, is a usurpation which civil society ought not to countenance, or a just government allow. Such associations are dangerous precedents in society.—Berea Evangelist.

Much has been said about the wealth of the Vanderbilts, and they have received considerable advice as to how they should spend it. That the advice is not needed is constantly becoming more and more apparent, the latest manifestation being the offer of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt to erect, upon a site set apart by the company, a building for the benefit, enjoyment and instruction of the employes of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad. The building is to be 80 feet front, 40 feet deep and three stories high, in which will be a gymnasium, bath rooms, reading room and library, class rooms and sleeping rooms. The offer was promptly accepted and work will soon have commenced. This is but one of the ways by which the management of this railroad seeks to cultivate peace and good will between capital and labor, and were its methods copied by other employers the labor problem would soon be solved.—Christian Instructor.

If the Knights of Labor, the trades' unions, the strikers and the boycotters have the common sense which sane men are usually assumed to possess, they must ere this have discovered that, by their recent striking and boycotting operations, they have been their own worst enemies. They have damaged themselves far more than anybody else, and at the same time offended and disgusted the general public. There has been no time within the last twenty-five years when labor organizations were looked upon with so little favor by the people at large as at the present moment. The reason does not lie in the fact that such organizations are necessarily unlawful, or in the fact that, when properly managed and confined to legitimate ends and proper means, they can be of no service to the cause of labor. It rather lies in the monstrous abuses und utterly intolerable assumptions that have characterized their recent history in this country. These abuses and assumptions have justly offended and alarmed the people, and brought the whole system of organized labor into general discredit.—Independent.

It is an "off day" in the Anarchists' trial when the prosecution does not put a new foreign informer on the witness-stand. There was a new informer produced yesterday. Of course he could not speak English. It is one of the peculiarities of this conspiracy that the men who have been its most active followers and most pliant dupes are those who have not yet learned the language of the "villainous, robbing, class-ridden" Government they would overthrow. They have arrived here within the last two or three years as ignorant immigrants, and for the first time in their lives they have learned what it is to live in a free country and get three meals a day. They get paid for their labor far beyond what they ever did before. Their shoulders are eased from the tax-ridden burdens of monarchical rule, and they have begun to breathe the air of a free Republic—a Government of, for, and by the people. But instead of settling down as good, honest citizens, thankful that their lines at last have fallen in pleasant places, they at once begin to act as did those savage strugglers seen by Browning's Childe Roland—like

> Toads in a poisoned tank,
> Or wildcats in a red-hot iron cage.

They are given a measure of freedom that has allowed them to pour on the heads of all who have an interest in the progress of the country, torrents of the most bitter invective of which their language is capable; that has permitted them to preach doctrines the most villainous and the most dangerous to humanity and civilization; and has even permitted them to openly arm themselves with professed intent to carry out these doctrines. Never until they have committed overt acts and put their murderous plans into operation, have they been interfered with by the authorities.—Chicago Tribune.

REFORM NEWS.

COLPORTEUR WORK IN MICHIGAN.

Rev. S. E. Lane, who was employed as colporteur by the State Association at the spring convention, closed a month's work last week with the following report, which is by no means discouraging, considering the circumstances, busy season, dull times, etc.

Let me give his own words: "I report, in thirty days' time, I have called on 200 families, distributed about 8 pounds of tracts, visited Jackson, Waterloo, and went to Eaton Rapids camp meeting, and sold on camp ground $6.30 worth of books and two shares of stock. Sold books to the amount of $13.-85, have secured five stock notes amounting to $50, receiving five dollars as first payment on same, making in all $18.85 received."

I have written Bro. Lane to secure his services for September, if possible, so as to spend an entire month working up an interest for our fall convention, which I think should be held in October, and will probably be held in one of the churches at or near Williamston, Ingham county, Michigan. I shall have something to say farther concerning this meeting, but I want to say something now. Complaint has been made that we did not give long enough time for consideration and preparation before our State gatherings, hence the small attendance. Now let it be understood that there is to be such a meeting this coming fall, and let everybody prepare for it and be present, especially Wesleyans. Michigan Wesleyans ought to be ashamed. I don't know whether they are or not, but they ought to be. Every quarterly conference in the State ought to send one or more delegates. United Brethren and Free Methodists ought to do the same.

Board and lodging will be entirely free, and the people here will heartily welcome all who come. More anon. H. A. DAY.

SUMMER NOTES FROM KANSAS.

CLIFTON, Kans., July 19, 1886.

DEAR EDITOR:—My circumstances, and a considerable amount of neglect, accounts for my not writing oftener. The agent's department in the Cynosure has so few reports lately that I thought if any other readers were as anxious as I am to know how the battle is progressing, we ought to be more prompt to give the news, whether little or much.

Since my report from Mitchell county in May, I have attended quarterly conference of the Wesleyan Methodist church in Clay county, Bro. Bernhard the preacher in charge. I preached four times and lectured twice to intelligent and appreciative audiences; and I trust the labor was not in vain. I was kindly received and liberally rewarded,for which the people have my hearty thanks.

On my last trip I visited Meredin, twelve miles northeast of Topeka, and lectured three times in the United Brethren church, the audience increasing from the first. The brethren here are anti-secrecy but have been somewhat narcoticized by a suavative, liberal, U. B. preacher; but they have a live, anti-secrecy minister now, Rev. J. W. Stewart, and I think they are rousing from their stupor on the reform question.

From Meredin I went to Lecompton, where I was kindly permitted to speak in the college chapel twice. President Irwin attended and opened the service by prayer. The loyal element at Lecompton have been tried as to their soundness on our U. B. church constitution lately. A G. A. R. man came with a church letter and attempted to join the class. The preacher in charge, G. M. Huffman, who has tried to please everybody, favored his reception, and in favoring it, committed himself. When the vote was taken, admittance was refused by a large majority.

If the anti-secrecy cause could be closely pressed in this state, there is certainly a hopeful prospect of great advancement. I have been earnestly requested and have sent appointment to Mankato, the county seat of Jewell county, to commence a series of lectures the 24th inst. Pray for me.

R. LOGGAN.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE UNITED BRETHREN CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

FAIRMOUNT, Ind., July 22nd, 1886.

One of the most remarkable meetings it has ever been my privilege to attend is nearing its close. It began its official session at 2 P. M. on the 20th and has continued in an unbroken succession of advances at each gathering until it is a Pentecost long to be remebered by every one present. Personal denunciations and acrimonious speeches have been exceedingly rare, while remarks have been terse, pointed and in the power of the Spirit. Had I entertained one thought of failure on my arrival, it would be impossible for me to carry away such a thought after listening to the discussions and noting the spirit of candor, love and determination which has characterized this meeting from its inception to the present.

A grand surprise awaited the good people of Fairmount and the brethren themselves, as delegates came pouring in from the East, the West, the North and the South, until sixteen conferences are represented by one hundred and forty-seven loyal,devoted and determined members of the United Brethren church, in a gathering which was almost impromptu. The ground taken was that of uncompromising fealty to the constitution and articles of faith,to which they subscribed when uniting with the church, and the determination to resist any and every effort to remove this foundation and destroy the house built under God by the fathers.

It was clearly proven that the "protestants" against the "commission" of 1885 and its subsequent work, were not schismatics,but loyal,covenant-keeping members resisting an effort to subvert and nullify the constitution and deliver the church over to the control of the secret lodge power. Beginning with the first open, official attack upon the clause against secrecy at Lebanon, Penn., in 1868, the movement was carefully traced and thoroughly analyzed until the culmination at Fostoria in 1885, by which the nullifiers forced a rupture which grows more serious and widespread as the "things done of them in secret" are becoming known to the membership at large. The money and the lodge power is doubtless now on the side of the oppressor,but those men who sit in seats of churchly honor, and suppress entirely or mutilate the communications of men who are their peers in piety and intellect would do well to consider the words of the Psalmist: "I have seen the wicked in great power and spreading himself like a green bay tree," before they reach a point beyond which repentance and return to the fold they have wantonly assailed, is impossible. Retribution will surely come,and whether in high or low places men should remember that the judgments of a just God make haste.

The personal appearance of the convention is very striking. Dr. L. Davis is perhaps the most venerable among the fathers present, but Bro. I. Kretsinger has for many years been accounted a strong and safe man in the church. Both these brethren retain their mental vigor in great clearness, and as their connection with the U. B. church and ministry extended back through nearly or quite half a century of its history they are very valuable members of the convention and are invariably listened to with the closest attention. Hon. Halleck Floyd who pioneered the way, maintained a steady bearing. He has the satisfaction of seeing a success, as I apprehend, far beyond what he had anticipated.

Rev. William Dillon, editor of the Conservator, is "clear cut", right to the point, and knows the value of time in a meeting like this. The chairman, Rev. H. C. Barnaby, is a happy selection, for he knows how to handle a meeting of earnest Christian men who are not always particular about parliamentary law, if they can reach the main point. It has been years since I met Bro. J. K. Alwood last, but he is the same calm, thoughtful, modest man he was when years ago we fled to a cornfield for shelter to escape a howling mob who had vowed that the lodge iniquity should not be exposed in their midst. Bros. Bishop and Nichlas from Chambersburg, Penn.; Titus, Buck, and Hampe from Michigan; Bro. S. Austin from Nebraska, Bro. Hott from Virginia; and Bro. Becker from California are minute men, and with their associates are a power in the conference and church at large.

The collection in cash and pledges for carrying on the work amounted to $1,333.90, and the vote to hold the next convention in Dayton, Ohio, was enthusiastic and nearly or quite unanimous.

The work of the convention was diversified, and numerous committees were appointed to present different interests, and it should be noted greatly to their credit that not one of these committees failed to submit a full and satisfactory report on time.

There were no "great men" in the convention to plan and manage, but all were brethren, so that the Lord had a chance to work,and he did work, making the convention one of the grandest successes on record, and to him be all the glory. Amen.

J. P. STODDARD.

A WORD FOR THE ORANGEMEN.

SAND SPRING, Iowa.

I have been an earnest reader of your excellent paper for years and am very sorry to have to write to you on this occasion; but I am constrained to speak. If you were Presbyterians living in Ireland, would you like to have such men as Dennis Kearney and O'Donovan Rossa or Pat Egan ruling over you with the Pope as dictator? I think you would not. My forefathers fought at Derry, Anghrim and the Boyne; and, think you, would it be right for them to tamely submit to have their fetters of Popery bound on more firmly than ever without resistance.

I think not. Now I am no secretist nor never was, but I think you treat Orangemen rather hard. You call their order, twin sister of Masonry. Now as far as secrecy goes that is partly true, except the horrid oaths. In other respects their purposes and record is very different. I know there are refractory Orangemen as there are just the same in the church and in the state. So much more is the pity. I was raised among them on the hills of Antrim and know what they can do, and thank God there are enough of them to drive Parnell and all his bloody crew into oblivion. PETER GUTHRIE.

NOTE.—The original object professed by Orangemen may have been laudable, but they surely were in great error in the means they took to secure it, nor can we see that any good reason now exists for the continuance of such an order. Freemasonry, the Ku-Klux, the Mormons, began with good professions, but attempt to secure a seemingly good object by unlawful means.—ED.

THE CHILDREN'S CASE.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The death of children is always a sad event to the bereaved parents; but when they have the assured hope that the change is to the blessed home above, with the Lord Jesus who, when on the earth, took them in his arms and blessed them, then the grief becomes very different in its character, for instead of the dark thunder cloud, hope, like the rainbow, illumines their sky.

Believing, as we do, that the character of our race, after Adam sinned, has its restoration in the gift of Christ's righteousness to every child, in every generation; believing that all who die before sinning as Adam did are saved by Christ, as certainly as we believe that, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16: 16), it is a great comfort to bereaved parents to have this faith. Nor can we feel any doubt on the subject when we consider that Christ's righteousness is declared to be as universal as Adam's sin, for Adam was the "figure" or type of Christ (Rom. 5: 14), and the whole connection shows that this figure was in its universality over all mankind. This is found from Abel onward through every generation until the "seed of the woman bruised the head of the serpent" enemy of mankind.

This is as far from Universalism or any other delusion, like Freemasonry, etc., which offers men salvation without faith and obedience to Christ. T. H.

A NEW ORLEANS TRACT PUBLISHER.

NEW ORLEANS, La.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I thank God that perfect love casteth out all fear and doubt. When I wrote the first tract entitled, "Why the World is so Wicked," I felt as if there was not another man in America who would now openly denounce Masonry; but thank God, after the tracts were printed and many of them distributed here, the good encouragement I received was from your valuable paper, the Cynosure, by the hand of Rev. J. L. Wimby, and shortly thereafter the Lord sent me good words from Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, New York, Massachusetts, Tennessee and other parts. I then thanked God and took courage, though I have been threatened and rebuked and called lunatic, old fogy and many other such names. Even some of the preachers openly rebuked me. Yes, even yesterday I was told that some Mason would hurt me; but through all that I give God the glory, honor and praise. "Blessed are ye when men persecute you for my name's sake."

Now, dear brother, whenever I can I will always send a few dimes for some of your anti-secret tracts. I would subscribe for your valuable paper, but I am not just now able. I am a subscriber for the Memphis Living Way. But I shall try my best to get subscribers for the Cynosure. Peace be unto you and unto all the family in Christ Jesus.

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

The Cynosure for one year is entered for Bro. Davidson, paid for by the donation last week. Don't let this useful fund fail.—ED.

PITH AND POINT.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

If my health remains as good then as now and nothing else to hinder, I can attend a convention in December, or in the winter, in any one of the cities mentioned. My health is much better now than I ever expected it to be again. I am attending to my business, but then I lack much of being my former self as regards health. I have quit the use of tobacco in any shape, and conclude that I have been much benefited thereby.—JESSE WARD, Patridge, Ala

GOSHEN, INDIANA.

In the Cynosure, in the column of the American Party, you give the names of the "National Committee," but not their addresses. I would like to know the address of Israel Hess, of Indiana. –T. S. WALTER, Kit, Ind.

THE BIBLE USED AS A LODGE WEAPON.

I like the object of the Association, for secret societies are flooding our country and city and churches. The Cynosure is a great help to me, to help me to meet them, when they begin their secret cliques. They fight me saying their order is based on the Bible.—HENRY JACKSON, Augusta, Ga.

"AMEN, SO MOTE IT BE."

Masonry is becoming bolder than ever. It will scarcely be credited that the above was the text of a sermon by Bishop Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal church, on a late Lord's day, in this city. Yet so it was advertised, and probably did attract a number of Freemasons to hear their brother Mason glorify their response to their Christless lodge prayers. To have a Reformed Episcopal bishop substituting a Masonic text instead of one from the Bible in religious services, is like thunder out of a clear sky, and should alarm our people.—H., Chicago.

A MORGAN REMINISCENCE.

I was at the home of a nephew, four years ago, who gave me the "Broken Seal," and reading the account of the Morgan affair, and the efforts to bring the murderers to justice, aroused my memory and sent me back to September 26, 1826, when I was just fifteen years old, and was at the Congregational church at North Hillingly, Conn. One Sabbath day, at the noon intermission, I went out on the steps of the church where were two men, one, or both members of the church. They were so busy talking they did not notice me, as they said that the Masons had actually murdered Morgan. One said, "I don't approve of it, and won't uphold them in it; but will denounce them for it." That was said by the church member. The other, noticing the publicity of their conversation, gave a sign, and the two started off immediately. I heard no more, but afterwards learned that they were both Masons. This was before any public news of Morgan had reached that neighborhood; but there never was any exposure of the affair by either of them.—DAVID B. PERRY, Oregon, Ill.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON VI, August 8, 1886.—Gentiles Seeking Jesus.—John 12:20–36.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.—John 12:32.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E FLAGG.

1. Christ the desire of all nations. vs. 20–26. As the Magi came from the East to worship at his cradle, so now that the sun of his earthly life was so soon to set, the West sent its representatives in the person of these Greeks. They were proselytes of the gate, devout Gentiles who had heard of the fame of Jesus, and evidently desired a special introduction to him for some especial object. It may have been to invite him to a wider field of work outside of Judea, but of this the narrative gives no hint. To Christ it was evidently an event of peculiar significance, and seems to have been regarded by him as a sign that the hour when he should be lifted up from the earth to draw all men unto him was fast approaching. In parabolical language he once more foretells his death. Before he could become the bread of life for believers he must be as the seed corn, which abiding alone is barren and useless, but when it falls into the ground and dies, brings forth much fruit. From this he deduces self-sacrifice as the great law of the Christian life. None can enter his kingdom who are not vowed to follow him in the lowly path of service. We see here the radical difference between the Masonic religion and Christianity. One is based on that selfish instinct which desires to reap a benefit or an advantage at the expense of its neighbor. But Christ, to quote the language of Bonaparte at St. Helena, "founded his kingdom on love, and at this hour millions of men would die for him."

2. The Voice from Heaven. vs. 27–30. The shadows from the mysterious agony at Gethsemane were already darkening Christ's pathway. But the prayer of his troubled soul is still, "Father, glorify thy name." Still the glory of his Father is the one thing nearest and dearest to him. It is unfortunate that there is so little understanding of what is meant by God's "manifesting his glory," "glorifying himself." etc. We have a friend who enters a burning building and rescues its inmates at imminent risk of perishing himself in the flames. That action manifests what our friend is. It glorifies him in our own eyes and in the eyes of others. Thus God's glory was in the act itself, the supreme self-sacrifice of giving up his own son to die for the world. The voice from heaven which answered him was to some of the people only thunder, to others but an angel's voice. So we give our own material interpretation to the voices which sound from heaven in Nature and Providence, and in our highest grasp of their meaning we often fail to realize the divinity behind.

3. The duty of walking in the light. vs. 31–36. There is no need to blot out the sun in order to have darkness at noonday. We have only to draw our curtains of selfishness, or pride, or indulged sin. But to have light always, light in us and around us, we must believe in the light, give it free entrance, bask in its beams. Then, and then only, can we be the children of light, walking in the King's highway, and seeing ever before us brighter and brighter the perfect day of the heavenly life.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

To what class did these Greeks belong? 1 Kings 8:41, 42; Acts 8:27. Where does Paul make use of a similar illustration in reference to the death of believers to that which Christ used in reference to his own? 1 Cor. 15:36.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Among them that came up to worship at the feast." This shows that though Greeks by birth, they had been admitted to the privileges of Judaism. They belonged to the class known as "Proselytes of the Gate," so named from the phrase in the law, "the stranger that is within thy gates" (Exod. 20:10, et al.)—Ellicott. These were not circumcised, but accepted Judaism, attended the feasts, acknowledged the one God.

"Sir, we would see Jesus." It was one of the first demonstrations of the heathen world in favor of the Gospel, the first indication of that attraction which its moral beauty was soon to exercise over the whole human race. —Godet. It was one of the signs not only that the doors of the Kingdom of God were to be opened to all nations, but also that the nations were beginning to seek after God, and were being prepared to enter the kingdom.

(1) This should be the desire of every heart. (2) We should see him as he is, as divine, as the atoning Saviour, as our teacher, as our example, as our Lord, as always ready to forgive and to help. (3) Seeing Jesus will attract our hearts to him, and away from the world. (4) The more clearly a church sees Jesus, the nearer they will be to being a true and perfect church, with pure beliefs, and perfect conduct, and active Christian life. (5) If the world would see Jesus, their prejudices against religion would be removed.—P.

"The hour is come that the Son of man should be glorified." Hour is here equivalent to the more general word time or era. The prophets of the Old Testament foretell in the gathering of the Gentiles through the Messiah. This is both his glory and the glory of the Jewish nation in him (Ps. 2:8; Isa. 53:11). In this application of these Greek proselytes Christ sees a prophetic indication of the time when, with a profounder meaning, the Gentile world will everywhere put forth a request to see Jesus, when, being lifted up, he will draw all men unto him, when he will break down the partition wall between Jew and Gentile (Eph. 2:14), and gather into one nation the dispersed children of God (John 11:52; Col. 3:11; Rev. 7:9). The term Son of man is here, as always when used by Christ in reference to himself, equivalent to the Messiah.—Abbott.

"He that loveth his life shall lose it." To love one's life or soul, according to Christ's meaning, is to make self first and chief, that self-gratification becomes the law or principle of all action. To do this is to lose the life or soul; for, first, this is a wrong or wicked principle, and hence is itself the soul's ruin; and, second, this principle works out ruin, because it is at war with the nature of God, with the nature of the human soul, and so with the constitution of all society, human and angelic, earthly and heavenly.—Pepper.

"Father, save me from this hour." That is, the agony of his trial and crucifixion. This is most easily understood if we make this a question. "Shall I say, 'Father, save me from this hour,' as my flesh and earthly life prompt?" There was a real struggle between this earthly life or soul, and his spiritual consciousness.

"Glorify thy name." Through my sufferings. But the Greek means "save me out of" (soson ek), i. e, "bring me safe out of," rather than "save me from" (soson apo) i. e., "keep me altogether away from," as in "deliver us from the evil" (Matt. 6:13). St. John omits the agony in the garden, which was in the other Gospels, and was well known to every Christian; but he gives us here an insight into a less known truth, which is still often forgotten that the agony was not confined to Gethsemane, but was part of Christ's whole life.—Cambridge Bible.

"Then came there a voice from heaven." The whole multitude heard a noise, but the meaning of the voice was only perceived by each in proportion to his spiritual intelligence. Thus the wild beast perceives only a sound in the human voice; the trained animal discovers a meaning, a command, for example, which it immediately obeys; man alone discerns therein a thought.—Godet.

"Is the judgment of this world." "Now is approaching the decisive scene, the eventful period, the crisis, when it shall be determined who shall rule this world. There has been a long conflict between the powers of light and darkness. Satan has so effectually ruled that he may be said to be the prince of this world. But my approaching death will destroy his kingdom, will break down his power, and will be the means of setting up the kingdom of God over man." The death of Christ was to be the most grand and effectual of all means that could be used to establish the authority of the law and government of God (Rom. 8:3, 4). This it did (1) by showing the regard God had to his law; (2) by showing his hatred of sin; (3) by presenting the strongest motive to induce men to leave the service of Satan; (4) by securing the influences of the Holy Spirit; (5) by his putting forth his own direct power in the cause of virtue and of God. The death of Jesus was the determining cause, the grand crisis, the concentration of all that God had ever done or ever will do, to break down the kingdom of Satan, and set up his power over man.—Barnes. His cross is in fact a judgment-seat, and men are discriminated morally and spiritually by their reception of the suffering, self-sacrificing Redeemer.—Abbott.

"Be cast out." The second coming is not to redeem the world, but to realize for the world the fruits of redemption, in an established and eternal kingdom of righteousness, after, by the cross, humanity has been judged, the evil cast out, and the redeemed race lifted up into oneness with Christ Jesus.—Abbott.

"Will draw all men unto me." Christ by his cross will draw to himself not only men of all classes and climes, but all human interests and resources, all commerce, all enterprise, all art and science, all wealth and power in the world.—Jacobus.

"Jesus departed." This was the farewell of Jesus to Israel. He then retired and did not reappear on the morrow. This time it was no mere cloud which obscured the sun; the sun itself had set.—Godet.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Cbristian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
Tbe Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Cbicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
Tbe Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of tbe party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A.Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Micbigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Obio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing witb alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by wbich our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for tbese evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon tbe fundamental principles of tbe Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in tbe religious democracy of tbe New Testament, aud not in the despotism of tbe lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, tbough ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; wbile we abbor tbe idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and tbe stake, we at the same time as firmly believe tbat atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe tbat a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by meu, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us tbe peace wbich we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong tbe strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust tbat tbis beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by wbich we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We bold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heatben nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and tbe same equality should be extended to Indians and Cbinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound cur-

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as tbe necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy sbould be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to tbis evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people tbe abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentuckv.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

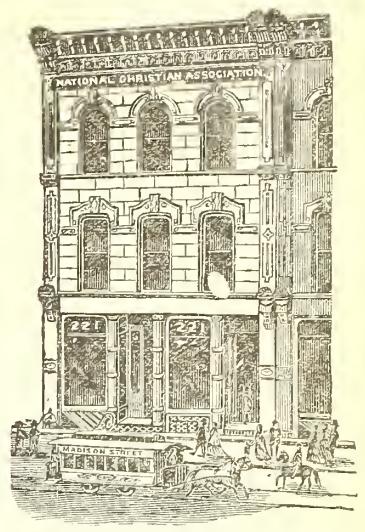
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.



The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsb Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres. Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec., John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1886.

MR. POWDERLY certainly objected to a Congressional Committee of arbitration to settle difficulties between employers and laborers, and gave as his reason: When our organization is completed or "perfected" we shall not need the laws, or words to precisely that effect. We cannot hunt through the pile of our late exchanges to find and give his exact words: nor is it necessary. Every one who reads knows that the secret lodge principle is to supersede and set aside civil government, substitute laws, officer courts, and hold legislatures of its own. "Masons," said Seward, "seek to overthrow every government which they cannot control."

"A majority of our race for whom Christ suffered, die in infancy, of course sinless and not liable to punishment."—Baccalaureate Sermon.

Two respected brethren, Gehring of Parkville, Mo., and Baldwin of Cherry Fork, Ohio, except to the above paragraph as unsound doctrine. We infer that they object to the word "sinless" as applied to infants: and the expresssion is liable to objection if it is understood to deny "original sin" or inherited depravity, which all infants have. None are born holy. We must be "born again." But infants are free from "actual transgression" till they actually transgress. But Christ tasted death for every one, infants included: and he took "infants" in his arms and blessed them, and said "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." We have always supposed that Christ's death avails for infants who have not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression. As Wesley's hymn has it:

"His blood atones for all our race
And sprinkles now the throne of grace."

The first avails for unsinning infants before moral agency begins; and the second gives place for repentance after they have sinned.

A SAD MISTAKE SOMEWHERE.

Elder R. M. Kilgore (Seventh-day Baptist) is thus reported in the Inter Ocean, July 19th: "What is the significance of the National Reform Movement which is agitating our country from center to circumference? What is the aim of this great party? It is to unite church and state. It is to change our Constitution so as to restrict the rights of conscience." And further on: "Already persecution has broken out in Arkansas, Tennessee and Pennsylvania, and those who worship God according to the teachings of God's Word are suffering under this Sabbath law."

The president of the National Reform Association is Felix R. Brunot, understood to be an Episcopalian. There are some one hundred vice-presidents, more or less, of whom the editor of the Cynosure is one. Bishop Huntington is, and the late Bishop Simpson of the Methodist Episcopal church was another, and one hundred men could not be selected in the United States to whom the idea of "church and state," the coercing of conscience by the civil law, would be more abhorrent than to the list of vice-presidents which have for years been published in the organ of that body, which seeks a recognition of God as the author of civil government. And if there are Seventh-day Baptists now in jail, or fined, because, having kept Saturday as their Sabbath, they have refused to keep Sunday also, their names and the jails where they are confined should be published at once.

The American people have for years gone the length of tolerating Mormon Danites and polygamists, who practiced polygamy and assassination and called that religion; and will they punish, by fine and imprisonment, civil, orderly Christians who only differ from them as to the hours of Sabbath rest? Nothing could be more abhorrent to our Constitution than such persecution.

PURDUE UNIVERSITY.

Our readers may remember that this State Agricultural institution at Lafayette, Indiana, was embroiled by secret societies during the presidency of Dr. E. E. White, who, with his board of trust, insisted on excluding them. A student prosecuted the college for refusing to admit him after he had joined a secret order. The courts sustained Dr. White, but the Masons in the legislature conditioned an appropriation of several thousand dollars on the admission of the secret orders. The money argument prevailed and Dr. White resigned.

A Greek-letter society is then smuggled in. A professor, E. E. Smith, was accused of being in league with the secretists, though voting against them, and he was lately removed by a unanimous vote of the Board. He demanded an investigation, though no charges were made; but he was dismissed by the Board acting at their discretion for the good of the institution, and students who were for the societies, publish their certificate that Smith was not their friend.

In his appeal to the public Prof. Smith accuses President Smart of an indefinite promise to admit the secretists, and reveals the underground agency of these pests in the trouble, by publishing in the Lafayette Courier, that when the petition to admit them was before the Board, he (Pres. Smart) made this statement in faculty meeting:

"The more I see of these students' secret fraternities, and of their workings in colleges, the more I am convinced that their influence is evil, and that perpetually. It would be the best day's work ever done if the colleges of Indiana should unite and forever expel these fraternities from their connection with students."

Smith had been accused of voting against the societies with a united faculty, and yet "was in reality their chief counsellor and abettor;" in short, that he was Bunyan's "Mr. Facing-both-ways," which his appeal shows to be true.

One would suppose that for a school composed of both sexes, like this, to have secret societies, meeting, of course, nightly, must inevitably become a training school for vice, and that no prudent parent would send a daughter where she would meet nightly with young gentlemen under the condition of telling nothing she should see or hear there.

CHRIST'S FINAL COMING.

Despair is a bad counsellor: and since Captain William Miller began to preach Christ's second advent, when Millerite tabernacles were built to accommodate multitudes in the principal cities and towns, though the movement, as a whole, has had the salutary effect to lead sincere souls to "look for, and haste unto," the coming of the Lord,—since that time there has been a tendency in some minds to despair of the race, and give their chief attention to their own ascension robes.

Doubtless Christ will destroy the wicked "by the brightness of his coming," and at the close and consummation of all earthly things, those who are alive and remain will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. But "the Scripture hath many fulfillings," and there will doubtless be multitudinous comings before the final hour. Overborne by the rapid springing up of new secret orders, all which have secret, Christless worships; the universal giving way of the Sabbath; the rejection of the Bible and prayer from the schools, where millions of children are daily learning practical atheism, etc., some good men are ready to despair of our Republic and our race. A successful evangelist, named Boyle, was so overborne by the conduct of the churches, courts, and legislatures in their desertion of American principles, and trampling on the slave, that he quit preaching and went to setting types on Dr. Bailey's paper for his support. He used to say, "You'll never abolish slavery. You will only bring out the guilt of this nation to the surface, and prepare it for 'wrath to the uttermost.'"

The present prospect was, indeed, dismal enough. Ministers, assemblies, conferences, associations, and, in civil life, judges, marshals, sheriffs, courts, and legislatures,—all together seemed to have apostatized from God and humanity. The Chief Justice of the United States sold his own nephews and nieces, born of his brother's slave-woman, on the auction-block with their mother, and with mules, horses, hogs and cattle. A constable dragged a Methodist preacher from his knees while praying for the slaves, and the Methodist General Conference voted to censure the same good man (George Storrs) for the same act. Abolitionists were in personal danger while silent in stage coaches or walking the streets. But prayer rose continually and reached the ears of God. The average mind on reading the American platform now, is affected precisely as the Liberty party platform affected the same minds then. "It's no use. The thing can't be done. Railroads break the Sabbath, and the business world follows suit. You'll never get God recognized, or the Bible back into schools." By human force we shall not. By Divine power we shall.

The Hebrew commonwealth, in the days of Josiah, was drifted from God's worship by the Messiah (Christ), just as we are now doing. A gentlemanly clerk in a real estate house, in this city for years, said last week, "I belong to a secret insurance company which receives only men of good moral character, and every one of our meetings is opened and closed with prayer; and we have already sixty thousand members in Chicago." Every week starts a new secret order, league, or council, to insure lives, suppress mobs, to drill and uniform, care for the sick, protect labor from capital, etc., etc.—all amenable to their own laws, independent of government, and all having oaths, obligations, and worships independent of Christ.

Now this looks like the United States of Judea when Josiah, a child of eight years, came to the throne. The only temple of God's worship on earth, where the worship was paid through the "one Mediator," was forsaken, dilapidated, and filled with rubbish and filth; while the extemporized lodge worships were nightly thronged by multitudes on hill-tops, in cities, in caves, and "under every green tree." The Decalogue was forsaken, and sacrifices, which meant a suffering Christ, had lost their meaning. The United States is now fast approximating that condition of the Hebrew union. One young man, King Josiah, at sixteen years of age, wrought an entire revolution in the morals and religion of that nation. "The Book of the Law" was found buried under the filth and rubbish of the temple. It was read before the king, and he sent five men to inquire of Huldah the prophetess, who said: "Thus saith the Lord: I will bring evil on this place; even all the curses written in the book: because they have forsaken me, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands."

"But as for the king of Judah, * * * say unto him: Because thou didst humble thyself and weep before me, thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace; neither shalt thine eyes see all the evil I will bring upon this place." And so it fell out. Josiah "took away all the abominations out of all the countries which pertained to the children of Israel, and all his days they departed not from following the Lord;" and millions, doubtless, now dwell with Christ in heaven as the fruit of that reformation. Now if a young king and a handful of spiritually enlightened men could, by prayer and corresponding effort, wipe out the secret, Christless lodges of that day, what is to hinder the like turning to God to-day, to his worship, his Sabbaths and his law?

Nothing can hinder it, if but a handful of people pray in faith to God. The Lord's prayer, "Thy kingdom come," is said by more infant lips to-day than ever before. And Christ, who was the Truth, never would have given that prayer unless he intended to answer it. He will answer it, and his kingdom will come. He will take care of the millennium, and fulfill all the Scriptures which predict it, if we do our duty. Railroads, street cars, travel, and business of all kinds can and will keep the Sabbath, that laborers may rest, when a fourth part of professing Christians vote as well as pray for it. Nor do we stand in danger of "church and state" by voting for God, the Bible and the Sabbath. Religion and state is not church and state. The masses govern, and will govern. And the masses are not going to persecute themselves, or allow themselves to be persecuted, when their eyes are opened and they vote and act in the fear of God and the light of the Bible. Nil desperandum.

THE ADVANCE ON THE LODGE.

It is stated on good authority that one of the greatest hindrances to missionary work among the colored people is the prevalence of secret societies. The way in which that race turns to anything mysterious and is impressed with this foolishness of secrecy, is astonishing and discouraging. A colored minister of this city informs us that there is scarcely a negro family in Chicago that is not connected with from one to four or five secret societies. Into these societies go their money and their time. It is deplorable to have white people tricked out of their time and money by such devices, but their influence on this ignorant, emotional race is yet more pernicious. We have never sympathized with those who denounce all secret societies or condemn those who belong to them. But it does seem as though the light of the nineteenth Christian century should dispel the illusions which have kept most of them alive.—The Advance.

March 5th, 1885, the Advance said: "It is beyond dispute that Freemasonry is a religion." This is a true testimony; and it is also true that Freemasonry is not the Christian religon; and it is also true that being a Christless religion its god is the devil, and its ceremonies are the worship of Satan. And it is true that, like all false religions, Freemasonry is hypocritical and murderous, as can be seen from the acts of its branches here in Chicago Haymarket. We are glad that the Advance does not sympathize with those who denounce all secret societies. The Cynosure does not. It has held and still holds that under tyrants and despots secrecy, which is the world-wide badge of shame and crime, may become a token of virtue and patriotism. We have sometimes wished that the Advance would aid us more in our battle against these secret orders, which being false religions are ruining the souls of men. We wish so still, and expect it, even.

We expect this because not only is Freemasonry a religion, but so are Odd-fellowship, the Knights of Pythias, the Good Templars, and many other secret organizations religious. Even the A. O. U. W., a member of which suicided in this city this week, begins and closes its services with prayer to some unknown god. And this secret insurance society which has a religion of the Masonic sort claims sixty thousand members in Chicago alone, or TWICE AS MANY MEN as all the Protestant churches have MEMBERS, counting men, women and children.

If the Advance pushes its inquiries, it will probably ascertain that the secret societies which are "unquestionably religious," (Christless religions), have more members, white and black, in Chicago and elsewhere, than any two or three Protestant churches occupying the same ground, except in those localities where the people are kept informed as to the character and tendency of these societies. We expect this result, and that the Advance is to hate the evil and love the good in true Pauline fashion, having no fellowship with unfruitful works of darkness, rather reproving them.

THE ANARCHIST TRIAL.

Since the opening speech of prosecuting attorney Grinnell, published last week in these columns, the examination of witness for the State has gone on steadily and with dispatch, and the present week may be required to complete the testimony. The police department is taking a lively interest in the case, a number of officers having been called to the stand' and a large body being in constant attendance, some with heads bound up, others limping in on canes and crutches—victims of the fury of the men on trial before them. The jury is composed of better men than usually sit in our criminal court. Though comparatively young, they are men of intelligence, and listen with interest and seriousness to the fearful evidence drawn out by the examination. The indicted men have daily a more anxious look, as the enormity of their crime is developed, and the instruments by which they hoped to carry it to yet more terrible results are exhibited before the jury.

The testimony of the police shows that many pistol shots were fired by the crowd after the explosion of the bomb, and before the amazed officers had rallied and begun to return the fire. They showed also the bombs manufactured by Lingg and others and distributed among the anarchists. Some of these were two hemispheres of lead or iron held together with a bolt; others a piece of gas pipe with the ends packed. A large package of dynamite mixed with sand and sawdust, the explosive power of the mass being enough to blow up a large section of the city, was also exhibited. Bombs enough were made to have killed or wounded five thousand men, if the single one that exploded was a sample of the power of all.

The public meetings of the anarchists were seldom large, and their journals, the Arbeiter Zeitung daily, Verbote weekly, and Alarm semi-monthly, had neither of them a circulation of over 5,000, but they were able to influence other labor organizations, to which they belonged. Parsons was member of the Knights of Labor, the Printers' union, and the Good Templars. Others officered the Carpenters' union. All belonged to the Lehr and Wehr Verein, an organization for instruction in the use of arms, which drilled secretly and each member of which owned a rifle. They belonged, too, to the International Workingmen's Association, a secret society organized in groups of eight all over this country and Europe, the members of which are comparatively unknown to each other. There were several groups, and their operations are given to the court by detectives who have been members for some months, and by some of the members themselves.

The Central Labor union has raised several hundred dollars for the defense of the men on trial, and is to hold a great meeting this week to create sympathy, intimidate the jury, and threaten witnesses. The Tribune calls upon the authorities to suppress this meeting in the following editorial:

It has been proved already in the anarchist trial by several independent witnesses that the meetings of the Carpenters' union, which is part of the Central Labor union of this city, were made the occasion for violent speeches inciting to murder and violence. Self-confessed anarchists were officers of the meeting. Seliger, Lehmann, and Lingg, the manufacturer of dynamite bombs, were officers and active spirits of the union, Picnics were arranged for under the auspices of this union, the proceeds of which were to be used to buy dynamite for the destruction of life and property. This union has an "armed section," according to the several witnesses. "At the next meeting," said Lehmann, "it was resolved that dynamite should be bought with it [the money raised by the Carpenter's union picnic] and that we should practice with it at once." Lingg was given the money and bought the new agency of civilization. That was "unanimously resolved." Engel addressed the meeting of the union at Clybourn avenue—a public meeting—and counseled the use of dynamite. Since the indictment of the anarchist conspirators there have been meetings of this dangerous society also at which violence has been advocated against those carpenters who have compromised on ten hours' pay for nine hours' work. Armed bands of the members have gone around in the western and northwestern portions of the city terrorizing honest workingmen and forcing them to desist from work by threats and blows. One of the indicted persons—Neebe—attended one of the meetings and spoke thereat. The members of this organization now advocate the use of revolvers publicly to prevent men from pursuing their lawful avocations and earning their livelihood. The municipal authorities have permitted the meetings, and seem utterly unable to cope with the organized intimidation resorted to. In a few cases where the terrorists have been arrested the Justices of the Peace appointed by the Mayor have imposed only light fines. The work of terror goes on. Emboldened, apparently by the immunity enjoyed so far, the Central Labor union—of which the Carpenter's union is the leading society—has called a meeting for to-morrow evening at West Twelfth Street Turner Hall to criticise the conduct of the trial of the anarchists, and probably to denounce the presiding Judge, the witnesses for the State, and the attorneys for the prosecution. It is proposed, doubtless, to intimidate the court by a display of numbers—perhaps by threats. Parsons, Spies, and Fielden cannot be there. Neebe can. There will be no lack of orators, as an announcement in the Arbeiter Zeitung, the Anarchists' organ, promises. It would not be at all surprising if there were incitements to those assembled to march on the court and blow it up with dynamite. The bombs hidden away last May may be brought from their hiding places.

The Mayor of the city ought to take measures to prevent this meeting, which can hardly fail to be of an incendiary character.

—All the friends of reform in Chicago and their friends, also, are invited to the mission hall, No. 135 West Van Buren street, to hear Secretary Stoddard on Thursday evening, this week.

—Some time since Rev. J. T. Michael of South Oil City, Pa., wrote suggesting a general uprising among faithful Methodists against the lodge evil in their church. His ideas on the subject, presented at some length, appear in pamphlet form, and copies of the document for distribution can be had of Rev. B. T. Roberts of North Chili, N. Y.

—The Union Signal prints a powerful appeal from Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Between Two Opinions," to the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, asking them to take up the secret society question as well as the Social Purity reform, as the former is so closely related to the temperance cause. The letter will be re-printed in next Cynosure.

—The Living Way has begun a list of Baptist ministers opposed to the lodge. It is probably intended for colored preachers, although they are not particularly mentioned. There are many such friends who are reading the Cynosure who would be willing to testify for Christ in this way. Let all such send their names to the Living Way, Memphis, Tenn.

—Elder J. F. Browne reached the Cynosure office from the East last Thursday, and went on, Saturday afternoon, to the Wisconsin work. He expects to visit Rock county first, and will be welcomed by many friends in that part of the State. For the present he can be addressed at this office.

—Our thanks are due to Prof. T. S. Parvin, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, for a copy of the Masonic Grand Lodge Report for that State for the present year. Prof. Parvin has been using a most commendable diligence in securing Anti-masonic literature for the new Masonic library of Iowa, and his effort will in due time bear fruit. A hasty glance through the report discovers little of general interest in the transactions of the Grand Lodge at its last meeting.

—Rev. J. H. Karsten has resigned as editor of De Hope, the organ of the Reformed Dutch church, published in the Holland language, in Holland, Mich. Mr. G. van Schelven has been appointed managing editor, with Prof. C. Doesburg, Rev. D. Broek and Rev. John Van der Meulen as a committee of supervision. De Hope has been criticized as being too non-committal on the lodge question.

—Conventions of the National Reform Association were held last week at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, on Wednesday, July 21st, and at Chautauqua, New York, Friday, July 23d. Mrs. Woodbridge, Dr. McAllister, Major George A. Hilton, and Dr. McIlvaine were to speak at the former, and Dr. McAllister, Mrs. Woodbridge, and the Rev. W. J. Coleman at the latter. In addition, a number of short addresses were expected. This is the first time the National Reform work has been presented at these great summer assemblies.

—Prof. U. Z. Gilmer, of Quincy, nominated by the Prohibition party for Superintendent of Public Instruction in Illinois, has been connected with the Odd-fellows, Sons of Temperance and Good Templars. Although not now affiliating with these orders, he does not object to them, and believes there is nothing in either to "interfere with a religious life." If elected he does not think his relation with these orders would in any way influence him in administering the office. We regret that Prof. Gilmer's views are not more clear on the lodge question. A candid and careful inquiry into the religious principles underlying the whole system of secretism would, we are confident, produce a decided change in his convictions.

—A Boston lodge organ has ventured an encomium upon the atheistic Masonry of France, which has by vote cast off all semblance of prayer and rejected even the name of deity from the lodge worship. The church referred to in the recommendation below is the Roman Catholic. Of course the sacred place of the Mason must be for the time hostile to that of the priest. The note reads: "One of the most persistent and powerful propagators of republican principles in France is Freemasonry. This institution is much more serious there than with us. It is the center of union, the rallying point, for all those who rebel against unjust claims of the clergy and domination of aristocratic and monarchial institutions. The Masonic lodge is the sacred place of the French Freemasons, socially, politically, and religiously. They care for their own poor, their own orphans, and themselves, in a degree not yet attained by our Masonic bodies. Instead of building costly edifices, they spend their money in caring for the needy. The exterior show of Masonry in France is almost nothing, but its effects upon the people is feared by the church."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Isaac Bancroft, late State agent in Wisconsin is located at Everly, Clay county, Iowa, not Spirit Lake, as announced lately in these columns. Correspondents will please take notice.

—C. A. S. Temple, an old friend, late of Reading, Mass., has removed to Lebanon Springs, N. Y. His oldest son, aged 42, was one of the victims of the fearful railway accident near Reading, Mass., last April, when part of the train was hurled 200 feet down into the river. So sore a blow to our aged friend well nigh crushed him with the great and sudden loss. May the Lord be his staff and stay in the trial and infirmity of years.

—Rev. Alexander Djejizian of the Armenian church in Ada Bazar, Asia Minor, has opened a new Protestant school in connection with his church work, and on account of the well-known poverty of the Armenians there is need of outside assistance. Any readers of the Cynosure who have missionary money to give for such an object may send through this office.

—Rev. J. M. Foster, of the Reformed Presbyterian church, Cincinnati, has accepted the appointment to labor in the National Reform work, and has already entered on his work. The Rev. N. M. Johnston, of Eskridge, Kansas, has also consented to spend three months in the field, if called upon by the Executive Committee of the Association.

—Deacon David West of Sycamore, one of the old settlers of northern Illinois, celebrated his 80th birthday on the 16th, and a company of aged friends gathered to congratulate their comrade, among whom were a number of equal or greater age, Agrippa Dow being past 92 years, yet hale and hearty. Deacon West has long been a faithful office-bearer in the Congregational church, whose fealty to Christ has brought upon him many trials from the lodge.

—Rev. Dr. Joseph L. Cooper, whose long and faithful services in the United Presbyterian church have been surpassed by few if any of its members, has been compelled, from continued ill health, to retire from the editorial control of the Evangelical Repository. Rev. A. G. Wallace, the assistant editor, has been appointed to the position.

A story translated from the French for the New Orleans Times Democrat contains the following hit: "Last year, on my wife's birthday, I was driven to break out into open revolt against M. Dubu, who threatened to adorn my dwelling with a most terrific scene from the Inquisition, with tribunal of monks, executioners in cowls, and a naked victim writhing on burning coals. My nights are not very good, as it is; if I have eaten anything a little unmanageable at dinner, Jane Grey and Lord Strafford pursue me in nightmare, and I dream that I am obliged to cut off my wife's head, or that I am kneeling before a grating to kiss the hand my father-in-law holds out to me between the bars. He took a cruel revenge, though, for my refusal. He has hung up in his daughter's room—in our nuptual chamber—an enlarged copy of his own photograph of himself, Dubu, invested with his Freemason's insignia!"

THE HOME.

OUR FATHER'S HOUSE.

There shall be no more sighing
In our dear Father's house.
Upon the earth-road dreary,
O we are growing weary
And homesick, till our Father
His children all shall gather,
To that calm rest before us,
And all our lost restore us.
Then there will be no sighing
In our dear Father's house.

There shall be no more sighing
In our dear Father's house.
The earth-stains we inherit
Defile the captive spirit.
We've heard the tempter's wooing,
And risked our soul's undoing:
Our birth-right guilt hath taken,
And left us crushed, forsaken;
But there will be no more sinning,
In our dear Father's house.

There will be no more sorrow
In our dear Father's house.
All fetters shall be rended;
All mourning shall be ended;
No more of blinded straying;
No wordless anguish preying;
No partings and no sadness,
But peace and sacred gladness.
No, there will be no sorrow
In our dear Father's house.

MAJESTY OF CHRIST.

I confess to you that the majesty of the Scriptures astonishes me; the holiness of the Gospel is an argument which speaks to my heart, and which I should be sorry to be able to answer. Read the books of the philosophers with all their pomp; how petty they are beside this! Is a book at once so sublime and so simple, the work of man? Can it be that He whose history it relates was himself a mere man? Is this the tone of an enthusiast, or of a mere sectary? What sweetness, what purity in his manners! what touching grace in his instructions! what elevation in his maxims! what profound wisdom in his discourses! what presence of mind, what acuteness, what justness in his replies! what empire over his passion! Where is the man, where is the sage who knows in this way how to act, suffer, and die, without weakness and without ostentation? When Plato describes his imaginary good man, covered with the opprobrium of crime, yet meriting the rewards of virtue, he paints, trait by trait, Jesus Christ.

What prejudice, blindness or bad faith does it not require to compare the son of Sophroniscus with the Son of Mary! What distance between the two! Socrates dies without pain, without ignominy! he sustains his character easily to the end. If he had not honored his life with such a death, we should have thought him a sophist. They say, Socrates invented ethics; but others practiced morality before he taught it. Aristides was just before Socrates described justice; Leonidas died for his country before Socrates taught the duty of patriotism. Sparta was temperate before Socrates praised sobriety; Greece abounded in virtuous men before he defined what virtue is. But Jesus,—where did he find the lofty morality, of which he alone gave both the lesson and the example? From the midst of a furious fanaticism proceeds the purest wisdom; among the vilest of the people appears the most heroic and virtuous simplicity. The death of Socrates, tranquilly philosophizing among his friends, is the sweetest one could desire; that of Jesus, expiring amid torments, abused, ridiculed, cursed by a whole people is the most horrible one could fear. Yes, if Socrates lives and dies like a philosopher, Jesus lives and dies like a God!—Jean Jacques Rosseau.

ANSWERS TO PRAYER.

Newman Hall, the well known London minister, gives the following instances of answers to prayer from his own experience: "The writer's brother, when superintendent of a Sunday-school, felt a strong impulse one Saturday evening, to call on a member of his Bible class whom he had never visited before, and to inquire if he was in any need. He found him very ill. Though the mother and sister seemed in comfortable circumstances, he felt constrained to inquire if he could aid them in any way. They burst into tears, and said that the young man had been asking for food which they had no power to supply, and that on Monday some of their goods were to be taken in default of payment of rates. When he knocked at the door they were on their knees in prayer for help to be sent them. By the aid of a few friends the difficulty was at once met—but the timely succor was felt to be the Divine response to prayer.

"With that brother the writer was once climbing the Cima de Jazzi, one of the mountains in the chain of Monte Rosa. When nearly at the top, they entered a dense fog. Presently the guides faced right about and grounded their axes on the frozen snow-slope. The brother—seeing the slope still beyond, and not not knowing it was merely the cornice, overhanging a precipice of several thousand feet—rushed onward. The writer will never forget their cry of agonized warning. His brother stood a moment on the very summit, and then, the snow yielding, began to fall through. One of the guides, at great risk, rushed after him and seized him by the coat. This tore away, leaving only three inches of cloth, by which he was dragged back. It seemed impossible to be nearer death and yet escape. On his return home, an invalid member of his congregation told him that she had been much in prayer for his safety, and mentioned a special time when she particularly was earnest, as if imploring deliverance from some great peril. The times corresponded. Was not that prayer instrumental in preserving that life?"—Selected.

ANTIQUITY OF THE SCRIPTURES.

Few of us ever stop to think how old the Bible is. Yet "the Scriptures are believed by candid critics to contain the most ancient forms of truth now known to men." With the aid of chronological tables, any one may easily make profitable comparisons between the antiquity of the Book and that of other writings and events. The Scriptures contain the only authentic history of the world before the flood. We find in the Pentateuch one or two stanzas of poetry composed in the antediluvian period. The Hebrew statutes were enacted a thousand years before Justinian reformed the Roman jurisprudence. In the Bible we have the record of chartered rights secured to the people more than two thousand years before Magna Charta.

What a sensation would be produced if the first chapter of Genesis should appear for the first time in one of our newspapers to-morrow! Yet there can be no doubt that that chapter contains the oldest writing, twenty-five hundred years before the invention of printing. Xenophon's record of the conversation of Socrates, in his Memorabilia, seems an old book to us, yet similar topics were discussed in Ecclesiastes six hundred years before. The works of Tacitus, Plutarch and Quintilian are not modern, yet the books of the New Testament are older than they.

As to the book of Job, its age is beyond conjecture. Those who make it as modern as they can, are compelled to place its origin at least one thousand years before Homer. When Priam was king of Troy, Job was of remote antiquity. The name of Alexander has no modern sound to us, yet when Alexander invaded Syria, the book of Job might have been read before him as the work of an author more time-honored then than the name of Alexander is now.

The writings of Confucius are modern compared with most of the Bible; and the most that the Hindoos can justly claim for their sacred books, the Vedas, is that they were written five hundred years after the death of Moses. The Koran is a book fresh from the press compared with the Scriptures. —Dr. Upson.

WOMAN'S GLORY.

Mozart had a weak will and would often have desisted from his endeavors but for his wife, of whom else we would have known little, whose steady purpose and cheerful courage balanced his thought and concentrated his will. How often is it true that woman is the victor where man wears the laurels. We sometimes hear it said that she is unrecognized, unrewarded. Who dares say this? Where is there a man who deserves the name of man, who does not acknowledge woman's influence? It is assumed. Every woman who is blessed with wifehood and motherhood is honored with the two dearest names in the language—wife, mother. Man has success only as he wins it, and how few do that! How small a fragment of men win any success for which they are recognized! How many men acquire wealth, a business reputation, social, political, or religious distinction? Unless a man do, he is considered by the rules of society to have failed. His only hope of success in the eyes of his associates is in winning some definite superiority.

Not so with woman. She is a success unless she do something to forfeit her womanhood. When a man is "toasted" it is for his attainments or position. Whoever heard a sentiment offered to man, but when woman is toasted it is always as woman with all the halo and glory inherent in the word. She is universally, instinctively, recognzied as the silent force that always tends to exalt, balance and intensify man. We welcome woman to every field of effort to which womanly instinct may prompt her to aspire, but we hope the day may never come in which the name of woman will not be the loftiest, brightest crown she can wear.—Selected.

PRAYING FOR RAIN.

Some years ago the Methodists were holding a camp meeting in the town adjoining where I now reside. One lovely afternoon a gang of rowdies were seen marching around and through the encampment, with large powder-horns swung over their shoulders, with the corks out, and making trails of powder all through the grounds. Their plan "leaked out." They were going to wait until evening service and then set fire to the powder. The presiding elder rushed into one of the tents greatly excited, saying, "We are going to have a terrible time to-night." A very pious, devoted sister, whose faith in God to answer prayer was often the occasion of this remark, "When Sister Titus prays the heavens bow," replied to the presiding elder, "We must pray for rain." As there was not a cloud to be seen, the faith of some wavered; but this good sister prayed for God to send rain to wet the powder, and in less than one hour the rain came in torrents. The powder was not only wet, but washed out of sight. It was said the rain fell to the depth of several inches. So the devil lost his powder, and his servants were disappointed in their plans to bring trouble in the camp. I have these facts from an eye witness.—Christian Conservator.

THE FIRST AND SECOND ADVENT.

What a difference between the first and second coming of our Lord! When he shall come a second time it will be to be glorified and admired, but when he came the first time it was to be despised and rejected of men. He comes a second time to reign with unexampled splendor, but the first time he came to die in circumstances of shame and sorrow. Lift up your eyes, ye sons of light, and anticipate the change, which will be as great for you as for your Lord; for now ye are hidden even as he was hidden, and misunderstood even as he was misunderstood when he walked among the sons of men. "We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." His manifestation will be our manifestation, and in the day in which he is revealed in glory then shall his saints be glorified with him.—Spurgeon.

THE OLD DOCTOR'S STORY.

"I have a little story to tell you, boys," the old doctor said to the young people the other evening. "One day—a long, hot day it had been, too—I met my father on the road to town.

"'I wish you would take this package to the village for me, Jim,' he said, hesitating.

"Now I was a boy of twelve, not fond of work, and was just out of the hay-field, where I had been at work since daybreak. I was tired, dusty and hungry. It was two miles into town. I wanted to get my supper, and to wash and dress for singing-school.

"My first impulse was to refuse, and to do it harshly; for I was vexed that he should ask after my long day's work. If I did refuse he would go himself. He was a gentle, patient old man. But something stopped me—one of God's good angels, I think.

"'Of course, father, I'll take it,' I said, heartily, giving my scythe to one of the men. He gave me the package.

"'Thank you, Jim,' he said, 'I was going myself, but somehow I don't feel very strong to-day.'

"He walked with me to the road that turned off to the town; as he left, he put his hand on my arm, saying again, 'Thank you, my son. You've always been a good boy to me, Jim.'

"I hurried into town and back again.

"When I came near the house, I saw a crowd of farm-hands at the door. One of them came to me, the tears rolling down his face.

"'Your father,' he said, 'fell dead just as he reached the house. The last words he spoke were to you.'

"I'm an old man now; but I have thanked God over and over again, in all the years that have passed since that hour, that those last words were, 'You've always been a good boy to me.'"

No human being ever yet was sorry for love or kindness shown to others. But there is no pang of remorse so keen as the bitterness with which we remember neglect or coldness which we have shown to loved ones who are dead.

Do not begrudge loving deeds and kind words especially to those who gather with you about the same hearth. In many families a habit of nagging crossness or ill-natured gibing gradually covers the real feeling of love that lies deep beneath.

And after all it is such a little way that we can go together.—Selected.

TAKE CARE.

Little children, you must seek
Rather to be good than wise,
For the thoughts you do not speak
Shine out in your cheeks and eyes.

If you think that you can be
Cross or cruel, and look fair,
Let me tell you how to see
You are quite mistaken there.

Go and stand before the glass,
And some ugly thought contrive,
And my word will come to pass
Just as sure as you're alive!

What you have and what you lack,
All the same as what you wear,
You will see reflected back,
So, my little folks, take care!

And not only in the glass
Will your secrets come to view;
All beholders, as they pass,
Will perceive and know them, too.

Out of sight, my boys and girls,
Every root of beauty starts;
So think less about your curls,
More about your minds and hearts.

Cherish what is good, and drive
Evil thoughts and feelings far;
For, as sure as you're alive,
You will show for what you are.

—Alice Cary.

HINTS FOR VACATION.

I would like to say a few words to our young people, particularly "our girls," who expect to visit their country cousins and friends during the approaching vacation. In the first place, remember that your friends rise earlier than you have been in the habit of doing, and that they do not keep as many servants as you do in your city homes. Now, if you are late in getting up, you either oblige your hostess to wait for you to take breakfast with the family, or get your meal separately when you make your appearance. In either case you throw the domestic arrangements awry, and annoy both mistress and maid. Before you go to bed the night of your arrival inquire the family breakfast hour, and then compel yourself to be ready for it; you will soon be repaid for the effort, I assure you. Then, before you start off on any pleasure jaunt, put your room in order, and see that you have not left any of your belongings around in parlor or hall; take care of yourself and your clothes, and never require any one to wait for you after the appointed hour for starting on an excursion.

There are many little things, such as preparing fruit for the table, etc., which you can do to help your friends, and it certainly will not lessen your own pleasure. If the weather keeps you indoors for a day or two, do not shut yourself up with a book to read to entertain yourself alone; remember it is your duty to give as well as to receive enjoyment from your visit. Have some pretty piece of fancy-work to employ your fingers, which, when you have completed, you can leave as a memento of your stay with them; talk and, if you can sing, sing; in short, make yourselves agreeable, girls, and have a good time, and let your entertainers see you have enjoyed your visit, and they will regret your departure, and hope for your return.—Christian at Work.

A GREAT MATHEMATICIAN.

The librarian of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey is an odd sort of a person. The only name he personally cares about is Artemas Martin, but he has a half dozen prefixes and suffixes, all given him by learned societies. Mr. Martin, says the Detroit Free Press, is one of the first mathemiticians in the world. The problems of Calculus are to him mere child's play. Nothing short of mathematical sophistries of the most abtruse and unpractical sort have any facination for him. Oddly enough, Mr. Martin was, until his appointment, in the United States Government service, a market gardener. He owned a small piece of land on the south shore of Lake Erie, within a half-dozen miles of the city of Erie, which he tilled, raising mostly kitchen truck for the city market. Twice every week he was to be found in his stall, as little known to his customers as was the vendor of poultry or the seller of beads and buttons in the neighboring stalls. One day it was announced in the telegraphic news in the papers that a Mr. A. Martin of Erie, Penn. had been elected an honorary member of one of the leading learned societies of Great Britain, the Royal Mathematical; or something of that sort, I have forgotten, just now, what. Everybody said, "Who's Martin?" "Have we any such distinguished indivdual in our midst?" No one seemed to know. A few days later the University of Michigan conferred the degree of Master of Arts upon Mr. A. Martin, of Erie, Penn. Here was a fresh bit of news. Well, after a while this learned but mysterious man was discovered in the person of the gardener who tended a stall in the city market. A man of perhaps forty-five, he was tall and ungainly, dressed as became his calling, looking as little like a Fellow of a Royal British society as like British royalty itself. But fame made no change in the appearapce or occupation of the market gardener. He continued to tend his stall—and study too, I suppose, as before, dropping the former only when appointed a few months ago to the Government position for which he is so eminently qnalified.

TEMPERANCE.

A FRIENDLY WORD.

We all like to stand well in the estimation of those around us. No man wishes to be despised, or to be thought foolish or ridiculous. No man wishes to make himself an offence and a nuisance in society. We do many things simply to please others, or to avoid displeasing them. No man wishes to do anything which will impair his powers, and make him inferior to those around him. No man seekiug employment or position wishes to do anything which will disqualify him for such employment, or unfit him for the best position within his reach. And yet there are men who habitually do things which degrade them, which render them objects of contempt, and which hinder their progress and prosperity in every department of life.

Suppose a man seeks employment in an office. The position is desirable, the work is pleasant, and the salary satisfactory, but as he applies for the place he takes his cigar out of his mouth, and stands with it between his fingers, the slowly burning weed exhaling its stench through the office; and in very many instances, before he is aware of it, he has disgusted the proprietor with the smell of the weed, and he is politely told that he does not seem to be the man they have in mind.

There are scores and hundreds of desirable positions where "No smoker need apply." Men of cleanly habits do not wish to breathe the fumes of tobacco; and though everything else may seem satisfactory, they will not have a tobacco user about them. By that indulgence, a man cuts himself off from a variety of pleasant, useful, and profitable occupations, besides unfitting himself for the highest usefulness in any position which he may obtain. Who would want to be under the instructions of a preacher or a teacher who is addicted to the use of tobacco? What kind of a figure would a minister of the Gospel make, smoking a cigar, and warning little boys to beware of cigarettes? What delicate invalid would request the services of a physician whose breath was reeking with the fumes of tobacco? What decent girl would wish to marry a man who was addicted to this loathsome and disgusting vice? What stable keeper, or farmer, or carpenter would care to hire a man who was littering up the premises with cigar stubs and old pipes, and who was likely to burn down barns and stables and shops and houses with the matches that he used to light them?

No young man who has to earn his living and make his way in the world, can afford to use tobacco. It costs him too much. It ruins too many of his chances to rise. It leaves him at a perpetual disadvantage, and causes him to miss the highest prizes in every department of life. The most prominent and widely known man in America smoked cigars for years and years. At last the doctors said he must stop. He did stop, but it was too late to undo the mischief, and after months of hopeless suffering the tomb enclosed the form of a great commander who, had he let alone the cigar, might perhaps have enjoyed twenty or thirty years of healthy life. Gen. Grant's cigars cost him dear, even if he did not always have to pay for them. Let the young take warning and let the old take heed.—Safeguard.

TOBACCO STATISTICS.

At Yale College the students of each class are ranked in four grades according to their scholarship. An inquiry recently instituted shows the following curious relation of the tobacco habit to low ranking:

RANK.	USE TOBACCO	DO NOT USE IT.	TOTAL.
1st.	10	30	40
2d.	18	19	37
3d.	20	7	27
4th.	22	4	26

It is interesting, in connection with this subject, to know that Germans do sometimes pass strict prohibitory laws, albeit they are not against wine and beer, but against boys smoking. In Germany if a boy is caught smoking he is locked up. The government has become anxious about the effect of tobacco on the physique of the soldiers of the future, and in order to rectify in some measure the evil, ordered the police to arrest all boys found smoking in the streets, if they are under sixteen years old, and to have them punished by fine and imprisonment. According to reports resulting from government investigation, a clearly defined line has been discovered between the smokers and non-smokers who attend the polytechnic schools, those who do not smoke being decidedly superior in general scholarship and mental vigor. The poisonous nicotine, so far counteracted in the adult smoker by the resisting forces of his mature constitution, takes hold of the forming tissues of the young and does its injurious work without hindrance.

WHAT TOBACCO IS MADE OF.—We have heard a tobacco user claim that the weed was food and drink to him, but never thoroughly believed him until a British parliamentary report on adulteration set forth the following schedule; "Sugar, alum, lime flour or meat, rhubarb leaves, saltpetre, fuller's earth, starch, malt, cummin, chromate of lead, peat, moss, molasses, burdock leaves, lamp-black, gum, red dye, a black dye composed of vegetables, red licorice, scraps of newspapers, cinnamon stick, cabbage leaves and straw-brown paper.

This is convincing. Not only is it food and drink, but it is also house and land, paint shop and literature, with drugs, condiments and chemicals thrown in ad lib.—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Moody, in one of his "Talks," says: "I thiuk also that it is best for a reformed man to give up tobacco. I would let that go with whisky. It is clearly taught that these bodies are the temples for the Holy Ghost, and we ought to be careful to keep them pure. I do not think it is becoming for a son of the Most High to be using that filthy weed, and I have an idea that mauy a man that uses tobacco is led thereby into drinking. I think it belongs to the old nature, and I would let it go? How is it with men who have no work using tobaco? I don't see how they can afiord it; put it on that ground. I do not think it keeps the body in a healthy state. I think we ought to be very careful about the body, because it is so identified with the soul."

BOYS AND CIGARETTES.—The Philadelphia Times makes a vigorous assault on cigarettes, and tells the boys who indulge in them: "The cheap cigarette is a modern invention, and a peculiarly vicious one. Twenty years ago, when the cigarettes all came from Cuba, and were wrapped in rice paper, smoking them did no great harm. Moreover, being made of Henradez, or some braud of equally strong tobacco, only a boy of stout stomach could smoke more than two or three of them at a time. But to meet the boyish demands cigarettes are sold now-a-days both cheap and weak. They are made of mild, often bad tobacco, and for the most part they are wrapped in ordinary white paper. Rice paper wrappings necessarily increase the cost, and the boy who wishes to prove by the ordeal of smoke that he is not a boy but a man, much prefers the article that he can get the most of for his mouey. Moreover the boy does not know the difference apparent to the sight between the rice paper and the ordinary; any more than he knows that while rice paper burns away with out scarcely any smoke at all, common paper burns with a foul smoke that cuts like a saw into the chest and throat. So he spends his pocket money on cheap cigarettes, and makes everybody around him uncomfortable, while he smokes himself away into an untimely grave.

Tobacco blindness is becoming a common affliction. At present there are several persons under treatment for it at one London hospital. It first takes the form of color blindness, the sufferers who have smoked themselves into this condition being quite unable to distiuguish the color of a piece of red cloth held up before them. Sometimes, the victim loses his sight altogether. Although smoking is to a large extent the cause of the malady, heavy drinking is also partly responsible.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. Dr. W. T. Meloy of the United Presbyterian church, in this city, preached a discourse on the anarchists Sabbath forenoon.

—Rev. Adrian Foote, the oldest Baptist minister in the United States, died Monday night at Rochester, Ind., in his 100th year.

—A cablegram has been received at Washington City, announcing the death of Rev. Charles H. A. Dall, at Coonoor, India, in the 71st year of his age, after more than thirty years' missionary service. During the early part of his ministry he resided at St. Louis.

—The chapel of an Episcopal church in this city was destroyed a few days since by fire. It was a high church establishment, and the items of loss are a study in ritualistic expense. On the organ, $1,800; the marble altar, $1,500; vestments, $2,500; furniture $1,500; on building, $2,500.

—Rev. M. S. McCord of Providence, R. I., has gone to Europe for a vacation visit. His head quarters till Sept. 1st, will be Conor, County Autrim, Ireland.

—Dr. J. G. Carson, of Xenia, Ohio, returned from his trip to California on the 3rd of July, greatly benefited by his trip. Dr. Carson has nearly completed the seventeenth year of his pastorate in Xenia, and few have been more happy and successful.

—The Chicago Training School (Methodist Episcopal) for City and Home Missions has just been incorporated, with Mrs. Lucy Ryder Meyer in charge. The school has been in existence for a year, and is soon to have a fine building on the North Side. The school will open about October 1. Its purpose is to fit persons for mission work either at home or abroad. Its course of study is confined to the Bible and occupies a year. At present the school is open only to women.

—Three years ago the Congregationalists had no German church in any Western city of influence. To day they have churches in St. Louis, Chicago, and Springfield, Mo., and promising missions in Kansas City and Omaha, all of which are destined to become centres of influence and power.

—The colored Methodists have now the largest church in the city of Washington. It is on M street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, Northwest, in a fashionable neighborhood. It cost $116,000 (of which all but $40,000 have been raised) and seats 2,800 people.

—New York city has over thirty schools for the Chinese. Mr. Huie Kin, formerly under the care of Dr. Eells at Lane Seminary, is now permanently engaged as a missionary among his countrymen there. The prospect is that a church exclusively for Chinamen will be formed soon.

—The English Society of Friends have twenty four missionaries at work in India and Madagascar. In this latter country they have one hundred and thirty-three native teachers, and one hundred and four congregations, with over fourteen thousand children in their schools.

—The fourth conference for Bible study and upon methods of work in Home and Foreign Evangelization, and for the promotion of individual consecration to Christ, will be held in Northfield, Mass., for ten days from Wednesday, August 4th, to Friday, August 13th. The meetings of the conference will be held in the hall of Northfield Young Ladies' Seminary. Lodging and board for a limited number of guests will be provided in the Seminary building at the rate of $2 a day. A general invitation is extended to all ministers and Christian workers who are in sympathy with the object of the conference.

—The Arabic Bible, for which the United Presbyterian Board of Publication made the grant of $2,000, is completed and is selling in Alexandria, Egypt, at a good rate.

—A union has been effected of the Southern Lutheran Synods in one general body. In 1820 the Tennessee Synod was formed, and during this long period it has stood aloof from any union with the neighboring synods. The synods composing the United Synod appear in the roll according to date of organization, which is as follows: North Carolina Synod, organized 1803; Tennessee Synod, 1820; South Carolina Synod, 1824; Virginia Synod, 1829, Southwest Virginia Synod, 1842; Mississippi Synod, 1855; Georgia Synod, 1860; Holston Synod, 1861. The numerical strength of the general body is eight synods, representing six States, with 182 ministers, 354 congregations, and in round numbers 30,000 communicants. The union of the Lutheran church in the South was consummated on Friday, June 25th which was the three hundred and fifty-sixth anniversary of the presentation of the Augsburg Confession to the Emperor Charles V. and the assembled representatives of his empire.

—The late Mrs. Elizabeth Kniser, of Memphis, Tenn., has left a bequest of $40,000 to the Biblical department of Vanderbilt University; and the Rev. Moses W. Payne, an estimable local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, in Missouri, has given to the Paine Institute the sum of $28,000.

—The Philadelphia Record thinks Yale College must have lost the idea which its president in 1754 had, that "Colleges are societies of ministers for training up persons for the work of the ministry," since of its class of 140, 57 intend to become lawyers, 27 go into business, 11 study medicine, 19 will teach, 5 will become engineers and only 6 have the ministry in view.

—Buddhism in Japan has been virtually disestablished since 1874. While there were 393,087 Buddhist temples in 1714, there are now but 57,824. Few new temples are built and many are going to ruin. One of the most distinguished temples in the country is now in such need of repairs that a call has been made to raise a fund of $17,000 in shares of 300 yen each for this purpose.

—We sometimes see the expression "Mohulla work," in articles on missions in India. Mohulla means a ward in a city, and in this work the missionaries go into an open square in the city, and preach the Gospel to all who will hear. The women missionaries go at an hour when the most of the men will be away at their work, and often have a large audience.

—The mission work of the Presbyterians of Canada, in Formosa, interrupted so completely by the Franco-Chinese war, has been resumed, and is being carried on with greater energy and devotion than ever. It is also reported that the injuries inflicted and the destruction caused by the French occupation has been compensated for by the Chinese government, and better churches had replaced those destroyed during the war.

—China has been considered the most hopeless of fields by the critics of missions. But the work is now beyond the reach of criticism, notwithstanding the grievous disadvantage from the brutal treatment of the Chinese in Christian lands. Miss Gordon Cummiug, the intelligent and entertaining traveler, says that Christianity is fast making its way in China, and of this the Spectator says: "Well it may, for there is no state of society of which we have ever read so like that of the later Roman Empire, as that which prevails in China to-day. What will be the result of the introductiou of an explosive and democratic force like Christianity, into an ancient but decadent civilization such as China is today, no one can tell. It can hardly fail to be startling."

—Bishop Taylor, who has already begun two chains of missions across Africa, hopes to start two more during the present year. He enters into a unique agreement with chief and people, by which, as his part, he engages to select and import good preachers and teachers from America, to pay their passage to their destination, and to pay for tools and machinery required in founding an industrial school. But, assuming that the people are not beggars, he exacts from the chief and people these conditions: 1. To procure a good tract of about one thousand acres of land for a school farm. 2. To clear and plant a few acres of said farm immediately, to provide early subsistence for the school workers. 3. To build houses for the residence of preachers and teachers of the institution. 4. To build a good house or shed for the school. 5. To do all those things for the benefit of the great chief and his people, without any pay from me. 6. To pay a small monthly fee for the tuition of day scholars. 7. That boys and girls coming for a full course be allowed to remain in school at least five years, and that all the boys and girls who cheerfully do the work assigned them shall be fed from the products of the school farm and their own industry, and pay no money for their tuition.—Boston Journal.

—In the remarkable statistical table of foreign missionary operations by American churches for 1884–85, published in the Missionary Review, Princeton, N. J., it appears that the Methodist local preachers fell off 2,002 from the previous year. The gain in ministers in all denominations was 2,201; in communicants, 511,095; making the whole number 11,829,382 in fifty orthodox churches. One half the reported gain is from corrected lists. The foreign missionary income was $3,892,814, a gain of $61,882 over the previous report. The cost of administration was 6.48 per cent, or $252,268, an actual increase of $9,874, but a proportionate decrease. The ordained missionaries from this country number, 1,084; lay workers, 130; women, 1,251; native ordained workers, 1,140; others, 11,124; native communicants, 284,438; increase, 15,164, which is 7,477 less than the previously reported increase. The Presbyterians pay their officers the largest salaries, $5,000; the Reformed Episcopal pays the missionaries best, $2,666. The Moravians give the most per member, $4.47, the Reformed Presbyterians next, $1.65. The Baptists have the most native communicants, 117,491, a year's gain of 5,369.

—Mrs. Mary R. Davenport, M. D., writes from Donda, Africa,, where she and her husband are stationed with Bishop Taylor's self-supporting African Mission, and represents the missionaries as all in good health. She, being the ouly lady connected with that station, is an object of much interest. The music with the organ at their school was so much an object of admiration to all the natives that they were compelled to snspend its use for a time to avoid the inconvenience of the crowd. She represents the mission as highly prosperous.

—The new kiug of Uganda, Central Africa, has inaugurated a reign of terror, taking life and property according to his whim. The missionaries have discovered plots against their lives, and the king has isolated them, commanding all natives to keep away from their premises. The native Christians, who have become a large band, are in constant fear of death, and yet there are inquirers who are anxious to be baptized, and willing to bear persecution. Mr. Mackay wrote, November 16th, that the missionaries had been seriously considering how they might escape from Uganda, but could hardly see any possibility of getting away undiscovered. The latest date of the letters printed in the Intelligencer is December 20th. All was then uncertainty.

AN APPEAL.

To the Friends of Christian Edueation and Missionary work:

DEAR READER:—We come to you asking your very prayerful attention to the appeal of the Young Peoples' Missionary Association, organized and duly incorporated under the laws of the Territory of Dakota, in Aug., 1885, and having for its object "General Missionary and Educational work," which includes the founding of a missionary college or school of learning where persons may be fitted for missionary workers in home, frontier or foreign fields, either as teachers or ministers of the Gospel. The society is organized as undenominational, but strictly evangelical.

It is the desire of the association to begin the building of this school or college as soon as funds for the same can be secured or avouched for, and with full faith in God, and with perfect confidence in the desire "to do good" in his people, the Board of Trustees begin the solicitation of funds by asking YOU to do what you can to assist in founding this institution of Christian learning. Will you please consider this as a personal plea and do what you can for us?

The Board ask you to do what you can either by way of money to be paid in at once, or avouched for at some specified time, or in material to furnish the school or printing to be done as needed, as circulars, etc., and if any one desires to donate a small job press to use for the purpose of printing the bills, circulars, etc., it will be thankfully received. Will you not aid in this glorious cause? It is the work of our Master, and you ought to have a share in it. Will you?

The articles of incorporation make it obligatory to locate the school in Twin Brooks Township, County of Grant, Dakota Territory, and the Board of Trustees anticipate obtaining lots on which to build at once.

Any question arising in your mind concerning the association or its work, will be cheerfully replied to if written to the corresponding secretary. (If convenient, a stamp for reply may be enclosed, as the correspondence "runs up" on the meagre funds of the treasury.)

Remit all money to the Treasurer who will receipt for the Board; all other matter should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Now, dear friend, give this consideration worthy of the cause, and if you can you will aid us in the Lord's work.

Mrs. Wm. Gunn, Pres. Wm. H. Gunn, Treas.
Alva C. Sarff, Vice-Pres. Mrs. Geo. A. Gunn.
Geo. A. Gunn, Rec. Sec'y. Albert E. Gunn.
Rev. C. E. Walker, Cor. Sec'y.

Board of Trustees of Young People's Missionary Association.

Twin Brooks, Dak., July 10, 1886.

LODGE NOTES.

It is rumored that Hon. E. B. Sherman, says the Legal News, during the past week reached the thirtieth round in the Masonic ladder. Mr. Sherman is an office holder of Chicago, whom it is well enough to watch. He seems to be climbing up some other way than the right.

After four hours' discussion, at a meeting called on the Sabbath for the purpose, a resolution was adopted by the Cigar Makers' Progressive Union opposing union with the Knights of Labor.

Six men, members of the Executive Board of the local lodge of the Knights of Labor, have been arrested at Wyandotte, Kan., charged with wrecking a train on the morning of April 26 and causing the death of two persons. The affair has caused great excitement among the knights at Kansas City, and additional arrests are feared.

Robert Newman, the treasurer of the Cigar Makers' union No. 14, of the International, was arrested the other day in Chicago charged with misappropriating $2000.50 of the funds of the union. Newman confessed and said he had lost the money at the Washington park races and in the pool rooms. Union No. 14 had a similar experience with its treasurer about five years ago. The embezzler at that time went to Joliet for one year.

It has been customary in many instances in Cincinnati of late for workmen to stand in front of some shop they wanted to boycott and distribute boycotting circulars. Seven men who boycotted Chas. Boune, a baker, in this way were tried before 'Squire Schwab on the charge of "unlawfully and fraudulently sending out printed circulars tending to degrade Charles Boune, intending unlawfully, knowingly and fraudulently to extort and gain from affiant money against the will of the affiant." 'Squire Schwab today held them all in $2,000 each to answer before the grand jury to the charge of blackmail.

The Secretary of the Good Templar Grand Lodge of California, George B. Katzenstein, receives a salary of $3,000, with $300 for office rent a year, besides all other office expenses, and for traveling and incidentals. He is, moreover, charged with infidelity. But he makes the order a power as a secret society; for the temperance cause it is an injury.

S. A. Kean & Co.
Bankers.
(Successors to Preston, Kean & Co.)
100 Washington St., CHICAGO.
ACCOUNTS of Bankers, Merchants and others solicited; also COLLECTIONS. Foreign Exchange, Land Warrants. U. S., State, Municipal & leading R.R. BONDS
Send for Lists of Investment Securities.
Branch Office, Home Insurance Building.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	74⅜@		75½
No. 3	64 @		69
Winter No 2			76
Corn—No. 2	39¼@		40¼
Oats—No. 2			27¼
Rye—No. 2			53
Bran per ton		9	75
Flour	2 00	@ 5	00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@10	00
Mess pork per bbl	8 80	9	50
Butter, medium to best	08 @		15
Cheese	03 @		08
Beans	50 @	1	35
Eggs			12
Seeds—Timothy	1 75 @	2	00
Flax	1 06 @	1	10
Broom corn	04 @		09½
Potatoes	40 @		70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½@		14
Lumber—Common	11 00 @	18	00
Wool	12 @		28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 60 @	5	40
Common to good	2 25 @	4	59
Hogs	3 00 @	5	10
Sheep	2 00 @	4	50

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20 @	5	50
Wheat—Winter	81 @		87
Spring			85¼
Corn	41 @		47
Oats	36 @		48
Mess Pork	10 00 @	11	75
Eggs			14½
Butter	10		17
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 50 @	4	60
Hogs	4 35 @	4	75
Sheep	1 50 @	3	00

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.
BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;
OR
Memory Culture.
By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

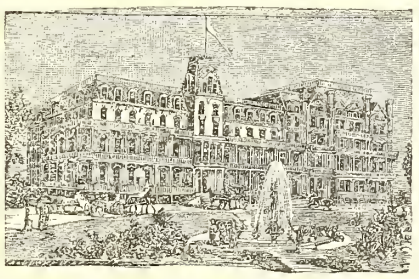
The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject. —INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING."
THE
Man Traps of the City,
BY THOS. E. GREEN.



Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like incited lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills

The Medical and Surgical SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.
Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W Clark,
The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS
FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY, to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT,
20 Cents each.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life,
AND
A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Ill.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Associat'n
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan, "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 32 Degrees. 204 pages.....

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FARM NOTES.

The calf born in the fall, fairly well wintered and given the vigorous growth that grass food gives the following summer, makes a better cow than the spring-raised one, and she is two years old—the right time for the birth of her first calf.

The disadvantages of the ordinary system of setting milk in shallow pans for raising cream are that a longer period elapses before the skimming is completed, too much space is required, and in summer the milk becomes sour before the whole of the cream is raised.

For a kicking cow, says a correspondent, take a small rope, make a slip-noose in one end and draw tight around the cow, just in front of the udder. I had a large cow that kicked badly. I applied the rope as above and sat down and milked without further trouble. It was only applied three times and she gave me no trouble afterward.

A contemporary says: Considering the fact that a large part of even the best milk is water, and that drank by the cow, the necessity for giving cows in milk only the best water will be fully understood. So far from the cow absorbing any offensive substance so as to leave the milk pure, the very reverse is the case. The female giving milk is usually healthy, for the reason that whatever impurities exist in the system are carried off in this direction. As soon as a cow is in any way out of condition, her milk is unfit to be used.

A greedy hen, belonging to Mrs. Hummer, of Barnesville, Ohio, ate so much that her crop became clogged, and she was in danger of dying. Mrs. Hummer was equal to the emergency. She clipped the feathers off the crop, then opened it with a sharp knife, removed the contents, deftly sewed it up again, and the hen is now the mother of a fine brood of chicks.

A new law in New Jersey is aimed at the deceptive nursery agent. It provides that "any person selling fruit trees or fruit-briars, who shall misrepresent the name or nature of said fruit trees or fruit-briars shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding three months, or both, at the discretion of the court."

It is admitted says the Weekly Press, that important changes in the diet of cattle should be made gradually; experience proves that the fresh bite of new grass does not destroy the cow's appetite for hay, and it proves, too, that cattle fed night and morning and turned out a few hours at a time keep in better condition than if they were suddenly put upon an exclusive diet of young herbage, which has small nutritive value compared with what it will acquire after a few weeks' growth, and which is also loosening and debilitating. The critical change "from hay to grass" is made without any loss when it comes gradually, the cows having their hay and grain twice a day—in diminished quantity for a time—then at morning only for a week longer, until the feed is dispensed with altogether.

HUMANITY TO WORK ANIMALS.

A farmer living near Vicksburg, Miss., noticed that most of the ox teams that hauled cotton from the country to Vicksburg were roughly treated. The long whips of the drivers were often severely applied to poorly fed animals. The drivers seemed to take a savage delight in their skill in cracking and displaying their whips, and in the severity with which they could apply them to their persecuted teams.

An old negro had an excellent team, and he usually hauled two bales at a load more than the other teams. His oxen were fat and always looked comfortable and contented. On being asked why his oxen looked so much better than the others, and at the same time hauled larger loads, the negro replied that he had never whipped nor scolded his oxen, always watered and fed them well, never let them suffer for want of anything—that he loved his oxen, and they loved him; and that's all the reason he knew why his oxen looked so well satisfied, were so fat, and hauled larger loads than the other oxen. The greatest sin of even Christian nations is their cruelty to their domestic animals, and yet cruelty is an element that leads to poverty, and humanity leads to thrift, as proved by the example of the negro and his fine ox team.—New Orleans Picayune.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Terms cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1 must be sent with order as guaranty that the books will be taken.

[Unless otherwise designated these works are bound in paper.]

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated, a complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of each degree, by Pres. J. Blanchard of Wheaton College; 640 pages, 75c, cloth $1. First three degrees, 376 pages, 40c, cloth 75c.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the council and commandery, 341 pages, 50c, cloth $1.

Mah-Hah-Bone, comprises the Hand-Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance, bound in one volume; 589 pp. cloth $1.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge; 420 pages cloth, 75c.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. An illustrated ritual of the five degrees of female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; 30c.

Light on Freemasonry, by Elder David Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a member of the craft." Cloth, $1.50. First part, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, paper, 75c.

Freemasonry Exposed, by Capt. Wm. Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished; 25 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance, illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees; 6c.

Grand Lodge Masonry, its relation to civil government and the Christian religion, by Pres. J. Blanchard; 5 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois; 15c.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trials; also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush; 10c.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry; 338 pages, 40c, cloth 60c.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self Convicted, by E. Ronayne; 207 pages, 40c.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry; 25c.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned, by Rev. J. W. Bain; 20c.

Masonry a Work of Darkness. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees; 15c.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil, by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook; 15c.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, M. E. Presiding Elder, a seceding Master Mason; 10c.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate? By Rev. A. L. Post; 5c.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion; 5c.

Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian Should not be a Freemason, by Rev. Robert Armstrong; 5c.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry; 15c.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the lodge encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees; 50c, cloth $1.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own Utterances; its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word, by Rev. J. H. Brockman; 25c, cloth 50 cents.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver; 10 cents.

OTHER SECRET SOCIETY RITUALS.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. The two bound together; 10c.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor; 25c.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated; 15c.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin; 25c.

Temple of Honor Illustrated; 25c.

Good Templarism Illustrated; 25c.

Five Rituals bound together—Odd-fellowship, (old work), Knights of Pythias, Good Templars, the Grange and Grand Army of the Republic; cloth, $1.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated—Temple of Honor, Adoptive Masonry, United Sons of Industry and Secret Societies Illustrated; $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"Between Two Opinions, or the Question of the Hour," by Miss E. E. Flagg, a reform story founded on facts, told with wonderful strength and interest, showing the power of the secret labor and temperance societies, and the prohibition movement. Cloth, $1.00.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of secretism in the various relations of every-day life. Cloth $1.50.

Holden with Cords; or, the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg; 50 cents, cloth $1.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry, by Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin; 35 cents, cloth 75 cents.

The Broken Seal; or, Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan, by S. D. Greene; 40c, cloth 75c.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, by Gen. J. W. Phelps; 50c.

John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties; 35c, cloth $1.

General Washington opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Gov. Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies." 10c.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. 25 cents.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher; 15c, cloth 35c.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Captain Wm. Morgan; 25c.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times, by Eld. David Bernard; 10c.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. 5c.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies; 10c.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy, address of Pres. J. Blanchard before the Pittsburg Convention; price 5c.

A Masonic Conspiracy, by Mrs. Louisa Walters; 20c.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. 5c.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason; 25c.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies; a powerful address; 10c.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury; 10c.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the constitution and laws, by Francis Semple; 15c.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. J. D. Brownlee; 5c.

History of the National Christian Association; 25c.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies (bound together); cloth, $1.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform!

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movemeut as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 8th to 14th Masonic degree. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

IN BRIEF.

It is said there is no part of the moon's visible surface half a mile square that is not accurately mapped, while the earth contains immense tracts which have never yet been surveyed.

Japan, according to the new census, has a population of 38,500,000, or about the same as that of the United States in 1870. In area Japan is about three times the size of Pennsylvania.

The very important discovery has been made that the Sankauron and Kassai rivers in Central Africa are navigable, thus opening direct access to the eastern portion of the Congo Free state.

The German government has ordered 75,000 of a new kind of shell, which when charged with rolls of gun-cotton is so destructive that no defensive works, however solid, can resist the projectile.

A clergyman met a man declaiming against foreign missions. "Why doesn't the church look after the heathen at home?" "We do," said the clergyman, quietly, and gave the man a tract.

The statement is made that all the varied machinery of Great Britain, now operated by steam power, is capable of performing more work, and, hence, producing more products, than could be produced by the labor of 400,000,000 able-bodied men—a greater number than all the able-bodied men on earth.

Being out of shot, a western farmer loaded his gun with a box of pills, and when a couple of burglars attempted to raid his premises, discharged the contents of his musket with such effect that one robber was killed and the other seriously wounded.

Some boys brought a loaded gun into the house of Mr. Nelson, of Burlingame, Kan., and laid it on the table. The baby, two and a half years old, became curious, and in dragging the gun over the table the hammer caught, and the charge blew the child's head off.

A load of hay was being driven into the big barn of Schuyler Parish, of Naples, N. Y., the other day, when an iron bolt of the rack pressed so hard on a wheel that the tire struck fire and the hay was ignited. The driver had the presence of mind to back the load out of the barn and jump down. Then the frightened team ran through the village with the blazing load, setting fire to a bridge on the way. When they were stopped all the wagon had been burned but the front wheels.

Last fall a small boy at White Plains, N. Y., had his ears filled with oats by some boys with whom he was skylarking in a barn. He scratched and cleaned out, as he thought, all of the horse feed, and went home. About six weeks ago he was taken with a severe pain in the ear. His head swelled up and he was in great agony. All remedies failed, and his mother took him to a New York doctor, who removed two kernels of oats that had sprouted and taken root in his ear. The boy is now entirely well.

One of the most curiously original collections of books in any library is said to be a botanical collection at Warsenstein, in Germany. At first sight the volumes appear like rough blocks of wood, but on closer examination it is found that each is a complete history of the particular tree it represents. At the back of the book the bark had been removed from a space large enough to admit the scientific and the common name of the tree as a title. One side is formed from the split wood of the tree, showing its grain and natural fracture; the other shows the wood when worked smooth and varnished. One end shows the grain as left by the saw; and the other the finely polished wood. On opening the book one finds the fruit, seeds, leaves, and other products of the tree, the moss which usually grows upon its trunk, and the insects which feed upon the various parts of the tree. To all this is added a well-printed description of the habits, usual location, and manner of growth of the tree.—London News.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.

MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES
1	Historical Sketch o. the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men,	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	6
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen pege pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandeigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malte. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MAH-HAH-BONE,

COMPRISING IN ONE VOLUME,

HAND BOOK

OF

Freemasonry,

Which gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the oaths, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained:

The Master's Carpet

Which explains the true source and meaning every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, by showing the principles on which the order is founded: and

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

Which illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, and gives a brief explanation of each, making a most valuable compilation of information concerning Masonry. Bound in fine cloth covers. 589 pages. Price $1 00. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A cherming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

It is believed that President Cleveland will veto six of the most important measures now pending in Congress if they ever reach him—the River and Harbor, the Sundry Civil, and the Deficiency Appropriation bills, the Mexican Pension bill, the Oleomargarine bill and the Morrison resolution to reduce the surplus.

Joseph S. Miller, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in his report of the operations of the bureau for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1886 shows that the total collections for the year were $116,902,845. The total collections for the previous fiscal year were $112,421,121, an increase of $4,481,724.

COUNTRY.

The three Milwaukee anarchists, Hirth, Palm and Simon, were sentenced Monday to three months each in the House of Correction.

The Pittsburg Humane Society proposes to prosecute certain organizations which insure the lives of small children from two cents per week upward. The increased mortality among the little ones leads to the belief that parents become careless as to the health of their children after the insurance has been effected.

The steamer Waesland, which arrived at New York Thursday, reports that on the 13th she struck and killed a sleeping whale, eighty feet long. It was found necessary to stop the vessel to disengage the carcass.

The Pennsylvania Tube Works Company, employing several hundred men, have voluntarily advanced the wages of all their workmen 10 per cent.

A corps of Illinois Central Railway engineers began work Monday at Freeport, Ill., running a line in a northerly direction. It is presumed the Central intends to build a road to St. Paul, Minn., via Monroe and Madison, Wis., under a charter obtained eight years ago for the "Freeport, Madison & Lake Superior Railroad."

Lizzie Bohlander, 16 years of age, teacher of a kindergarten school at Pekin, Ill., has mysteriously disappeared. She left home Tuesday morning and has not been seen since.

When the Chicago limited express reached Pittsburg Friday Peter Shell was found astride of the truck of a Pullman sleeper, in which position he had ridden from Fort Wayne, 320 miles. He claimed to be on his way to Washington to see his mother, who is dangerously ill, and the passengers made up a purse for him.

Stephen Brodie, a New York bootblack 23 years old, Friday afternoon jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge at the center span, into the East River, a distance of 120 feet. He was fished out and taken to the station house apparently uninjured.

Near Columbia, Tenn., Tuesday evening, a special engine ran into a Louisville and Nashville accommodation train, causing the death of seven persons.

During a storm Monday the house of Rasmus Dilletson, near Minden, Neb., was struck by lightning, Dilletson, his son and his daughter being killed, and a child seriously injured.

Latest returns confirm previous estimates of the wheat crop of California this year, that it will be the largest ever harvested. The returns furnished by the County Assessors show the total yield to be a fraction over 70,000,000 bushels, which will leave for California alone close on 60,000,000 bushels for export.

Recently, near Morgan City, La., Lorenzo Randall (colored) was killed by a white man named Mills. A posse went to arrest the murderer, but the latter, aided by his father-in law, opened fire on the sheriff's men, killing one and wounding two others. Another posse was also warmly received, one of them being shot through the heart. The Mills faction, reenforced by half breed Indians, have taken to the swamps, and a prolonged warfare is expected.

A semi-annual review of the industrial growth of the South, shows that during the first six months of 1886 the value of the manufacturing and mining enterprises of the South has been increased about $63,618,000.

Seven hundred weavers employed by Bromley & Son, Philadelphia, quit work because the firm refused to discharge non-union weavers. Twelve hundred men and women will thereby be thrown out of work.

Heavy wind and rain storms visited Lakin and Nickerson, Kans., Sunday night, wrecking twenty houses at the former place and ten at the latter, and injuring a number of persons. The rain, however, proved beneficial to crops, and will save the corn.

FOREIGN.

In the elections throughout England the popular vote results in a Unionist majority of 272,682.

A force of royal engineers are en route to British Columbia to determine and report as to the best manner of fortifying the Pacific coast.

A Canadian mail coach was robbed by six masked men last Saturday, twenty-five miles south of Humboldt Station, N. W. T., the highwaymen abstracting $20,000 from the mail bags, and, it is alleged, killing the driver.

Fishermen on the Newfoundland and Labrador coasts are starving, and the Dominion Government is asked to contribute some relief. It is stated that 150 persons have perished of hunger, and that 2,500 are at present suffering from lack of food.

Mexican troops and Yaqui Indians fought a battle near Medano, Thursday, the Mexicans losing ten men killed and twenty wounded. Forty of the savages were slain and twenty taken prisoners, who were immediately shot.

Orders for "Masonic Outrages" have been received from the following:

James C Allix, Chas T Collins, Wm H Robbins, Jas Rignold, W H Parker, Mrs Rufus Parker, Jno Hines, D R Mitchell, J Ramsey, Mrs Haire, H H Cannady, S A Pratt, Mrs E A Rowley, C M Strickler, W M Ames, J C Young, F R Griffin, M Ingalsby, Jr, Chas W Morris, L T Fuller, W Lockhart, P Findlay, A C Snyder, W H Blakeslee, J Chadwick, Rev. F H Gates, H Plummer Sr, M L Howe. Prof W L McGowan, Rev E J Clemens, P Howe, H. Siemiller, J Fait, J Ring, N Miner, W Caldwell, Wm Grossman, Mrs. B F Searles, T Gibb, D J Santimier, S Bingham, A C Bundy, Rev Rice, J R Alcock, A Lagerquist, C H Evans, Wm McBride, A S Boyd, T S Walter, Mrs A I Salisbury, John Harvey, J A Van Epps, J Barnes, Sr, R W Chapman, R F Hurd, J Prothero, J Decker, James Harvey, Rev I P Smith, Dr H S B Smith, J H Hunting, E Smith, W Fenton, D Hyde, Henry Ramsey, J Stratton, J Cassidy, N D Rose, D Simon, Mrs E Kay, C Smith, H G Judson, J Weaver, W J Feemster, C D Hoyt, Sr, R McNair, W Vine, J E Mathews, Amanda Banks, J M Adair, J P Osborn, C Winter, John Dorcas, Rev E Cronemivett, N Callender, R Cole, A Andre, R Loggan, C S D Cowles, T Townshend, Thos Gilmore, T Stewart, W Stewart, H S Limbocker, K A Orvis, J C Card, S Simpson, R J Williams, W W Leighton, J W Raynor, Mrs L M Hoyt, E Bascom, D Marshall, D G Foster, J Smith, I Jackson, H D Jones, Robt Jones, W H Reed, A Hamilton, W T Bonstell, H Johnson, H Preston, Mrs E Tuttle, E P Townsley, B Williams, H N Waldo, R McClelland, B Hester, W P King, Mrs S B Allen, S Avery, W Sperry, H Wykhuysen, S C Taylor, G T Denman, Rev Jno Allison, T E Cunningham, J Ralston, A C Moffatt, Mrs R Schnellbacker, R Miller, Mrs L Hinsdale, W M Beden, J K Weber, J S Shock, Geo Brokaw, A Pifer, F A Oldis, J M Clark, Rev C E Walker, Mary A Waterman, J E Pierce, J B Miller, R Dow, L D Brown, E Branch, J Brandt, W R Morley, H G. Witham, J Ramsey, A Burgess, F Morath, G W Pritts, Dr J N Norris, J M Wylie, S A & J C Noe, J J Kyes, A Dwight, A P Lanterman, D P Cawkins, Rev T J Allen, R B Gardner, I Crane, D H Harrington, Rev I Hyatt, R Park, Rev W O Dinins, H Cole, Rev C E Walker, A C Hand, J Jorder, J Ward, Rev F L Grundtvig, J W Baldridge, sr, T Kingsnarth, A Spencer, A C Pratt.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

THE SAFEST FOOD IN SUMMER

For Young or Delicate Children.
A Sure Preventive of

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

It has been the positive means of saving many lives where no other food would be retained. Its basis is SUGAR of MILK, the most important element of mothers' milk.

It contains no unchanged starch and no Cane Sugar, and therefore does not cause sour stomach, irritation, or irregular bowels.

It is the Most Nourishing, the Most Palatable, the Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

Sold by Druggists—25 cts., 50 cts., $1.00. Send for pamphlet giving important medical opinions on the nutrition of Infants and Invalids.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,
of the Chicago Press.

THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.
ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
143 LaSalle St.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting. German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.
Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President,
BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline
BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. R. Riggs) of
Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
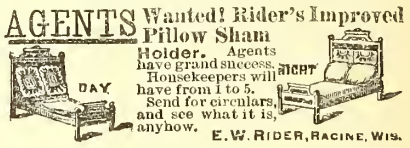
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.



CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Pat'd Dec 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc. Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufacturers of stamped Rug Patterns and dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo O

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. M'f'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING
ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.
FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 46. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1886. WHOLE No. 849.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Theological Discussions.. 8
An Object Lesson 8
Rev. C. M. Morton and the Orangemen..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
First Lessons in Money.. 1
The Fathers and the Boys. 2
Climbing up Some other Way. 2
The Boys Would Hoot You 2
Chinatown and its Problems..... 4
SELECTIONS:
A Word to the Old Soldiers..... 2
An Open Letter to the W. C. T. U..... 3
The Bulwark of our Nation..... 3
Press Comment 4
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
THE SECRET EMPIRE:
The Lehr and Wehr Verein..... 9
REFORM NEWS:
Wisconsin Friends, Attention; Make the Denial Good or Retract; Wisconsin Work Begun. 5
CORRESPONDENCE.
The G. A. and the Church Debts; A Disinterested Witness; Mr. Kilgore's Sermon; Pith and Point. 6
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE 11
SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES... 12
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
LODGE NOTES..... 13
MARKETS 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16

In an address before the Prohibitionists of Oak Park, near this city, Rev. Charles H. Mead, of New York, gave expression to the following sentiment, which will be very gratifying to the Cynosure Prohibitionists who put the lodge along with liquor in their creed: "I bless God for these cranks. Paul, Luther, Wesley, and all the great reformers were cranks,—if not called by that identical name. But don't despise a man because he's away ahead where the clock is striking twelve, and your timepiece only says seven. What you ought to do is to cast aside your old prejudices and hurry along and catch up with these go-ahead fellows who are leading the world."

The president of the China Branch of the Evangelical Alliance with his secretaries have addressed an appeal to President Cleveland from Peking, in behalf of the maltreated Chinese residents in this country, urging the sacred character of the treaty obligations between the two countries, the universal principles of humanity, hospitality and justice, and the danger of retaliation which must be more disastrous to the white race than the Chinese, as reasons why the violent and barbarous treatment of the Chinese should be brought to an end, and the whole influence of the Government be used with Congress and the people to secure just and equal treatment for this people. The appeal is just and timely. The Chinese are among the most unoffending of the foreign races. They are heathen and have the vices of heathen, notably lying and adultery, but they are made worse heathen when they cross the path of a Sand Lot Irishman. Christianized they become intelligent, respectful, decorous—among the best of our foreign population. Who can say what they might not now have become in America, had such influences been surrounding them from the first?

On his way to California Gen. Logan stopped at Salt Lake and was welcomed by nearly the entire Gentile population, who are anxious that prominent men in politics should see Mormonism with their own eyes. To see is to be convinced. An assembly of several thousand was soon gathered and addresses made by ex-Governor Eli B. Murray, Gen. Logan and Governor West. The former, whose few years' experience at the head of the territorial government have rendered him an uncompromising enemy of the Mormon hierarchy, in his opening speech gave the keynote, and was followed with an earnest endorsement by the other speakers. Governor West has been claimed by the Mormons as friendly to their interests, but they are learning to mistrust the self-deception. He has taken up a work well begun by his predecessor, and so "half done," but there is much yet to be accomplished before the thraldom of this iniquity can be broken.

In the Anarchist trial last week, the evidence on the part of the prosecution was not concluded till Saturday afternoon, in time to be followed by the opening address of the defense. The testimony was in some respects more striking than any that had preceded. Surgeons told with sickening detail of the wounds made by the bombs; chemists gave the result of their experiments with the material of which that death-dealing weapon was composed, proving beyond question that it was of Lingg's manufacture; reporters were brought in to repeat the murderous language used by the indicted men; and two witnesses who were at the Haymarket meeting on that fatal night testified to the part taken by Spies, Schwab, and Schnaubelt—the first lighting the bomb and the latter throwing it. The red flags and incendiary banners captured in the Arbeiter Zeitung office were last displayed, and the prosecution rested, having proved that a conspiracy had for some time existed in Chicago, led by the men on trial, which had for its ultimate end the massacre of the police, the sacking of private buildings, the overthrow of the city government, and the substitution of their devilish schemes of misrule, which they expected to spread throughout the country. The address of the defense indicates that there will be no denial of most of this damaging evidence, but they will insist on the narrow line of exculpation several times indicated, that only he who threw the bomb is guilty; and that man is not on trial. The decisions of Judge Gary have several times, however, covered this point, and the laws of the State punish an accomplice as well as the murderer with death.

We supposed Denver was civilized. Perhaps it is the revival of sin that often attends a genuine and powerful revival of religion. Dr. Munhall's labors have been blessed with 800 converts, but the other day 15,000 people came out to a public hanging. Two negroes murdered a car-driver last May. Denver cars are run by one horse and one man. One night at the south end of the Broadway line across the creek, where extends a broad flat unoccupied by buildings, two colored men attempted to rob the cash box and murdered the driver. One of them got drunk and told of the crime. The arrest and trial followed quickly, spurred on by the indignation of the people. The sentence was: for one, imprisonment; for the other, the gallows. The sheriff built a gibbet near the place of the murder, and great crowds hung about the spot all day, bringing their luncheon as to a ghastly picnic. The whole affair was horrible. So at Gallatin, Missouri, where two murderers were hung the other day near the railway station, the gallows being set up in a hollow, so that a greater body of spectators might be accommodated. They gathered the day before, men, women and children, camping on the ground, drinking and carousing like savages, anticipating the fearful sight of the execution. This is morally about as bad as murder, and public officers who are responsible for such scenes should be punished.

Rev. H. R. Smith was president of the Ohio convention opposed to secret societies, met last December at Columbus. He is also the author of the Smith Sunday law. The Ohio State Prohibitory convention met last week—one of the largest ever held in the State—and after canvassing the State no abler or safer man could be found for the responsible position of candidate for Secretary of State. Like the nomination in Illinois for State Treasurer, Hon. Henry W. Austin, these candidates should have the vote of every Christian and reformer.

FIRST LESSONS IN MONEY.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

In the able, and in many respects, excellent work by Rev. B. T. Roberts on "First Lessons in Money," there is a chapter on the amount of money that our country needs and which it is implied it ought to provide.

The author in this, as elsewhere in the entire work, seems to forget that the laws of trade are as real, and more inexorable than the acts of the legislature, and that these have mainly to do with the quantity of money in any country.

A people who are industrious and frugal, blest with fertile soil and genial climate, and who produce in excess what the world needs to buy, will inevitably increase, not only in wealth, but in the money which represents it. It will flow in upon such a people just as surely as the inflowing tides. When these conditions are reversed by war, pestilence, famine, or any other cause that checks production, the stream of money flows outward. These conditions are not all of them under legislative control. No Congress can insure good crops, or create a foreign demand for our products when the conditions of exportation are against us. It is with nations as with individuals, they increase in wealth and available means when they sell more than they consume, and not otherwise. Franklin said that "the wealth of the Indies did not make Spain rich, because her imports were more than her exports." Her people became luxurious, idle and warlike, and Spain grew poor, and has remained so. Another cause which effects the quantity of money is immigration. Nearly all immigrants bring more or less money, usually the coin of the country from which they come. This circulates for a time, and sooner or later flows back.

Again the prosperity of any people is indicated, not by the amount of money in the country, but by the amount in actual circulation. It takes more money to transact business done in Chicago than in a suburban town, and more in times of business activity than at others. Other things being equal, the amount of money in circulation will depend on the demand. This demand is indicated by the rate of interest, which is always higher in times of business activity and lower when business is depressed. Now it has rarely happened in the history of the world, and never in our own history, that the rate of interest was so low. When men invest their capital in government three per cent bonds, there is surely a small demand for money in the ordinary channels of business. The reason for the falling off in demand is the business depression that has grown out of want of confidence on the part of capitalists. So long as a protective tariff builds up exclusive interests, and taxes the many for the benefit of the few, the class of employes will grow relatively larger, and the division of interests between labor and capital continually increase. So long, too, as our laboring people can be "ordered out," and held bound to resist, by force and intimidation, the employment of any in their place, there can be but little inducement for the investment of capital, and continued idleness and want in the midst of abundance must result. So, too, while the resources of the laboring poor are so largely wasted on intoxicants and narcotics (whisky, beer and tobacco), there can be very little accumulation and no abatement of poverty and crime.

The remedy is not in the increase of the circulating medium. There is now more money than can be put in circulation. A greater amount, even if it could be secured without increased taxation, would not remedy the evil. What we need is first, a large diminuation in the amount of taxation by tariff reduction. Second, by a general suppression of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks. Third, the suppression of all combinations and associations that require oath-bound secrecy and obedience to unknown leaders. This is a social quite as much as a political change, and while many of the suggestions of Mr. Roberts are timely and important, others seem to me impracticable and tending to divert the public mind from questions of more pressing importance.

THE FATHERS AND THE BOYS.

BY REV. W. W. AMES.

During the Sunday-school session of the St. Croix Valley Baptist Association, at Osceola, Wis., Rev. E. B. Edmunds, for many years Sunday-school missionary for the State, made the following statement: "The children of the present are the people of the future. If the boys are found in our Sunday-schools, they will be found by and by in our churches, and we can't hold the boys in Sunday-school unless the fathers stay there. It is a burning disgrace to the men of any community, that any church should come to be known as a 'woman's church.' The fathers of this generation, by withholding their interest, will send their boys to the devil."

Surely this is a startling deliverance, and should stir the fathers to solemn reflections. But what does the brother mean? He certainly more than intimates that there are communities in which churches have come to be known as "woman's churches." We have heard Pres. C. A. Blanchard more than intimate, in some of his public addresses, that there is a general and lamentable tendency in this direction in the land, and he attributes it largely to the influence of lodgery upon the men of our day. Hundreds of thousands of them have become identified with one or more secrect societies in which they bow at the altars of Baal, and have learned to regard these organizations and worships as equal or superior to those of the church of Christ. And as it is impossible for men to serve two masters, and because they "will hate the one and love the other," or "hold to the one and despise the other," they will naturally give their money, influence and presence to that which they love.

The Sunday-school and the prayer meeting, and often the so-called public services of the church are neglected by the men who, a generation ago, would have regularly assembled with the people of God; and it is a painful reflection that so many ministers have cast the weight of their influence in the same direction.

It was said of two certain ministers who once lived not a thousand miles from this place, when the question was asked on the school-house steps at late prayer-meeting time, "Where are Eld. G. and Eld. H?"

"They are gone to the lodge."

It was reported of one minister of considerable prominence in the State, that when the brethren came to the church to attend prayer meeting, and the house was not open, and the pastor was not there, on inquiry it turned out that he had gone to the Masonic lodge with the church key in his pocket.

There is not only a positive, but a negative complicity on the part of ministers and churches in this matter. It is the consent or complicity of silence on their part that has given so great encouragement to this evil. There is abundant evidence that if the churches and ministers of the land had for the last twenty-five years given a united, out-spoken and persistent testimony against secretism, and refused to have "fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them," the lodges would have been a failure, and their influence next to nothing with decent people. But instead of this, many have denied that Paul, in the passage alluded to, had any reference to Masonry or anything of that sort; yet it remains a fact that the old standard commentaries on the Scriptures declare that he had; and there is no getting away from it.

Now if Bro. Edmonds, our zealous and indefatigable missionary, who has during the last seventeen years been present at the association (St. Croix Valley, Baptist), and heard our humble but earnest protests against secret societies, and our earnest pleadings that the ministers and churches should do their utmost to put them away,—had he only spoken out upon the subject with half the emphasis he now speaks with regard to the baleful effects of parental neglect, and encouraged others to do so, he might.—well, he might have been "relieved" of his position by the influence of Masons and those ready to do their bidding; and he might not: and surely would not, if he and the rest had been willing to receive and declare the whole truth. If the children of those fathers who withhold their interest from the Sunday-school, send their children to the devil, they will incur a terrible burden of guilt; but will no blame rest upon those who have seen this evil coming, or should have seen it, but have refused to lift up a warning voice?

Menomonie, Wis.

Our homes should be made radiant within with every social virtue, and beautiful without by those simple adornments of which nature is everywhere so prolific.

CLIMBING UP SOME OTHER WAY.

BY PETER PLOWSHARE.

In the "Gospel according to John," tenth chapter and first verse, we have the words of Jesus concerning the climbing-up process. He who does not go through the door, "but climbeth up some other way," is designated "thief and robber." If the Master himself was here to-day, and talked as he did when on earth, "a way-worn traveler," some of these same persons who now make pretty little speeches, in poetic strain, about "following the Good Shepherd," would be as ready to accuse him wrongfully, "as in days of old."

If we are to be the sheep of his pasture, we must have him for our Shepherd; and if we wish to be placed in the fold, we must enter by way of the door. But just here let us note that when we have become his sheep, it would be well to listen carefully to his calling that we may know his voice. There are "thieves and robbers" after us, and we might be led astray by a stranger's voice.

Have you observed that there are many, very many, who are to-day climbing up some other way? Some are trying to get over the wall by all manner of devices: one making a ladder of Native Dignity, by which means to enter the King's Highway without heeding the instructions of God's eternal truth as given in his Word; another will try to tumble himself into heaven on Final Restitution, and declare that if God did damn his soul, that it would be very unjust, indeed. Well, sinners damn their own souls.

Still another is shipped through (so they say) by means of the fare paid by friends, who believe that to succeed in passing safely through the fires of purgatory, money must be paid for prayers. Foolish people! Weekly confession, and positive absolution, and prayers needed to pass through purgatory at last!

Then there is a class to which we desire especially to call the attention of the reader. This class belong to a very ancient institution (so they tell us), and they figure among their numbers who have gone on before, such worthies as Solomon, John Baptist, John the Divine, and many other noted men, who have lived in a later day; but investigation and good sense prove that the persons named were never associated with the class just referred to.

In this plan of climbing up the mothers, sisters, and "weak ones," whether of one sex or the other, being so unfortunate as to be infants, or halt and maimed, cannot go. Perhaps the climbing in this way demands that he who attempts it be strong. Some money is also required. (If you are thinking of going this way note the financial requirement).

This way is paved by blocks of Masonry, and although the term is prefaced by the word "Free," be very careful not to be thus misled, and start on this way empty-handed, and have the shame of turning back to seek the more lowly and humble way—by the Cross.

There is much of grandeur in this paved way. High-sounding titles, fine halls, and midnight suppers. The fine dress plays an important part, also. There is an especial fitting up in this line; but, dear reader, we would caution you against all this; as certain as the way exists, it does not lead to the desired end. To travel this way you are sure to miss the mark.

There is only one Way (John 14: 6); and if you would enter "the metropolis of the elect of God," you must enter by the Door (John 10: 7, 9), and abide the instructions of God's Holy Word.

Climb up by way of the Cross. Masonry rejects this Way.

"THE BOYS WOULD HOOT YOU."

So said an apostatized Episcopal Methodist, who departed from the faith and allied himself to an inimical church whose creed contains no recognition of the Spirit's agency in regeneration. It forms a grand asylum for that Masonic patron and brother. The caption, "The Boys would Hoot You," were his words addressed to a pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, who was contemplating a lecture on the subject of Masonry. A brief interview was had with this man as to the nature of the institution and the probabilities of having a hearing. He replied as above, "The boys would hoot you." There did not, however, transpire a providential opening, and the contemplated lecture was deferred. The same Mason was interviewed by another party who questioned him thus: "Do you believe a preacher of the Gospel should have anything to do with Freemasonry?" His answer in substance was, "Perhaps it might not be best for him." Not satisfied with that reply the party said, "Brother, I would like to have you state honestly and positively whether you consider that a preacher should be found in a Masonic lodge." The answer was substantially, "It is no place for a Gospel minister, and entirely out of character for him to have anything to do with it."

This accords grandly with the recent utterances of the N. Y. Christian Advocate, as follows:

"A church in one of the eastern cities is gradually decaying while the minister seems to be quite popular with the general public. On inquiry we find that he is a member of the order of Masons, of the order of Odd-Fellows, of the order of United Workmen, of the order of Grangers, and of the Grand Army of the Republic, attends the meetings of all of them, and is active among them. No wonder his church decays. He has a split-up mind, and probably it was not big enough for the work of the Christian ministry to begin with. Still, there is a colored minister of our church in one of the Southern States who belongs to seven secret societies. Of course, we do not mean in the above remarks to settle the great question as to whether a minister should ever belong to any other organization than the Christian church, but do mean just what we say—that such a man as the above, or any man so occupied with other thinks as such a condition implies, is unfit for the responsibilities of a pastorate."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

It is high time that all good men should speak out their honest convictions on all such subjects. The writer is pastor of a church that is almost wholly given up to this kind of idolatry, and the spiritual ruin that succeeds is painful indeed, and destructive to the confidence heretofore reposed in the society, so that the work drags heavily; and the pastor grows weary as he finds no Gospel instructions, exhortations, reproofs or warnings, however faithfully and lovingly administered, serve to correct the evil. Lodges must be attended to if the church goes down. Lodges and worldly conformity are ruining the churches everywhere.

It is high time the Advocates were taking a position. Let the editors and preachers speak out speedily. Andronicus.

A WORD TO THE OLD SOLDIERS.

We oppose the G. A. R., and we expect to continue to do so, and what is more we expect to see the day when the majority of the soldiers will say we are right. We believe all oath-bound or obligated secrecy to be wrong. Believing this, can you expect us to make an exception of the G. A. R.? Oh, yes, they say it is not a secret society. We hold that it is. It has the same effect upon the conscience that a secret society would have. If a man enters your lodge he takes some kind of an obligation. We will not stop to quarrel about what kind. Is not that obligation binding upon the conscience? You say not. Now let us illustrate the case. Rev. A. is an old soldier; he loves the boys in blue. He would like to meet with them, but is opposed to secrecy. He believes it is wrong to bind one's conscience. His old comrades urge him to join. It is not a secret society; only a password, etc, "Well then," says the Rev., "if it is not a secret society I will join, and I suppose as it is not a secret society, that if there is anything done in the lodge that my conscience tells me to be wrong, I am to have the privilege of speaking openly to my people concerning it." "Oh, no sir, we cannot take you in that way," was the reply.

Now, friends, you see it is impossible for some men to join the G. A. R. lodge. Then you ask, "Why object to the organization of lodges for those who want to join?" We object for several reasons. In the first place, we believe that the old soldiers that faced the bullets on the battlefields, that have now reached well nigh the top of the ladder, who are surrounded by their children and friends, honored and respected, do not need to form themselves into a close organization for protection, or to secure their rights.

In the second place we think it will result in weakening the influence of the soldier upon the politics of the country. While he is a citizen soldier he is honored and respected, and his political opinions looked upon as the opinions of an independent, patriotic man, but when they organize into a society, it is inevitable that they will become clannish, which will lessen the respect of the coming generation for them.

In the third place, we believe that if they think that for purposes of charity they must organize, that there is no necessity of their forming a secret society and aping Masonic manners, and placing within their ritual lodge-like ceremonies.

In the fourth place, they have a ritualistic burial service in which worldly officers of the lodge, sometimes, perform sacred services. We believe this is wrong, and besides it is taking out of the hands of the Christian church an essentially Christian feature, and we do not think Christian men or those who respect the church should assist in doing it.

In the fifth place, it is prejudicial to the interests of the soldier that is opposed to secrecy. Organize a G. A. R. post in a town and you put an anti-secret soldier in this position, he must either compromise his principles or be shut out from meeting with his comrades on an equality. No soldier likes to do this, hence an almost irresistable pressure is brought to bear upon him to sacrifice his principles.

In the sixth place, we have observed that you can take a man that is thoroughly aroused to the evils of lodgism, and persuade him to join the G. A. R. lodge, and he soon becomes tender-footed upon the secret society question, and does not like to hear anything said against the lodge. It may not always work this way, but it does frequently.

In the seventh place, we speak out against the G. A. R. because we believe it to be a cat's paw of the secret empire. Are not many of the controlling spirits of the G. A. R. members of the Masonic, Odd-fellows, and other secret lodges? They use the G. A. R. for aggressive work.

We consider any opposition to secret societies that does not strike at the root of the evil as abortive. It is not the man nor the particular order we want to fight, but the principle. We regard sworn or pledged secrecy wrong per se. To oppose it and countenance mild orders, like G. A. R. and Good Templars, would meet with no more success than the old plan of making people temperate by introducing the use of light wines and beer.

We have had many friends among the old soldiers. We are slow to believe they will desert us. Our strictures upon the camp fire may have been a little rasping, but we are confident that when they come to understand our position, they will not be led away by the clamor of certain lodgeites who would have them believe we are abusing the soldiers. We hold that the reputation of the boys in blue and their claim upon the respect and favor of this generation shall not stand or fall with a secret society. No, God forbid! Let the two things be kept separate. —Western Crank.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE W. C. T. U.

[From the Union Signal.]

Dear Sisters:—That the consecrated leaders of W. C. T. U. do not intend to limit their creed of labor to thirty-nine articles, seems evident from a proposition of Miss Willard's in a recent number of the Union Signal, which is to add a fortieth in the shape of a department for relief work. Surely there can be no law against suggesting a forty-first. Bear with the writer then, "as with malice toward none, and charity for all," she endeavors to set forth a few facts, feeling certain that they are enough and more than enough to lead the noble women who have so thoroughly studied the drink problem, to give similar attention to another evil which is too closely connected with their general and many of their special lines of temperance work, to be consistently or safely ignored. We all recognize the fact that the saloon is not the only school where the drink habit is learned; that it is, indeed, in most cases, but the graduating university which finishes up an education begun long before; and like wise women, we of the W. C. T. U. have fought the foe under all his Protean disguises, even when he appears as an angel of light at the Communion table.

The late socialistic outbreaks have drawn public attention to the secret bands of anarchists which lurk in our large cities; but what comparison between the bombshell thrown by the Chicago rioters, even though it made a few women widows and took from aged parents their prop and stay, and the moral havoc, the misery, ruin and death wrought by one of Chicago's licensed saloons? And furthermore, which is the more terrible, the more branding accusation of the two: that dynamite conspiracy is now and then hatched under the shielding darkness of a secret organization, or that plaint so often uttered by sad-eyed wives and mothers all over the land,—"My husband first learned to drink in the lodge"?

Let me admit at the outset, that it would be false and foolish to deny that many good men are members of secret orders. I admire the sincerity, the sublime zeal and devotion of the early Jesuit missionaries, but to find out what the system of Jesuitism is we must investigate its principles and general workings. So of secretism.

That Freemasonry as a system, whatever may be said of individual members, is not favorable to the work of the W. C. T. U. admits of ample proof. The laws of the Grand Lodge exclude negroes, atheists, women and fools, but no law shuts out the saloonkeeper; and as a matter of fact the majority of our two hundred thousand rumsellers belong either to the Masonic lodge, or to some other secret society modled on a similar anti-temperance basis.

Odd-fellows have generally pretended to be a temperance organization, but one of its chief authorities thus settles the claim: "Neither the laws nor the principles of Odd-fellowship descend to the restriction or regulation of the beverage of its members. * * * The principle of total abstinence was never intended by the framers to be engrafted on our order." Unlike Masonry it is contrary to the laws of Odd-fellowship to drink in the lodge room, but the writer happens to know from testimony not to be disputed, the testimony of members of the order themselves, that it is by no means an unknown thing for the convivially inclined, after the lodge meeting is over, to invite a newly initiated brother into the nearest saloon, thus giving him his first inside experience of bar-room associations.

There is one line of our work lately taken up by the W. C. T. U. in which the heart of every good man as well as every true woman rejoices. I refer to the recently added department of Social Purity. As the lodge stands connected with the temperance question, so it will stand connected with this. If it is the foe of the saloon it will be the friend of virtue; if the friend of the saloon it will be her uncompromising enemy. Rumsellers are not so unselfish that they will join an organization just for the general good, without any eye to their own individual benefit. A Masonic saloonkeeper knows that Masonic policemen will not arrest him, and Masonic juries will not convict, however grossly he violates the law, if he only gives the proper Masonic sign. But the lodge vow, to conceal all a brother's secrets, criminal or otherwise, which protects the rumseller, protects also the libertine. Let our wide-awake W. C. T. U. women read the "Defence of Judge Daniel H. Whitney" before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, charged with unmasonic conduct in bringing a brother lodgeman, the betrayer and murderer of Ellen Slade, to justice, and they will understand the reason why so many offenders against female purity go unwhipped by earthly courts. It is true the Masonic candidate is sworn to respect the chastity of the near female relatives of a brother Mason, but what is this but license so far as all other women are concerned? Mackey, one of their standard writers, calls it the seventh unwritten law of Masonry, but how far is it behind the law which thundered from Sinai? How does it compare with the Sermon on the Mount, which flings around every member of our sex, as it were, a diamond shield to protect her from being the subject even of an impure thought?

I appeal to the White Ribbon hosts to investigate fearlessly, candidly, the character and claims of the secret empire. Both its friends and foes admit the formidableness of its power. That power must be exerted either for good or evil. It must either help or hinder your fight against the saloon. And it is for you women of the W. C. T. U., with your large hearts and clear brains, to find out whether the lodge is an ally in your work or a masked enemy.

One point more, and it is a point which touches directly on another and most important department, that of evangelistic work. The testimony of all Christian workers has been that it is useless to try to permanently convert a man from his cups till he is converted to Christ. Does the lodge help or hinder the work of converting souls? By the testimony of its own writers it is a religion, but a Christ-excluding religion. Open any Masonic ritual, and you will find that not only is the name of Jesus carefully excluded from its prayers, but that sacred name, without which all prayer is empty breath, is even expunged from those passages of Scripture selected for reading in the lodge! The same Christ-rejecting principle runs through all the various forms of secretism; and this is to avoid offending the ears of Jews and infidels who hate that name! As Christian women to whom Jesus is infinitely precious, who owe all the high and blessed privilege of Christian womanhood to that holy religion he taught, is this a matter of no moment?

Allow me to quote a few passages from Masonic authorities: "Freemasonry is emphatically a religious institution."—Mackey's Mystic Tie. "It is no secret that Masonry is of divine origin."—General History, Encyclopedia, and Dictionary of Freemasonry. "A belief in God constitutes the sole creed of a Mason."—Mackey's Manual of the Lodge. The Masonic symbol of the blazing star was explained in the old English lodges as commemorative of the Star of Bethlehem, and was the only thing in Blue Lodge Masonry that directly or indirectly pointed to the Redeemer. But Mackey tells us, on page fifty-six of the last quoted work, "that this interpretation being considered too sectarian in its character and unsuitable to the universal religion of Masonry has been omitted since the meeting of Grand Lecturers in Baltimore in 1872."

I remember once seeing an allegorical picture of Truth, a female figure clothed in spotless white, and holding up a mirror in which she could see reflected the image of every approaching foe. No lion of the desert, no dragon of the wilderness, could spring upon her unawares. Let the W. C. T. U., the Una of our land and age, flash upon the dark institutions of organized secrecy the mirror of God's Word, and the image of the beast will stand revealed under all its lamblike disguises.

Once more I appeal to you, sisters of the White Ribbon hosts, to you of the rank and file, and her who, as our honored president, fills a larger place in our love and reverence than any other woman on earth, investigate this matter; for these few facts and arguments out of the thousands which might be adduced are only presented in the hopes that they will stimulate honest, faithful inquiry "whether these things are so." Say not that this is aside issue, that it does not concern you or the temperance work; for by a law as sure as that which governs the ebb and flow of the tides, a religion which rejects Christ will degrade woman, and through her the whole race.

In the name of the many noble men and women who compose the National Christian Association, and who know that the secret empire is thwarting and hindering your fight against the saloon in ways you little suspect; in the name of those heroic souls who are laboring for its overthrow, undaunted even by the wild beasts of persecution; above all, in His name who "in secret said nothing," allow me to suggest another department to your already overflowing list, that of anti-secrecy work, and let its motto be from St. Paul, greatest of all reformers, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Yours in the warfare,

E. E. Flagg.

THE BULWARK OF OUR NATION.

If told two decades ago that thirteen Sunday theatres would open in Chicago, that five or six Sunday papers would be printed regularly, that trains would run as usual, and that lax notions about the first day of the week would modify the very church, we would have been aghast and have almost castigated the prophet of evil. The bulwark ot our nation is the church, and that church protects only when she conserves her members, and through revivals calls multitudes of sinners to repentance. Men of public mark cry out about our national danger and urge coast defenses. Such statesmen see not the real danger nor the real defense. Our best bulwark against foreign war is in constant immigration from threatening nations, but the danger is thereby only changed in form. These comers put a knife at the nation's throat when they attack God's church through old habits of opposing the machine churches abroad, which there are allied to oppressive governments. We must receive these comers and teach them the difference between "a church for the people" here and a church that aids to devour the people there. Therefore, do we look on all revival work as even better than stone coast forts and twenty-inch columbiads. American Christians must learn the secret of national permanence from devout church revival work, and not from Congress or legislature.—Dr. J. H. Barrows, Chicago.

The fullness of the times has surely come for the last great crusade against the powers of darkness. Everything is providentially ripe and ready. Nearly fourscore missionary societies enclose the globe in their golden network. The walls of nations lie flat, and challenge us to move from every quarter, and move together and at once, and take the very capitals and centres of Satan's dominion. The Word of God may be had in every leading tongue, and the miracle of Babel is reversed, and the miracle of Pentecost crystalized into permanence! The coffers of disciples contain wealth so vast that a tithe of it would furnish all the funds for a world's evangelization; and the numbers of disciples are so vast that a tithe of them would give one missionary to every one hundred of the population of the globe. Time and space are practically annihilated, and all nations are neighbors. And, in addition to all, from out the shining pillar of a luminous and leading Providence rings out the trumpet voice of God, bidding us "go forward!" What opportunity and what inspiration! We need only organization and consecration to carry dismay and defeat to the allied powers of hell. William Carey's grand motto of 1792 should be emblazoned on the banners of a church that gathers all her hosts for one final, resolute, and overwhelming charge: "Expect great things from God. Attempt great things for God." All around the signs are appearing which indicate to him who watches, that a more momentous era is at hand than historic pen ever chronicled or artistic pencil ever illustrated.—Arthur Pierson, D. D.

CHINATOWN AND ITS PROBLEMS.

BY HENRY L. KELLOGG.

The anti-Chinese bill opened four years ago the whole question of foreign immigration: and the frequent mobs and massacres, the threats of the Sand Lots, the appeals to Congress from California, and, more lately and loudly, the anarchist murders in Chicago, have kept it open. In eastern cities to the ordinary observer Chinese "invasion" has no threats; and it is difficult here to conjecture how it could become an issue. But the few and scattered Chinese population in the East, quiet, industrious, and seldom reporting in the courts, furnish no data from which to judge of the effect of massing this element compactly, and suffering the roots of superstition, immorality and paganism to shoot upward in strong growth, with few checks from the law, but many from prejudice and mob violence. Chinatown is a feature in every California city, town and village. It must be visited by all who would understand the Chinese question.

The traveler from the East on the Union Pacific road strikes a Chinatown first in Wyoming, at Rock Springs, a coal district, and a place made infamous by the brutal massacre of Chinese miners in 1885. The United States troops, sent to the place soon after the outbreak, were yet encamped there last May and the rude town was quiet, because held down by bayonets. The colony of Chinese who yet clung to their low pine sheds no longer attempted mining, but were satisfied with such business as came to them without competition. In Denver, where a year or more since the mob spirit rose against the Chinese, I found no Chinatown during a week's sojourn in the city. Many Chinese are there, but no community; they are scattered irregularly throughout the business portion of the city, carrying on their laundries quietly and without molestation.

From Wyoming to California few Chinese will be seen outside of the larger towns. In Utah I do not remember seeing one, except, perhaps, a few working on the railway. In California almost every hamlet has its Chinese quarter, a cluster of small rough shanties with the inevitable red paper sign covered with Chinese letters, over the door. In San Francisco John Chinaman is ubiquitous. Laundries, tobacco shops and rarely a shoe factory are found up and down the city; but "Chinatown" covers about twelve blocks north of California street, and on either side and west of Dupont, where "Nob Hill" has already begun its ascent to the palaces of the mining and railway kings on its summit at Mason street.

The evening is the best time for exploring this quarter, but a daytime visit will warn the stranger that a guide, and perhaps one armed, will be as necessary in these swarming streets and dark, narrow alleys, as in the catacombs of Rome or Paris. One friend advises a call at police headquarters and have an officer detailed as guide. Another suggests that as the task is unwelcome, you will be only so far inducted into the mysteries as you may be willing to pay for and pay well. A police officer informs you that no such detail will be made, but the services of a professional guide are best and most available. He adds to your trepidation by a few harrowing stories of Chinese cunning and cruelty, and remarks that while they have no fear of a revolver they do care to keep away from a stick. Reports from others prepare you to encounter endless filth, the vilest smells, labyrinthine passages where danger may lurk, and unmentionable lewdness. I spent two long evenings, first with an ex policeman and then with an intelligent young Chinaman, visiting all the nooks, alleys, underground rooms and passages to which they could take me, and can say frankly that elsewhere in San Francisco, as well as in Chicago and other large eastern cities, the places abound where all the senses will be more violently assailed, and every notion of decency more rudely shocked than in these berated Chinese quarters of San Francisco.

Within these twelve squares the census-taker counts over 30,000 Chinese; and this year so many have been driven in by the "boycott" throughout the State, that many estimated their number at 50,000. Few if any such crowded quarters can be found in Europe or America.

The crowds that throng the streets and alleys strikes the explorer with his first amazement. He finds himself now and then lost in the multitude, but there is no rushing haste or jostling among the blouse-clad host about him, and he is extricated without difficulty. If a stray pistol shot echoes through the streets in a moment a thousand chattering Chinese are about the spot; but they are scattered again as quickly.

You inquire where these myriads lodge, and across the street the guide crawls before you down a short ladder through a hole in the sidewalk. Here is a cheap lodging-house, running day and night. Narrow bunks of rough boards are ranged one above another, already well filled with sleepers. Others take their places as they arise, and if any one objects to smothering and appeals to the "cubic-air" law, it is easy to lift a grating. One building, yet owned by a white man, was of yore a theater, but unprofitable. The owner fitted it up for Chinese lodgings, and a glance upward in the interior court proves it well rented. Thousands, you may easily imagine, here get their sleep, but not its balm. Every room is filled with its rows of bunks, and thrifty keeper times his sleepers, so that day and night are alike profitable. Everywhere are narrow alleys, and lodgings in every corner. Narrow and steep stairways lead to other lodgings over every shop. You stumble upon a sleeping Chinaman every time you descend into the subterranean conduits for this streaming humanity. Down two short flights below the street where no light of sun or breath of sweet air descends, we find a curiosity. An aged man and woman live here in a little seven by nine den, lit up by a smoky lamp. The light held by the guide enables you to see the old woman and her companions—a dozen cats. On every shelf and table and plentifully about her on the dirty couch are these feline charmers of her solitude; and you are amazed at the tenacity of human life as she tells you she has lived for years in these surroundings. Since my visit to the old lady and her protectors from the army of rats, the authorities have removed her to more comfortable quarters above ground. The guide disappears through a narrow door and you follow through a narrow hall with more doors and several turns until you are within another lodging-house. Down in the basement of the inner court is the kitchen of the establishment—three or four small furnaces, as large as an oil stove, where with a handful of sticks every man may cook his own rice. Stygian smells assail you here, and you avoid the heaps of sweepings and offal waiting for Italian scavengers—even the Chinese leave their dirty work to another race; and does not boycott the monopolists either. In another interior the guide, who is likely to be hostile to John Chinaman, points out an immense tank elevated in air, and fed by an artesian well. He tells you of several wells in Chinatown, and grows eloquent in his denunciation of the race which has established itself in the midst of San Francisco, a corporation within the corporation, with its own water supply, its own tribunals, language, religion, society, customs and regulations Here, he exclaims, these heathens are determined to have this Chinatown to themselves, without the interference of the whites. And truly, the difficulties of enforcing the laws of public health and public weal seem nearly insurmountable in this narrow quarter. John switches his pigtail and cares little for cubic air laws to prevent the overcrowding of his hotels, or any other health ordinance. His people look sleek and fat; no class in the city seem to have better living; and no contagion assails him. Fevers and plagues fly over Chinatown and find no spot to alight till they reach the street of the white man.

The subsistence of the Chinaman is in keeping with his lodging. Admiration, amazement, and disgust, now one, now all at once, possess the inquisitive American. Without regard to the time, the passer-by often sees through open doors and windows a group of Chinese closely sitting around a table, eating rice from bowls with chop-sticks. The rattle of the sticks and the chatter of conversation indicate a contentment that the meagre fare does not explain. Scores of markets are scattered among the shops of Chinatown, with large supplies of fish, ducks and other articles imported from China, along with vegetables and fresh meat. The Chinese are said to control the pork market in San Francisco. The stock is small, but in great variety as to kind, quality and condition. It is no epicurean taste that makes us tarry to examine the dried fish, the fowls cooked whole with the entrails, and cut in exact halves, cooked pigs, and abundance of soup vegetables tied in little bunches. John loves soup, and about eleven o'clock at night the streets resound with the squalling outcry of soup peddlers, who run deftly about among the crowds spilling no drop of their savory messes.

Restaurants are numerous, and carefully graded. The guide lights a candle and leads to the basement of a second-class eating-house. The chirping of a multitude of birds strikes the ear before one can make out in the dim light that the pile of crates at one end is filled with thousands of quails. A veritable monopoly! we cry. But in another part of the dingy, crowded space are large tanks of eels—a living, squirming mass a foot and more deep. Verily, John is a luxurious liver! But we are assured that for these delicacies as well as for his frogs, the superior race must come to John to supply the famous San Francisco restaurants. No stranger would recognize the restaurant kitchen. He sees no huge range; his eyes do not smart with smoke, nor does his nose tingle with unsavory fumes. He trips over no potatoe piles, and is not stunned with the crash of crockery or the yell of waiters. Vegetables and meat chopped fine in small bowls, are ready to be quickly cooked and served, and urns ready for tea are all that betray the kitchen. He passes through this apartment generally to reach the dining tables. The first-class restaurants are in two or three stories, graded as he ascends. At the top he can be served with meals worth from one to fifty dollars. Here the wealthy Chinese have their banquets, sometimes lasting a day, with mistresses for companions, and no end to the debauchery until nature or the purse is exhausted. The Chinaman drinks little that intoxicates at these carousals, but instead indulges in an opium smoke on one of the couches at the side of the room. The carved wooden screens of these rooms are imported, as well as the furniture, which is of ebony, marvellously inlaid with pearl. The carving and inlaid work are the universal admiration of American visitors, and cost thousands, even with Chinese cheap labor. San Francisco boasts of her restaurants, and that of the Lick House with its magnificent paintings is fit for a palace; but none can compare with the curious and wonderful outfit of the first-class establishments of Chinatown.

(To be continued.)

The Christian Liberator is the title of a new reform paper issued in June, by Bro. William Fenton, in St. Paul, Minn. As everyone was eager to see it in the Cynosure office, our single copy was mislaid, and has not appeared for earlier notice. It is a solid shot against the lodge, earnest and uncompromising in every word as is Bro. Fenton's wont. He does not announce a regular issue, and this is, we take it, a special publication which may be repeated as occasion requires. We regret that no notice of this enterprise has appeared before. Copies can be obtained at 5 cents each, of William Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. Moody tells a pithy story of a young man who held out a book to his pastor saying, "Here's your Bible," and turning the leaves showed him the volume with many books cut out altogether, and hardly a whole page among those that were left. "Why, what do you mean?" asked the doctor of divinity; "that is not my Bible." "Yes, it is," was the reply, "I have followed your preaching for ten years, and whenever you have discredited a book or verse or explained it away as uninspired or mythical, I have cut it out; and this is what is left of your Bible." "Let me have it," said the pastor. "Oh, no," said the young man instantly, "I am going to hang on to the covers anyhow."—Canadian Baptist.

Joseph Cook says: The city of Reality lies foursquare, having for its sides the four "alls" of the Saviour's last commission, viz.: "All power is given unto me." Therefore, "Evangelize all nations," teaching them to "Observe all that I have commanded," and "I am with you through all times."

PRESS COMMENT.

George A. Schilling (Knight of Labor organizer) is a leading labor agitator of the professional sort. He says that he joined the labor movement in 1876. That shows that it has been ten years since he quit earning an honest living by actual labor. When a man becomes a professional labor reformer he begins a life of idleness and generally of mischief.—Evening Journal.

In an article on "Gladstone's Defeat," the Presbyterian, speaking of the Irish in this country and their influence for the good of Ireland, says: "They must get over their accursed affinities for secret societies, with ways that are dark and tortuous. The Roman Catholic Irish must be more obedient to the policy of their church, which opposes, and rightly anathematizes secret societies, for the Roman Catholic church well knows what this secrecy implies." Our contemporary, in view of this utterance, cannot have much sympathy for secret societies of any name. They have shown very plainly of late in our country the evil they are capable of, and the danger of their existence to the welfare of the community. It is sad, specially at this time, to see any lowering of testimony in our own church against these societies, and still more sad to see some of our own ministers and congregations courting their favor by specially inviting them to their churches in their organized capacity. This has been done in several instances of late in our own city. Thoughtful and honest persons in these societies must have contempt in their hearts for those who have in their ordination vows and in their pledges as members, accepted our testimony relating to secret societies, while at the same time they show them such signal favor.—Christian Instructor (U. P.)

The absurdity of trying to consolidate opposing elements is well illustrated in the action of Local Assembly No. 2309 of the Knights of Labor, who denounce by resolution as "cowardly, unmanly, unnecessary, and uncalled-for, the action of Assembly No. 24, in that they expelled from the order certain anarchists who were members of that assembly. The iron and potter's clay of patriotism and anarchism may be caused for a little while, under conditions favorable thereto, to cohere; but they can never blend. One of the delusions of the day, one of the chimeræ which many are laboring to bring about is permanency in union instead of permanency in the truth. In assembly, in lodge, and worse still, in church, this ridiculous policy is being pursued. The commingling of unlike elements involved, with the multitudinous diversity of title and organizations, strongly suggests that we are, in point of history, in the age of the "toes" of Daniel's image of civil empire. It is a blessed thing to be free from all such combinations; for when the stone cut out of the mountain without hands shall smite the image, it will be "upon the toes." The shadow of a coming destruction has already settled upon them.—Free Methodist.

Dr. Lyman Beecher once remarked, "Intellectual culture without moral culture is like a Samson without eyes." Shall the Bible be banished from our public schools, and all moral instruction interdicted? That is one of the most serious questions of the hour. In Wisconsin, the court has decided that simply reading the Bible, without note or comment, falls under the head of "sectarian instruction," forbidden by statute, and is, therefore, no longer to be read in the public schools. Are the people of this country willing to send their children to godless schools, where they shall only receive that education and training which will make them nothing more nor better than a generation of blind Samsons?—Intelligencer.

We stated some time ago that the Knights of Labor were only popularizing cardinal Masonic principles. "Grand Master" Powderly now affirms the same thing in his defence of the boycott, which he declares to be a long-used Masonic weapon. The trouble is, "Masonic Light," as to the terrific power of a secret lodge to injure an opponent, has spread faster than Masonic cunning. The Knights, however, are not wholly inexpert in Masonic cunning. While in the very act of destroying millions of property and threatening thousands of lives, in actual insurrection in three States so that a standing army is required to prevent murder and pillage, the whole blame is saddled on a few score of ranting anarchists. This secret lodge flurry has already cost the country $20,000,000, and probably $100,000,000 will not cover the indirect damages.—Wesleyan.

We have learned pretty well to preach the Golden Rule standard to individuals. We tell men that they must do as they would be done by, or they have no right to call themselves Christians. It is not quite certain that we apply this rule to the conduct of the affairs of nations. When we say that the United States, or England, or France, or Germany is a Christian nation, do we mean that it does to other nations as it would be done by? Are we to expect a nation in its international relations to be absolutely selfish, or to be unselfish? We hold that as between men godliness is gain; do we think of confessing that it can be so between nations? Do nations enlarge their territory, impose restrictions in foreign immigration or foreign trade, make treaties or make war, with the idea of doing to the other nation as they would have that other nation do to them? If a man does not obey the Golden Rule is he a Christian man? If a nation does not obey the Golden Rule is it a Christian nation?—Independent.

That there will be any general reduction of the period of labor to eight hours a day appears unlikely. The obstacle to the success of this project is not so much the opposition of employers as the resolute antagonism of the great mass of workingmen. There can be no doubt that these are far too wise not to perceive that the proposed restriction simply involves a plan for depriving them of the privilege of selling to best advantage the only thing they have to sell, namely, their labor. This feeling is particularly strong among skilled workmen who are frugal as well as industrious. Many of them would much prefer to an eight hour scheme an arrangement which would secure to them frequent opportunity to earn extra pay for working overtime. It is not too harsh to assert that the bulk of the men who are eager to labor for eight hours only are just the kind of men to whom the two hours thus gained would be more hurtful thau profitable. There is no greater nonsense than that contained in the theory that the two hours are wanted by men for the purpose of "improving their minds." Anybody who lives in a manufacturing town is aware that the number of workmen who care to improve their minds in any way is very small indeed. The men who have such ambition are almost invariably the very men who would vote against an eight hour law if the question should be carried to the polls. This is an assertion the proof of which is difficult, but we appeal fearlessly to our workingmen readers to declare if it is not true.—Textile Record.

The victory won by women at the present season of college anniversaries is nothing short of a revolution in the ideas of what is proper to be done within the walls of a college. Ten years ago it was a brave man in most eastern colleges who dared to say anything in favor of the admission of women to the privileges of a collegiate education. The Harvard Annex began by apologizing for itself, and has not yet had a fair show at Harvard and Wellesley and Smith and Bryn Mawr Colleges are yet in the gristle of experiment; but public sentiment has shot beyond the heads and trustees of the older and more conservative institutions, and now there are but three colleges—Yale, Amherst and Williams—among the older institutions that are not open to women in some form. This is a revolution in female education, and is destined to work a great change in the culture of the country and in professional life. Women spread culture better than men, because they have more time for it. If the present demand for the higher education of women continues, and there is no reason why it should be less, it will shortly come about that co-education will be an accomplished fact in the higher institutions, as it is a reality in many of the country schools and in most schools where primary instruction is given. It would seem as if the drift at the present moment were decidedly in this direction.—Boston Herald.

Reform News.

WISCONSIN FRIENDS, ATTENTION.

I am now in your field as State agent and lecturer. Let me hear from you, as soon as possible, as to what openings there are for anti-secrecy work in your localities. If there are no openings, do your best to make them. Let us not be of those who cower before lodge men. Secretists have much reason to fear us if we stand true, but we should not fear them. "Jehovah is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." Let us up and at the forts of darkness. Use time, talents, money, influence, for freedom, right, and God. Every one can do something; he can do his best. And God can and WILL bless our best endeavors to the great advancement of this cause, which is his cause. Write me at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill. Yours in Christ, for justice and righteousness, J. F. Browne.

MAKE THE DENIAL GOOD OR RETRACT.

Bunker Hill, Ind., July 27th, 1886.

I spoke here in the M. E. church last evening. My lecture was of a general character, intended to awaken an interest and if possible draw out a response. In these two particulars it was a success. Elder L. D. Robinson, former pastor of the Baptist church in this place, but now of Toledo, Ohio, appeared on the scene to champion the orders. He announced himself a Mason; said he was a stranger in the place; that he had never before heard a lecture on the subject; that he was greatly disappointed, what he had heard was mere bosh; that he had taken no obligation that he did not know beforehand; that Masonry was not a religion; that Odd-fellowship was more benevolent than the church, etc., etc. The discussion assumed a rather direct conversational turn, and was participated in by the pastor of the M. E. church and others. Authorities were called for which were not at hand, though I quoted freely from Mackey, Morris, McCoy, Rebold and others, which were denied in the most direct and absolute terms. As neither party had the books at hand the whole matter rested on the affirmation and denial of either side. I was accused of misrepresentation (to put it mildly), and the church of Jesus Christ debased and degraded below the lodge in the matter of benevolence by one of her professed ministers.

I am unwilling to drop the matter where it is. The charge is a grave one made by a minister at a public gathering and should either be retracted or substantiated in as public a manner as made. Elder L. D. Richardson declared "Freemasonry is not a religion;" "Odd-fellowship is more benevolent than the church." I respectfully invite the Elder to meet me, when the pressure of harvest is over, and the evenings are longer, at Bunker Hill, where these assertions were made and denials given, and settle the points at issue by reference to standard works and official reports. This is both American and Christian. Will the Elder do it? J. P. Stoddard,

Sec'y N. C. A., Chicago.

WISCONSIN WORK BEGUN.

I reached Sharon, Walworth Co., Saturday evening, July 24. There I found brethren M. R. Hoard and J. W. Suidter, the last mentioned of whom took me home with him. Arrangement was made for me to preach at the Free Methodist chapel, Sharon, on the afternoon of Lord's day, 25th, notice being given to that effect at the morning services in the various churches. There was a fair attendance at this afternoon meeting, though not large, but the Lord was there to help and cheer. After the meeting the Congregational pastor, A. M. Thome, came forward and spoke very kindly and wished to be remembered to his old class-mate in college at Augusta, Ky., John G. Fee.

It was arranged and announced that I should preach at South Grove, three miles north, in the evening and lecture in the Free Methodist chapel in Sharon, on Monday evening. Had a good meeting at South Grove.

Monday evening in Sharon, I spoke on our duties toward the moral reforms of the day, giving special reasons why all good citizens should oppose the secret lodge system. Considering the necessarily brief and limited notice given, and the fact that harvest was in progress, the attendance was quite encouraging. There was very good attention and manifest interest, of which substantial proof was given in a voluntary collection of $5. Several persons publicly signified their wish and will to help on the anti-secrecy work to the extent of their ability.

Bro. Pate, Free Methodist preacher of Whitewater, who was in the neighborhood, attended all these meetings and gave much aid and comfort. Brethren Suidter, Occanbaugh and M. R. Hoard are very kindly remembered for their hospitality. I hope to return to Sharon later in the season, and do more work there.

Tuesday, 27th, I went to Clinton, Rock county. I called on all the pastors, and presented my mission. The Congregational preacher said there was evil enough to combat, without digging down for it. I replied that the outrages, strikes, etc., of the lodges, came pretty near the surface. The German Lutheran preacher was opposed to secretism, but did not wish lectures. The M. E. preacher said he had read through Bernard's "Light on Masonry," but failed to see that Bernard made any very strong arguments against Masonry or revealed any very objectionable oaths! How can one see if he doesn't wish to see and won't see? I then called on the most prominent member (as I was told) of the Baptist church, the church having no pastor at present. He claimed to be anti-secretist, "but," he thought it not wise to discuss the matter; said that the old members of the church who opposed Masonry had died off, and that now they would better have peace. So I went three miles south of Clinton, and called on G. Omland, pastor of one of the Norwegian Lutheran congregations in that neighborhood, who entertained me very kindly and expressed considerable interest in our work. The two other Norwegian pastors preaching there, being absent, no lectures could be then arranged for, and I left, promising to return at some future time if we could mutually arrange.

From Clinton I had intended going to Delavan, but finally decided to go to Janesville. There I called on our old friend Andrew Stevens and his wife (who formerly lived near Footville), and on the German Lutheran pastor and the leading members of the Norwegian Lutheran church. No opportunity being offered for lectures, I went to Footville, Rock Co. I am being now kindly entertained at the home of F. M. Dann, an old friend of mine, who is also interested in this reform. To-day his daughter Effie took me "across lots" to Oxford. I could confer with but one friend there (whose subscription to the Cynosure I send), but hope to lecture there at no distant day.

To-morrow I expect to visit the Bible-school Convention at Madison, and see if I can make suitable arrangements to have a stand there next week, for the sale of our publications and the extension of the knowledge of the anti-lodge reform. Thence I shall probably go to Baraboo. Yours for Christ's kingdom of freedom and justice.

J. F. Browne,

Ag't, Wis. Christian Association.

THE G. A. R. AND CHURCH DEBTS.

HOLLISTER, Cal.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have just read your "Notes of Travel," in your issue of 8th inst. In it you tell much truth regarding California life as it looks to me, more especially the lodge and liquor questions, as I have been here for fifteen years past. Very soon San Francisco and the State at large will be overrun by G A. R. pilgrims. I am glad to have those brave men come and see this part of our country,but it is a pity so many of the men who conquered a peace for their country have allowed themselves to be conquered by this lodgery "cocouthes," and while bound by its shackles feel so proud of their chains. About everything here is run and regulated by this kind of motive power. Still there are some who do not bow down to it,chief of whom,as you know,is Rev. L. B. Lathrop. I have much reason to thank him for inducing me to subscribe for the Cynosure, for I did not read it long until I was convinced that it was one of the best religious papers in our country. As it makes its appeals mainly to religious people it throws the light of Scripture on its subjects of reform and this makes it what it is, a power for the truth once delivered to the saints. I love to read it.

How I wish the struggling churches of California could get half the money our people will spend in entertaining and "making a vain show" for the G. A. R., to help them with their debts and to go on with the work that needs to be done. If this could be, much might be done that will have to be left undone for "want of funds." Surely it would be better for California during the next month, and the money would not perish with the using, but would come back to us again and again, an hundred fold in this life and in the end everlasting life for many souls that are in great danger of being lost through prevalence of lodge influence in its various forms.

So send all the papers you can to California, as there is great ignorance on the subject here and more especially on the Scriptural aspect of it. I endeavor to circulate for you as much as I can. I try to send my own copy wherever it will do the most good. God speed your good work.

H. NOEL.

A DISINTERESTED WITNESS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—As I was preaching in the country last Sabbath, I took the opportunity to quote from Webb's Monitor on Freemasonry, some of their Christ-rejecting prayers and misquotations of of Scripture where Christ's name is expunged. The family where I took dinner brought up the subject, by saying that they were glad that I had preached against the secret societies, when a lady visitor in the family said that she hated the lodge. I asked for her reasons. She said that her father had been a Mason, and when he died he appointed a Mason to settle the estate, who sold all the property, and appropriated the funds for his own use. She had employed two lawyers but they would only go so far and then stop. She farther stated that her father was an officer in the order, and he kept locked in a certain box the books of the lodge. She opened the box in his absence. "But such oaths!" she said, "they used to haunt me. Why they promised to have their throats cut from ear to ear!" She gave the penalties of the first three degrees, thus confirming the exposition. May God speedily unmask their hypocrisy. W. O. N.

MR. KILGORE'S SERMON.

In a sermon of the 18th of July in Chicago, it is alleged that the "National Reform party" is seeking to have "an established church," and that the connection of church and state in our land would be the "Image of the Beast," the Papal power which ruled Europe so long and persecuted the saints.

Some may imagine that the "National Reform party" is the American party; but that party states in its platform that "Civil government though ordained of God, is founded in nature not in grace; and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights." It abhors the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties, and thus making hypocrites. Yet the civil government by the act of authorizing the civil oath does in fact acknowledge man's responsibility to God. The civil oath is one which requires a witness to tell what he knows, in order to establish truth. The oath of lodgery demands that the candidate shall "conceal and never reveal" what he don't yet know—but when he does know became a sin under the law of Moses (Lev. 5: 4), and required confession to the priest and an offering to the Lord.

The preacher (an Adventist), however, hits at one point which is advocated by the American party, viz., the legal enforcement of the Sabbath, or now the first day, as a day of rest, and sees in that the cloven foot of danger to church and state; possible persecution looms up in proportion as "the general clamor for a Sunday law" prevails, and the spirit of the dragon is thereby revealed!

Well, we have dangers enough in our country to alarm our sons, but believe we could rest comfortably if the worst was the observance of the first day of the week as the day of rest from legal business, and the day when civil government guaranteed for its people to meet for the worship of God. We think the fault has been too great laxity in this respect, and that there should be a universal United States law for the day of rest. All civil law should be a terror to evil doers and praise to those who do well, as a protection to our community against the multiplied evils of Mormonism, anarchy, socialism, sham marriages, and easy divorces. These are very real evils, which pulpit eloquence will do well to condemn. T. H.

PITH AND POINT.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Possibly Nashville will be the best place to hold it, for several reasons:

1. It is more central.
2. It is more acceptable for the greater number.
3. It is a a great center of secretism.
4. It is a capital city; and, while Memphis is larger, yet I think Nashville has some advantages over it. Capitals are usually centers of considerable importance.
5. It is a great school eenter. We want to reach students in schools. And just here I would suggest that the convention be not held till the schools are all in session. This might not be so favorable for those who are in school work outside of Nashville,but it will be better for the place and for the schools, while those whose minds are to attend will manage to get off from their schools in order to go. As to time, it strikes me that about the middle of January would be the most favorable, though I cannot as yet speak definitely as I have not thought much on that point. I shall be very glad to attend such a convention if circumstances will allow.—PROF. G. M. ELLIOTT, Selma, Ala.

A GRAND WORTHY FOILED.

About four weeks ago the Deputy Grand Worthy Chief Templar of Nebraska came to McCook and lectured on temperance. After the lecture he attempted to organize a Good Templar Lodge, and called on me to pass a paper to secure names of those who desired to join. I arose in an instant and declined to serve, and stated that I was opposed to dragging the noble cause of temperance into a secret society; that the church and ministry should take up the cause and proclaim it openly or they had better sell out.

The Deputy G. W. C. T. stated that if I had scruples on the subject he would take the paper, and he only secured three signatures. So his attempt to organize in this place was a failure.—W. O. NORVAL, McCook, Neb.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON VII, August 15, 1886.—Jesus teaching Humility—John 13:1—17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.—John 13:17.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Out of this world unto the Father." He was conscious not only that it was his hour of agony, but that this hour was the gate to eternal glory with his Father. The light from beyond shone back even upon this dreadful hour. He saw beyond the veil.

"Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." The end both in time and accomplishment; that is, he loved them till death broke in on his life of love; he loved them till love had finished its purpose in them by their redemption; loved them despite their quarrels and contentions, that by love he might brood and perfect the new life in them. (And he loved them even when he saw what that love would cost him. Looking in the face of agony and death he went on in his work of love.—P.)

"The devil having now put," etc. Here we see the circumstances of the other side of the scene, three in number. First the devil, who had "already" plotted the destruction of Jesus, and had fixed on Judas as the instrument. Second, Judas Iscariot, the victim of the devil's wiles. Third, the feelings of the devil's heart,—treachery, hatred. The three particulars are in the sharpest contrast with those in ver. 1,—the devil with Jesus,Judas with "his own," treachery with love. Darkness is over against light, earth over against heaven, the lie over against the truth.—Schaff.

"He riseth from supper." The Paschal supper began by the head of the company taking the first cup of wine mingled with water, and speaking over it "the thanksgiving." This cup was then passed around. The next part of the ceremonial was for the head of the company to rise and "wash hands." It was at this point of the supper, close after the strife among the disciples, that Jesus took the basin and ewer which were at hand, and taught them this lesson.

"And began to wash the disciples' feet." The disciples sat down to the meal without washing their feet, after a hot and dusty walk. There was no servant to perform the menial act for them; and no one would volunteer to do it for the rest.—Abbott. Christ had already lain down; as they had no servants, the feet washing should have been done by one of the disciples; the things necessary for it are at hand. The disciples are still disputing who shall undertake to do it. Jesus then rises himself to perform this duty of a servant.—Tholuck.

"But thou shalt know hereafter." (1) Christ explained the meaning after the transaction was over (vers. 12–17.) (2) It is in the trying circumstances of the future, in the zealous discharge of the task that shall be his, and in the ripening of Christian experience, that Peter shall "learn," shall "perceive," the full meaning of what he at present feels to be so incomprehensible.—Schaff.

"Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet." Pride in Peter could not comprehend humility in Christ. He thought the act, which was a manifestation of the true glory of the Lord, dishonored him. The same spirit in our day accounts the declaration of the incarnation and of the atonement dishonorable to God; it sees no glory in the humiliation of love.—Abbott.

"The servant is not greater than his lord." If Jesus their Lord did much humble service for others, and spent his life in ministering to others, not in being ministered unto, every one of his disciples to the end of time should do the same, and not expect to avoid this duty and privilege. This is the royal road, and there is no other by which we can aid his kingdom to come. The great danger of the church, in this as in every age, is pride, self-seeking, and failing to imitate its master in this humble service for others.

"Happy are ye if ye do them." Duties involving humiliations, though seemingly repulsive, are found in the doing to be attended with the highest blessedness (Matt. 7:24; Luke 11:28)—G. W. Clark. The happiness here promised is not merely the inward complacency which accompanies every act of voluntary abasement, but a really superior position in God's sight; we are greater in his eyes and nearer to him in proportion as we humble ourselves to serve our brethren,—Godet.

1. The danger of the church is in self-seeking, in strife for the highest places,and in neglect of humbler service to the poor and needy.
2. Jesus corrects this danger by his example, not only on this occasion, but throughout his whole life.
3. Like him, our desire should be not to be ministered unto, but to minister.
4. Jesus not only sets us a right example, but he warns and entreats us to be like him in humility and service.
5. Unless we are cleansed from this imperfection of self-seeking, we have no part with Jesus in his character, his work, his kingdom, his heaven.
6. The usefulness, the power, the success of the church depends on its following the Master, in welcoming the poor, in ministering to the wants of the needy.
7. Love transfigures the humblest service, and makes it worthy of the highest beings.
8. We should do the smallest duties with the highest motives.
9. "Vain is all strife for superiority, where the only strife should be, which should oblige each other the most; and the only power lodged in any person should be a power of doing good. Never strive to gain an absolute sway over anything but your own passions."—J. Seed.

The attitude of the liquor dealers in the annexed district of New York is intended to strike terror into the hearts of the people. As they cannot sell their fluids on Sunday, they announce it to be their purpose to enforce the Code, and compel milkmen, druggists, and others accustomed to sell on Sunday, to cease their trades. If they will only do this, barring the lack of milk for sick children, they will be philanthropists of a high order. They may help the city to a quiet, orderly Sunday, and if so, we shall be inclined, like the old woman, when she gave thanks for the bread the boy threw down the chimney, to say, "The Lord sent it, if the devil brought it."—Baptist Weekly.

The late Dr. Samuel Wolcott, the eminent Congregationalist minister, in his later life wrote many hymns, and has left on record an account of how he began to do so. He was fifty-six years old, and had never put two rhymes together, and had taken it for granted that he was as incompetent to write a hymn, or even a stanza, as to work a miracle. "However," he says. "I resolved that I would try to write a hymn of five stanzas, and proceeded to plan it, precisely as I would plan a sermon. I said, the first stanza shall be a recognition of God the Father; the second a recognition of Christ the Redeemer; the third a prayer to God the Father; the fourth a prayer to Christ the Redeemer; the fifth shall blend the two in one address. . . . . A more perfect recipe for wooden stanzas it would be difficult to frame." The result was the hymn beginning, "Father, I own Thy voice," and the author was much surprised to find he had written what could actually be sung. Many of his hymns have become favorites throughout the country.

—The Boston Investigator, an infidel paper, affirms that Odd-fellowship holds the Bible and the Koran, Judaism, Mahommedanism, Buddhism and Hindooism on the same level. Some uninstructed Odd-fellows do not so regard it. The writer in the Investigator is friendly to Odd-fellowship.

OBITUARY.

JOSEPH CATTERLIN died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. T. L. Thornton, in Abilene, Kansas, on Friday, May 21, 1886, aged 96 years, 7 months, 18 days. Thus at length has the summons come for this old hero in the army of the Lord. For many years he has been among the most earnest of the supporters of the reform, and according to his means one of the most liberal. At his home its agents were always welcome, and they never departed from his presence without bearing away a blessing. He was personally known to the editors of the Cynosure, who visited him while living in Kewanee Ill., and on Indiana street, in Chicago. Though long confined to his room by blindness, and afterward to his bed with the feebleness of age, he maintained always the cheerful, courageous spirit of a true child of God.

Mr. Catterlin was born in Winchester, Frederick county, Virginia, September 3, 1789, and married Miss Eleanor Knox, a Pennsylvanian, and moved to Springfield, Ill., in 1835. In 1849 he came to Toulon, Ill., accompanied by his son in-law, Mr. Pierce and family. There he carried on the mercantile business, and January 1, 1850 was appointed postmaster for the place, which office he held for three years. From here he moved to Kewanee and then to Galva, where his wife died and her remains laid to rest in the cemetery at Kewanee. His family consisted of six daughters, three of whom survive him, and were the sunshine of of his latter days, smoothing over the rough places of life and making his pillow in death, and now with grand children and many dear friends mourn his loss. His remains were embalmed, and, in a metallic coffin, brought to Kewanee, where the funeral services were conducted by Rev. Joseph Travis, Chicago, editor of the Free Methodist, who also officiated at his wife's funeral. His remains were laid to rest by the side of his beloved companion, who by many years preceded him to the home above.

For upwards of sixty years Father Catterlin has been a faithful, consistent, earnest and professing Christian, having at the age of thirty three joined the M. E. church. He was a Christian in thought, word and deed, and a follower of the Master in whom there was no guile. For several years he was almost blind, yet could well discern bright, sunshiny days and perhaps distinguish some objects, but was unable to read, which, as he was always a great reader, was to him a severe loss. During the last two years of his life he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Thornton, of Abilene, Kansas, having removed thither from this city with the family of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Thompson.

He retained his usual good health, and up to the very last moments of his life his mind was clear, memory good, hopes bright and faith unshaken in the Father in whom he had so long trusted verifying every promise, and that a crown of rejoicing awaited him. Three minutes before he died he bade all an affectionate farewell, and in triumph passed to his glorious reward.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A. Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY; OR THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Micb.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

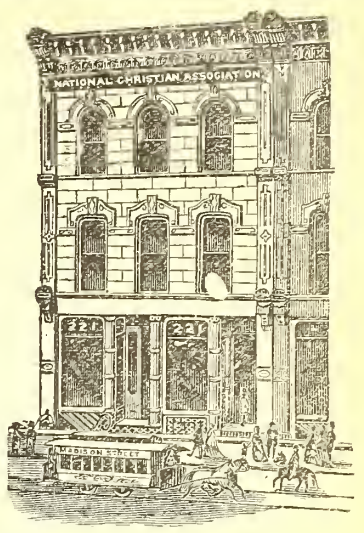
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.



OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres. Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Caliender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec., John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1886

We insert the noble letter of Miss E. E. Flagg to the W. C. T. U. in the present number. It has the strength of a man, with the adroit instinct and delicacy of a woman; and, by placing it in the widely circulated Signal, the editor, Miss West, has placed it where the heart of woman will respond to it. They are hastening the day when the Prohibition party of the United States will have no secret ring in sworn complicity with the Masons and Odd-fellows who run the breweries, distillers and saloons.

A GOOD NEIGHBOR calls us "mud-slingers," for our protest against the propriety of a brother consenting to act as chaplain for the six Orange lodges in Chicago, by receiving them and their band in regalia into his church on the Sabbath, at the end of a long march, followed by the customary crowd of men, women and children.

If secret societies are a nuisance, it is the duty of Gospel missions and Gospel ministers to say so. Orange lodges were contrived 191 years ago, to fight Tyreonnel and his Ribbon men. What are they now, spread over the globe? Will the Mission Worker sling a little mud at them as well as at us?

The Anarchists now on trial, all belong to secret lodges. To receive and preach to them at the end of a Sunday parade with their flags, music and finery, and preach piety to them, expressing no opinion of the lodges which get their money, furnish their finery, flags and music, would be just as rational as to do the same for Orange lodges. They can afford one or two converts to pay for such public recognition: and make money by the operation. The Worker does not tell us how many ignorant young men were drawn into their lodges that day.

To convert drunkards, saloon men and jail-birds, is a good work; but what does the Worker think of the lodges, swarming in Chicago, which turn out young men in the night, when no lights are burning but those on the lamp-posts and before places of vice? Come, brother, sling us a little mud at the secret factories which fill the prisons and support the saloons and furnish your work.

THE RELATION OF NEWBORN INFANTS in the moral economy of God is a theme which we should embark in at once, if babes, before they walk or speak, should form lodges or open saloons. It is an interesting topic, as we have all been infants, and are on our way to second childhood.

Since declining to discuss the matter with brethren Gehring and Loggan, we have received a well-written and forcible article from Rev. W. E. Barton, of Robbins, Tenn., which we are obliged to decline, as the other brethren would have a right to reply, and that would be switching the Cynosure off its track or rather off the wolf-track leading to the dens in which the wolves skulk which are destroying Christ's sheep.

The term "original sin" is not in the Bible, and might be dropped, or exchanged for a Bible term, without damaging the cause of religion. The Cynosure holds no one personally amenable for the acts of another, performed before he was born, whether that person should be Adam or some other man. At the same time, the phrase "as in Adam all die," has a serious and very damaging import. Something has happened to infants which makes it certain that no holy cities or villages grow up unless grace reclaims the inhabitants; but the Cynosure holds no infants to blame for being born as they are; and is not particular whether that something which needs regeneration in infants be called "original sin," "depravity," taint, or corruption. We think every infant needs regeneration; and we are of the opinion that Samuel and John the Baptist were regenerated before they were born; and that all infants might and would be if parents were as good Christians as they ought to be. Certainly their salvation is promised to believing parents' faith.

Of the three brethren who have been moved to write by the statement dropped in the Baccalaureate sermon that newborn infants are "sinless," Bro. Gehring thinks it grievous error, Bro. Loggan defends the Baccalaureate, and Bro. Barton puts Bro. Gehring and the Cynosure in the same category, as holding infants to be sinners and dissents from us both. So now we have learned and given each others' belief, we must drop the discussion, and hope that the Baccalaureate will convince all that Horton's book is true, and that Masonry is "The Image of the Beast."

THEOLOGICAL DISCUSSIONS.

Rev. R. Loggan (United Brethren), of Clifton, Kan., writes an earnest vindication of the Baccalaureate address in view of the criticism of Rev. Mr. Gehring of Park College, from whom he quotes: "Bro. Gehring says, 'I do not deny that infant children are saved when they die as such.'" And then, after a clear and forcible exposition of Paul, showing that Christ's atonement covers the period of infant life prior to their "actual transgression," he concludes: "Then, when they die, they fall asleep in Jesus."

In 1867, Oct. 31, instigated by two Free Methodist pastors, Fanning and Underwood, we held our first anti-secret convention in Aurora, Ill., where Hon. Philo Carpenter then lived, whose name was among the first on the call for that convention. Mr. Carpenter was also vice-president of that first gathering. Our most sanguine hopes looked for delegates from four or five counties. Six States were represented, and this Bro. R. Loggan represented Nebraska, having come all the way from Plattsmouth to attend that meeting.

The Aurora Town Hall was full of people, and of the glory of God, so "they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and spake as the Spirit gave them utterance." When Bro. Loggan sat down after a most powerful speech, Mr. Carpenter leaned over and whispered: "These men are giants."

Five young men, light of foot as young roes, placed thousands of hand-bills in the houses in the city, and the hall at night was crammed. These young men were A. J. Bailey, H. L. Kellogg, C. A. Blanchard, and two others. This was nineteen years ago, and Mr. Bailey says the boots he wore that day have "pinched him ever since." But they are getting easier.

When the temperance reform started, ministers drank and deacons were distillers, and lecturers were mobbed. A theological discussion sprang up, called the "Taylor and Tyler controversy," which so filled the land with the fine dust of theology that pulpits and presses could not see whether the liquor was good or bad. Then came the lodge into the arena, with its hands bloody, followed by the slave-driver with his

"Lash on woman's shrinking flesh."

And "The Albert Barnes Case," and "Old School" and "New School," kept the educated, brilliant minds of the American clergy so busy settling the difference between moral and natural ability, that churches and religious papers did not protest against worshiping devils and whipping and selling slaves.

Let us not be beguiled a third time. When the hand of God puts a hot iron on our anvil, let us hammer that iron. The lodge is putting Christ out of our worship, and the whole Bible out of our schools, so as to make our schools theological lodges, without Decalogue or Saviour, law or gospel, right or wrong.

As both Mr. Gehring and Mr. Loggan agree that infants, dying before they know right and wrong, go to heaven, let us rescue their parents from the lodges and theology will run clear, so that parents may escape the lodge where Masons go.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord against the sun, that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away from Israel."—Numbers, 25:4.

Was this one of "the mistakes of Moses?" Surely not. The principle on which his "judges" took off and hung up the heads of the men who were seduced by the sorcerer Baalam and the women of Moab to forsake God's altar and "join" Baal Peor; that principle of political economy founded the Hebrew commonwealth which stood fifteen solid centuries before its final fall under Titus Vespasian. All their national disasters came by their departures from the altars of God which had a Decalogue and a Messiah, or Mediator; and besides the ghastly object-lesson, the rows of heads of their neighbors, who had switched off from God's altars to Baal's, twenty-four thousand men perished on that occasion by plague.

What then? Are we to cut off the heads of lodge-worshipers and hang them up in the sun? No. We are to pull down Baal's temples by "spiritual," not carnal weapons. But we must pull them down by the Spirit and Word of truth or they will pull the United States down, as they did the twelve United States of Judea.

The anarchists, now on trial for murdering a few policemen, worship Baal Peor. Their creed of disorganization repeals, not only property but marriage, as did those ancient lodge-ites. The two pillars, the Jachin and Boaz of the system, are force and license, dynamite and whoredom. And

"Haply there may be
Within the panel who do try the felon
A thief or two more guilty than the one Whom they condemn."

But few years since there might have been seen 1,600 able-bodied Masons coming out of McCormick's Hall, looking as wierd as so many spirit-worshippers from a circle, and a few blocks off several hundred women were met as an Eastern Star lodge, and these men and women, stranger to each other in person, but known by signs and grips, met and danced together in another hall after twelve o'clock at night. And if any one can point out any moral difference between this modern and the ancient Baal Peorism; or between that in Chicago and the like orders at Salt Lake, he will confer a favor on the public by showing it.

What then was the crime of Baalism? It was simply the crime of anarchism. The altar of Jehovah differed from Baal's in just this: One had a law and Gospel; the other had not. One was supreme love to God and equal love to man, with a Saviour to recover the lapsed, and wash them clean in his blood; while Peorism was made up of the exact stuff which makes Masonic lodges; viz., ceremonies!—always more ceremonies.

Now Judge Gary will instruct the jury to condemn Spiees, Parsons and others if proved guilty of murder. But Moses was commanded to hang up the heads of men who set up a government shop, in which murder was meritorious if done for the clan. O'Donnel followed Carey nearly half around the globe and shot him by the law of his lodge. This he declared to Mrs. Carey while her husband lay before her on the deck wallowing in his blood!

The Haymarket murder was a horror, a crime to be punished, if the guilt is proved. But what is murder compared with a lodge which has no morals in its creed; no marriage but a limited restriction to shield the near female relatives of Masons; no property, but a law forbidding to rob Masons; no truth, but lying legends instead; no right or wrong, because no rule of right and wrong, but the nugatory rules of a secret lodge?

If Moses had let Baalism go on in the delirious whirl of idol-worship and Eastern-Star-ism with the daughters of Moab, where the very gods were fictions and all was sham but vice, instead of a few hundred heads hung up to dry in the sun, he would have had a society in which there was no crime in perjury, because the gods themselves were lies; their Bible fictions, like the lies about Hiram and Solomon's temple lodge; no blasphemy, because the gods themselves were devils; no such thing as crime, because no law to define it but the will of an irresponsible despot; and blasphemy and murder meritorious, because required by the "Order" and sanctioned by its priests!

Such is the teaching of the object-lesson of Moses. While the teaching of that lesson was obeyed, Judea was the school-teacher of the world. Now it is the home of Arabs, jackals, Turks, pilgrims and priests.

REV. C. M. MORTON AND THE ORANGEMEN.

The reference to his sermon before the Orangemen, in the Cynosure of July 15th, is objectionable to Mr. Morton, who has written to a friend of the Cynosure enclosing an account of the meeting from the Daily Times, which he endorses. The report in the Inter Ocean, which was the basis of our sharp criticism, he regards incorrect. The Times says the discourse "did not contain a single allusion to the principles of the (Orange) order. On the contrary, it was an earnest appeal to his hearers on the necessity of practical Christianity in every day life," and that his allusion to Jeff Davis was not "a panegyric" but only a commendation of his obstinate consistency in adhering to the rebel cause in which he believed. We are assured, too, that Mr. Morton has been reclaimed from his early habits of dissipation for twenty-one years, which is greatly to his praise; and has enjoyed the confidence of good men during that period, as an earnest Christian, devoted to the service of Christ. We regret any injustice done Mr. Morton into which an incorreet report led us; and there should have been added to the note complained of, a sincere regret that since the evangelist Jones gave up tobacco here last winter, the pastor of the Railroad Chapel should continue its use; and that while Moody, Needham, Munhall, Whittle, Pentecost and other evangelists are warning against the secret lodges, Mr. Morton encourages them.

The facts of the meeting in question as we now gather them are these: Representatives of the six Orange lodges of Chicago "met in their hall, No. 2974 State street, and after some lodge business was gone over, those present fell into procession, under the conduct of District Marshal John Coyle and Brother David Frazer; and marched to the Presbyterian Railroad Chapel on the same street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. The procession was nearly two hundred strong, and was gaily set out by the orange colored sashes worn by the members. It being the Sabbath, there was an absence of the usual white horse, mounted by a representative of the immortal King William. The marchers made twenty-five blocks in their route. The members filed into the church and took seats in the center tiers of pews, the other seats being well filled with persons who were either Orangemen or the wives and children of Orangemen." After service they marched back again to their hall.

The above is quoted verbatum from the Times' report approved by Mr. Morton. Then followed the sermon, which, the report says, dissatisfied some of the Orangemen because it omitted laudations of the order, and dwelt on the duties of practical Christianity. In brief, 200 men, in gay Orange regalia, marched twenty-five blocks under marshals, with a band of music on the Sabbath, and displacing the ordinary congregation filled the Presbyterian mission chapel, July 11th.

These "Orangemen," so named from the Prince of Orange and their orange sashes, are a secret order formed one hundred and ninety-one years ago, to protect Protestants in Ireland from the Ribbonmen who were Catholics. The order spread from Ireland over England, Scotland, Wales, the Islands, Canada, and the United States. It thus became, and now is, a secret brotherhood, with the initiations, oaths, degrees and worships of the family of secretism. Like the Law and Orders leagues of Sedalia, Mo., and the Chicago "Conservators," whose professed object is to organize the male population of the United States to suppress local labor mobs, Orangeism was a secret order to suppress another secret order, but it became, and now is, a secret oath-bound brotherhood, which is not Christ's, to practice rites which are not Christian, to pay dues and obey unknown superiors in order to protect the government and laws,—in a word, to supersede, set aside, and substitute itself for religion and government. It is thus a Ku-Klux Klan ready for any and every evil work, which money, cunning and corruption may find and enable it to do. It tracked its way with riots and bloodshed, and, though professedly Protestant, in 1836 it was dissolved by Protestant England, and, though revived again after nine years, its processions are still forbidden in Ireland; and its late mobs and massacre in Belfast, swearing vengeance against Gladstone, the great Christian statesman, are but a specimen of what a secret order will do whose god is a "liar and murderer from the beginning."

Surely such a secret order is out of place in a Presbyterian chapel on the Sabbath day. For if there is a church on earth distinguished for its attachment to the Sabbath day more than others, that church is the Presbyterian; and if our Bro. Morton still uses tobacco and belongs to an Odd-fellow's lodge, as he does not deny, we hope the Cynosure's faithfulness will prove a blessing to him, and to the cause of Christ, who was no friend to secret societies and probably used no tobacco.

—John B. Finch, the head of the Good Templar order and chairman of the National committee of the Prohibition party, says that he is not a Freemason.

—Rev. George Warrington, editor of the Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa, called on the Cynosure on his return from Pennsylvania last Wednesday. He did not speak at Newcastle, Pa., as expected, because of a message postponing the engagement.

—Rev. S. Collins, D.D., president of the last N. C. A. National Convention, presided at the National Reform meeting at Ocean Grove, N. J., last week, and is now at Xenia, Ohio, where he may be addressed.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman has begun work preliminary to a State convention in Illinois. He spent a day or two in Aurora, but attempted no public address. He expected to spend the Sabbath in Princeton, where a welcome awaited him from several supporters of the reform.

—Secretary Stoddard addressed a fair audience at Pastor Seguin's Mission room last Thursday evening. Threats had been made of disturbance, but nothing occurred to disturb the quiet of the meeting, and an excellent impression was produced, some young men taking a lively interest and making such inquiries as gives the assurance that the lodge has lost some victims. The morning papers had good reports of the lecture.

—The United Brethren at Fairmount, Ind., passed a resolution of sympathy and co-operation with the congress of Christians which is expected to meet in Chicago, to discusss the attitude of the Christian church to the lodge power of the world. Revs. Halleck Floyd, of Indiana, and H. J. Becker, of California, were elected representatives to said convention.

—The National Reform Convention at Ocean Grove, July 21st, was a successful meeting. Rev. S. Collins, D.D., was chosen president, with John Alexander Esq., of Pittsburgh, Dr. White, Mrs. Woodbridge and other vice-presidents. Addresses were made by Bishop McIlwaine, Prof. David McAlister, of Geneva College, Mrs. Woodbridge and others, and resolutions adopted in favor of the principles of national reform as applied to the Sabbath, the marriage relation, temperance, civil service, and the labor question.

—Rev. M. A. Gault has our sincerest thanks for an excellent letter to the Christian Instructor on the National Christian Association and its work. In speaking of the power of the secret lodges over the churches, he says: "Like the slave power this evil of secretism is making fearful progress. We had dreamed that at least the Old Covenanter Church was untainted by it, but at our last annual gathering some were disposed to apologize for the Knights of Labor who were creeping into some of our city congregatious. One minister stated that a Covenanter on his deathbed had been heard repeating fragments of the Odd-fellow's ritual. In my rounds as agent of the National Reform Association, I have preached in several United Presbyterian congregations in which by confession of the pastors to me, Freemasons were in regular communion."

—The Good Templar lodge of Los Angeles, California, prospered in former days, and under the lead of devoted temperance men as attorney W. D. Gould and Capt. Wood of the Censor, not only had the confidence of the people, but secured real estate worth some $10,000. But unable to follow the lead of Katzenstein, of Sacramento, into the depths of lodgery, the order in Los Angeles, and Southern California generally, broke up, and among its latest acts transferred its property to the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Katzenstein had made great efforts to secure this valuable property, but could not succeed. This property is in the heart of Los Angeles, and the new owners propose to erect thereon a suitable building for temperance headquarters for that large section of the State, now rapidly increasing in population.

—A few days after the conference on the lodge question in Denver, June 9th, Dr. Munhall, of Indianapolis, assisted by the singer, Charles Herald of Chicago, began a month of powerful Gospel meetings in the skating rink, with afternoon Bible readings in the Central Presbyterian church, where Dr. Geo. P. Hayes was late pastor. Dr. Munhall was formerly a Freemason, but in one of these afternoon meetings, writes Rev. St. Clair Ross to the Dayton Conservator, while speaking on the subject of separation, he unmasked secrecy by pulling aside the curtain, and showed its evil workings by a good many illustrations, and said "he knew what he was talking about, for he had belonged to a good many of them; that they were detrimental to the cause of Christ, spiritually and financially; and for himself, in the future he would put his gifts into the church of the living God." The meeting closed with eight hundred conversions reported.

—An exchange notes the following petition offered to a Methodist conference in Canada. As the petition is evidently incomplete in its present form, will some of our corespondents in Canada who may be aware of the facts furnish the Cynosure a full report with the circumstances attending its presentation: "We, your petitioners, being members of the church which you represent in your Quadrennial Assembly, beg to represent that many of the ministers and others, are members of Masonic lodges and other secret combinations whose obligations and teachings are essentially and designedly anti-Christian; that Masonry, the parent and promoter of such combinations, professes to be a religion; has its priests, its ritual, its worship and its laws, to raise its members to holiness here and heaven hereafter; aud all this while it rejects the only Saviour, Jesus Christ; and as these ministers and other members of our church should belong to Christ and his Gospel alone, and have no fellowship with such unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, feel much aggrieved by the contradictory and unholy connections here specified, and are becoming more and more dissatisfied therewith, especially so with regard to ministers who have entered into such unholy and anti-Christian association."

The Secret Empire.

THE LEHR UND WEHR VEREIN.

The Lehr und Wehr Verein, of which the witness Waller in the anarchist trial was a member, and whose plottings against society he detailed to the jury, was organized in 1875, and on April 16 of that year was incorporated under the laws of the State. The incorporators were about thirty German and Bohemian socialists, whose object was to train and drill in military fashion and get ready for the great conflict between capital and labor which agitators of that class have for many years declared was to come.

The society attracted but little public notice until the year 1879, when the Legislature passed the law creating the State militia and forbidding the formation of private military organizations without a license from the Governor. The law caused a great deal of discussion among lawyers, many of whom believed it was in conflict with the United States militia act There was also some political feeliug stirred up by it, the opponents of Gov. Cullom holding that it was a move on the part of the latter to create a new set of officeholders, and thus aid in his election to the United States senate.

In December, 1879, the Lehr und Wehr Verein, then forty strong, paraded on the streets of Chicago armed with rifles. At their head rode Herman Presser, a workingman and socialist, carrying a saber. Presser was arrested and was indicted under the new law because his company had refused to take out the required license. His case was taken up by the enemies of the militia act, and as a test case he was tried in the Criminal Court and fined $10. The case was appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court and subsequently to the Supreme Court of the United States. Among the attorneys who helped to prosecute the appeal were Lyman Trumbull and Allan C. Story. In both courts the new law was sustained.

The Lehr und Wehr Verein never paraded in public after that and it was lost sight of, but the members never ceased to drill and own military weapons. During the last six years they have increased greatly in numbers, and at the time of the Haymarket riot there were six groups in the city.

"It has been no secret for years," said a well-known labor agitator lately, "that the Lehr und Wehr Verein were training to fight the police. They have drilled in theirhalls, and have steadily increased in numbers, until there are probably two hundred or three hundred of them."

"What class of people are they?"

"They are socialists of the ultra type. Every socialist who is in favor of dynamite is among them. The most of them have served in the army in the old country and hate government and law. The men who first formed the society were not dynamiters, but they were men who believed that the only way for the working people to secure their rights was to fight."

"I don't know much about the Lehr und Wehr Verein," said A. C. Story, "as I never came in contact with them. The society was only a figurehead in the case which went to the Supreme Court. I think it is likely that the society at first was a harmless affair, no more dangerous to the community than any military organization, but it is probable that when Spies, Fielden, and men of that class came to the front they saw in it a means of accomplishing an end. It is probable that they took hold of the society and introduced the dynamite business into it."—Daily News.

A few days ago, in the presence of and assisted by the members of the Highgate Gospel Temperance Help One Another Society, Mr. William Green, of Bishopwood House, Highgate, England, the president of the society, destroyed his cellar of wine, about 2,500 bottles, valued at about £600. In a speech explaining his reasons, he said that after mature reflection and earnest prayer he had come to the conclusion that it was God's will that he should part with the contents of his wine-cellar. After this address the contents of the bottles were poured into the sewer.

A Philadelphia woman of wealth has discriminated against tobacco-using preachers. She left a large bequest for the support of a Preacher s Home, or something of that kind, but forbidding that any tobacco-spitting person should enjoy its benefits. A hint that will be very effective.

—Mary Emily Dowson has been legally qualified to practice both medicine and surgery as a member of a College of Surgeons in Great Britain, the first lady in the kingdom who has secured the right.

THE HOME.

HOME RULE.

The farmer sat in his old arm chair,
Rosy and fair,
"Kate, I declare."
He said to his wife, who was knitting near,
"We need not fear
The hard times here,
Though the leaf of life is yellow and sere.

"I am the king, thou art the queen
Of this fair scene.
Our love is green
As when thou wert a village maid,
And I, a blade,
In love—afraid
My fondest hopes would be delayed.

"Now, whether the days be dim or fine,
In rain and shine,
Here, thine and mine,
Are cattle grazing upon the hill,
Taking their fill,
And sheep so still,
Like many ruled by a single will.

"These barnyard fowls, our subjects all,
They heed the call
Both great and small,
When we scatter for them the grain.
'Tis not in vain
We live and reign,
In this our happy, fair domain,

"Unvexed with shifting stocks and shares,
And bulls and bears,
And the affairs
Of speculation in mart and street,
In this retreat
Sweet Peace can meet
Plenty that's crowned with braided wheat."

—Vick's Magazine.

RELIGION AT HOME.

It is laughable to see one hunting high and low for his spectacles when they have only been shoved over his forehead. But it is not laughable to see Christians hunting for what they call opportunities to honor God, while overlooking such opportunities which they carry with them wherever they go. A slovenly carpenter was once heard at a weekly prayer meeting to pray with great ferveney for the spread of Christ's cause—a cause which he disgraced and hindered in his sphere every time he stood at his workbench. When he ended his prayer, a hearty "Amen" came from a servant who put her mistress out of temper a hundred times a day by her carelessness. A clerk also was there, who, although he taught a class in the mission school on Sabbath, was always late at his employer's store week days. He whispered "Amen!" too—and meant it so far as he knew himself. A lady hearer, as she listened, resolved to join the church, and then went home and found unreasonable fault with her cook. And others also felt warmed to do something for Christ, who never seemed to have thought that religion, like charity, begins at home. The mechanic who is powerful in class meeting and weak at his trade, is no credit to the cause he professes. The servant who drops tears feelingly at religious services and drops dishes unfeelingly in the kitchen has her tenderness altogether too much on one side. And it is a poor kind of religion that seeks opportunities to set others straight but overlooks its own crookedness.—S. S. Times.

BUILD YOUR NEST HIGH!

The pulpit and the press have had a great deal to say about marriage lately. The brightest pens have been sought that the greatest wisdom might be secured. It has been a real coming-down-to-fact, and sensible talk, that must result in a better state of matrimonial affairs. No writer advocates the doll-baby sort of woman, nor the type of man that fancies her. Neither has there been anything that could be called "strong-minded" or revolutionary. The one particular thing that has been emphasized, is the influence of young women over young men, and the consequent raising or lowering of the standard of marriage. With the removal of the stigma that used to pertain to single life, and the wider opportunities offered women in industrial and philanthropic pursuits, there is more freedom of choice guaranteed to woman. She can be happiest if married well, but happy at all events, and useful. Such is the trend of discussion.

Another important point has been reached. It is no longer the height of missionary endeavor to "marry a man to save him" from bad habits, and consequent destruction. The girls of to-day are finding out that the wife has less power than the sweet-heart, that marriage will not make a man who loves the wine-glass or immoral practices better than he loves her, the fit companion for her untarnished womanhood.

Dear girls, if you have hugged any such fancy to your heart—if you think Theophilus only "weak," when he is wicked, if you have to make excuses to yourself over his tainted breath or his tainted morals, you are building your nest too low! You cannot afford to smile now at things you will weep over by and by. No poverty or privation, no sorrow or loss, can equal the misery of feeling you have thrown your life away upon one you must always shield from the knowledge of others. If you shrink a little now as the fumes of beer or whisky fall in your face, how shall you shudder when you are forced to meet it daily? If the stories idle tongues tell disturb your serenity now, how shall you bear them when the certainty comes? If you excuse idleness, irreverence, irresponsibility now, what shall you say when home and helpless children depend upon his hands and brain?

O, dear singing birds of future homes, build your nests high! Weave them in the bows of character, of industry, of purity. Weave them about with love and devotion. Cling as you will with all womanly tenderness to manhood's strength, but be sure it is strength. Build your nest high!—Woman's Magazine.

LANGUAGE OF THE VOICE.

Nothing betrays so much as the voice, save perhaps the eyes, and they can be lowered, and so far their expression hidden.

In moments of emotion no skill can hide the fact of disturbed feeling, though a strong will and the habit of self-control can steady the voice when else it would be failing and tremulous.

Certain voices grate on the nerves and set our teeth on edge, and others are just as calm as they are irritating, quieting, or like a composing draught.

A good voice, calm in tone and musical in quality, is one of the essentials for a physician—the "bedside voice"—which is nothing if it is not sympathetic by constitution.

Whatever its original quality may be, the orator's voice bears the unmistakable stamp of art, and becomes artificiality; as such it may be admirable—telling in a crowd, impressive in address, but overwhelming and chilling at home, partly, because it is always conscious and never self-forgetting.

An orator's voice, with its careful intonation and accurate accent, would be as much out of place beside a sick-bed as a broeaded silk for the kitchen girl.

The voice is much more indicative of the state of the mind than many people know or allow.

One of the first symptoms of failing brain power is in indistinct or confused utterance; no idiot has a clear or melodious voice; the harsh scream of mania is proverbial, and no person of prompt and decisive thought was ever known to hesitate and stutter.

A thick, loose, fluffy voice does not belong to the crisp character of mind which does the most active work, and when a keen-witted man drawls and lets his words drip instead of bringing them out in the sharp, incisive way that ought to be natural to him, there is a flaw somewhere.

CONVERSATION.

"The power to converse well is a very great charm," says Ruskin. "You think anybody can talk? How mistaken you are! Anybody can chatter. Anybody can exchange idle gossip. Anybody can recapitulate the troubles of the kitchen, the cost of the last new dress, and the probable doings of the neighbors. But to talk wisely, instructively, freshly and delightfully is an immense accomplishment. It implies exertion, observation, study of books and people, and receptivity of impression." Plato banished the musicians from his feasts that the charms of conversation might have no interference, but in our later fashions many prefer music rather than the gossip of the hour which often degenerates into trivialities, wearisome and commonplace. As the mirror reflects the face, so conversation reveals the mind, and Dr. Johnson said he could tell just how much a man knew if he could hear him talk for a while.—The Current.

Happiness is like manna; it is to be gathered in grains, and enjoyed every day. It will not keep, it cannot be accumulated; nor have we got to go out of ourselves or into remote places to gather it, since it has rained down from heaven, at our very doors, or rather withinside them.—Martyria.

Few men know of how much they are capable until they have first tested their abilities.

A FAMILY STRIKE.

"There! I've stood it just as long as I'm going to! There's no use in being so particular!" and Jasper Jones threw his cap into a chair, his hat on the floor, and stretched himself upon the sofa with a defiant look on his young face.

"What will you do when she comes in and says in that quiet, strong way, 'Jasper, you hat is out of place. Hang it up in the entry, please; and put your hat behind the shed door,'" said Elsie, with a droll imitation of her step-mother's voice and manner.

"I'll just say I'm going to when I've rested a little. We've all jumped at her bidding ever since she came. I've gone back to wipe my feet, and hang up my hat, and clean my overshoes, and all that, till I'm sick of it."

"I'm sick of it, too," said Elsie. "I left my clothes where they fell last night, when I went to bed. I was so tired. Mother didn't happen to look in, or I suppose she'd have routed me from bed to hang them up. It's awfully tiresome to have to put everything just so, every time."

"Ma never made us do it," said Jasper.

"And the house was always tidy enough to suit me," said Elsie. "Not so nice as mother keeps it, perhaps, but I like to be free and easy, and I hate to be prim."

"The old order was good enough, I say," said Jasper. "Let's strike! Strikes are all the rage nowadays. When folks want the rules changed they strike. We'll talk it up to Bess, and Clarence and Rose; and, if we're all in it, mother'll see that she may as well give up. That's the way it always works, don't you see?"

"I don't want to do anything bad," said Elsie. "You know ma said if God sent us anybody who was willing to be a mother to us we were to be good and obedient."

"Well, we have been, and we mean to be. Only she needn't be so much more particular than ma was."

Bess and Clarence and little Rose were easily led to embrace the views of their brother and sister. The league was formed, Jasper appointed as leader, and it was agreed that the strike should come off "before father comes home."

"The first thing is to perform a procession and march," said Jasper, "and while we're doing that I'll think up my speech. Our marching will show mother that we mean business."

It was fine fun for the little ones. They got strips of red and white cloth and tied them to short poles, and carried them as banners; and they marched up and down through dining-room, and kitchen, and bed-rooms, up stairs and down stairs, out into the yard, and back through the long entry, till the mother wondered, and grew a little restless over the tramp, tramp, that was making more threadbare the carpets which wore out so fast.

"Come, come!" said she, at last; "haven't you kept up that play long enough? Seems to me it is rather small business for you, Jasper and Elsie."

"We're strikin'," said Clarenee, waving his flag; "just like the big folks do."

In and out, up and down, they still kept their march. There was a curious expression on their step-mother's face whenever they passed through the kitchen, where she was ironing their clothes.

Finally they halted before her, and, standing with toes all even with a crack in the kitchen floor, they made a low bow, as Jasper had instructed them, and then he began his speech: "Honored and respected madam, our mother; we have tried to do as you wanted us to, and we don't wish now to be bad, or rebellious, or anything. But we think, one and all, that it's too hard, when a fellow comes in all tired out with baseball, or something, to have to run straight and put his hat in one place and his hat in another. This strike is to—to see if we can't come to some agreement that we shall live a little more free and easy, as Elsie says, and do a little more as we've a mind to do about such things. We don't wish to be very disorderly, but we would rather not have to be quite so particular."

"I suppose," said she, "you expect me to make a speech in reply. But I must have a little time to think what I ought to say. Besides it is almost lunch time, and I must get these things ironed first. Suppose you march up and down on the sidewalk in front of the house till my speech is ready."

"Can't I iron, and you go right to getting lunch?" asked Elsie, pressed by hunger.

"That isn't the way. We ought all to keep marching," said Jasper; "but we're all hungry, so perhaps you'd better."

"Just as you like," said their mother. "And if Jasper and Clarence will bring some light, dry wood from the shed, we shall have lunch all the sooner."

Flags were consigned to Bess and Rose, and the procession broke up for the present. Nothing more was heard of the strike till lunch was over. Perhaps it would have been forgotten altogether, but Mrs. Jones herself reminded them of it by saying, "I have my answer ready now, if you wish to hear it."

"Oh, yes, we do! Form into line here! There, we're ready!" said the children.

"Well, when I came here, you all threw your things down just where it happened, and often they were lost, or broken, or soiled; and it always made the house disorderly. I suppose your own mother used to pick them up for you, but I thought you were old enough to begin to learn to put them away yourselves. But it seems you do not like my plans. Now I can't have a disorderly house, so we must compromise the matter. That is the usual way in case of a strike, I believe."

"Yes, we should like to compromise," said Jasper. "That's just what we want."

"Very well. There is a large hogshead in the back room. Whenever you leave any of your things about, I shall not ask you to put them in place any more. I will just drop them into that hogshead. We will call it the 'disorder barrel.' And when you want them you can look there for them."

Jasper and Elsie looked somewhat nonplussed, and glanced dolefully at each other, but Clarence and Bess and Rose hailed the compromise as every way satisfactory, and the strike was over.

The first things that went into the disorder barrel were the flags which had been thrown together upon a settee. Mrs. Jones dropped in this first contribution with a quiet, amused smile. For several days Jasper and Elsie were rather careful to put away their things, for the hogshead was deep and wide, and it would be "such a bother" to get them out if they once got in. But presently the barrel began to fill up, and the fuller it grew the more difficult it was to find any small article that had been consigned to its depths. Mrs. Jones seemed fully satisfied with the arrangement. She no longer reminded them to lay their things in the proper places, and books, slates, hats and bonnets, marbles, and jumping ropes were quietly dropped in together.

More and more frequently the cry arose in the house. Where is my jackknife? Where is my best alley? Where is my tippet? and little Rose's small piping voice was generally heard in reply, "In the sorder barrel, I speet!" and the discomfited loser ran, often in hot haste, to rummage among the medley of articles. The older ones stood on a chair and reached down to search, but when time pressed and search was unavailing they were often brought to the extremity of turning the barrel upon its side, pulling out the contents, and when the lost article was found, tumbling them back again. But Clarence and Bess, who were not strong enough to tip the barrel over, had been known more than once to climb into it, much to the detriment of some of its contents.

Jasper and Elsie complained of this, but the mother's laughing reproof in no wise availed to prevent a repetition of the offense. Consequently many things came out of the disorder barrel so crushed and spoiled that they might almost as well have been thrown into the fire.

"I can't go to the picnic to-morrow, nor to school next day, nor anywhere any more, as I see," said Elsie, one day. "My hat is just ruined. The crown is crushed down, and there's a stain of apple or something on the ribbon. I'll never wear it. I don't think much of your old strike, Jasper! It's made us ten times more trouble than we had before. I should like to set that old disorder barrel afire and burn it up, with all there is in it, and never hear of it again!"

"Well, I own that I'm sick of my job," said Jasper. "Suppose we strike once more, and get it abolished."

"Oh, yes; strike again! Where's my flag, I wonder?" said Clarence. "Strikes are such fun."

"The consequences are not fun to me," said Elsie, "and I'm not going through any more of that silly marching. I'm just going to ask mother to change back to the old way; that's all."

"But we ought all to go together and ask her, because we were all in the strike," said Jasper.

"Well, then let's do it right away," said Elsie.

So the procession was again formed, and without much preparation and with no needless parade they sought their mother and made known their request. She cheerfully promised that the odious barrel should be abolished. And that evening she kindly pressed and retrimmed Elsie's school hat, so that the soiled ribbon and crushed place were no longer visible, and henceforth things returned to their old order, the gain from the strike being manifest only in the added zeal and cheerfulness with which even the slightest hints were obeyed.—Selected.

STRIKES.

Strikes are quite proper; only strike right;
Strike to some purpose, but not for a fight;
Strike for your manhood, for honor and fame;
Strike right and left till you win a good name;
Strike for your freedom from all that is vile;
Strike off companions who often beguile;
Strike with the hammer, the sledge and the axe;
Strike off bad habits with troublesome tax;
Strike out unaided, depend on no other;
Strike without gloves, and your foolishness smother;
Strike off the fetters of fashion and pride;
Strike where 'tis best, but let wisdom decide;
Strike a good blow while the iron is hot;
Strike, and keep striking, till you hit the right spot.

—Selected.

NURSERY MUSIC.

Two-year-old Tommy is often told to be "still as a mouse," lest he wake the baby. The other day while dressing him his mother said, "Will my little boy be good all day?" He replied, "I'm doing be dust as dood as a mouse." "I hope you will," said his mother with a kiss. "And I hope mamma will, too," said the little fellow, affectionately returning the caress.

Here is a childlike incident which we commend to certain doughty disputants over full salvation. A little child, becoming wearied with the quarrelling of two younger children over a glass of milk, exclaimed, "What's the use of quarrelling over that milk? There is a whole cowful out in the barn."

A very little girl, whose father is a minister, had been sorely tempted to play at the waterpail, which stood upon a low bench within her reach. It was thought best not to remove it, but to make it a tree of the knowledge of good and evil. More than once her chubby fingers had been "snapped" by way of correction. At two years of age she went with grandma to church, where her deportment was very serious. On returning, some one said, "Well, so you have been to church!" "Yes." "And did you hear papa preach?" "Yes." "And what did he say?" (Thoughtfully): "Oh—he p'each, an' he p'each, an' he tell 'e people 'ey mus' be—good chillens—an'—not play in 'e water pail!" The conscientious baby is now a mature Christian, teaching a great many other children "not to play in the waterpail."

Family physician: "I'm afraid you have been eating too much cake and candy. Let me see your tongue." Little girl: "Oh, you can look at it; but it won't tell."

Little Alice, not three years old, came running into the room where her mother was sewing, and throwing her little head into her mother's lap, said: "Mamma, I don't want God everywhere, I don't want God everywhere." Her mamma suspected that she had been in some mischief; so she went into the other room, and found the little girl had been doing wrong, had been disobedient. Is it not true that disobedient children, whether large or small ones, do not like to have God everywhere? Dear children, may we all ever remember that "Thou God seest me."—Christian at Work.

A little girl once said that she would be very glad to go to heaven, because they had plenty of preserves there. On being cross examined, she took down her catechism and triumphantly read: "Why ought the saints to love God?" Answer, "Because he makes, preserves, and keeps them."

TEMPERANCE.

THE GEORGIA EVANGELIST FOR A THIRD PARTY AND COLD WATER.

Sam Jones made a rousing temperance speech to 4,000 people at the camp meeting at Macon, Mo., July 15. In giving his views on prohibition in politics he said: "I am not in favor of putting a man into office because he's a prohibitionist, unless he possesses the other requisite qualifications. I won't let any prohibition candidate saddle himself on my vote and ride into office, but I'll saddle the prohibition question onto him, and make him come out flat-footed in favor of reform. My views on this question have been changed lately. The liquor dealers in Georgia met a few weeks ago and adopted a platform in which they declared their intention to cut loose from party ties and vote for the man who would work for their interest. After reading this, I say I am in favor of political prohibition from this time forward. Let us put on our tickets men who stand square on this question, and if we nominate the right kind of men we will scoop the other parties out of existence. There may have been a reason twenty, ten, or even two years ago why temperance men should be Democrats or Republicans, but there is not now. The Democratic party champions whisky and the Republican party champions beer. There they are—one astraddle of a beer keg, the other straddling a whisky barrel. They go rackin' along, and yet temperance people will vote for such a party. Let's lay both those parties in the shade and live and vote for sobriety, temperance and right. A member of the church who won't vote for prohibition belongs to the devil from his hat to his shoes. What kind of a minister do you suppose it is that is afraid to leave his party and work for prohibition? He hasn't got any backbone—nothing but a cotton string with two or three ribs tied to it."

A "COMMERS."

In connection with the report of the late national meeting of German singing societies at Milwaukee, the Inter Ocean describes one of their entertainments which seems to be a beastial relic of ancient German savagery:

"Did you ever attend a 'commers?' Do you know what it is? Well, it is a thoroughly German entertainment that is as popular with the Teutonic element as good beer. The participants, several hundred in number, march into a large hall preceded by one or more brass bands. The society entering first is seated and as the next one enters, if with a band, keeps time with the music by clinking of knives and forks on the plate, causing a rather loud and bizarre effect. There are immensely long tables filling the hall, and, instead of chairs, there are benches as long as the tables. The latter are laden with slices of rye bread in abundance, likewise cheese, ham, sausage, that is the good German 'wurst,' the genuine article; onions and sardines are also seen. At a table on a dais sits the master of ceremonies with his aids. Last evening Harry Rubens, of Chicago, presided at the Germania 'commers.' At a signal the waiters bring in the beer in glasses. From four hundred to five hundred glasses at a time. Ere they are ready to return for more the beer has disappeared. The waiters return with more, and this keeps on for some three hours. Reckon for yourself how many glasses each man drinks, bearing in mind that he does not pay for it. The eatables also disappear. There is no charge for them either. The society giving the 'commers' pays for all the beer and bread and other solids. At a signal every man receives a fresh glass of beer. At another every man stands up. Some one with a big voice arises and every man takes his glass. The big voice, as round as a beer keg, shouts, 'Eins'—'Zwei'—'Drei'—'Salamander,' and every glass of beer is simultaneously emptied and thrust upon the table with a crash; this is repeated a number of times, but no one becomes intoxicated and the best of humor prevails. The ladies sit in the gallery above and are allowed to look on and have some refreshments occasionally. No, they do not take ice cream and lemonade. Something stronger and more substantial. Yes, a 'commers' always proves a great night for Germany, and a benefit to the beer brewer."

TWO GREAT COMBINATIONS.

The members of the W. C. T. U., of the Prohibition party, of the Y. W. C. T. U. and other juvenile organizations—and many patriotic men, women, and youths who as yet belong to none of these organizations, are in an open and avowed combination to bring about certain ends.

Not one of these ends is secret or has an evil purpose or breathes hostility, unkindness or injustice to any class of human beings.

The proposition is to obliterate by law the dramshop, the brothel, the gaming house; to institute an honest, pure righteous government; to save this Christian nation from extinction in the flood of crime and debauchery which now menaces its existence—and to introduce an era of universal justice, of peace and good will, of general happiness and prosperity,—a condition easily attainable in this country under a rational and common-sense system of statesmanship and government.

Another combination exists with other aims and ends, some secret, some open; some having an inkling of a certain brand of patriotism or justice; some of them neither good nor bad; some of them as infamous, atrocious and accursed as it is possible for the heart of man to conceive.

The chiefs and leaders of this conspiracy of evil are the liquor makers and dealers, who make this world a hell and live by the robbery, corruption, ruin and murder of their fellowmen and women and children. Their one great object is to plant and maintain the dramshop everywhere, Sunday and week-day, and with it the brothel, the gambling den, the thief-school and of consequence the jail, gallows and penitentiary.

These men certainly murder every year in this country 100,000 persons, by drunkenness, by disease induced by the use of rum and beer; by the starvation, exposure and cruel treatment of the children and wives of drunkards; by drunken crime and drunken accident. In England, Germany and other countries, their track is similarly one of blood and death and hell everywhere. And the permission of a single dramshop anywhere in this Republic, is a crime that is not surpassed in deep and devilish atrocity and infamy by any vileness ever recorded. That is the simple truth and anything less forcible would be untrue.

Next to these men and in intimate alliance with them are our politicians of the Republican and Democratic parties. They expect office by agreeing to maintain the dramshop and help along its infamous work and support its infamous allies. A man who seeks or takes office under such conditions is a murderer of his fellowmen, and a sharer in all the crimes of the dramshop.

The dramshops and brothels continue to flourish and to steal the sons and daughters of honest parents, and to ruin, debauch and kill them. They can do this because they are supported and licensed and patronized by the legislators and office holders elected by the two old parties.

And these politician legislators and officials are elected to carry on this volume of vice, villainy, treason, and infinite shame, because first, all the vile and vicious voters vote for them, and next, their election is made sure by the votes of farmers, citizens, professed temperance people and Christians, and some ministers and bishops—well meaning but unthinking people—who by voting for these men, vote directly for the perpetuity of the dramshop, the brothel, the thief-school, the gallows; and they vote also for the abolition of the Sabbath and Christianity and for the extinction of this nation by rum and crime. That is the clear platform of both the godless old parties of crime.

These are two great combinations, one is in the name of God and humanity—the other in the name and service of the enemies of God and humanity; if any one can show any standing ground for Christian or patriot in the latter—let him do it.—Censor, Los Angeles, Cal.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

—The Free Methodist Seminary at Spring Arbor, Michigan, opens August 1st. For circulars of the nstitution apply to A. H. Stillwell.

—The Pauline Holiness College, at College Mound, Macon county, Missouri, Jasper A. Smith, president, lately closed its third year with thirty-seven students in the college classes and a good attendance in the other departments. The fall term opens Sept. 8, 1886.

—The University of Heidelberg, Germany, is to celebrate its 500th anniversary in August of this year. The ceremonies and festivities will be on a magnificent scale.

—Michigan University outranks all American institutions in the matter of large graduating classes. That university gave degrees to 366 students, this season, there being just 100 graduates in the college of liberal arts.

—Judge R. M. Widney, of Los Angeles, Cal., has made a recent gift of $100,000, his share of the proceeds of the San Fernando ranch, which sold for $400,000, to the University of Southern California (Methodist) for a reserve fund. The total endowment of the University in money, land and buildings is now $750,000, but in a few years the value of the lands will probably be two millions. The institution has a fine new brick building of imposing proportions approaching completion in the southern part of Los Angeles.

—The University of Strasburg, founded in 1567, was reorganized in 1871, and is thus in a certain sense, a monument of the new political conditions. Since the reorganization, over three and a half million of dollars has been expended for new buildings, etc., and there is an annual apropriation of nearly a quarter of a million dollars for its support. Its new edifices are a series of magnificent palaces, and its library contains 560,000 volumes. No other institution in Europe has so rich a provision for higher education. It now has 73 ordinary and 19 extraordinary professors. Last year there were 858 students.

—The degree of Ph. D. cum laude was conferred by Columbia College, N. Y., at its last commencement, on Winifred Egerton, of Wellesley College. For the past two years she has had charge of the scientific department of Reed College. She is distinguished for the excellence of her scientific work in the departments of practical astronomy and pure mathematics. Her theses were upon "Multiple Integrals," and "Latitude of Columbia College Observatory."

Religious News.

—The Free Methodist brethren are organizing a colony for Africa which will probably locate with Bro. Shemeld at Esteourt in Natal. Responses are beginniug to come in from devoted men who are williug to forsake all if need be for Christ.

—R. L. Harris of Texas went to Liberia last fall to find an opening for mission work and a colony. He returned a while since to make up a colony. He has eight missionary workers ready to go to Africa, and expects to come North about August 1 to hold misssionary meetings and collect funds.

—It is now definitely settled, says the Mission Worker of this city, that Moody will come to this city in October and inaugurate his scheme for evangelizing the masses through the agency of a system of missions. Missions will be planted in the worst localities, and supplied with the men and means to do effective work. In connection with these missions there will be a school for the trainiug of men for this special work. We welcome this as an anwer to the prayers of the mission workers of Chicago, who have been laboring for years amid many discouragements. Thank God, the poor will have the Gospel preached to them.

—The converts during the month of meetings held by Munhall and Herald in Denver, beginuing June 13, numbered 800. Dr. Munhall was faithful in his testimony against secretism.

—Thirty-five years ago it was the crime of high treason in Italy to possess a Bible. Now Bible depots are established in every Italian city.

—There are now in Mexico, connected with missions of five denominations, 10,000 people who have renounced Romanism and professed faith in Jesus Christ.

—The Old School Baptists, once numbering 100,000 in the United States, now fall below 40,000. Their doctrine has been that Christian work has been to comfort saints and feed the sheep, but not to preach to sinners, because conversion is an act of sovereign grace, without the instrumentality of man. They are opposed to education, missions and other benevolent agencies of the church, as being the invention of men, and contrary to the Gospel.

—Rev. A. R. Dodd preached his farewell sermon to the Wesleyan Methodist congregation at College Springs, Iowa, July 25th. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, and many were present from other churches of the town. Prof. Dodd goes to New York State to take charge of Houghton Seminary.

—Dr. Butler has just received a letter from Bro. Knowles of India, stating that three whole villages in the Terai, numbering in all 583 souls, have been baptized.

—Jah Jai Pil, a Corean exile, has confessed his faith in Christ, and has been baptized and received into the Howard Presbyterian church of San Francisco.

—A number of Chinese converts at Foochow have volunteered to go to Corea as missionaries. This is the first instance of a Chinaman leaving his own country to spread Christianity abroad.

—There were 151 Protestant churches in Japan January 1, 1886, with 11,602 communicants, 2,706 of whom were added in 1885. Their total contributions were $28,406.97, or $6,415 more than in 1884.

—Dr. Murray Mitchell, of England, recently expressed the thought that by the end of this century no foreign missionaries would be needed to carry on the work in Japan.

—The new mayor of Shanghai is a native Christian. This is, indeed, a significant promise of His coming. A very few years ago and Chincse prejudices would not have permitted such an honor to be conferred on a Christian.

—The Church Missionary Society of Great Britain has attained, in respect to its receipts, the highest figures ever reached by any similar society throughout the world. The actual receipts were 233,219 pounds sterling; that is, about $1,161,000.

—Dr. Levi Johnson, of Bishop Taylor's party in Africa, writes: "Slavery is carried on from the interior to a fearful extent. The women are captured and placed in a large inclosure, where they are fattened and anointed, and sold for wives and servants, as the case may be. All the young female children are sold for wives in their infancy, to be delivered to their purchasers, at the ages from eight to twelve years."

—Buddhism in Burmah had a deadly blow in the overthrow of the native government. Its supporters have petitioned the English Government to appoint the Buddhist Pope, and, of course to support him, but the Viceroy has iuformed them that it is impossible.

—The Church of Scotland Mission in the Punjaub, Northern India, is having great success. More than 100 converts from heathenism have been baptized withiu a few months, 100 more are preparing for admission to the church, and whole villages are asking for teachers to tell them of Christ.

—There are in the American Episcopal church fourteen sisterhoods and two well-established orders of deaconesses—one in Long Island and one in Alabama. In the church of England tweuty-five sisterhoods and eight orders of deaconesses are reported.

—"It is no uncommon experience" says Dr. Hall, "for me to receive a letter from a hired servant, regretting that she would be unable to come the next Sabbath, as it was her day to stay at home, and inclosing perhaps five, and, in one case, ten dollars for the foreign missionary collection."

—The telegraph reports the sudden death by a railway accideut of Mr. Charles Hutchins, manager of the American Board rooms in Boston for many years. Mr. Hutchius was well known in the Congregational denomination in the East, and was a frieud to Christians of all faiths.

—At the late meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, held in Minneapolis, there was present as commissioner a very remarkable man—a Sioux or Dakota Indian, eighty years old, Simon by name. He had been the foremost brave in his tribe, and by his deeds of savage prowess had acquired the distinction of "above law"—that is, he was beyond the reach of legal punishment. But he submitted himself to the law of Christ, and was admitted into the church; forty-five years ago, by the well-known missionary of the American Board, Dr. Riggs. For a time he was overcome by the fire-water of the white man, but afterwards conquered himself, and for many years has been ruling elder and licensed preacher. In the Minnesota massacre of 1862, he remained loyal to the whites at the risk of his life. A captive family, hearing the voice of prayer from Simon's tent, committed themselves to him and escaped. There was great enthusiasm in the Assembly as the old warrior was called to the platform, a wonderful witness of the power of the Gospel over the savage character.

—Thirty years ago South Ceylon was emphatically a land of darkness. In that time Christianity has made great progress. The Sunday-school has been an important aid in missionary work. The Rev. John Scott, in writing about the Wesleyan Missionary Society in the island, says: "There is no department work in which the native Christians engage more heartily than in Sunday schools. According to the returns at our last district meetiug, we have now 100 Sunday schools, 373 teachers, and 6,066 scholars. These schools are well and zealously conducted, and many of the children have been brought to rejoice in their Saviour."

—Rev. E. P. Hammond is holding meetings in Christina, Norway, in a large hall which is crowded night after night. The desire of the people to hear the truth is so great that they are reluctant to leave at the close of the scrvices. Mr. Hammond considers these the most remarkable meetings he has held in his long career as an evangelist.

—The Waldensians, at the General Conference at Florence, Italy, have decreed that hereafter female members who have reached the age of twenty-one shall be allowed to vote but not to speak, at church meetings.

—Statistics of Christian work accomplished in the Sandwich Islands have been heretofore given in various places, but the following facts brought together by Rev. Mr. Forbes, Secretary of the Hawaiian Evangelicial Association, will be of interest. The first Hawaiian pastor was ordained in 1849. Since that time ninety-five Hawaiians have been ordained of whom thirty-eight are at present pastors in the home field, and nine are in foreign service, making forty-seven native Hawaiians who are now either pastors or missionaries in active service. Since 1852, when the first Hawaiians went to Micronesia in company with Messrs. Snow, Gulick and Sturges, not less than seventy-five Sandwich Islanders have gone as foreign missionaries, thirty-nine of them males, thirty-six females. The total sum contributed at the Islands for foreign missions has been $170,149 44. Of this amount $133,015.86 was contributed by native Hawaiian churches, the remainder by foreign churches and individuals at the Islands. The contributions of the Hawaiian churches for all purposes from the beginning, so far as can be ascertained, amount to $818,270.35. This record should awaken our gratitude and stimulate our faith.—Missionary Herald.

LODGE NOTES.

Our Odd-fellow lady friend's will relish the following elegant simile from the pen of "Past Grand," John W. Bourlet, Jr.: "The Rebekah degree is as essential to the order as a tail to a kite—without it both would be deprived of a most important auxiliary."

The gift enterprise under the auspices of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which originated in Mattoon, Ill., last winter, is finding Jordan a hard road to travel. They moved the headquarters from Mattoon to Terre Haute before the last sitting of the Coles County Grand Jury, and had announced to the ticket-holders that the drawing would take place in the Terre Haute Opera House July 29 The hour set was 3 o'clock, and two bands had been engaged to enliven the occasion with music, but the managers failed to show up, and it is stated that the drawing has been postponed indefinitely, and Indianapolis is the place where the next effort will be made to have the drawing take place. The ticket-holders are anxiously watching the movements of the managers.

The Masonic Grand Secretary of New York gives the number of Masons in the State as 71,977; lodges, 714; raised to Master's degree during the year, 321. The receipts for the year, $106,860.06; balance on hand, $27,610.32.

The trouble between the Knights of Labor and the Progressive Cigar-makers in New York has reached a bitter stage. Two Knights of Labor Tuesday entered the cigar factory of Levy Bros. and announced that the men who would not "stick" to the Knight's organization could find employment elsewhere. At this 450 cigar-makers left their places and later resolved that "As American citizens" they would not submit to such dictation, and they sent word to the firm (which favors the Knights) that they must be protected in their rights.

Most's paper, the Freiheit, refers to prosecuting attorney Grinnell of the Anarchist trial, as a "beast" and a scoundrel," and winds up the article with: "To the accusers and their perjured witnesses we say, you are marked and will not escape."

G. W. Brown, of Youngsville, is probably the champion lodge organizer in the country. In ten years he has instituted 158 lodges of Good Templars and 167 unions of the Equitable Aid Union. Put them together at $50 a lodge net profit for himself at the least he has cleared in ten years $16,250, and had a glorious good time doing it. There is no doubt that with the exception of Brother Teeples, of the K. of H., G. W. B. is the champion organizer.—Corry (Pa.) Leader. So we see, replies the Sandy Lake News, why the brother is organizing lodges. We have heard that all the money went to relieve the distressed, etc. How long he has been distressed.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	74⅜@		75½
No. 3	66 @		68
Winter No 2	76¼		76⅝
Corn—No. 2			43½
Oats—No. 2	27½		29
Rye—No. 2			53
Bran per ton		11	00
Flour	2 00	@ 5	00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@11	50
Mess pork per bbl	8 80	9	50
Butter, medium to best	08	@	18
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	50	@ 1	35
Eggs			10
Seeds—Timothy	2 10	@ 2	12
Flax		1	14
Broom corn	04	@	09½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½@		14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18	00
Wool	11	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 30	@ 5	00
Common to good	2 25	@ 4	00
Hogs	3 00	@ 5	10
Sheep	1 50	@ 4	25

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@ 5	50
Wheat—Winter	83½@		90
Spring			85⅞
Corn			50½
Oats	40	@	47
Mess Pork	10 75	@11	87
Eggs			14½
Butter	10		17
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 40	@ 4	40
Hogs	4 40	@ 4	70
Sheep	1 50	@ 3	00

FOOD FOR INVALIDS.

Hundreds of invalids fail to regain their health and strength because of inability to digest and assimilate their food. If they would use the Lactated Food, they would find it an article which is most easily digested, and will be assimilated by the stomach when all other foods fail. It is predigested, non-irritating, and has great nutritive properties. It can be prepared in many different ways, and is a palatable and delicate article of diet. Sold by druggists everywhere. 25c., 50c., & $1.

Orders for "Masonic Outrages" have been received from the following:

James C Allix, Chas T Collins, Wm H Robbins, Jas Rignold, W H Parker, Mrs Rufus Parker, Jno Hines, D R Mitchell, J Ramsey, Mrs Haire, H H Cannady, S A Pratt, Mrs E A Rowley, C M Strickler, W M Ames, J C Young, F R Griffin, M Ingalsby, Jr, Chas W Morris, L T Fuller, W Lockhart, P Findlay, A C Snyder, W H Blakeslee, J Chadwick, Rev. F H Gates, H Plummer Sr, M L Howe. Prof W L McGowan, Rev E J Clemens, P Howe, H. Siemiller, J Fait, J Ring, N Miner, W Caldwell, Wm Grossman, Mrs. B F Searles, T Gibb, D J Santimier, S Bingham, A C Bundy, Rev Rice, J R Alcock, A Lagerquist, C H Evans, Wm McBride, A S Boyd, T S Walter, Mrs A I Salisbury, John Harvey, J A Van Epps, J Barnes, Sr, R W Chapman, R F Hurd, J Prothero, J Decker, James Harvey, Rev I P Smith, Dr H S B Smith, J H Hunting, E Smith, W Fenton, D Hyde, Henry Ramsey, J Stratton, J Cassidy, N D Rose, D Simon, Mrs E Kay, C Smith, H G Judson, J Weaver, W J Feemster, C D Hoyt, Sr, R McNair, W Vine, J E Mathews, Amanda Banks, J M Adair, J P Osborn, C Winter, John Dorcas, Rev E Cronemvett, N Callender, R Cole, A Andre, R Loggan, C S D Cowles, T Townshend, Thos Gilmore, T Stewart, W Stewart, H S Limbocker, K A Orvis, J C Card, S Simpson, R J Williams, W W Leighton, J W Raynor, Mrs L M Hoyt, E Bascom, D Marshall, D G Foster, J Smith, I Jackson, H D Jones, Robt Jones, W H Reed, A Hamilton, W T Bonstell, H Johnson, H Preston, Mrs E Tuttle, E P Townsley, B Williams, H N Waldo, R McClelland, B Hester, W P King, Mrs S B Allen, S Avery, W Sperry, H Wykhuysen, S C Taylor, G T Denman, Rev Jno Allison, T E Cunningham, J Ralston, A C Moffatt, Mrs R Schnellbacker, R Miller, Mrs L Hinsdale, W M Beden, J K Weber, J S Shock, Geo Brokaw, A Pifer, F A Oldis, J M Clark, Rev C E Walker, Mary A Waterman, J E Pierce, J B Miller, R Dow, L D Brown, E Branch, J Brandt, W R Morley, H G. Witham, J Ramsey, A Burgess, F Morath, G W Pritts, Dr J N Norris, J M Wylie, S A & J C Noe, J J Kyos, A Dwight, A P Lanterman, D P Cawkins, Rev T J Allen, R B Gardner, I Crane, D H Harrington, Rev I Hyatt, R Park, Rev W O Dinius, H Cole, Rev C E Walker, A C Hand, J Jorder, J Ward, Rev F L Grundtvig, J W Baldridge, sr, T Kingsnarth, A Spencer, A C Pratt, Marcus Phillips Dea E Smith, Mrs H Taylor, J Compher, W Milligan, H L Bayard, J Talbot, H Mancle, J Ackart, S. Wardner, Z Graves, G. Brown, L Ketchum, A Avney, E Trontman, T Collins, C Burger, J Tebbs, C McMillan.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to
221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAG

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.
BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.
—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;
OR
Memory Culture.
By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—
THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

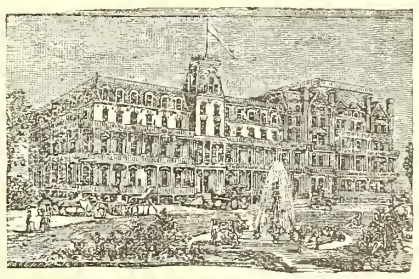
The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject. —INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING."
THE
Man Traps of the City,
BY THOS. E. GREEN.



Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the prurient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the prodigate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

The Medical and Surgical
SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.
Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W Clark,
The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS
FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED
CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,
By the well-known
Geo. W. Clark.
—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY, to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.
Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT,
20 Cents each.

A Wonderful Woman,
A Wonderful Life,
AND
A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

HOME HINTS.

MALARIA AND PURE WATER.

Malaria—the word leads people to fear the air, night air, morning air, evening air, damp air, and even hot or cold air, as if this was the only source of malarial disease. They fear the air from newly turned up soil, from marshes, from plains, from hollows in the hills, and will drink water from wells standing within a few rods of barn yards, privies, or cess-pools, from springs, and brooks, and ponds, without thinking of the surroundings. Many of these waters are poisoned by decomposing vegetable and animal matter, and it is quite likely that the diseases which are called malarial in the older parts of the country, where in old times the disease was not known, all come from subterranean rather than aerial sources. The reputation of a district for healthfulness affects the value of property greatly, and this depends largely upon the sanitary condition of the drinking water. There are some villages where great care is taken to have no vaults and cess-pools, and sources of water contamination, and where it would be safe to drink the well water; but, as a rule, all such water should be boiled before it is used, or it should be filtered through charcoal filters or both. This only would make it comparatively safe.—American Agriculturist.

INFLUENCE OF HOT DRINKS ON DIGESTION.

Various opinions are held by the public, and we believe by medical men also, on the effect of hot drinks on the digestion of food. This matter has lately been investigated by Dr. V. E Nyeshel, of St. Petersburg. The plan he adopted was to make use of twenty patients in the surgical wards of the Obukhoff Hospital, suffering from fracture of the fibula, contusion of the foot, and such like affections, and dividing them into two sets of ten each, to find out first, by a three days' experiment, the length of time an ordinary meal of soup, meat, potatoes and black bread, required for digestion. For this purpose the stomach tube was employed at periods varying from five to seven hours and a half after the meal, and the condition of the contents of the stomach examined. In all the cases complete breaking down appeared to have taken place in about six hours and a half. The exact time required by each individual for the digestion of the specified meal being noted, further observations were made on a subsequent day, the patients in the first group being given after the meal hot tea, at a temperature of from 40° to 75° C, the quantity taken varying from two to eight tumblerfuls. The contents of the stomach were drawn off at the time when, as former experiments had shown, digestion would, under ordinary conditions, have been complete. The result was that when not more than three tumblerfuls of hot tea had been swallowed, it was found that digestion had progressed just as well as without it, but a larger quantity of hot tea appeared distinctly to retard the digestive process. The second group of patients were given a meal similar to what they had had before, but hot. On examining the contents of their stomachs, no difference could be detected between the rate of digestion of hot and cold food. The author found that by painting the pharynx with a 5 per cent solution of hydrochlorate of cocaine the tube passed easily and quickly.—Lancet.

WATER AS A DRINK.

Many persons drink ordinarily as little water as possible, and none at all at meal times, because they suppose that water dilutes the gastric juice. Experiments, however, show that dilution does not diminish the digestive power of the gastric juice, and further, that water alone, as well as solid food, awakens its secretion. A paper read by Dr. Webster, of Boston, at a meeting of a learned medical society, took the ground that water used moderately at meals is beneficial, and that a large class of persons drink too little. The result is, if too little water is drank, especially if the person eats heartily, the perspiration and the kidney secretions are diminished. Not only they, but the waste of the system, which can be removed only in a state of solution, is not eliminated with sufficient regularity and fullness, and the system becomes gradually clogged by it. The accumulation is slight from day to day, but in time unpleasant symptoms are developed. The symptoms are of an indefinite character—discomfort, even pain, sometimes in one place and sometimes in another, constipation, and unhealthy hue of the skin. "Patients," said Dr. Webster, "who drank no more than a pint of water a day, have told me they were not thirsty. They were surprised when told to drink more. Those who have followed this suggestion in the course of a week have developed thirst, and drank as many as three pints of water a day." We may add that water taken into the stomach is at once rapidly absorbed by the blood vessels. A bowl of well seasoned broth as a first course, is specially helpful to the above class of patients. A large quantity of ice cold water is harmful to any one.—Selected.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

This is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St. Chicago. Ill.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 25c; per dozen, $2.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. The picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Wasnington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"! Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 4th to 14th Masonic degree. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

FARM NOTES.

FEEDING STOCK OR SELLING HAY.

The best way to dispose of the crops is to first pass everything through the bodies of the animals. That which is arrested and digested is converted into beef, milk, pork, mutton, wool, poultry and eggs, while that left over is added to the manure heap for service another time. The articles produced on the farm, from the crops, are really manufactured, which enables the farmer to derive not only the equivalent of the crops, but also that which would be carried off the farm, as the difference in price is greater than the cost of fertilizers necessary to balance the loss of elements from the soil. This is a far more profitable mode than selling the crops directly from the farm. If persons in the large cities or Eastern farmers, can afford to buy hay from the West, for feeding purposes, there is nothing to prevent the Western farmers from feeding the hay to their own stock. Selling hay is one of the most ruinous practices that can be engaged in. The farmer should feed his hay to stock, and feed liberally, not by trying to save a portion of the food, but by forcing the young stock in growth and inducing the adults to be as productive as possible. If he grows wool he should endeavor to get as large a fleece from each sheep as possible, while the cow should be made to yield two quarts of milk instead of one whenever it can be done. In feeding the crops to stock you store up the future food for the land, and by converting the products of the farm into materials that bring a higher price there is not only a difference in profit but a saving of the labor, it being much easier to ship in a concentrated form than in bulk. Skillful feeding is the scicnce of farming, and the farmer cannot make himself too familiar therewith.

CARE OF ANIMALS IN SUMMER.

The American Humane Association presents the following suggestions relative to the care of animals during the heated term.

Provide water — fresh, pure water. Think, reader, how you are refreshed by a drink of cool water on a hot day. The lower animals are equally in need of the means of quenching thirst.

The active dog requires drink frequently during the hot day, as does also the cat; and a dish of fresh water should stand where they can have access to it. Undoubtedly many a dog is driven to madness through lack of water; and the testimony is that hydrophobia is almost unknown in those localities where dogs can drink when they wish.

Every city, village and country town should be liberally supplied with drinking fountains for animals, and they should be so constructed that even the smallest dogs can drink from them. No gift to a people confers a greater pleasure than a fountain, and that person who turns aside a stream from the field and gives a watering trough to the roadside or provides a fountain at which man and beast can drink pure water, is truly a public benefactor.

Give the horse frequent opportunity to quench thirst at times when not too much over-heated, and before eating. To drink freely immediately after eating prevents a favorable digestion of food.

Provide shade. How instinctively we seek the shadow when the sun is pouring its hot rays on the dry and parching earth. If the pasture is not provided with shade trees, in a convenient locality set four, six or eight supports, across which place straw or grass, and thus, in a brief time and with little labor make a shade in which animals can rest from the heat of the sun, to the great comfort of themselves and benefit to their owners.

Remove the harness from the horses in the hot day whenever you desire to give them a full, free rest, and once during the day, preferably at night, a thorough currying and grooming will not only give rest, but will do about as much towards improving the animal's condition as will the oats

Examine the harness on your working team, and you will discover that blinds, check-reins and cruppers are simply torturing contrivances, serving no useful purpose. Take them all off for the convenience of yourselves and the comfort of the horses. Keep the stable well ventilated and free from the strong ammonia, which is injurious to the eyes. Assist the animals to protect themselves against flies, feed regularly, hitch in the shade, and remember that the care which will give comfort to the lower animals will make them doubly profitable to their owners, aside from the humane bearing upon the subject.

A contemporary publishes the following twaddle not founded on fact: The old-fashioned pear trees, that came from seedlings, were not only hardy but grew to very large size and lived for many years. They were not subject to blight or other diseases. The blight was unknown until the system of grafting became extensively practiced.

Sulphide of potash has proved in our practice all that has been claimed for it by the English press as a destroyer of mildew on roses, chrysanthemums and some other greenhouse plants. A quarter of an ounce dissolved in a gallon of water and thrown on the affected foliage with a fine-rosed syringe will wholly destroy the fungus, and the leaves will not be injured.—Vick's Magazine.

A Prairie Farmer correspondent says: "Upon the first favorable weather after the berries are all picked, I go through my strawberry rows with a mowing machine, cutting everything down close. The tops lie until dry enough to burn readily when I set fire to them. This destroys all the weed-seeds, fungus, insects, etc., and saves a great amount of labor. In a few weeks the vines take a fresh start from the roots, and form a new, thrifty growth, which is usually aided by the ashes left on the ground. At first sight this looks like 'heroic treatment,' but results fully justify."

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Associat'n
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by MRS. LUCIA C. COOK, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 464 pages.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents, per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on one Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover, 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The Payson bill, prohibiting aliens from holding lands in the Territories, has passed the National House of Representatives.

Senator Hoar's resolution to provide for a plan for celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Constitution and the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America was, after modification so as to direct the committee of seven to report on the cost at the next session, passed by a vote of 41 to 12.

Senator Evarts has asked leave to offer a resolution looking to the opening up of a correspondence between this country and Europe concerning the effect of the great fall in silver bullion and the prospects of a restoration of parity between gold and silver upon a ratio to be established by law.

The Senate has refused to confirm the nomination of James C. Matthews, the colored man of Albany, to succeed Fred Douglass as Recorder of Deeds.

Mrs. Cleveland united with the Presbyterian church, Byron H. Sunderland, pastor, last Sabbath. Her mother accompanied her to church, but the President was not there.

COUNTRY.

The prohibition conventions are very generally indorsing the ballot for women as a plank in their platforms and a method of prohibition. Michigan with 700 delegates, Illinois with 500, Kansas with 300 and Connecticut have all given this indorsement within the last few weeks or days.

The Chicago postoffice received $2,030,975 and expended $769 441, showing a net balance of $1,261,534 for the year ending June 30, 1886. The money order business was about $22,000,000 out and in.

One of the Anarchist's bombs was exploded in Lake Michigan last week. A stream of water several feet in diameter shot 100 feet into the air, and scores of fish were killed.

A mail pouch containing money and securities of the value of $80,000 was recently stolen between New York and Pittsburg. The authorities have no clew.

Miss Jane McArthur, a wealthy cattle queen of Butte, M. T., was drowned Sunday while attempting to save the life of a sister of Judge Armstrong. Miss McArthur had rescued a son and daughter of the Judge when she was grasped by Miss Armstrong and dragged to the bottom.

The St. Clair (Pa.) Baptist church was blown up by dynamite Saturday. Revenge against the Law and Order Society is believed to have led to the act.

In a bloody row at Lake Maxenkuikee, near Plymouth, Indiana, growing out of a rivalry between two excursion parties, one from Mexico and the other from South Bend, Leslie, the leader of the Mexican band, was killed and several others were wounded.

Byron Ringer, a farmer of Hartville, Ohio, became very angry Friday afternoon because one of his men grew ill and had to abandon work. Ringer took the reins off a team with which he had been plowing, went to a barn and hanged himself.

It has been discovered that William P. Pierson, cashier and chief book keeper of the American Baptist Publication Society, is a defaulter to the extent of $60,000, which was absorbed by speculation.

At Erie, Kan., Tuesday, Willie Sells, aged 14, was found guilty of the murder of his parents, his brother and his sister.

A frightful gas explosion occurred Sunday night at Ripley, N. Y. Mr. Kingsley and his son while passing a new gas well in course of drilling stopped to examine it. As they opened the door, the lantern which Mr. Kingsley carried ignited the gas and a terrific explosion followed The derrick was torn to pieces, and Kingsley and his son were enveloped in flames, and almost roasted to death. They cannot live.

Wilbur Ayers, a provision dealer of South Norwalk, Conn., went into his large patent meat refrigerator while his clerks were at dinner and in some way the door slammed behind him and he was locked in with the temperature at zero. Mr. Ayers weighs 200 pounds, but he soon began to feel sleepy and realized that he was freezing to death. He threw his body violently against the door many times, succeeded in widening a crack in the inside plank, tore out the layer of charcoal between and after repeated trials broke the outside plank, crawled out and fell in a heap on the floor, where he was found by one of his customers. His muscles on the right side were severed and his ribs and arms paralyzed, while his body was one mass of bruises.

During a heavy wind and rain storm Friday at Columbus, Ohio, the Columbus rolling mill was wrecked, several men being seriously hurt. The Union Depot and other structures were unroofed, chimneys thrown down and trees leveled. Crops in the region swept by the storm suffered severely.

The Pittsburg region was swept by a fierce rain and wind storm Monday morning, reports from along the rivers indicating heavy losses by floods and the destruction of crops. Whole fields of wheat and corn were ruined, railroad tracks were washed out, and houses flooded or wrecked by lightning. Rough estimates place the damage at $350,000.

Striking Italians attacked Hungarian railway laborers, between Delphi and Hazleton, Pa., Monday afternooon, 400 men participating in the battle. The Italians drove their enemies to the woods und stopped all work on the road. Several of the Hungarians are wounded, and three of them are said to be dying.

FOREIGN.

An exchange of views among the Parnellites has led to a decision to give the government time to prepare an Irish bill, but the Parnellites will demand a measure for the suspension of evictions.

The parents of Eliza Armstrong, the young girl who figured so conspicuously in the Pall Mall Gazette's exposures, will sue Mr. Stead, the then editor, the newspaper's publishers, and Gen. Booth of the Salvation Army for $40,000 damages for alleged libel and for assaulting the child.

The casualities in the riots in the city of Amsterdam, Holland, on Sunday and on Monday night, last week are twenty-five persons killed and ninety wounded. Further demonstrations by the mob were suppressed and the police appear to have command of the situation.

The London Times notes the arrival at the East India docks of a cargo of over 30,000 frozen carcasses of mutton from the Falkland Islands. Portions of the cargo sold at five pence per pound. As the islands now contain about 600,000 sheep, and the industry of raising them is rapidly increasing, there is room for a material extension of the supply to England.

Wassif Bey, from the Soudan, reports at Cairo that Khartoum has been razed by the rebels. He believes that a force marching to re establish the Khedive's authority would now meet with a welcome.

Herr Fischer, the African explorer, reports that he has reached Wanga, north of Pangani, with the remnant of his expedition, after a journey of extreme hardship lasting thirty two days. The members of the expedition suffered severely from hunger. Of the 230 natives who accompanied the party fifty-seven died from disease and starvation or from wounds received in battle. He will proceed to Zanzibar from Wanga.

The following appointments are officially announced in the new British cabinet. Secretary for Foreign Affairs—The Earl of Iddesleigh. Chief Secretary for Ireland—Sir Michael Hicks Beach Chancellor of the Exchequer—Lord Randolph Churchill, who, by virtue of his appointment, becomes the recognized leader of the Conservative party in the House of Commons. Secretary for War—The Right Hon. W. H. Smith. First Lord of the Admiralty—Lord George Hamilton. Lord High Chancellor—Baron Halsbury. Secretary for India—The Right Hon. Frederick Arthur Stanley. Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury—The Marquis of Salisbury. Lord Lieutenant of Ireland—The Marquis of Londonderry. The following appointments have also undoubtedly been decided upon but they have not yet been officially announced. Lord President of the Council—Viscount Cranbrook. President Local Government Board — The Right Hon. Henry Chaplin. President Board of Trade—The Right Hon. E. Stanhope. Postmaster General—Lord John Manners. Commissioner of Works — The Right Hon D. Plunkett. Attorney General—Sir R. Webster. Lord Chancellor of Ireland—Lord Ashbourne.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD

FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases,

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS FOR $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.

Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President, BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be heard as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers. Address, W. F. BAKER, Wheaton, Ill.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

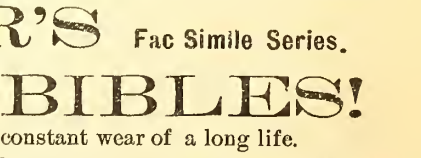
ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,



of the Chicago Press.

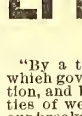
THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.

ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
143 LaSalle St.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.



SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mf'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 47. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1886. WHOLE No. 850.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

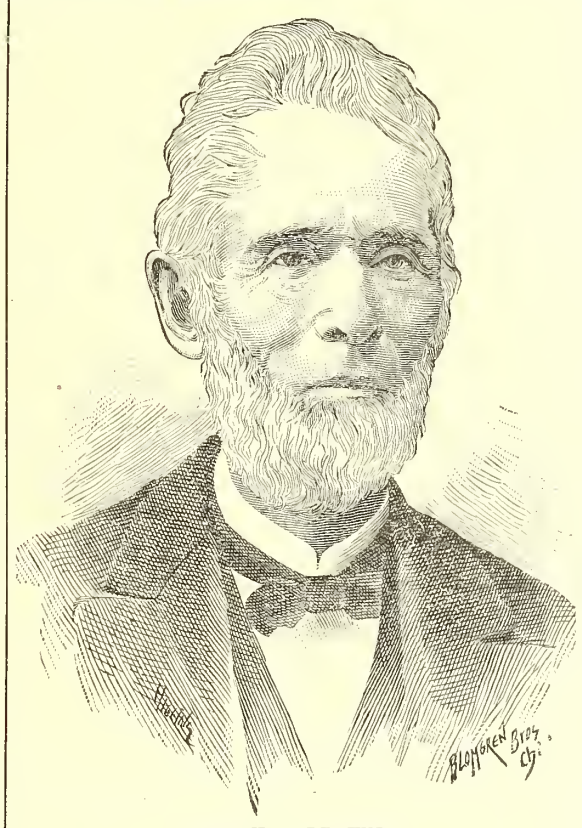
Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Philo Carpenter is Dead.. 8
Rev. Nathan Brown..... 8
The Lodge Flood..... 9
Mr. Carpenter's Death... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Importance of Industrial Schools in India..... 1
Colored People at Ocean Grove 2
Missionary Jottings..... 2
The Sunday Law and Sabbath Persecution..... 4
SELECTIONS:
The Missionary (selected) 1
Immorality of Masonry... 3
Results of the Strikes.... 3
Press Comment 4
LITERATURE..... 4
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
REFORM NEWS:
State Meetings; Friends and Foes in Wisconsin; Minnesota and Iowa; From the Wisconsin Agent; Notes by the Way; Kansas Convention Notice..... 4,5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes from Pacific Coast; Lodgery and Politics in Arkansas; The Ex-nun Elizabeth Beady; To Baptists who Read the Cynosure; Prohibition in Michigan; The Trials of United Brethren 5,6
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
LODGE NOTES..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 13
MARKETS 13

THE CYNOSURE FOR THE SOUTH.



The publisher informs us that the subscriptions of some 300 colored pastors, paid by friends in different parts of the country, expire this month. Few public appeals have been made for the fund which furnishes this list, and we can, therefore, ask more urgently. Hundreds of letters from the pastors in the South, who have read the paper, bear witness to the inestimable benefit they and their congregations have received through this gift. We can point to no such immediate and direct benefit arising from any other method of extending our cause. The colored people are universally poor and unable to subscribe, and they are kept poor by the lodges which eat up their substance while they destroy the spirituality of the members of their churches. Many of them realize the magnitude of the evil, but do not know how to grapple with it. The Cynosure, gives them the needed information, and encourages them in the difficult task of effectually applying the truth against lodgery. It is of the utmost importance for the success of the proposed National Convention in the South, that these 300 subscriptions be continued and the number doubled. There are thousands of friends of our reform who have contributed nothing to sustain it during the past year. May the Lord open their hearts to do liberally for this new deliverance of the South.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

should be sent at once for this object, and twice that amount can be well employed. Do not delay in this good work.

The labor unions and Knights of Labor are turning to politics now that the boycott is becoming a mark of outlawry. Schilling, of this city, a Knight of Labor organizer, is moving to revive the Socialistic Labor party; and the order is making nominations in Illinois and Iowa. In New York the Central Labor Union is moving. It is the duty of all good citizens to do their part honorably in politics; but if these lodges enter politics they do so on a dishonest basis of sworn secrecy. Outside their lodges they have given us such a mayor as Harrison and such a Congressman as Lawler and such aldermen as the "boodle gang" of Chicago and New York. Will they do better within?

The latest move in this game is a call for a national convention in Indianapolis September 1st, composed of Knights of Labor, Grangers, National Greenbackers, Farmers' Alliance, Anti-Monopolists, The Wheels (a Texas organization), and all other associations akin to these. According to the present programme, delegates from these orders will meet to organize a new political party, with the rights of labor as the chief corner stone. Powderly is expected by the leaders of the movement, and so are all of the great labor lights. We fear this will be a meeting of Adullamites, but without a David, or the God of David.

NATHAN BROWN.

[See page 8.]

One good effect of the transient visit of the old soldiers at Salt Lake City on their way to San Francisco, was a resolution denouncing polygamy, and urging Congress to pass laws by which the evil may be eradicated. But back of this doctrine of lust is the despotic church-and-state constitution of the Mormon church. Such a union is outlawed in America and is on the march to death in England. It should be included always in the Mormon system. Alas! that the veterans who conquered in the second battle for freedom in America should themselves be snared into "Grand Army" lodgery with its sworn secrecy, un-American as it is un-Christian, and tending, as well as Mormonism, to undo the work for which their comrades and our fathers gave their lives.

The Anarchist trial has drawn through another week, and yet another will pass before the lawyers are through pleading. The witnesses of the defense have been generally from the Anarchist ranks and warm sympathizers with the accused men. Later, Fielden, Spies, and Schwab have been called from the bar to the witness stand. The testimony so far will hardly shake the main position of the prosecution—that a conspiracy was formed and the most savage weapons of modern device prepared for the destruction of human life and the property of capitalists, the overthrow of municipal authority and of the social order which abides behind its shield. Their usual Sunday picnic was held by the Socialists at a grove in Indiana and nearly $1,000 raised for the defence of the authors of the Haymarket massacre. There was little speaking and it was lifeless, but the trial was the theme of every tongue. The Sabbath is the first institution these deluded people would destroy, and the first lessons of preparation are in the saloon.

THE MISSIONARY.

[The following poem was written many years ago by Rev. Nathan Brown, during his earlier missionary life. Concerning it Bishop W. L. Harris writes to the Christian Advocate of New York: "It was my good fortune while in Japan, in 1873, to make the acquaintance of this devoted man, and no one received me more cordially or manifested a deeper interest in the missionary work of our own church than did he. During one of our conversations I accidentally mentioned a piece of poetry on the subject of missions which had often touched and melted my heart as I read it, and to my great delight I learned from him that he was its author. He then gave me a copy of the poetry, as last revised by him, and believing that others as well as myself will read it with interest, I subjoin a copy for publication."]

My soul is not at rest. There comes a strange
And secret whisper to my spirit, like
A dream of night, that tells me I am on Enchanted ground. Why live I here? The vows
Of God are on me, and I may not stop
To play with shadows, or pluck earthly flowers
Till I my work have done, and rendered up
Account. The voice of my departed Lord:
"Go teach all nations," from the Eastern world
Comes on the night air and awakes my ear.

And I will go. I may no longer doubt
To give up friends, and home, and idol hopes,
And every tender tie that binds my heart
To thee, my country! Why should I regard
Earth's little store of borrowed sweets? I sure
Have had enough of bitter in my cup
To show that never was it His design
Who placed me here that I should live in ease
Or drink at pleasure's fountain. Henceforth, then,
It matters not if storm or sunshine be
My earthly lot, bitter or sweet my cup;
I only pray, God fits me for the work;
God make me holy, and my spirit nerve
For the stern hour of strife. Let me but know
There is an arm unseen that holds me up,
An eye that kindly watches all my path,
Till I my weary pilgrimage have done;
Let me but know I have a Friend that waits
To welcome me to glory, and I joy
To tread the dark and death-fraught wilderness.

And when I come to stretch me for the last,
In unattended agony beneath
The cocoa's shade, or lift my dying eyes
From Africa's burning sand, it will be sweet
That I have toiled for other worlds than this.
I know I shall feel happier than to die
On softer bed. And if I should reach heaven—
If one that hath so deeply, darkly sinned—
If one whom ruin and revolt have held
With such a fearful grasp—if one for whom
Satan hath struggled as he hath for me—
Should ever reach that blessed shore, O how
This heart will glow with gratitude and love!
And through the ages of eternal years,
Thus saved, my spirit never shall repent
That toil and suffering once were mine below.

THE IMPORTANCE OF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN INDIA.

BY O. S. PALMER.

Liebig uttered an important truth when he said, "The nation most quickly promoting the intellectual development of its industrial population must advance as truly as the nation neglecting it must inevitably retrograde." It will not be denied by any intelligent person that the industrial paralysis in India is due to the apalling ignorance of the people in the technology of trade, and that their moral corruption, on the other hand, is traceable to their crude and erroneous notions of God, and the truths of a revealed religion.

There are three important lines of education: the physical, intellectual and moral: or, in other words the hand, the head and the heart. It has been the prevailing idea among the promoters of missions that the work of the missionary is simply to preach the Gospel; that no time should be given to the education of the heathen in new lines of industry, or in teaching them better modes of carrying on the branches of industry they are now pursuing. There is a trinity in man's development that should not be overlooked—physical, mental and moral culture,and these should form a unity also in all our schools as far as possible.

To give a man the completed development of all his physical powers, careful and constant attention should be given to gymnasties, or a proper amount of physical labor. But to stop here would be mental and moral suicide. Then again, to give mental discipline only, without at the same time giving proper attention to the physical and moral is both physical and moral suicide. It is on the physical side like building a splendid palace on a sandy beach with no precautions against the incoming tide: and on the moral side it is like starting a vessel out on a rough sea with no rudder, and with clearance papers to no port: bearing no flag, unless it be one dyed with the blood of her victims.

But since the moral trainiug is the most important, shall we not give our undivided attention to that? This is what we have been doing in many of of our mission fields, and if the testimony of those who have given special thought upon the subject after personal experience and observation can be relied upon we have been makiug a great mistake in so doing, or at least we have not accomplished so much as we might have done had we pursued the trinity plan in our work.

I know of no better testimony upon this subject than that of Ardesheer Durjorji Master, a native of India, who has recently taken high honors in the City and Guilds of London Institute, and from the Science and Art Departments of South Kensington. He says: "To impart education through the indigenous schools where a barbarous practice of teaching is carried out: through the missionary schools where conversion is principally aimed at; and through the schools under private bodies, the difficulty of collecting sufficient fees for making them effective is well known—is urged us where else than in India. The country must suffer and suffer terribly as long as she neglects the edueation of her children. I say this after careful study."

The establishment of industrial schools in India is important:

1. Because such schools will open a new and effectual door for preaching the Gospel. One great difficulty experienced by the missionary in India is that of reaching the higher and more intellectual classes. They are very slow to patronize our schools where they are distinctly religious schools. But so soon as they see that we teach their children in various branches of industry and of science they look upon us in a very different light, and are ready to not only send their children to our schools, but are willing to pay something toward their support. This, indeed, will be a great advantage to the work of the missionary. There are many ways by which this will be an effectual door. It will not only bring the children to our homes where they are taught trades and receive at least a common school education, but at the same time they will be taught the Scriptures,and in the life and home of the missionary they may be able to see some of the fruits of the Spirit and be brought by His power to a saving knowledge of Christ. Then, too, such schools will be an effectual means in breaking up the system of caste and of making common labor no disgrace.

2. Such schools will make our work more permanent. This is very apparent when we consider the difference between a converted heathen cast out from his kindred with no means of support, and a converted heathen educated and skilled in some trade. The former may live a Christian life even in the midst of persecution and poverty but his hands are tied so far as carrying on aggressive work for Christ is concerned; and he without doubt will always be dependent upon charity to a great extent, at least; the latter will not only support himself but will have money to support the Gospel among his people, and he himself may do good work in preaching or in teaching the way of salvation to his lost people. Thus the work will soon become self-supporting and aggressive. When we carry on the missionary work on this plan there will be less danger of oppression in later years from capitalists and speculators who always come in after the pioneer missionary to gather the fruits of his labors.

I believe that this is the way to solve the money problem in the support of missions. I am in favor of self-supporting missions. I do not mean by that that we should not expend much money on the foreign field. We expend far too little. But my opinion is that we might so expend our charities as to yield a vastly greater increase, uot only in numbers saved, but at the same time convert the heathen to work, and thus sustain aud extend the kingdom of Christ by the sweat of their own face, as well as by their faith. Some one has said: "No charity is so well directed as the charity which enables a man to earn his bread honestly and independently; no philanthropy is so great as that which relieves a man from the present enormous drudgery which characterizes service, because the supply is greater than the poor demand."

Bishop Taylor in Africa is urging the importance of this kind of work and is calling for missionaries who can teach the mechanical arts as well as handle the Word of God skilfully. Rev. M. B. Fuller in Akola, Berar province, India, feels the importance of industrial schools in connection with the work there. The commissioner of that province is very anxious that such a school be established and signs a petition to the government for a grant to aid in establishing such a school. There are seven who are preparing to sail from America in October next, under the American Faith Mission, to engage in this kind of mission work in India. It will require a large sum of money to open such a mission. The Lord is turning the hearts of some in this country to contribute to this work. "Withhold not good from them to whom it is due when it is in the power of thine hand to do it." Prov. 3: 27.

Chicago.

COLORED PEOPLE AT OCEAN GROVE.

BY MRS. J. S. COLLINS.

The event of the week, and we may say of the season, thus far, was the colored people's meeting, under the auspices of the Afriean Mission of M. E. Church. Last year was their first assembling here, when they were invited to eome again and do even better. They came. Old men and women, and young women with babes in their arms, and women on crutches and the blind, came to this Mecca to attend their jubilee. They felt they were welcome. It was a gala day for them, and the best clothing had been saved up for the occasion.

Bishop Campbell presided. Rev. Dr. Handy, of Washington, D. C., read an able missionary address. Fine music was rendered by a choir of colored folks from Washington. Then came the address of the morning, "Footprints of the Missionaries in Eighteen Centuries," an able review, by the Rev. Dr. Arnett, of Wilberforce College, O. Many of your readers will reeognize in him a member of the Ohio Legislature. He is a man of power, and if not spoiled by contact with wily politicians, will be an important factor in Ohio politics. By the way, he is on the eommittee on temperanee in the House, and is a warm advocate of constitutional prohibition.

Dr. Lee, of Philadelphia, had for his subject, "Education of the Head and Heart and Hands of the Race." He spoke of the difficulties under whieh his people labored, and how hard it was for them to acquire an education, so recently brought out of heathenism and the ignorance of two hundred and forty years. It was too much to expect them to acquire in the public schools in a day that which the whites had been centuries learning. He advocated manual labor in the schools as part of their education.

Dr. Jennefer, of Boston, had also an address on "Educating Agencies," and being from the "Hub," it was expected he would show more culture than his brethren. He, however, did not come up to the expectations of some who heard; perhaps because he was nearly white. Still his address gave evidence of thought, and as a literary performance was quite creditable.

Bishop Campbell, the "irrepressible" as he is sometimes called, preached in the evening on the text, "Who hath despised the day of small things." His text gave him ample room to speak of their small beginning. He is hopeful for his race, and thinks the world will not come to an end until every African hears the Gospel. Speaking of the trials they with others had on account of the liquor business, he said, "We don't want our sons and brothers to be lost through intemperance. Why don't the parties put planks in their platforms? It is easy to do that." All emphasized the importance of educating the hands as well as the head and heart, and that manual labor and trades should constitute part of their education in the schools.

Verily, a new era is upon us. Whites and blacks sit together in the high places of the land, and the color line, though not entirely obliterated is, for the day, at least, at Ocean Grove. Whites and blacks meet together and mingle their prayers and tears, aud sympathize with each other, wish each other God speed.

As I sat listening to the refined, cultivated voices of those young women in the choir, I recalled scenes of Colonial times in the seventeenth century, when virtuous white women were brought over and sold to Virgiuia planters, and paid for in tobacco, and subsequently their black sisters were sold from the same auction block.

To-day the white woman aud the black stand side by side on the rostrum, pleading for the suppression of the liquor traffic and the protection of their boys. What a change God has wrought. It was well for the African that the few advocates for freedom did not despise the day of small things, but toiled on until victory perched upon their banners. It will be well for the united forces now to take courage in this new anti-liquor campaign and to labor side by side until every saloon is closed in our land, and the oppressed from appetite shall go free.

Ocean Grove, N. J., July 30.

MISSIONARY JOTTINGS.

BY REV. J. F. AVERY.

When ye pray, say, "Our Father, who art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come."Send more laborers, for the harvest truly is plenteous. Lord, if thou wilt, send me.

We regret to see it recently reported that drinking and drunkenness is cruelly spreading in India. At one time it was confined to the low caste. But the English and other settlers are making it popular and common in the higher castes. The evil and misery is only too apparent.

Mr. M. Richards writes from the Congo: "Every braneh of our work is progressing. Our cry is 'Africa for Christ.'" The last mail tells of the first baptism on the Congo. The candidate has waited two years and given evidence of the Spirit's work. The fruit is being seen. God bless the Congo and all other missions and missionaries. Christ is a king. He must reign King of kings and of all kingdoms.

When Admiral Foote took dinner with the king of Siam, he leaned over the table to ask a blessing. The king looked at him with surprise, saying, "I thought only missionaries did that." "Sire," said the admiral, "every Christian is a missionary."

"God's work must be done, and I may be dead." Let those who would defer or delay doing what is in their hand to do, think of this—

"Life is the time to serve the Lord."

God makes choice of his own instrumentalities, often in opposition to the wisdom of men. Remember what Carey was; remember that he was a shoemaker. Remember that he taught himself Latin, Greek, and Hebrew when he was making shoes. Remember his heart was in the work of the Lord and he got very little eneouragement; for when he was at the Conference of Missionaries, Dr. Ryland in the chair, he suggested it was the duty of Christians to obey the Lord's command to send the Gospel to every creature; and Dr. Ryland said, "Sit down young man; when God is pleased to convert the heathen he will do it without you or me." Remember that he went to India and aequired the language in such a way that he was made examiner of civil servants with a salary of $9,000 a year. He gave every dollar of that to the Baptist Missionary Society, and lived on the pittance they allowed him.

Halifax, N. S.

It would not be necessary for me to open the Scriptures to make me zealous for missions, beeause the philanthropic attitude of soul is enough to give us a zeal in this particular. There are three hundred millions of women now on this planet who have only the Buddhist hope of being born again as men, instead of toads or snakes. There are eighty millions of women in Moslem harems. There are uncounted millions of men and women and children growing up in the most degraded superstitions and suffering in mind, body and estate from inherited pagan eustoms. In the name of mere philanthropy and seeular prudence,Christian missions ought to receive support, immediate, abundant, permanent, unflinching. All that united Protestant Christendom together raises annually for missions would not pay the liquor bill of the United States for three days, or that of the British islands for two. At the opening of the century all Protestant Christendom expended only $250,000 annually for missions. It expends to-day $7,500,000 for that purpose. This is a large sum, you think. It is a bagatelle. The dissipations of Saratogas and Newports and Brightons would hardly find this sum worth mentioning in the hugeness of their expenses for self-gratification.—Joseph Cook.

IMMORALITY OF MASONRY.

ADDRESS OF REV. NATHAN BROWN, D. D., BEFORE THE NATIONAL N. C. A. CONVENTION AT CINCINNATI, JUNE 11, 1870.

Masonry has much to do with traditions, and I will therefore narrate one, as an illustration of its underlying principle.

In the early days of the world one of the primitive inhabitants, while passing over the mountains of Asia, fell in with a good-looking stranger traveling the same way. As they walked on together they became very familiar, and finally entered into a covenant to be friends and mutual helpers for life, the stranger promising that he would aid his young acquaintance in obtaining everything he wanted, wealth, luxury and honor, but upon this one condition, that whenever his companion put his finger to his lips, the young man should keep silence. So the youth took an oath and bound his soul that he would faithfully observe secrecy whenever he should perceive this sign. The arrangement appeared to work well; wherever they went they found friends, and Mr. Companion seemed to have comrades everywhere they went, who brought him gold, silver and jewels. Some of these he pretended were presents, others the profits of trade, and some, he frankly confessed, were the fruits of robbery. He always put his fingers to his lips when he told of a fraud or robbery. The young man became uncomfortable; he had doubts whether he ought not to expose the wrong doings of his associate; but the oath kept him quiet. At length his companion told him he had committed a murder, and the whole community was in excitement; that he had hid the corpse on the premises of a citizen, beside whose doorstep he had left a bloody knife. The murderer sealed the tale with the appointed sign; the trial came on; the young man dared not testify in favor of the innocent; he saw him condemned, and finally, with unutterable mental agony, silently witnessed his execution. As he turned away from the scene, Mr. Companion laid his hand on the young man's shoulder, and with a grin of unearthly satisfaction (for it was the devil) said to him: "You are the murderer of that man! You knew he was innocent, and you might have saved his life; but you stifled God's voice within, that you might keep your vows to me, and now you are mine forever!"

Mr. President, the obligation which the devil exacted from the young man in the fable, was precisely the same which the Masonic institution exacts from every member. The candidate promises to keep a secret before he knows what it is. The Master Mason promises that every secret of a brother Master Mason, confided to him as such, shall be forever sacred in his breast, and for no considerations and under no circumstances, shall he exercise his own judgment and conscience in regard to it, except in the sole case of "murder or treason." And when he reaches the degree of Royal Arch, the oath becomes more stringent, and he binds himself to the absolute concealment of every Masonic secret, "murder and treason not excepted!"

I would rather have manacles on my hands and fetters on my feet, than have a padlock on my lips. I would sooner place my neck in the stocks than put the keeping of my conscience in the hand of a man. Yes, sir, God is the Master of conscience. My Maker is the only being that can tell me whether I ought to disclose a secret or not. I want the privilege of going to my God for direction in such case of moral duty as this, unfettered by any rules or restrictions of human authority.

The man who puts his soul and conscience in the hand of another is a slave. He who surrenders himself to strong drink places his reason and conscience in abeyance; and do we not for this pronounce him a slave? He does wrong unconsciously, but Masonry compels a man, under certain circumstances, to do wrong consciously, and with his eyes open. I ask if there is anything under heaven, unless we go back to Popery and the Inquisition, that makes a more abject and absolute slave than the oaths that throw their meshes around the Masonic candidate as he takes his leap into the dark? Swell up the groans and sorrows of the bondman; the flesh quivering under the lash; paint the canvas with a thousand forms of cruelty to the body, they are as nothing compared with the marring and scarring of man's nobler part —the enslavement and debasement of his godlike moral powers. When you put an embargo on the tongue, and a curb on the conscience; when a man promises beforehand that he will keep secret whatever is told him, whether it be good or bad, he sells his allegiance to the God of heaven, and puts the keeping of his soul in the hand of a frail mortal like himself.

I know that Masons will reply, "You are not fair; the candidate for admission is expressly told that his Masonic obligations will not interfere with either his politics or his religion." Not interfere with his religion! Why, the binding of a man's conscience, placing him at the mercy of every brother Mason that may choose to approach him, is itself the most positive and absolute interference with his religion that can possibly be imagined. If I must shut or open my mouth in obedience to the injunction of man, and not in obedience to my own convictions of duty, the conscience is paralyzed; the soul is free no longer; the chain is on the nobler part. * * *

Any element of society which appeals to selfishness must be a demoralizing element. Masonry is built on selfishness. Help us and we will help you. We will favor them that favor us. Such a principle of action, if I understand the New Testament, it is the object of Christianity to destroy. If Freemasonry had existed in the days of Christ, and in the same form that it exists with us, he could not have condemned it more distinctly than he did in his sermon on the mount. "If ye do good to them that do good to you, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans the same?" The Gospel is at war with every system of clique or clan, caste or combination, that seeks to create distinctions in the human family, alienate man from man, to sow seeds of discord and jealousy, by placing the interests of a class in array against the interests of all. The heathen world is full of these putrid sores, left by the old serpent's sting. Priestcraft, the Eleusinian mysteries, the gibberish of Isis and Osiris, the mummery of the old fire worshipers, these are the models after which modern Masonry is patterned. The idea of one universal human brotherhood, one harmonious happy family, with common aims and interests, is displaced, and in its stead mankind are taught to seek for happiness in secret organizations, building up themselves in darkness, and scattering through society the elements of discord, rivalry, jealousy and hate. That selfishness which would produce alienation and misery in the family circle, must be equally fatal to the peace of the great family of man. What would we say of the lurking enemy that would steal into the family circle to enkindle the spirit of antagonistic interests in the household, to separate the full and free communion of the husband and wife, in all their varied joys and sorrows, and raise a partition wall through which neither should be able to penetrate the thoughts, feelings and griefs of the other? And is not Masonry guilty of doing this? Tell me not that the wife is satisfied with Masonry! Oh, no. Nature herself belies the effort to make that heart appear resigned. Never yet did a wife kiss her husband good-bye, as he went for the first time to a Masonic lodge, but she felt a dagger go through her heart! The husband knows it, and hence says as little as possible about his intentions, till the first shock is over. A system that requires such a sacrifice of affection is fiendish; the old serpent, when he entered Eden, did no more effectually poison human happiness. And if it is a crime to tamper thus wantonly with one loving heart, create forever a sense of painful separation between the dearest connections of the family circle, how enormous the wrong when the scale of selfishness is enlarged, and a systematic and multiform separation of interests is attempted in the great human brotherhood! We talk of a coming millenium, but how would such walls and bars and passwords comport with that happy state of unanimity and love? Oh, no; the spirit that binds men in secret, oath-bound clans is an anachronism; it belongs to the dark ages; it belongs to heathenism; it is no child of Christ, his Gospel, or his church, and should forever be banished from among his saints.

But it is said we are a set of fanatics who expect to uproot this venerable institution; that it is spreading in the country, the church and the government with a strength that nothing can resist; that it is becoming the commanding influence in all our movements for reform; giving its grand titles and its methods of procedure to all our temperance societies, which in turn are becoming feeders for the mother organization. Fifteen years ago, Mr. President, I came to this city, a sick and worn-out missionary, to find a warm shelter from the cold New England winter, and hearing that there was a good man here who kept an underground railroad, I made my way to his house, where he and his excellent wife housed and nursed me, and he told me stories of the fugitives he had helped forward from a land of bondage to a land of freedom. The general opinion was that Friend Coffin was doing a very small business; that if he was not a wicked lawbreaker, he was at least engaged in a foolish and fanatical attempt to do what there was not the slightest chance of accomplishing. But I am here again to-day, in obedience to his call and the call of other Christian friends, and what do I see? I look across the Ohio river, and there is sunshine on that shore which was then so dark and gloomy that I had no heart to set foot, even for a moment, upon its blighting soil. I look elsewhere, through this great republic, and what do I behold? Those little trickling rills of pity that flowed down the cheeks of pious friends, and Christians of other names, have swelled to a mighty river, whose broad wave rolls freedom from Niagara to the Gulf! Mr. President, there is nothing impossible, if it is only right. We have secured freedom for the body, now let us strike for the freedom of the mind—a free, unshackled conscience. Our fathers, when they landed at Plymouth, did not come to set up here the doctrines of caste and clan, and perpetuate pagan mummeries and unrepublican aristocracies, and have their tombstones decorated with the emblems of Masonic honors. No, sir, there is a better destiny for this country. The mighty power that threatens us so proudly and defiantly to-day shall be dead on the morrow; its corpse cast out upon the rough sands of the sea, at low watermark, where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours, that not the least track or trace of so vile a wretch—a system so full of crime and perjury—may remain in the memory of man or Mason, or of injured and insulted woman.

RESULTS OF THE STRIKES.

The numerous and extended "strikes" which have recently so discouraged the business of the country, have not been successful as to their direct object, but some of the results will be permanent, and will, to some extent, modify future trade combinations and labor movements.

All branches of laborers are more in sympathy than before. It is seen that all laborers stand on substantially the same basis and have common interests. The effort has been made to consolidate these interests in one organization. It has failed, and may never be practicable, but the sympathy is is stronger than before. We may therefore look for closer co-operation and more successful combinations in the future.

The lesson of the power of organization will not be lost. Those of common interests will unite, and by organization seek to accomplish what would be impossible to the individuals. Capital combinations will become more general and stronger; labor combinations will become more compact and aggressive. Classes and interests will be more directly arrayed against each other, and in some form the conflict will become more intense. Out of the contest will issue new conditions and relations of work and commerce, affecting, it may be, the social relations.

The individual is sinking out of sight in the organized body. He is becoming more and more a creature of a combination. His own judgment is shown, it may be, by a vote, but he is losing his freedom of action. The small capitalist is powerless against the strong association; the individual laborer is helpless as to following his own judgment and wishes. Bodies of men will deal with each other and determine the questions that may arise as to their relations and obligations. The movement is thus toward socialism. The same principles governing those of common interests will assert themselves in the political sphere, and the tendency is to determine all relations by legislation, and to avoid the conflict of interests by the Government assuming all great interests. Thus it is asserted by many that it will soon be necessary for the Government to assume the control of the railroads and telegraph lines. Of course the argument cannot be bounded by any arbitrary limitations, and the paternal theory of government could be insisted upon in all industries with equal force.

The effect of this upon the personal conscience and the sense of individual responsibility cannot be favorable to the best development of character. We cannot expect the same causes to produce results in the future different from those wrought out in the past. Individual freedom and personal responsibility are necessary to high character.

At the same time there has been a public awakening to some of the dangers which thus threaten us. Courts are intervening to protect the individual in the unmolested use of his own judgment, and the pursuit of his business in his own way. The dangers to society in secret orders have also been felt more than before. A judge in one of the great cities called upon the Grand Jury, "to investigate carefully and fully the nature and character of the labor organizations which exist in our midst, with a view of ascertaining whether anything in any of their constitutions, or in any oath which any officer or member is required to take, binds officers or members to resort to violence or other unlawful means for the purpose of accomplishing the objects sought to be obtained. Any organization whose officers or members are so bound, is an unlawful organization and liable to indictment."

Let us hope that the reaction will leave the relations of all parties and interests in better condition, without injury to any principle affecting the public welfare. It will be so if they who bear the name of Christ exhibit his character in their lives and renew his work for men of every class.—Evangelical Repository.

THE SUNDAY LAW AND SABBATH PERSECUTION.

REPORT FROM ARKANSAS.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—In your issue of July 29, 1886, you refer to the sermon given by myself, as reported in the Inter Ocean, July 19, in which it was stated that "the aim of the National Reform Association was to secure a religious amendment to the Constitution of the United States, thereby making our nation a Christian nation, thus forming a union of church and state, and restricting the rights of conscience: that already persecution has broken out in Arkansas, Tennessee, etc., and those who worship God according to the teachings of God's Word, are suffering under this Sunday law."

This article is called forth in response to your statement, that "if there are Seventh-day Baptists now in jail or fined because, having kept Saturday as their Sabbath, they have refused to keep Sunday also, their names and the jails where they are confined should be published at once."

We are Seventh-day Adventists and not Baptists, and as I am now on the ground where our brethren are feeling the effects of this bitter spirit of persecution, I am glad to give you and your readers the desired information.

Two years ago a church of Seventh-day Adventists was raised up in this place (Springdale, Ark.). Last fall they erected a house of worship, and for painting, one Sunday, on the rear of the house, unseen from the road, Elder J. W. Scoles was indicted by the Grand Jury at Fayetteville, Washington county, Ark., tried, convicted, and fined by the Circuit Court. An appeal was taken, and the case is now pending the action of the Supreme Court of the State. James Poole, of the same county, a conscientious Sabbath-keeper, for pulling weeds in his garden on Sunday morning, was indicted by the Grand Jury and fined by the same court, though he had attended public worship in the forenoon and afternoon, four miles from his home. William Martin was indicted by the same jury for sowing oats, and tried before the Circuit Court, but the jury disagreed. J. M. Davis was indicted by the Grand Jury for "harrowing oats on the Christian Sabbath or Sunday," and tried before the Circuit Court, but failing to sustain the charge the court picked up a man who swore that he saw Mr. Davis hauling wood on Sunday, and without even an indictment for said offense, the court fined him and taxed him the costs. F. M. Elmore, for three minutes' labor on Sunday, was indicted, convicted and fined in the Circuit Court of this county. The second arrest of J. A. Armstrong, of Springdale, was effected July 9, for digging potatoes on Sunday for the table. In four hours after his arrest he was on his way to jail at Fayetteville, where he was kept five days to commute the fine imposed upon him, which he refused to pay, and thus honor an unjust law and a partial administration which oppressed the conscientious observers of the Fourth Commandment, while others who observed neither day were permitted to go unmolested.

The railroad cars could rumble and carry their heavy burdens, and the loud voice of the locomotive could be heard more than once every Sunday, and yet go unrebuked. The factory could ply its vocation and keep its servants at work every Sunday; the hotels could send their runners to each train soliciting patronage and collect their fees for labor performed on Sunday without a word of censure from the authorities. Other citizens could drive their hogs to market; livery teams could be hired to pleasure seekers and money exchanged for such service, and no one was disturbed enough to take cognizance of, and report the matter to the Grand Jury; and when the jury was told of these breaches of the law by a Sabbath-keeper, who was summoned to testify against a brother, no notice was taken of them, while the brother was arrested and fined for wielding, quietly, a paint-brush, after he had conscientiously observed the day before as the Sabbath, according to the commandment of God.

Allen Meek, of Star of the West, Pike county, was indicted by the Grand Jury for planting potatoes on Sunday morning, on the testimony forced from a friend who was visiting him. While the case was pending in the court he was cited to appear on Monday morning twenty-five miles distant. The road being rough he was compelled to repair the break in his wagon on Sunday. He was again indicted and fined for that offense, on the testimony of a man who came to see him on business. The man who came on business could go home free after causing the arrest of the Sabbath-keeper. Others with whom I am personally acquainted in this same county, and whose names I could give, have also been arrested and fined in this same manner.

Any one can see that it is not because the Sunday law is broken, or that these good and conscientious Sabbath-keepers make more noise or disturbance than others; but the strong arm of the law is the best argument that can be wielded against their faith and practice. However "abhorrent to our constitution such persecution" may appear to the editor of the Cynosure, we are now realizing its effects.

R. M. Kilgore.

PRESS COMMENT.

The supremacy of secret oaths and obligations, of secret laws and orders over all other obligations and allegiance, is a principle which permeates and pervades the multiplied and multiplying orders of secretism which fill every nook and corner of our land. Secret law is but secret treason against all other law, which may develop into open rebellion whenever a secret combination or combinations deem themselves strong enough to ignore the laws of the land in the assertion of the supremacy of their own secretly devised and oath-sworn codes. Until such a time comes, the principle of treason against all law in the recognized supremacy on the part of the clan of secret oaths and enactments works under the cover of the night to subvert law in carrying out, to as perfect a degree as possible, the higher law of secret traitorism.—Free Methodist.

It should not be forgotten that when the drought came upon Israel it was a judgment for sin. It is God who sends the early and the latter rain, and he is represented in the Scriptures as retaining a direct control over the powers of nature. It might be well to ask when the heavens withhold their moisture whether or not our people have not gone whoring after strange gods. Has not Baal his priests in our day who seduce the people to his worldly and sensual worship? Is it not possible that many, nay, all but seven thousand, have bowed the knee to the false God? When we hear of churches offering up prayers for rain, it occurs to us that perhaps the appropriate prayer would be that the people would forsake the worship of Baal for that of Jehovah. We have an old-fashioned kind of faith that holds that whenever our people cease to "halt between two opinions," and fully resolve that "the Lord he is God," and firmly decide to serve him instead of Baal, then the rains will fall in season and the heavens smile sweetly upon the labors of the tillers of the soil.—Christian Evangelist.

Next Sunday in every Mormon meeting-house it will be declared that the Lord has interceded once more in behalf of his saints; that Congress has adjourned and the threatened legislation is once more indefinitely postponed. In the meantime, before Congress shall again convene, there will have been several hundred more polygamous marriages celebrated, and there will be probably fifteen hundred more cradles filled with birth-stained children. The action of Congress toward this Territory is simply infamous; the action of the Executive of the nation is simply imbecile. Congress had a plain duty to perform; but those who had the matter in their keeping were unworthy, and the President simply let matters drift. It is shameful. If the intention is to let matters go on to Mormon Statehood, then the engineers are cowards and dare not make known their plans, and the result is the continuing of an agitation which no decent Government should impose upon loyal people year after year. A gentleman who has the ear of those in power, said yesterday: "You will get nothing at this session, nor at any other session of Congress during the present administration, unless you can bring such a pressure behind Congress that it will not dare refuse you. The intention is to pass the anti-polygamy amendment, and then to admit Utah as a State. You will see Zane and Dickson removed very soon, and no money will then be advanced to secure polygamous trials." It was a Democrat who said that; one who has never swerved a hair's-breadth in his Democracy since childhood. The controlling hand behind the President and behind Congress is Secretary Lamar. He is a thorough Jack-Mormon, and Gentiles may depend upon it that it is his fine hand which has guided and finally throttled all legislation for Utah.—Salt Lake Tribune.

LITERATURE.

MAGAZINES.

Of the richly illustrated articles in the August Century the opening paper is an entertaining description of "Algiers and its Suburbs." Mrs. Lucy M. Mitchell contributes a picturesque account of the town, Castle, and University of "Heidelberg." The paper derives a timely interest from the fact that the five-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the university has just been celebrated. "Sea-Birds at the Farne Islands," by Bryan Hook, with illustrations by the author, gives a description of the birds to be found off the Northumberland coast on the islands with which is associated the heroism of Grace Darling; "The Western Art Movement," by Ripley Hitchcock, reveals art tendencies and achievements in several Western cities. A sketch portrait of John Burroughs is the frontispiece of the number, and Miss Edith M. Thomas contributes a short paper on "John Burroughs and his Last Two Books." In the War series, General James Longstreet contributes the title paper, "The Battle of Fredericksburg," and the Confederate view. The Union assaults upon the memorable stone wall are described by General Darius N. Couch, who was virtually in command on the field of "Sumner's 'Right Grand Division;'" General William F. Smith, General Rush C. Hawkins, and Major J. Horace Lacy write of the different parts of the battle, describing such parts of the bloody and disastrous field as came under the notice of each. Dr. Washington Gladden writes of the question, "Is it Peace or War?" as regards the relation of capital and labor, and states the situation on both sides with great force and fairness. The first editorial in "Topics of the Times," entitled "The Falsehood of Extremes," also deals with the labor troubles; and in "Open Letters," Alfred Bishop Mason writes of "A Dutch Success in Co-operation."

In the Brooklyn Magazine, "Hamlet's City," by Hon. W. J. Armstrong, takes us through the scenes of Shakespeare's drama in the quaint town of Elsinore, Denmark, and conducts us down into the lower dungeons of Kronberg Castle, disclosing the blood-curdling horrors of its subterranean vaults. Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher writes from Liverpool of listening to Gladstone's great Home-Rule speech, through the first of a series of personal letters from England. "A New Factor in our Civilization" is an account of the natural gas of Pennsylvania and Ohio. Late Sermons by Beecher and Talmage form an important part of the magazine.

The frontispiece of the English Illustrated Magazine is beautiful and noble character study, "Study of a Head," "In Leicester Fields," and "Old Chester," are finely illustrated descriptions, the first, of a part of old London, the other, of one of the most interesting towns in the northwest of England.

The Herald of Health is among the most valuable of the sanitary and health journals. The contents for the month are: "An English Ladies' Boarding School;" "How to Leave off Corsets;" "Temperance Physiology;" "Sewage Disposal in Berlin;" "A Sensible Breakfast;" "Health and Working Habits of Busy Men and Women."

The opening article of St. Nicholas, "A Rocky Mountain Hermit," by Alfred Terry Bacon, is a delightful account of a Robinson Cruso summer spent among the birds, the beasts, and the mountains of Wyoming. Ripley Hitchcock gives in "A Royal Fish," a description of the methods and the joys of salmon-fishing, which is freely illustrated. The "Work and Play" department is also of an amphibious character this month, and contains "A Rope Yarn spun by an Old Sailor," C. W. Miller, who describes some of the most useful knots and splices employed by mariners, but applicable to terrestrial purposes. Horace E. Scudder takes "George Washington" through the year 1783, when he became once more a private citizen; and Henry Eckford, in "Wonders of the Alphabet," tells about some curious ancient and modern letter systems.

Babyhood, in its August issue, introduces a department of "Nursery Observations," consisting of short extracts from its large and varied correspondence describing special traits of children. One of the most important articles is "Diarrhœa from a H. D. Chapin. Other medical authorities discuss "The Baby in Its Carriage, "Sea Bathing for Children," and "Water Filters." Marion Harland writes on "Old Wives' Fables," and Mrs. Lucy White Palmer on "The Coming Guest."

REFORM NEWS.

STATE MEETINGS.

IOWA

State meeting is fixed by constitution on the last Tuesday in August. The notice of place, speakers, etc., will be given in due time. Bro. Hawley is hard at work in Iowa and meeting with very encouraging success. Every friend in the State should encourage, co-operate with and aid in supporting this able and tried Christian worker. His work is not spasmodic or sensational, but solid, everyday work, that will foot up in permanent results at the end of the year. Look out for the official call and get ready to come up and hold an old-time Christian convention on the straight line of opposition to the dark orders.

ILLINOIS

State meeting at Princeton, September 20th and 21st prox. Bro. H. H. Hinman writes from this energetic inland city, the former home of Owen Lovejoy, that he finds many friends of our cause, and is assured of entertainment for a goodly number of delegates. He has engaged the Opera Hall for two evenings and one day, with privilege of additional day if needed. It is designed to procure the best speakers possible for this convention, and to make it in every way worthy of the great cause of reform and the State which it represents. The damaging influence of secret societies upon moral character, and their hostility to the substantial interests of our country and even to the liberties of the people, are becoming better known, and the times are favorable for an impartial discussion of this question.

In addition to the American people in and near Princeton, there is a large foreign-born population who are decidedly favorable to open methods and wisely avoid membership in societies ever concealing and never revealing the transactions of their nightly conclaves.

Friends, let us have an old-time rally at Princeton on the straight line of Christian work and free discussion. Look for speakers and programme soon, but do not wait to begin to get ready.

J. P. Stoddard.

FRIENDS AND FOES IN WISCONSIN.

Elder J. F. Browne is already in the field and and doing solid work against the system of secret lodges in this State. He is no novice in the work, and while friends may well rejoice and take new courage, foes have just occasion to apply themselves to serious thought, for their "craft is in danger." Wisconsin has a well-officered organization, and the machinery for a first-class campaign. There are many and influential friends in the State and money enough in the treasury to give the work a hopeful start. If you want Elder J. F. Browne to keep right on through the year you must do two or three things:

1st. You must help support him. Dea. M. R. Britten, of Vienna, Walworth county, is the custodian of your funds and has been for several years. His reports are always accurate and satisfactory. Send to him the amount you can give to this work for the year.

2d. Co-operate with your agent in calling and holding meetings and see that he has a comfortable home while with you, and is not left to carry heavy valises to and from the depot before and after speaking. A little attention to such matters will lighten the burdens and greatly cheer the heart of your "servant for Christ's sake."

3d. Your State meeting should be held at as early a date as practicable, at which there should be a grand rally and Pentecost, and the whole movement should be with humility, faith and prevailing prayer. Read reports of your agent in the Cynosure from week to week, show them to your neighbors and ask them to become weekly readers of a Christian family paper that gives the last developments of the secret lodge system, discusses living questions, and in no case shuns to declare the whole counsel of God. J. P. Stoddard.

MINNESOTA AND IOWA.

Dear Cynosure:—After the annual meeting of the N. C. A. I went to Minneapolis, Minn., to attend the Augustana Synod of the Evangelical Swedish Lutheran church. The synod is a vast assembly being composed of all the pastors, and a lay delegate from each pastoral charge of their membership of fifty-five thousand. It was soul-inspiring to look upon such a strong and resolute body of Christian Anti-masons.

I greeted those I knew and freely distributed tract literature; and when I took my departure I went to St. Paul and called upon Rev. Wm. Fenton, the zealous street-preacher and Anti-masonic reformer of that city. We together visited Red Rock camp-meeting, and interviewed the minister who had charge of the meeting, to whom I gave a number of tracts. During the few hours I spent upon the camp-ground I heard Rev. Sam Jones preach. A part of the time he played the role of a pulpit fun-maker. Then the scene changed, and his utterances were grand, impressive and thrilling.

From St. Paul I came to Wasioja, Dodge Co., Minn., where Prof. Paine, the principal of Wasioja Seminary and the president of the Minnesota Christian Association opposed to secret societies, resides. He is very anxious to have the reform work carried on in that State.

I preached and spoke several times in Wasioja, and distributed tracts, and gave private lectures,and canvassed for new subscribers to the Cynosure, extending my labors into the adjoining county of Goodhue. I succeeded in taking thirteen new subscribers to the paper.

Receiving notice on the 12th of July that my time as an agent of the N. C. A. had expired, I closed my work in Minnesota, and the next day took my departure for Iowa. At this juncture I recived a call from the Illinois Christian Association to be their State agent; but being already in correspondence with the officers of the Iowa Association I started for their State to prospect and see if sufficient financial aid can be secured to carry on the reform work in Iowa this year.

C. F. Hawley.

FROM THE WISCONSIN AGENT.

On train for Baraboo, Wis., Aug. 7, 1886.

Editor Cynosure:—My application for the privilege of showing the literature of the anti-secrecy reform and calling attention to our work, on the grounds of the Monona Lake Assembly, was refused. Pres. Coleman said our work was "divisive." And has not our all-wise Lord said that his work would cause division? A work divisive in that it separates truth from error; the people of God from the men of this world? The Lord hasten on such division! It is one great need of the age.

In Madison I met with encouragement from pastor Gunderson of the Norwegian church, and from Prof. Ylvisacher of the Norwegian Theological Seminary, at which institution I have hope to speak at no distant date.

At Baraboo I was very kindly received by Dr. Cowles, J. W. and Robert Wood, and Bro. Van Driessen of Lyons. On Lord's day, Aug. 1, I went to Fairfield, where Bro. Van Driessen preaches, and spoke in his place. I was interested in my message and the congregation listened well. Appointment was made for me to lecture there Aug. 8. In the evening I spoke in the school-house near J. W. Wood's.

Since then I have been seeing friends and making appointments, having gone as far north as Elroy. Near this place lives Elder Mabbott, a staunch United Brethren minister, with whom I lodged Friday night. At Ironton I was kindly received by Bro. O. C. Blanchard, and on Big Creek, northeast of LaValle, by Bro. J. W. DeLap, Wesleyan minister.

I have so far arranged for meetings as follows:

Aug. 12, Friend's chapel, Friendswood, Sauk Co.
" 13, Wesleyan chapel, near Friendswood.
Aug 15 (Lord's day) { A. M. Wesleyan chapel, Big Creek. P. M., Friendswood. Evening M. E. church, Ironton.
Aug. 16 and 17, Potter's school-house, Juneau Co.
" 18, U. B. chapel, Big Creek.
" 19, Wesleyan chapel, Big Creek.
" 20, Valton, Sauk Co.
" 22 (Lord's day), Valton and La Valle, Sauk Co.
" 23, La Valle, Sauk Co.
" 24, Valton, Sauk Co.
" 26, 27, 29, Pleasant Ridge, Monroe Co.

To-morrow I am to speak in and about Lyons.

Who wants my services? Write without delay to 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

For the rights of Christ, J. F. Browne.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 6, 1886.

Dear Cynosure:—I left Chicago on the 30th ult., at 12 M., and spent the afternoon and evening with our steadfast friend, Bro. Gardner, who took me into the country to see Dea. Alexander Small, who has been for years a liberal supporter of our reform, and who still proposes to do duty as a good soldier. On Saturday, the 31st, I called on other friends, among them Rev. Mr. Ebey, pastor of the Free Methodist church, who gave me names of friends and many timely suggestions.

I then came to Princeton, and have been most kindly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hodgeman. On Sabbath I attended and spoke at the Free Methodist service and also at a street meeting in the evening. This little church, though small in numbers and poor in this world's goods, are rich in faith and zeal, and are not ashamed of the reproach of Christ. On Tuesday evening there was a meeting to pray for prohibition of the liquor traffic held in the Congregational church, which was of much interest.

On Wednesday I visited friends in Dover, and returning attented prayer meeting at 2 P. M.; afterwards went to Wyanet, and walked most of the way to Bro. J. Bradley's, four and a half miles in the country, where I was cordially welcomed and entertained, as are all true reformers who come in the name of the Lord. Thursday morning, after a delightful rain, Bro. Bradley took me five miles to Rev. Wm. Pinkney's, who went with me to visit Bros. Corse and Fay, two veterans in the cause. He then brought me to Princeton, where I spoke in the Swedish Baptist church to a fair congregation of sympathetic Christian people. The four Swedish congregations here are all in sympathy with us, but two are without pastors, and the two pastors here have been but a short time in the place and are somewhat timid.

There is considerable intelligent anti-secret sentiment in the other churches, and the prospect of our convention is good. None of the pastors are Masons, except the M. E. minister, who is said to be devoted to the order. I called on the son of Owen Lovejoy, a prominent lawyer here, and was struck with his resemblance to his father. He received me most kindly, had many kind remembrances of Wheaton. He is in evident sympathy with our reform. I go to-day to Sheffield. H. H. Hinman.

KANSAS CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Kansas Christian Association will hold its next annual meeting at the Rusco church, seven miles north of Vining, Washington county, commencing at 7:30 P. M., Tuesday, Sept. 7th, 1886.

The following programme of work is suggested:

I. Report from State agent of work done during the year, with the future outlook.

II. Should secret lodges be opposed, and if so on what considerations?

III. Wherein lies the secret of lodge power?

IV. Knights of Labor, how related to Freemasonry, and to society generally?

V. Secret fraternities in their relation to family, church and state.

VI. How can secret orders be most successfully opposed?

W. W. McMillan, Sec'y Kansas C. A., Olathe.

The Location.—Those coming from the southeast, south, or southwest can come to Vining, seven miles south of the church, on the Republican Branch of the Kansas Pacific R. R, from Junction City or Clay Center. Those coming from the east or west, come on the Central Branch to Clifton, one mile east of Vining. There will be teams at both places waiting for those coming on the 7th. The friends of the cause are cordially invited.

R. Loggan.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NOTES FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

San Jose, Cal., July 29, 1886.

Editor Cynosure: The absorbing theme of the present month is the "G. A. R. Encampment." Very extensive preparations are making to entertain the guests both in San Francisco and San Jose. Many veterans have already arrived, and many more are en route to the coast. August 10th is to be the grand "Reception Day" for the "Boys in Blue" here in San Jose. Much public spirit is manifested to make the occasion a memorable one. Our mayor has even discontinued our street sprinkling in order to save money to defray expenses in connection with the entertainment of the soldiers whom all delight to honor.

The "irrigation" question is prominent before the Legislature. It is likely to be handled in a more satisfactory manner than in previous years.

The Holiness Camp Meeting, now holding here, creates no small interest. The Lord is pouring out blessings on his people. Occident.

LODGERY AND POLITICS IN ARKANSAS.

Charleston, Ark., Aug. 2, 1886.

Dear Cynosure:—I do not know how I could do without your paper in this land so cursed with secret societies. The Democratic party is controlled by Freemasonry, and the Republican by a secret society called the "Brothers of Freedom," or "Wheelers." This is another secret order. Each party tries to gain the colored vote.

Thus each party is trying to overthrow the other. The Democratic party say, by their action, that they won't defend the colored men if they get into trouble, unless they support their party. I know two colored men who were arrested for stealing a bale of cotton. One had voted the Democratic ticket, and the other a "Brother of Freedom" ticket. The Democratic sheriff met the one who had voted the Democratic ticket with a bond and went his bail to keep him from going to jail, while the other had to go to jail and wait until the next term of court to get a trial. When he had his trial there was no proof of his guilt. Some time afterwards, while this same colored man was on his death-bed, he declared that he was innocent of the charge. This is the way they persecute both black and white who dare say anything against them.

I preached at one place where a man arose and said he was afraid to come and hear me preach, for fear I would be mobbed. I found out he had been trying to get up a mob against me himself; but the people told him that he had better let it alone, I told him that I was ready to be mobbed for the truth's sake, and that it would not be the first time. For being an Abolitionist I had the last cow I had shot down on my own farm in Livingston county, Ill. I was at Streator, Ill., when the Masons egged brethren Ronayne and Hinman, and helped guard them to Bro. Buckley's house. I then and there became convinced that Freemasonry was a child of the devil, and must be removed from the nation or it would destroy our government.

The Masons here have a book belonging to me, written by Pres. C. G. Finney, and won't return it, although asked for it several times.

C. P. PAGET.

THE EX-NUN ELIZABETH HEADY.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—There is at present in Chicago a young woman from Terre-Haute, Indiana, who styles herself as an ex-nun, and goes on lecturing on her so-called personal experience, as an ex-Roman Catholic nun.

I am sorry to be obliged, by the information I have had from the Catholic priest of Terre-Haute, and other reliable sources, to warn the public against such a woman.

She has never been a nun. She is but an impostor, and I refer the readers to the Chicago Herald, Sunday issue, 25th of July, which reproduces a long article from the papers of Terre-Haute, Indiana, concerning her conduct whilst there. Constable Burdick of this city was summoned by the Chief of Police of Terre-Haute to make an inquiry about the so-called ex-nun, who has been preaching here in the various leading Protestant churches, and obtained money also for her book.

P. A. SEGUIN, Pastor.

TO BAPTISTS WHO READ THE CYNOSURE.

DEAR EDITOR:—Allow me to say through the Cynosure, brave and true, that there is just one Baptist paper in these United States that has the fidelity to God and his truth, the pluck and courage to speak the truth on the lodge question. None north of Mason and Dixon's line can live long at a time, which has the audacity to question the divinity of the lodge. Our good and brave brethren, such as Austin and Fenton, have essayed to speak to our Baptists of the North and West, but were not sustained.

Now let me say to the Baptists, and to all others, that the Living Way of Memphis, Tenn., is brave and loyal to God and truth, and is thoroughly a Baptist paper, and should receive the support of all Baptists in the country. Brinkley and Countee are its editors. They are men of mark, being men of God, who in this profligate age endure persecutions for the truth's sake. O, ye thousands of Baptists, who hate the lodge as God also does, "come up to the help of the Lord, against the mighty" Baal Peor, by sending your names with $2 to R. N. Countee, with your orders for that good paper. Here is a Baptist paper, a hero in the midst of an army of cowards, which will speak out at the cost of reputation, popularity, and bread and butter. Send for it.

If you use tobacco in any form quit, and send your $2 for the Living Way, and that large surplus, saved up from abstinence, for Cynosure and other good literature. I presume its editors are clean from the tobacco curse, and "all filthiness of the flesh and spirit." Right eyes, come out! right arms, come off! and give room for the soul to swing where the sun does his successive journeys make. Get into the Living Way forthwith. It is a good place for the soul to vibrate.

I see this messenger of God is publishing the names of anti-lodge ministers. Good! Here's mine—my soul in it.

Satan has gone a "new departure." Instead of "fire and brimstone," he uses whisky and dynamite and dispenses the same through the lodges and lodge preachers, many of whom are faithful subagents. The lead which the divine institution (?) planted in the head of the financial editor of the Living Way has turned to golden thoughts, and the recoil is tremendous on the legions of lodgery. Brother Countee is a thousand times safer at the muzzle than his adversaries are at the breach. "Masonic Outrages" are destined to tell with awful precision on the ranks of the lodge—the Communists, Nihilists, Anarchists, Mollies, Mormons, and Masons. These are the graduates, and form a kind of alumni association, of the world's university of the "Universal religion" of Masonry of all types, for all work.

Lucifer is bound to be up with these times with "an educated ministry" with fuse and fire. His audiences never sleep in church, or anywhere else where the interests of his kingdom are at stake. His dynamite bombs are ubiquitous, nearly, in the form of Masonic preachers; these are his pets. The lodge-bound presses inflate them, while they have a stigma for the faithful. God save us from lodgery.

NATHAN CALLENDER.

PROHIBITION IN MICHIGAN.

DETROIT, Mich., July 31, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have just returned from Lansing, where was held on Wednesday, July 28th, one of the largest, most able and enthusiastic Prohibition conventions ever held in this State. Every district was represented and over a thousand delegates were present. There was some earnest and sharp discussion over the platform, but the final action on adoption, and the nomination of State officers was unanimous, and the results announced with cheers. Prof. Dickey of Albion College was nominated for Governor, and Hon. Charles Mosher of Mosherville was nominated for Lieut.-governor, and a full State ticket made out. Prohibition clubs are being formed throughout the State, and a very large Prohibition party vote will be cast in Michigan. The Democrats and Greenbackers are "fusing" and the Republicans are turning "blue!"

GEO. W. CLARK.

THE TRIALS OF UNITED BRETHREN.

BEACONSFIELD, Iowa.

Much is done by some to "blind the minds" of the brethren and cause them to follow their so-called "leaders" The Conservator is denounced as "a mess of falsehood," and they try to make believe that all but "commission" men should be arrested for insubordination. Until the last General Conference most of us thought we had men for leaders of the same sentiments and principles as Dr. Lewis Davis, Bishop Wright, Bishop Dickson, Rev. William Dillon, Hon. H. Floyd, and others of like precious faith who follow Christ. If they are not now our leaders, if they and the Conservator are in error, they err with such men as Bishop Edwards who was the first president of the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, and Pres. C. G. Finney and others now in heaven and all the best men living. He whose "name is above every name" said, "In secret have I said nothing;" no error in that. The Apostle to the Gentiles said, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness."

The last General Conference constituted a thing which is entirely new and has no precedent in this or any other church, or has it the shadow of constitutional law. It is composed in part of ministers, and if the church has been right for the last one hundred years they are either deluded or Satanized. Wright and Dickson are both bishops, and if so they are leaders, but they lead in a different direction. So we have two sets of leaders, leaders of the new departure and those who lead us in the old paths. All who will be led "in the way the fathers trod" are denounced as liars and disloyal troublers. But just how it makes a man loyal and truthful to abandon the old paths and be led off with a new thing is hard to explain, but if any one is able, surely one would think it would be "men of brains." The commission is a new thing; it is like the lodge because it antagonizes "free thought, free speech, and free investigation;" and brings in strife and division with a new leadership.

CYRUS SMITH.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON VIII, August 22, 1886.—Warning to Judas and Peter.—John 13: 21-38.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Cor. 10: 12.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Christ foretells Judas's betrayal. vs. 21–30. We instinctively recognize the fact that there are some disciples who live peculiarly near to Christ. We ask their prayers for us, and feel that our faith is warranted by James: "The fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous man availeth much." Peter recognized it when he beckoned to the loyal, loving John to put the question which they all dreaded yet longed to ask. But it is not as easy to find out the Judases as it is the Johns. Frequently, as in his case, they are greatly trusted, given most responsible positions in the church; and their true character is not discovered till it stands self-revealed, as they go out forever from the company of Jesus's true disciples,—out into the darkness, self excluded, self-condemned.

2. The New Commandment. vs. 31–35. The departure of Judas seemed to lift the cloud of darkness from Christ's soul. Again he begins to speak of approaching glory, and to comfort his disciples with those wonderful "last words" that have been the solace and joy of believers in all the ages since. Now that the hour had come when he was to be glorified, and God glorified in him, by a manifestation of such love as the universe had never before witnessed, he gives them a sign by which, when he shall be parted from them, they themselves, and all around them, shall know that they belong to him:—"Love one another as I have loved you." The sham benevolence, of which there is so much in the world, could have but little power to deceive men if they would bring it to the test of this divine touchstone:—"As I have loved you." The strength of the secret lodge system is in its boasted charity, but Christ and anti-Christ have no part nor lot with each other, and the charity which the lodge-god burlesques, when he binds together in fraternal ties believer and unbeliever, infidel and Christian, is the purest selfishness. The reason that multitudes are deceived and defrauded by it, for this world and the next, is because they have never found out by personal experience what true charity really is, and so they are willing to accept the spurious article. When Finney said, "I was converted from the lodge to Christ," he expressed this truth: The soul that has truly felt the wonderful love of Christ knows at once the ring of the false coin.

3. Christ foretells Peter's denial. vs. 36–38. We all like the rash, warmhearted Peter, probably for the reason that he has so much genuine human nature in him. He forgot his weakness, forgot that time, when through the same rash self-confidence, he almost sank in the stormy waters of Galilee. How must the sorrowful prophecy have fallen on his ears: "Before the cock crow twice thou shalt deny me thrice." It is not so important a question whether we are willing to die for Christ as whether we are willing to live for him; willing to stand up for the honor of his name, through evil report and good report; willing to combat every popular sin that would block the way for his advancing chariot wheels; willing to be nothing that he may be all in all.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

When was Peter at last allowed to follow his Master? ch. 21. 18; 2 Peter 1: 14. How is God glorified in Christ? 1 Peter 4: 10, 11.

From the Bible Teacher.

"When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in spirit." (v. 21.) What was it that troubled his spirit, usually so calm? Not the fact that he was soon to suffer. True, his soul had been troubled by thoughts of his sufferings a few days before (12: 27); but now he was troubled as he thought of the fate of him who should betray him. God is willing that none should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

"The disciples looked one upon another." (v. 22.) Anxiety filled their hearts because of the possibility that one of them should betray him. So should our lives be serious and earnest, while joyful and ever confident in the Lord. There is no room for frivolity in the Christian life. They asked the Lord, "Is it I," knowing that he understood their hearts. So let us pray, "Lord, search me."

"There was leaning on Jesus's bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved." (v. 23) What traits does Jesus love to find in his disciples? Just such as are here described. He loves the soul that seeks intimate fellowship with himself, and trusts him implicitly, like a child resting in its mother's bosom. "If you love me, sister, lean hard," said a converted heathen to her teacher, whom she was supporting in the mission room. So says Jesus to every soul.

"After the sop Satan entered into him." (v. 27.) I understand the giving of the sop to have been an earnest, tender appeal of love; but it was rejected. Then Satan took complete possession. Such is the danger of every one who deliberately rejects the Gospel. "When the unclean spirit finds his house empty, swept and garnished,—unoccupied by the grace of God, "he taketh seven spirits worse than himself, and they enter in and abide there. And the last state of that man is worse than the first."

"Love one another, as I have loved you." (v. 34.) How does Jesus love us? (1) His is an undeserved love. We deserve only his wrath. How then shall we as Christians say, "I never can love that man!" "I never can love that scholar!" True, their characters may be unlovely; but what was your character when Jesus found you? If you cherish no compassion for the erring, because of his faults, are you loving as Jesus loves? (2) His love led him to make an unspeakable sacrifice for its objects. "Brethren, let us not love in word only, but in deed." What sacrifices have we made for those whom we profess to love? (3) His was a stable, unchanging love. "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." What more bitter experience than to find that one in whose friendship we had reason to repose has become a detractor, a calumniator. Is this the way Jesus loves you,—with such a fickle, inconstant love? (4) His is too often an unrequited love. Have any of us made a proper, an adequate return for his love to us? Why then should I say, "I will do nothing more for that ungrateful scholar, or neighbor; he shows no appreciation whatever of kindnesses bestowed on him?" If Jesus had bestowed blessings only in proportion to our appreciation of them, where would we all be to-day?

OBITUARY.

ABNER C. READ died in West Salem, Ohio, July 28th, 1886, aged 77 years, 10 months, and 28 days. He was one of our oldest and best citizens. He was a good man and a devoted Christian. For many years he was a subscriber of the Cynosure and was earnest in his opposition to secrecy. The funeral was held last Sunday in the Evangelical church, of which the deceased was a highly esteemed member. He died in peace. The funeral service was by the writer. J. B. KANAGA.

JOHN C. BROWN died in Los Angeles, Cal., July 9th, 1886. He had been a resident of that city for nineteen years, and was a member of the real estate firm of Brown and Adams. He was born in Scotland, and was a man of strong physical constitution and earnest spirit. He was for many years connected with one of the Congregational churches of the city, and was active in the church, and as a volunteer Sabbath-school missionary, and no less zealous in temperance and other reform work. About four years ago he embraced the views of the holiness workers in that city, and received the blessing of faith. He then connected himself with the independent holiness church, and was greatly useful in putting that work on a permanent basis. He was even more in earnest than before for Christian work against the saloon, the lodge, and in favor of every good and holy enterprise.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY,

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE

F. W. Capwell; New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A. Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 0
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

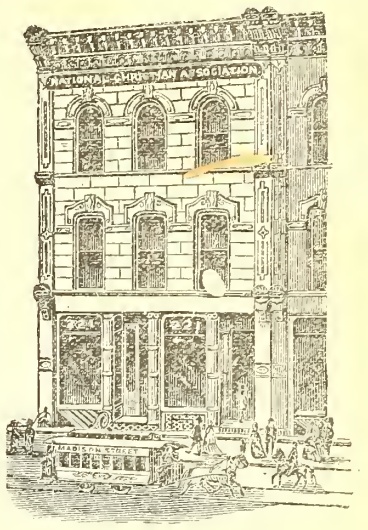
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.



OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Morengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, E. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres. Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec., John Bosley, Graftno. Treas., H. B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY AUGUST 12, 1886

PHILO CARPENTER IS DEAD.

A great star has fallen from the firmament of reform, nay, rather, has risen to higher skies above it. Every reader of the Cynosure and every philanthropist in Chicago will be a mourner and follow his bier with benisons. We propose that the family be requested to set off a plat for a monument in front of the old Carpenter mansion on Randolph street, in this city, and that those who wish to contribute to its erection, in every State and Territory in the Union, may be permitted to do so. There is no one State or Territory in which some such persons do not now reside. As was said of another patriarch, he died "being old and full of days;" and the character which God gave of that other patriarch, would answer well enough for his: "There is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man: one that feareth God and escheweth evil." He should not now be hidden away in some crowded cemetery, but stand where his benevolent features may beam from his monument on the stream of humanity sweeping through the gate city between the oceans, that coming generations may light their way to earth's promised millennium at his lamp.

Mr. Carpenter was born in Savoy, among the hills of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, June 22d, 1805, and died August 6th, midnight, after a brief relapse in a protracted illness. He came to Chicago in 1832 in a log canoe, and has seen the city rise to its present magnitude from a rude hamlet of cabins made of green logs.

Mr. Carpenter wrote and circulated the first temperance pledge here, when whisky was abundant as lake water in the gutters; he started the first Sabbath-school while the language of the Christian religion was a foreign tongue; he founded the first church and was its principal officer for years. In denomination he was a Baptist-Presbyterian-Congregationalist. His large foresight, cool judgment, and correct habits placed him, from the first, among the richest men in Chicago, and his taste and culture made him relish their society, and desire their good opinion. But he was an Abolitionist when the name was odious, and he was ejected by the Presbytery of Chicago from a church built and furnished by his own money, because he voted to request his Elders not to represent his church in the upper courts of the denomination till they ceased to uphold slavery. He requested leave to take out stoves he had newly put up, to warm the temporary accommodations which were to shelter him and the handful of brethren and sisters who had built the edifice, but the stoves were denied him. In all this ecclesiastical savageism, no bitter word escaped his lips, and no harsh feeling shaded his countenance. The same calm, benignant expression beamed on all, as God's sun shines on just and unjust alike. His country, which, if he had any, was his idol, was writhing under the slave system, made cruel by fear, and bondmen came to Chicago on their route to the North star. Mr Carpenter's home was their sanctuary where their bloody pursuers dare not follow them. While every inch a gentleman, he was in every pulse a man.

But the crowning glory of this man, who had the talent to fill any civil office from President down, was the closing labor of his life. He had built churches, patronized and protected schools, and fed from his bounty so many, that "when the ear heard him, then it blessed him, and when the eye saw him it gave witness to him, because he delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him." He loved the esteem of good men and was not indifferent to popularity. But he was twenty-one years old when Masons murdered Morgan, and was a citizen of New York when the judiciary of that Empire State was defied and throttled by the lodge. He had seen three hundred men accessory to the murder of a citizen, husband, and father, before the fact, and 60 men implicated by their own acts in that national murder. He had seen that accursed system which had corrupted good men by its oaths and shielded the murderers by its influence and money, prostrated by popular indignation, rise, like a wounded snake and crawl back into power, over pulpit, press, and platform; and he said, "When we get along with this slave business we must give our attention to the lodge, and we must have a paper to represent us." This was the first word the writer ever heard about a paper. The Christian Cynosure is that paper. He furnished money to issue the first number. He gave the building in which it is printed, 221 West Madison street. He wrote tracts; he attended conventions; sat steadily in the executive committee, and presided over the annual conventions of the movement.

"We give such names unto the sweet-toned lyre,
Th' historic Muse, proud of the treasure,
Marches with it down to latest times.
And Sculpture, in her turn, give bond in stone
And ever-during brass, to guard them
And to immortalize her trust."

The world's heroes have been and still are the men of battles. Grant was great. He helped to save our country by the sword, but Mr. Carpenter has helped make the country worth saving.

REV. NATHAN BROWN.

We omit the tittle, "D. D.," given him by Williams College, because "he said in his diary," says his able biographer, Rev. A. A. Bennett, "He considered it unrepublican and anti-Christian. His dislike to it continued till his death."

The text, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel," never was applied more fitly, than by his biographer to Nathan Brown.

This great man was born in New Ipswich, N. H., June 22nd, 1807, of Baptist parents. His immediate ancestors were church-officers, when that denomination was a protest against the formalism which had crept into the New England churches from their connection with the state. The Baptists insisted on regeneration as prerequisite to membership, and gave "credible evidence of a change of heart" or being "born again," a prominence in this country never known before. They spiritualized the American churches. It is to be deplored that, as a denomination, they commune with Knight Templars and Scotch Rite Masons, both of whom baptize infants, and who also reject Christ or worship him with swords and human skulls, and ignore regeneration by the Holy Ghost!

Nathan Brown was born when regeneration was the sum of the Baptist creed, and their covenant meetings were little penteeosts, and their infants, as did John the Baptist, often received baptisms by the Holy Ghost before they were born. Such seems to have been the case with young Brown. He joined the church at nine years of age. His grandfather, Josiah Brown, fought as captain at Bunker Hill and Ticonderoga, and both grandfather and father were Baptist deacons, and lived above eighty years. The son and grandson died at seventy-eight. At twenty he graduated at Williams College, the first in a class of thirty. Before his graduation he wrote the poem, "The Missionary," which was chanted at his funeral in Japan. In 1830 he married, and was editor of the Vermont Telegraph, while that State was rocked by the Anti masonic earthquake, and he helped carry that State for Wirt and Ellmaker in 1832. But this great work is forgotten or suppressed by his Baptist biographers. Seeing the lodge, the hatcher of heathenism, lying for dead in Vermont and the Northern States, he embarked for Burmah in December, 1832, where he toiled twenty years, conquered and preached in four or five Asiatic languages, but devoted his life-labor to translating the Bible, and writing hymns for the pagans, who had dug up his little girl's coffin in hopes of finding gold in it, and left the child to be devoured by jackals. Thousands of converts now sing those hymns.

In 1855, wrecked in body and mind, he returned to America. Restored to health in the home of Levi Coffin, the Quaker philanthropist and manager of the "underground" railway, he became editor of the American Baptist, when our slavery struggle was at its white heat. Through this medium he poured a stream of light among the pro-slavery owls and bats who were peering and chickering in the belfry of his denomination. He helped elect Abraham Lincoln, saw slavery fall, as he had seen the lodge hide itself; conducted the American Baptist with ability and power for fifteen years, and left America for Japan in 1872.

We pause here to tell what sent this noble man from his country at 65 years of age to recommence missionary life in Asia.

The writer had seen Dr. Brown in the American Baptist office in Utica, N. Y. That paper was then the organ of the Free Mission Baptists.. In no way but by withdrawing from the pro-slavery bodies could slavery be driven out of them. Their governing motive was the fear of losing funds. Slavery fell by Lincoln's proclamation in 1863; and the Appomattox surrender two years later, and the three Constitutional amendments confirmed the proclamation. Now the old original Baptist Missionary Society discovered that they had never differed with their Free Mission brethren in anything worth mentioning, and now that the thing was abolished, they could see that this woman-whipping, babe-selling business was really sin per se. They did not need two missionary societies. "Let us be one, and we will send out your men. Dr. Brown, for instance, is the very man we need for Japan." So in February, 1873, Mr. Brown arrived in Japan, where he died aged 78 years, 6 months, Jan. 1, 1886:—"A painter, poet, artist, editor, philologist, antiquarian, teacher, preacher and missionary": and the children of those who stoned this prophet of God will now build his tomb and garnish his sepulchre. In the native Japanese chapel during the funeral service, when the audience of native Christians attempted to sing one of the hymns written for them by their beloved missionary, they broke down with grief and the hymn ended in silence and tears.

In 1855, when the Abolition struggle was hottest, and Mr. Brown left his mission-work and came home as one of a grief-stricken band of missionaries, protesting against the pretensions and interference of pro-slavery home secretaries, whom his fearless fidelity to truth had provoked to acts of arrogant oppression, it is noteworthy that he found solace and restoration to health in Cincinnati, in the house of Levi Coffin, an unbaptized Quaker, where the slave-mother "Eliza," had found refuge, who crossed the Ohio with her babe in her arms on moving flakes of ice, leaving her balked pursuers gazing after her from the Kentucky shore. This same philanthropist's roof has often sheltered the editor of the Cynosure; and he was one of the Tract Committee which issued the first tract against secret societies, written by the said editor. In the home of such a philanthropist, Mr. Brown rekindled his life and vigor, re-entered life's battle for Christ and did an ordinary life's work after most men are laid aside. His pen powerfully sustained political abolitionism, and helped the election of Lincoln, to whom he was afterward sent as one of a commission to urge and encourage that great man to issue his immortal Emancipation Proclamation. As editor of the Brandon, Vt., Telegraph, he had, in 1831, helped overthrow the lodge in the Free States. As secretary of the Baptist Free Mission Society he vitalized that organization which drove slavery from its refuge in the opinion of that great denomination; and one of the avowed principles of the Baptist Free Mission Society which had been formed in Boston, May 4, 1843, was "opposition to secret societies." But by a flank movement, common in the war of anti-Christ, Satan has carried the 800,000 Abolitionists by complexion in the South against the protest of their great Apostle, Nathan Brown, and against the Baptist Free Mission Society of which he was the secretary and the glory. Let brethren Countee of Tennessee, and E. J. Payne of Charleston, South Carolina, awake the entire colored population of the South, to the fact that their friends in the North, who suffered, prayed, toiled and conquered for them, were all opposed to secret societies, from Charles Sumner, Lincoln and Chase to the godly men whose prayer and and labors under God, gave those statesmen their constituents and the slaves their freedom.

In the winter of 1867–8 the writer, as chairman of the Aurora committee, saw Mr. Brown at No. 37 Park Row, N. Y., whither his paper had been removed, and told him of his appointment as member of that committee, to call our first national convention in Pittsburgh the following May. The great, good man smiled through his tears. He had stood with the sainted Bernard, Stearns, Pease, Colver, and a host of Baptists who had put their denomination in the "forefront of the hottest battle against the lodge, which had been sucking out their vitality from American institutions," and "now," said he, "whereas, once, every Baptist church in this city of New York excluded Freemasons, all but one are gone over to the lodge, and that last one is struggling against an effort to repeal the rule and let in the 'rulers of the world's darkness' and my own paper, the American Baptist, is trembling under the blows of concealed hands. The most I can give you is my prayers, but those you shall have."

In a short time the American Baptist became the Baptist Weekly, and the now sainted Nathan Brown was missionary to Japan. He left for heaven this present year and his biography is not yet out. The hand that shall rob God of the glory of this prophet, by suppressing his testimony against the conspiracy to expel Christ from the worship of Americans for sectarian or other reasons should be smitten with leprosy as was the arm of Jeroboam, who, while ministering at his idolatrous altar at Bethel, stretched it out to suppress the faithful prophet who foretold its ruin. The very bones of such men as Nathan Brown give life by their touch, and temporizing prophets like that old one at Bethel who sought popularity from both sides, will beg to be buried with them when they die. Blessed be God for the life of good and faithful men.

THE LODGE FLOOD.

PRESENT EVENTS PHOTOGRAPHED BY AN ANGEL NEAR TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO.

Woe to the inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! For the devil is come down to you having great wrath because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood, after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.—Rev. 12:12 and 15.

The Revelation, as Stuart has it, is picture and pantomine, events shown by tableaux. Now whoever read the Inter Ocean (Aug. 1) saw on page 20 three columns full of "SECRET SOCIETIES:" Knight Templars; Red Cross Knights; Commanderies; Conclaves; Eminents; Sir Eminents; Commanders-in Chief; Princes of the Royal Secret; Knights of Pythias; their brigade of uniformed Knights (illegal!) making a journey to Toronto at somebody's expense beside their own; Officers and Staff Illinois Brigade Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias, composed of Brigadier Generals, Colonels, Captains, Lieutenants, and so down; the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with a like long vocabulary of titularies; then the International Odd-fellows, and Odd-fellows of the Patriarchal Circle with whom the old Odd-fellows are in mortal feud, and both sham military, armed, uniformed bodies whose existence is forbidden by the laws; then Knights of Honor, a general meeting; Royal Arcanum, Regents meeting; Sons of America, the White Degree; United Workmen, Grand Legion; down to the poor Hebrews' B'nai B'rith, or sham Sons of the Covenant.

Think of three solid columns of stuff like above for one day, for which the general public have to pay the advertising! And reflect that the myriad members of these lodges are, nine in ten, wage-workers who carry on their banners, "Our children are starving," "Death to the bloated Capitalists." Notice, too, the resolutions of thanks of which the following is but one sample:

Resolved, That commendation is especially due to the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railroad for the excellent accommodations furnished us in elegant and luxurious coaches, making the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railroad one of the most agreeable and safe on the continent.

The beer and whisky bills are not mentioned though liquor was, of course, plenty.

Now the Cynosure wishes to call the attention of every Christian voter, indeed, of every lover of his country and his God, to the above single day's allowance, from a single Chicago daily and to the following brief comments:

1. Could anything more perfectly answer to a flood, out of the mouth of the devil, to sweep away and destroy Christianity, than the above deluge of false instruction, fraud, imposture, superstition and swindling?

2. The star-crowned, sun-clothed mother of the man-child, Christ, was of course, Christianity; and a flood from the dragon's mouth must mean a teaching force and institutions to displace and take the place of the Law and Gospel, Decalogue and Atonement, i. e., Christianity.

3. If men were not blinded, "bewitched by the devil," they could not help seeing that a Christless, religious hotch-potch of secretism, such as the Inter Ocean gives its readers, weekly, is an intellectual, moral and religious swill, fit only for men turned to swine and possessed by devils, running down a "steep place." What discreet father would send a son with that squad of persons over the "Grand Trunk" railroad, if they were not a sworn secret order, "bewildered and blinded by the lies and legends of the lodge." We call special attention to the paragraph given below from the Inter Ocean and to the facts which follow it:

Eminent Sir James Nesbitt, Grand Recorder of the Grand Commandery K. T., of Ohio, is so ill as to be unable to attend to the duties of his office. At his suggestion Charles E. Stanley, Grand Commander, has appointed Sir John D. Caldwell, of Cincinnati, Grand Recorder, pro tem, and directs that all reports and remittances of Grand Commandery dues, and all communications relating to the work of the Grand Recorder, be sent to him at Cincinnati until further notice.

Many years ago the Cynosure editor went into the Masonic Temple, Cincinnati, to inquire for Rebold's History of Masonry. The above named John D. Caldwell, now "Sir" John D. Caldwell, in a brief, pleasant conversation, gave the desired invitation, recognized the writer as a pastor in that city, who had preached against Masonry some twenty years before. In course of the conversation, Mr. Caldwell remarked, "We respect such gentlemen as you are who oppose us: for you must be aware we are disintegrating your churches." Mr. Caldwell had belonged to the church but now only to the lodge.

No reflecting man can read the three colums, p. 20. of the Inter Ocean (Aug. 1) without seeing clear as daylight that Mr. Caldwell told the truth. The lodges are disintegrating the churches, and no friend of the Zion of God, least of all can the watchman on her walls, see this disintegration going on and hold their peace, without being guilty of the blood of souls. (Ezek. 33.)

A country without churches is like a world whose sun is turned to blood and setting in a night without stars.

MR. CARPENTER'S DEATH.

The extended and respectful notices of the press on the death of Mr. Carpenter mark the esteem for his character universally felt by all who were honored by his acquaintance. It was something over four years ago that he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his arrival upon the spot now covered with a mighty city, and during this more than half century he has been an influential and public-spirited citizen. Among these notices the following from the Daily News very fairly epitomizes though with some minor errors the great work Mr. Carpenter has done for Christian reforms.

"Philo Carpenter was a warm friend of religion. The first month after his arrival here he established a Sunday-school, which is now known as the Home Sabbath-school of the First Presbyterian Church. A year later he helped organize that church and was a deacon in it for many years. He united with the Third Presbyterian subsequently, and it was the firm stand this church took on the slavery question that, largely through his efforts, led to a rupture in that denomination in 1851. Carpenter was a zealous anti-slavery advocate.

"He was uncompromising in his bitterness to the institution of slavery, and harangued against it on any and all occasions. The church of which he was a member took the matter up, and not liking the attitude of the General Assembly toward slavery promulgated the following:

"Resolved, That God hath made of one blood all nations of earth; that chattel slavery is blasphemous toward God and inhuman and cruel to our fellow-men; that this church is dissatisfied with the position of our General Assembly on the subject of disciplining those holding our fellow-men in bondage, and this church, so long as this vacillating policy is pursued, hereby declare their determination to stand aloof from all meetings of the Presbytery, Synod, and Assembly.

"This bold declaration aroused the Assembly. They insisted their brethren had disqualified themselves to act as members of a Presbyterian church, whereupon Mr. Carpenter and the others organized the First Congregational church, situated at the corner of Ann street and Washington boulevard.

"A gift of $50,000 from Mr. Carpenter to the theological seminary of that church on the West Side aided materially soon after in placing the institution on a prosperous basis. In all his efforts in the direction of reform Mr. Carpenter was consistent and unyielding. He encouraged temperance, and the same year he arrived here penned and circulated the first total abstinence pledge ever written in Chicago. He was a bitter foe to secret societies and fought them all through life and was lavish in his disbursements of money in the endeavor to break their influence. He was one of the founders of the Anti-Secret Society of this city, and was its president for many years. He regarded all secret orders as so many obstacles to religion and good government, and was one of the most active contributors to the movement. He donated the building and lot at 221 West Madison street to the Anti-Secret League to be used as its headquarters, and wrote and published a number of tracts, his theme being the danger to society of the existence of secret orders.

"Prior to the war his home on the west side was an asylum to all fugitive slaves, and many of these he aided to escape to Canada."

FUNERAL NOTICE.—The public funeral ceremonies will be conducted in the First Congregational church, of which Mr. Carpenter was a life-deacon, on Sabbath afternoon next, August 15th, at two o'clock. It is hoped that Dr. Goodwin, the pastor, now spending his vacation in Colorada, will return to officiate. The memorial services are delayed in order that Mrs. Edward Hildreth, the youngest daughter, may be present from Santa Barbara, California.

FREEMASONS IN WHEATON.—The Wheaton Lodge of Freemasons held a special meeting last Saturday night at the Court House. About thirty-five visiting brethren from Chicago, Hinsdale, Downers Grove, Naperville and Turner were present. About 12 o'clock [Saturday!] after passing a very pleasant evening, the company adjourned to the restaurant de Bixby, and partook of one of those suppers for which Mrs. B. is so justly noted.—Wheaton Illinoian.

We suggest a meeting of the citizens at the Du Page Court House to consider the propriety of that building being used for secret night meetings by Freemasons.

If Democrats, Republicans, Catholics, Methodists, or any other organization, should occupy and use the county building, paid for by the whole people, under oath or pledge to conceal their doings from the people whose money built the building, loud complaints would be instantly heard. And if there should be just and sufficient ground for belief that such party, church, or body, met there to gain secret advantages for themselves, they would be routed double-quick.

THE SOUTHERN FUND.—Below is one of scores of letters received by the Cynosure publisher. No better evidence could be asked of the value of the paper to ministers and churches in the South. Help this fund, brethren, by your prayers and gifts, and help quickly.

READ THIS LETTER.

MARIETTA, Ga, Aug. 6, 1886.

W. I. Phillips,

DEAR FRIEND:—I have just received your notification that the Christian Cynosure must cease to come to me after this month unless subscription is renewed.

I am very sorry to give up such a friend as it has been, but I am less able than a year ago to subscribe for this or any other paper, and, unless some friend, as heretofore, comes to the rescue, I shall have to say please discontinue after the expiration of the present subscription.

Thanking you and the kind friends who have sent me the paper, I am gratefully, E. J. PENNEY.

—The power of the rites now practiced on all sides of this globe of ours is a supernatural and spiritual power; and it is either divine or devilish; of God or of Satan, as there is no third.

.—Pres. C. A. Blanchard is engaged to speak at the Illinois State convention, which will probably meet in Princeton next month.

—Secretary Stoddard has arranged to provide a lecture once each month in the Evangelical Mission room, 135 West Van Buren street in this city. The results of his late address there are good.

—The editor of the Cynosure started with Mrs. Blanchard for Western New York on Monday, to attend the Silver Lake Assembly, with Mr. and Mrs. Capwell. He will probably be absent several weeks and will visit various points in New England before returning.

—During a camp-meeting in July the little son of Rev. C. W. Stamp, the excellent young pastor of the Free Methodist church of Denver, wandered away and was off in the woods and hills all night, while agonized parents and sympathizing friends scoured the country in vain. He was found by a kind family four miles from the camp-ground and returned about morning. The little fellow was but three years and eight months old, and his preservation seems a wonderful providence.

—D. W. Houston, the Prohibitionist candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Kansas, is a prominent and active member of the United Presbyterian church of Garnett. "He was an ardent Republican until 1884," says the Voice, "when he voted for St. John. He is a man of strong convictions, with a courage to stand by them; is well known in religious as well as political circles, having been an elder in the United Presbyterian church for thirty years." His religious convictions indicate a good man for every one to vote for who wishes to put in his ballot against the lodge.

—The late remarkable meeting of United Brethren in Fairmount, Indiana, organized permanently under the uame "The General Association of United Brethren in Christ." Rev. Dr. Lewis Davis was elected president; Reuchlin Wright, secretary; and William Dillon, treasurer. These form an executive committee. Rev. Halleck Floyd, of Indiana, and Rev. H. J. Becker, of California, were appointed to represent the body in the national congress of churches. Rev. William Dillon, the present able editor of the Conservator, was continued in that relation, and Rev. Halleck Floyd chosen as corresponding editor and lecturer. The war has heavily opened in the Telescope on these brethren, especially upon Dr. Davis.

—Inquiry has been made for the authenticity of the letter of Daniel Webster often quoted against the Masonic lodge. The reply may be valuable to all the readers of the Cynosure. In the "Catalogue of Anti-masonic Books" published in Boston in 1852, Webster's letter is recorded as found in pamphlet form (sometimes in a bound volume of pamphlets) in many public libraries. especially those of the Historical Societies of New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, Bangor Theological Seminary, Bowdoin, Yale and Harvard Colleges and Brown University. Extended reference is also made to the Anti-masonic correspondence of Mr. Webster in Vol. I., page 510, etc., of his life by George Tichnor Curtis, one of the literary executors of the great orator. Several of these letters are quoted, and reference is made to Vol. II. of Webster's Private Correspondence edited by his son Fletcher Webster for the correspondence entire.

The Home.

"THE VOICE OF THY BROTHER'S BLOOD."

[Written on the return of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Taylor to China in the Lammermuir, on May 29, 1866.]

Over the deep blue sea,
Over the trackless flood,
The little band is gone
In the service of their God.
The lonely waste of waters
They traverse to proclaim,
In the distant land of Sinim
Immanuel's saving name!
They have heard from the far-off East
The voice of the heathen's blood:
A million a month in China
Are dying without God!

For many an anxious day
On England's shore they stood;
As the eagle's longing eye
Looks to the distant cloud,
They gazed across the sea,
Their hearts with sorrow heaving;
O China! all for thee
Their homes and loved ones leaving:
For they heard the ceaseless cry,
The voice of their brother's blood:
Of thy million a month, O China,
Who are dying without God!

No help have they but God;
Alone to their Father's hand
They look for the hourly supply
Of their wants in that distant land;
For the fulness of the world is His,
And all power in earth and heaven:
They are strong, tho' weak, and rich, tho' poor,
In the promise he has given.
'Tis enough: they hear the cry,
The voice of the heathen's blood:
A million a month in China
Are dying without God!

O Church of the living God,
Awake from thy sinful sleep!
Dost thou not hear yon awful cry
Still sounding o'er the deep?
Is it naught that one out of every three,
Of all the human race,
Should in China die, having never heard
The Gospel of God's grace?
Canst thou shut thine ear to the awful sound,
The voice of thy brother's blood?
A million a month in China
Are dying dying without God!

O ye ambassadors for Christ,
Who hear your Lord's command,
"Go, go ye into the world,"
Why linger in this land?
Say, do ye well to tarry
Where thousands preach the Word,
While China's millions never yet
His blessed sound have heard?
Should it still send up unheeded
The cry of your brother's blood?
A million a month in China
Are dying without God!

Oh, speak not of the noble few
Who the Gospel sickle wield,
And reap some sheaves with weary hand
On the edge of the harvest-field;
For beyond their utmost efforts
Four hundred millions lie,
And a thousand preachers were all too few
To reach them ere they die!
But hear, oh, hear ye, for yourselves,
The voice of your brother's blood!
A million a month in China
Are dying without God!

Go, for the Saviour sends thee,
To call from the distant East
The idolators for whom He died
To His heavenly marriage-feast.
The Gospel that thou bearest
The power of God shall prove,
To triumph o'er the souls of men
By the omnipotence of love.
And remember, while thou lingerest,
The voice of thy brother's blood;
A million a month in China
Are dying without God!

And ye who cannot go, oh, help
With the wondrous weapon, prayer!
While ye uplift your hands at home
The Cross shall triumph there.
And give ye freely from your store
To the warriors in the field;
The more you give, to you the more
Barrel and cruse shall yield.
So only can you cleanse your hands
From the guiltiness of blood;
For a million a month in China
Are dying without God!

—H. Grattan Guinness.

SOME MISSIONARY STATISTICS, AND WHAT THEY TEACH.

It appears that the sum total of receipts into the treasury of the American Board for the years 1884–'85, amounted in round numbers to $655,251. This large sum represents many thousands of contributions, from churches, Sunday-schools, and individuals. Its receipt and disbursement require a vast amount of clerical detail and of careful management; nor would it be surprising if the cost of superintendence should be exceptionally heavy. Besides, the great distances of missionary stations from the center of supervision and distribution make necessary frequent and careful correspondence, with occasional visitation of the mission centers. Every man knows the difficulty of managing business enterprises at arms' length; the impossibility of preventing, under such circumstances, a great waste of time and money. Yet may the American Board challenge comparison in the financial management of its trust.

Aside from the annual gifts, the Board has had the care of large sums of money, given for special purposes, or permanently invested, amounting at present to nearly nine hundred thousand dollars. Yet, in the care of all these moneys, the total expenses of management last year, including agencies and publications, was only a trifle over $34,000; a little more than five per cent on the year's regular income. Deducting the $3,000 of deficit in the department of publication, which a small gain in subscriptions to the Missionary Herald would remove, and the $8,000, required for agencies of collection, which ought to become needless at an early day, the total cost of management in the departments of correspondence and finances, was not quite $23,000, about three and one-half per cent of the income, to say nothing of the care of permanent funds. The treasurer's report shows, moreover, that the expenses of his department amounted only to $6,254, less than one per cent on the moneys received and distributed. Instead of its being true, therefore, that a dollar must be given to secure the sending of a penny to China or India, ninety-five cents out of every dollar reach their destination, and ninety-nine cents out of every hundred go into actual missionary work at home and abroad. There are churches that pay five per cent on their gross annual receipts for the prompt collection and disbursement of their pew rents. Real estate agents receive one per cent commission on transactions that do not involve five hours of negotiation. We may fairly challenge the production of the balance sheets of any commercial enterprise whose business is conducted at a lower cost.

One other thing merits attention. The business of the American Board is conducted in open day. There are no secrets in its methods of book-keeping. The accounts, with their vouchers, are annually submitted to careful and trained inspection; and any skeptic may satisfy himself of their correctness. Great business corporations keep their secrets, refusing to yield them often at the call of the law. The American Board has always courted inquiry and examination; and, through the seventy-five years of its existence, handling over twenty millions of dollars, it has given strict account of every penny; nor —what is worthy of mention—has any one of its officers grown rich in its service. The road, in our day, to great and sudden wealth lies in intimate and confidential relations with great corporations, where the honest handling of millions can be secured only by placing the agents far above the temptation to theft. But the agents of the American Board have not grown rich in its service. The maximum salary, in the treasury and correspondence departments, has been thirty-five hundred dollars—salaries that many a church and business firm would have been glad to increase forty and fifty per cent. These men have had food and raiment, a roof to shield them; they have been able, by thrift and economy, to educate their children; and they have had a decent Christian burial. And that is all. Their hands bear no stain of filthy lucre; they have had no itching palms; and their record, through long years of devoted toil, is beyond reproach. The churches have reason to be proud of them, and to pray for them. There are no more unselfish, self-sacrificing, godly men in our ranks than they who hold the lines of our foreign missionary enterprises.

And what has it all amounted to? Let us see. Ten millions of dollars annually spent for sending the Gospel to Asia and Africa seems a very large sum; and of this amount more than nine million dollars is contributed by the Christians of England and America. And what have we to show for the outlay? Over 3,000 missionaries in the field, more than 27,000 native helpers, and a membership of nearly 700,000 in heathen, Mohammedan, and Papal lands. Twenty-one million dollars have been spent in this work by the American Board, a very large part of the amount in Turkey. It seems a vast outlay for four hundred churches and twenty-three thousand communicants; and only when we remember the educational and evangelizing influences of which these churches are the centers, can we rightly estimate the ultimate outcome of all this preparatory work. We have only been drilling into the hard rock of heathenism, storing here and there the dynamite whose explosive energy at no distant day must destroy the citadels of paganism. Twenty-one millions we have spent, in seventy-five years, to Christianize the world. In a single year the American people spend thirty or fifty times as much on fermented and distilled liquors! Thirty times as much annually for ruining men as the gifts of seventy-five years for saving men! Taking the work of the American Board as a sample, the income of the liquor traffic for a single year would have planted 20,000 churches, gathered a membership of more than a million, with not less than three millions of attendants upon the worship of God. During the three-quarters of a century of the American Board's operations, the immense war debts of Christian nations have been contracted. These amount, at present, to four billion dollars for England, the same amount for France, an equal sum for the remainder of Europe, and nearly three billion dollars for the United States; a total of fifteen billion dollars. It is a liberal estimate to say that all Continental and American foreign missionary societies have expended three hundred million dollars since the present century opened. During that time nominally Christian nations have spent fifty times as much in cutting each other's throats as in saving their fellowmen. Had we spent for Bibles what we have for powder and lead, we might have planted tens of thousands of churches, gathered thirty-five millions of communicants, and Christianized a hundred millions of souls. Such a policy would have made Asia as Christian as is New England. The facts are simply overwhelming. Our cheeks should mantle with shame. We cannot press the work too closely and eagerly; for the missionary policy is the most economical for the peace of the nations. Nor will anything but the Gospel of Jesus Christ ever dissipate the standing armies of the world, and seal the sword forever in the scabbard. Here at home, too, the conflict widens and deepens. Class is arrayed against class, labor mutters against capital, the poor grind their teeth against the rich; and only as the Son of Man lays his pierced hands on all hearts, can the threatening storm pass away, and the heavens become radiant with eternal peace and joy.—Dr. Behrends, in the Independent.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR CHILDREN

My heart aches when I think of the buried talents that exist in the shape of loving, well-educated, gifted daughters, in Christian families, pining for lack of an object worth living for; and then think of the miserable millions of their own sex pining elsewhere, and perishing for lack of the knowledge these could impart! Again I ask, Whose is the fault? Dear fathers and mothers, does it not lie at your doors?

Train them for missionaries from their conversion onward, and it will be a wonder indeed if a large Christian family grows up without at least one missionary in it. And train those who are not fit for missionaries to support those that are. Put before them a holy object for money-making. Let the brother who stays at home labor for the brother that goes forth as a missionary; or yet, father, ere you die, render your missionary son or daughter independent, if you can. We want, Christ wants, the world wants, not a few hundred paid agents, but a whole host of voluntary missionaries—an army of volunteers to invade the realms of heathendom. And say not, dear mother, "I cannot part with my daughter." Would you not give her up willingly if a suitable offer of marriage presented itself, even though it involved going to India or China? Will you give her to man and not give her to Christ? Say not, "We cannot expose her to a bad climate, and all the risks and hardships of mission-life." What! will you deprive your child of suffering with Christ, that she may reign with him? Will you rob her of the opportunity of learning practically to rely on God's all sufficiency? Will you prevent her hearing the "Well done, good and faithful servant," by-and-by? This were to act anything but a parent's part.

Far be it from me to think lightly of the sacred demands of filial duty. But where parents have many children, can they not spare one for Christ's work? For more wordly motives how many a worldly parent spares all? I only plead with Christian parents, that they may consider their ways in this thing. If in this year, one thousand Christian parents of converted boys and girls, now in the schoolroom, resolved, before God, to devote one son or one daughter to missionary work, to train them with a view to it, to endow them with money enough to provide them with food and raiment, and to send them forth as soon as they reach a suitable age, how glorious would be the result in ten years' time—a thousand well-educated, enthusiastic, and independent young missionaries going forth to preach Christ where he is not yet named! And in 20 years' time what fruit of their labor should gladden the heart of the great Husbandman! And in 50 years' time, when the laborers may all have gone in to the harvest-home, what self-multiplying native churches in Africa, China and Japan might be praising God for the lives and deaths of their founders! And in eternity, what multitudes might be added to the white-robed throng redeemed from the earth! and what bright crowns of rejoicing might forever grace the brows of the sons and daughters thus consecrated by their parents to missionary service!

And if one thousand fathers so acted, the result would soon be that ten thousand would follow their example—for a good example is contagious. Robert Raikes founded one Sabbath-school, and the world is full of them now. Oh, may the day come when, universally and naturally, Christian parents shall regard it as one of their greatest privileges and most solemn duties to train one or more of their Christian children thus to serve Christ.—Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

CHRISTIAN FREDERIC SCHWARTZ.

Before Carey and Judson had entered the field, there had gone from Germany, as a forerunner of the missionary work in India, a man who was one of the most energetic and successful missionaries of the eighteenth century. His name was Christian Frederic Schwartz. Schwartz was born at Sonnenburg, Prussia, Oct. 26, 1726. He was consecrated from his birth to the service of God by his mother, who died while he was very young. On her dying bed she made her husband and her pastor promise that they would faithfully carry out her wishes and train her son for the service of God.

In his boyhood Schwartz was sent to the schools of Sonnenburg and Custrim. He was always an obedient boy, and inclined to be religious. At the age of twenty he was sent to the University at Halle, where he obtained the friendship of Herman Francke, one of the professors, who was an earnest and generous supporter of the missionary cause. Through the influence of Francke, he gave his heart to God, and consecrated himself as a missionary to the East.

He set forth for Southern India, as the agent for the Danish Missionary Society. Sailing from London, January 21, 1750, he reached Tranquebar, the field of his labors, in July of the same year.

The first sermon he preached on the soil of India, was from those precious words of Jesus: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It was the unfurling of that glorious Gospel banner, which he held aloft for nearly half a century. He sowed the precious seed for sixteen years at Tranquebar and Trichinopoly with good results. In 1766 he transferred his services to the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and moved to Tanjore, where he labored until his death. His life and work was a grand success. Bishop Heber estimates the number of his converts at between six and seven thousand, besides multitudes gathered by agencies which he directed or influenced. Before he died, he could from his garden, in Tanjore, see whole villages that had been entirely converted to Christianity. For such results it is worth while to cross the seas and endure the privations and hardships of a whole lifetime!

His life among the heathen was a perpetual sermon. He accomplished as much by his spotless character and his benevolence as by his preaching. Such was his truthfulness and faithfulness in every situation that he gained the confidence of all. One of the grandest tributes ever paid to moral excellence was that given to Schwartz by Hyder Ali, the tyrant of Mysore. The government at Madras having heard of Hyder Ali's intention to declare war against English rule and ravage the country, proposed to send a messenger to make a treaty of peace with him. But there was only one man whom Hyder would receive as an ambassador. "Do not send to me any of your agents," said he, "for I do not trust their words or treaties; but if you wish me to listen to your proposals, send to me the missionary, Schwartz, of whose character I hear so much from every one,—him will I receive and trust."

Schwartz was accordingly entreated to undertake the journey. He hesitated at first. The idea of "shriveling from a missionary into an ambassador" did not strike him favorably; but when the work of a peace-maker was pressed upon him, the thought that he might be the means of saving many lives led him to consent. It was the work of many weeks to reach the capital of Hyder Ali. Along the dense jungles, where the jackal and the tiger lurked, by narrow pathway over rocky mountain heights, the old missionary urged his way, until at last he stood in the presence of Hyder Ali. He made peace with him, and as a testimony of respect and gratitude, Hyder sent this message to all his officers on the line of Schwartz's return:

"Show the Father Schwartz respect and kindness, and permit him to pass unmolested, for he is a good man, and means no harm to my government." But the peace thus secured was of short duration. Hyder invaded and devastated the country as he went. Many of the people fled into the cities, where the food was soon consumed, and multitudes perished from hunger and disease. There was plenty of grain in the country; but the people, having been cruelly deceived before, had lost all confidence in the government, and would not bring it to the city. There was only one man in all Tanjore whom they would trust, and that was the venerable Schwartz. When he sent out letters by the hands of his converts all over the country, requesting them to send their oxen with grain, promising to pay them with his own hand, a thousand oxen carried burdens of grain into the city in one day, and the ravages of hunger and death were stayed.

Like Joseph in Egypt, he foresaw coming famine, and purchased a vast quantity of rice and laid it up for future use. The expected war came, and famine followed in the track of war, and now thousands were kept from starving by the rice which he had laid up. Sometimes as many as eight hundred people surrounded his dwelling in a single day.

On another occasion, when the inhabitants of the Tanjore country had abandoned their farms and fled because of the oppression of the native ruler, he remonstrated with the ruler, and through his intercession the king offered them inducements to come back, but not one came, because they did not trust the word of the king. It was now September, and the cultivation should have begun in June, yet they had not returned. Famine would be the result if the crops were not put out.

Schwartz then wrote to them, and 7,000 came back in one day, and the rest soon followed their example. Such was the wonderful confidence in a man who never deceived them; who never took a bribe, and who was willing to sacrifice himself for the temporal and spiritual welfare of the people. After a long and painful illness, throughout which he displayed a beautiful example of Christian fortitude and resignation, Christian Frederic Schwartz died February 13, 1798. His career is an evidence of what may be accomplished when piety, integrity, charity and good sense are harmoniously united in a man. And it is our privilege and duty to be truthful and pious, so that, like Schwartz, we may have the confidence of all around us.—Evangelical Messenger.

TEMPERANCE.

WASTING BREAD.

To make intoxicating drinks, over sixty million bushels of the various kinds of grain are destroyed annually in America. In 1882 there was destroyed in distilleries, 2,192,719 bushels of malt; 301,241 bushels of wheat; 3,228,669 bushels of rye; 20,051,239 bushels of corn; 168,488 bushels of oats; 452,330 bushels of mill-feed, and 2,121,804 gallons of molasses. There were destroyed in breweries, 39,201,697 bushels of barley.

Total grain destroyed in distilleries and breweries, 66,660,792 bushels, which at fifty cents a bushel would be worth $33,330,396.

The average weight of grain used for liquor is about fifty-three pounds per bushel, and yields forty pounds of flour which makes sixty pounds of bread or fifteen four pound loaves. The 66,000,000 bushels would give a grand total of 990,000,000 four pound loaves of bread, or more than 99½ loaves for each family in the United States in 1880. This does not include the grain destroyed in making the imported liquors used, nor the native wines, 30,000,000 gallons, as given in the Report of Agriculture, 1880 but only liquors paying tax as per Internal Revenue Report for 1882.

To remove these loaves from the bakery, at the rate of 500 for each load, and a load every half hour to be thrown into the Delaware River, Philadelphia, and to haul them ten hours a day during the entire year, it would take 275 wagons or one wagon 275 years.

What horror and rage would be excited in the minds of every sane citizen who should see these 275 wagons going to the Delaware, each having 500 four pound loaves of bread to be thrown into the river! He who attempted to destroy the bread would be thrown in after it. Yet year after year grain is destroyed in manufacturing intoxicating drinks equal to the amount of bread that these 275 wagons could haul in one year at the given rate. If 990,000,000 four pound loaves of bread, or 66,000,000 bushels of grain, were annually destroyed by being thrown into the rivers of our country, the food would be lost, and that would be the end of it; our people would be blest by its destruction compared with the evil results that flow from the drink made from the grain. It is certainly bad to destroy the grain but it is very much worse to destroy the grain and ruin the people also. The food annually destroyed would feed not less than three millions of our people. Every bushel of grain made into liquor increases the price of what remains. Dear bread means bad trade.—Dr. Wm. Hargraves in Voice.

WHAT ROBS THE WORKING MAN.

The curse of the working man in this country is the rum traffic. It is this that robs him of most of his wages, and in many cases it is in the taverns that he spends much of his spare time. It may be feared that the two hours proposed to be gained, by reducing the hours of labor, would be spent in the same places, and with them much more of the money earned. It will be remembered that all the Chicago socialists were associated with the beer saloons, either as owners or frequenters, and their places were the haunts and the rallying points of the rioters. Rum sellers wax fat upon strikes and disturbances, and they form the only class that would make a clear money gain by cutting down the hours of labor. These are hard things to say, but they are true, and they ought to be said. The money squandered in this infernal business last year would have given us good trade and working men good wages right along. It is not the tyranny of employers that keeps men poor. It is the rapacity and devilish greed of the liquor dealer. The fact is demonstrable, not only that wages are far higher here than in other countries, but that they are far higher here now than they ever were before, and meantime living is cheaper. The constant tendency, moreover, is to still larger wages. Everything in this country tends to improve the condition and the chances of the laborer. If he falls behind in the race, when he has health and strength, the fault is almost certainly his. No organization can help him if he squanders his money and plays the fool. He will be beaten out of sight by the man who saves his earnings and obeys the requirements of reason and sense.—Textile Record.

WHAT A BLUE RIBBON COST.

Years ago in London, Mr. Frederic Carrington, son of a very wealthy brewer, was converted. His father had lavished on him every indulgence, and had given him a share in the business, which was a fortune. After his conversion the young man engaged in Christian work among the neglected of the East End of London. But it was gradually forced on him that the most potent and fruitful source of evil among the poor and wretched was the gin-shops and beer-houses. One night, as he passed to his work, heavy in heart by reason of the sights and sounds of woe and wickedness, his eye was drawn to a flaunting beer-shop, over the door of which was the sign, "Carrington & Co.'s Entire." From that moment he determined on his course. He went to his father and told him that he could not longer be in the firm. At a later day some one casually asked him "what his blue ribbon cost him?" He replied, "Fourteen thousand pounds a year."

The execution of the laws in this country is committed to courts, consisting in judges and juries. What is wanted in a judge is the requisite amount of legal learning, a pure and upright character, a judicial turn of mind, independence in thought, and aptitude and promptness in the dispatch of business. These qualities will always make a good judge. Whether judges should be appointed, or directly elected by the people, is an open question, not yet entirely settled in this country. The tendency of public sentiment is toward the elective system; and where this system is adopted the terms of judges should not be less than ten years, and all partisan politics should be entirely ignored in their nomination and election. The less judges have to do with such politics the better for their own reputation, and the better for the people. The jury system of this country will undoubtedly remain substantially what it is to-day; and yet there are two respects in which we think that it might be modified to advantage. We would abolish the unanimity rule and allow three-quarters of a jury to find a legal verdict, and would not exclude any man from the jury panel simply because he has an impression in regard to the case before the court, provided he declares that he could and would judge of the case solely by the evidence adduced on the trial. These modifications would, in our judgment, be an improvement of the jury system.—Independent.

Religious News.

—The Synod of the Dutch Reformed church, recently in session in Grand Rapids, Mich., has condemned the Knights of Labor and forbidden members of the church from joining them.

—The evangelists Jones and Small, after a brief visit to their Southern home, returned North to engage in some special work. They spoke at Loveland, Ohio, and from that point their appointments were as follows: Aug. 9th to 16th, Lancaster, O.; 17th to 22nd, Urbana, O.; 22nd to 27th, Wheeling, W. Va.; 28th to 30th, Round Lake, N. Y.; Sept. 5th and 6th, Toledo, O.; Oct. 3d to 24th, Toronto, Canada. In November they go to Omaha; December is not arranged for; January they spend in Boston, then go to California for an indefinite period.

—New York city has over thirty schools for the Chinese. Mr. Huie Kin, formerly under the care of Dr. Eells at Lane Seminary, is now permanently engaged as a missionary among his countrymen here. The prospect is that a church exclusively for Chinamen will be formed soon.

—The seventy-seventh annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions will be held at Des Moines, Iowa, in Plymouth Congregational church, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 5, at 3 o'clock P. M., and closing Friday morning, Oct. 8. The annual sermon will be preached by Rev. J. L. Withrow, D. D., of Boston, on Tuesday evening.

—The American Sunday-school Union offers a premium of one thousand dollars for the best book, written for the society, upon The Christian Obligations of Property and Labor. Each writer will be expected to suggest an appropriate title to his work; and will be allowed the widest practicable freedom in the form and style of treatment, and in the phases of the subject emphasized. The society, however, expects writers to present the Christian principles underlying the general subject, free from the prejudice and bias of current controversies. The book must be popular in character, of a "high order of merit," and consist of not less than 60,000 nor more than 100,000 words. The MSS. must be submitted to the Committee of Publication on or before November 1, 1887.

—Rev. Levin Johnson, a former Wheaton student, was among the company which went with William Taylor to the mission in West Africa. In a letter to the India Watchman of Bombay, he says that from continued ill health he must abandon the mission work for the present and return home. There are many hopeful features of the mission, but great darkness and superstition to combat. Chief among the evil influences is rum, of which he writes: "The curse of this country is rum. Men, women, and children are slaves to it, and at every trading house it is sold. There is a number of distilleries in Angola, but they cannot supply the demand for rum. Scores of barrels are brought up the river to Dondo, and from there taken to different parts of the interior. The N'Rundas are not only slaves to rum, but the same as slaves to the Portuguese. Since slavery has been abolished, the Portuguese have established a law whereby they make a contract with the natives to hire them for five years, with a certain amount of pay—a mere pittance; but when the contract is once made they are generally kept for life."

—Buddhism in Japan has been virtually disestablished since 1874. While there were 393,087 Buddhist temples in 1714, there are now but 57,824. Few new temples are built and many are going to ruin. One of the most distinguished temples in the country is now in such need of repairs that a call has been made to raise a fund of $17,000 in shares of 300 yen each for this purpose.

—From the seventieth annual report of the American Bible Society, just published, we learn that, although from diminished receipts, consequent in a great measure upon the prostration in business, the work of the general supply of the United States with the Scriptures has not been conducted for the past year on the same extended scale as during the first two years of the General Resupply, yet satisfactory progress has been made, and 60,000 homes which at the beginning of the year were without a copy of the Scriptures, are now possessed of that inestimable blessing.

—Dr. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist church in St. Paul, found a gang of men paving the street in front of his church one Sunday morning. He asked them to stop. They did not. Then he said that they must stop, and right off, too. If they did not, he would make a complaint against each individual workman, and see that he was arrested and punished for breaking the Sabbath-day. At this the pavers took up their tools and quit work, and the energetic pastor walked into the pulpit and preached with great fervor, saying in the course of his sermon, that he proposed to have Sunday observed in front of his church if not in any other part of St. Paul.

—A correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, who is himself a Christian, has been traveling through New Hampshire, and writes as follows: "Be the cause what it may, this is sober truth, that there is as much need of missionary work, by all the orthodox churches, in New England as in China or the Lebanon country. Orthodox Congregationalists may rest assured that the priests of the Maronites, Greeks, Greek Catholics and other sects in the Mount Lebanon country preach and teach as sound doctrine and pure faith as are taught and preached in a large number of so-called orthodox churches in New England. Here, rather than across the sea, is your place for mission work."

MISSIONS.

—In Greenland there are 7,000 Esquimaux converts under the fostering care of the Danish Missionary Society.

—The native Christians of Madagascar have given more than $4,000 for the spread of the Gospel within the last ten years.

—A Methodist missionary in India reports the baptism of 453 persons within a fortnight, among the Tharus, an aboriginal tribe of the Gonds.

—The English Church Missionary Society, the richest of the foreign societies, reports that of its $1,157,000 income last year only $6,500 came from the titled classes.

—The London Missionary Society has sanctioned the printing and binding of an edition of 5,000 copies of the Bible Dictionary in the Tahaitian language, prepared by the Rev. A. Pearse, of Raiatea.

—Dr. Ellenwood, at the Presbyterian General Assembly, paid a high, but just compliment to the effective work of the women of the church when he said: "When the Board of Foreign Missions formulates its plans and prepares its appropriations at the beginning of each year, the source of income concerning which there is felt to be more certainty than any other, is that of woman's work."

—There are now 25 workers in the Kabyle Missions in Northwest Africa. A new mission has lately been opened at Arzila, and there are good congregations of Moors and Jews.

—It is probable that the communicants and adherents won to Christianity from the actual heathenism of to-day, by all the missionary organizations maintained by the Christian world, are about four millions.

—G. H. Rouse, of the English Baptist Mission in Calcutta, says, that if the same rate of progress is made by Protestantism in India as during the past century, it will be Christianized in the sense that England is—in 108 years.

—A missionary in Japan writes: "Japan is born to be, and bound to be, a misssionary nation. In education, in material development, in government, and in religion Japan is to do missionary service."—Gospel in all Lands.

—A missionary in China writes: "The Chinese have a strong physical life, holding a grip on the centuries; brains which, with equal training will match those of any country; and hearts which have unlimited possibilities of Christian culture."

—A Mohammedan professor for twenty years at the Daoul-Islam of Mecca, a man of wide learning and a rare linguist, who accidentally came upon a chapter of a volume that treated of the Bible, left his post and went to India to inquire into the truth of Christianity. He has now for some months been zealously studying the Scriptures, and has accepted the truth of Christ.

—The census of 1881 gave the following as the distribution of the population of India according to religion: Hindus, 187,937,450; Mohammedans, 80,120,585; Aboriginals, 6,426,511; Buddhists, 4,418,884; Sikhs, 1,853,426; Jains, 1,221,896; Parsees, 85,397; Jews, 12,009; Christians, 1,862,634; others 952,029, a total of 253,891,821.

—The Gossner Mission among the Kols in India, has now 8 stations and 30,063, or including the Catechumens, 31,807 Christians. During the last year 1,155 Christian children and 674 heathens were baptized. Fifteen missionaries, 11 native pastors, 137 catechists, and 73 teachers are engaged in the work, together with a number of colporteurs and Bible women. The Kol Christians last year contributed some $1,700 or $1,800 in support of the work, and for church building and repairing.

—An English church missionary reports the conversion to Christianity of Fashatullah, a remarkable man of wide learning and a rare linguist, who has been professor for twenty years at the Dav-ul-Islam at Meeca. While at Meeca he accidentally came upon a chapter in a volume which treated of the Bible, and on taking the book to the head of the institution, that he might refute its arguments, that person snatched the book from him, and manifested great wrath at finding that such a volume was in the place. Fashatullah subsequently left for India, leaving his post at Meeca, that he might inquire into the truths of Christianity. He fell in with Rev. Mr. Bambridge at Karachi, and has now for some months been engaged heart and soul in study.

—The eleventh annual report of the Mission to Lepers in India, gives interesting accounts of the eight asylums assisted by the society. Of these asylums four are in connection with the Church Missionary Society, two with the American Presbyterian Mission, one with the London Missionary Society, and one with Gossner's Evangelical Mission. Thus, through the means of existing agencies, Christian influence and teaching is sought to be brought on some of the most tried and suffering of our fellow-beings.

—The Bombay Guardian reports that a year or two ago there were three English papers in India established for the purpose of opposing Christianity and defending infidelity. Two of these papers, the Anti-Christian and the Philosophical Enquirer, have come to an end. The third was on the point of discontinuance when somebody in England furnished the means for carrying it on. The two features of this statement which are of interest are: first, that East Indians who read English do not care for anti-Christian literature; and second, that are those in Christian lands who are devoting their time and money to the overthrow of the only religion which can deliver the Hindoos from debasing superstition.

—Burmah is now exciting great interest and attracting much attention, and in Burmah there were found many years ago certain wild tribes called Karens. They were immersed in ignorance and superstition till the Bible came among them, brought by devoted missionaries, principally American. At least 50,000 of these tribes have become Christians, 20,000 being communicants, and a group of them came to the Calcutta Exhibition under the guardianship of Dr. Vinton, an American missionary, who with no possessions and no badge of sovereignty but a well-worn Bible, is regarded as a sovereign among them.

—The old car of Juggernaut in India, which for ages was annually dragged out for the adoration and destruction of fanatical devotees, many of whom threw themselves beneath its wheels (which murderous superstition the English Government now prohibits), was recently brought forth for an airing. Enough men to move it were only procured with great difficulty, and they refused to bring it back. The collector at Bengal had to employ a force to return it to its shed.

—Secretary Forbes, of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, furnishes the following interesting information respecting the Hawaiian islands: The first Hawaiian pastor was ordained in 1849. Since that time ninety-five Hawaiians have been ordained, of whom thirty-eight are at present pastors in the home field and nine are in foreign service, making forty-seven native Hawaiians who are now either pastors or missionaries in active service. Since 1852, when the first Hawaiians went to Micronesia in company with Messrs. Snow, Gulick and Sturges, not less than seventy-five Sandwich Islanders have gone as foreign missionaries, thirty-nine of them males, thirty-six females. The total sum contributed at the islands for foreign missions has been $170,149.44. Of this amount $133,015.86 were contributed by native Hawaiian churches, the remainder by foreign churches and individuals at the islands. The contributions of the Hawaiian churches for all purposes from the beginning, so far as can be ascertained, amount to $818,270.35.—Gospel in All Lands.

LODGE NOTES.

Rev. A. E, Higgins, S. J., has been chosen by the council, provincial delegate to Rome, from Chicago, to attend the general council, the object of which is to appoint a successor to the late Father Keller, who was a member of the advisory council of the Father General of the Jesuits.

The Good Templary is having a boom in Iowa. The membership of the order has increased nearly 10,000 in the past year. (This is an item from the W. C. T. U. department of the Inter Ocean.)

General Lucius Fairchild, of Wisconsin, was elected Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic at San Francisco Friday. He is a high Mason and was an officer in the grand Egyptian rite of Memphis which was set afoot some years ago in this city.

B. P. Reynolds, the head of the Orange lodges in this part of the country, is a 32 degree Mason.

A convention of members of the fraternal beneficiary societies of the United States and Canada will be held at Washington in October.

George Lippard, a brilliant and erratic literary genius, who died thirty-two years ago in Philadelphia, aged 32, and whose life in many of its details resembles that of Edgar A. Poe, is to have a handsome granite monument placed at his neglected grave inOctober next. He was buried in the Philadelphia Odd-fellows' Cemetery. He was the founder of the secret order known as the "Brotherhood of the Union," with headquarters in Philadelphia.

READING ROOM FUND.

This is a fund for sending the Cynosure to the Y. M. C. A. reading rooms. The better class of city young men are found in increasing numbers in these reading rooms. Will not the friends of the Cynosure donate enough to this fund to supply every reading room of the Young Men's Christian Associations with the Christian Cynosure?

If any information is wanted, please send in your questions, which will be answered through the paper so far as possible.

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

This is the fund from which the colored ministers of the South have received the Cynosure. It seems very desirable to continue this fund, and hence the special appeal in the Cynosure of Aug. 12th.

The following named persons have contributed to this fund this year, 1886, and such names will be added from week to week as donate to it in the future:

Jno Dorcas, J F Icke, Mrs A E Tyler, H Holbrook, Wm Mathews, O Hansen, Mrs S B Skeel, Mrs A F Rider, F W Capwell, A Hamilton, Mrs C H Richardson, N Martin, R Johnson, J Aylsworth, Mrs T S Couch, I Bancroft, S A Pratt, J Rutley, A Hamilton, H A Fischer, Mrs N E Kellogg, Mrs A B Kellogg.

Not reported before: T Kingsnorth, 80 cents: Marcus Phillips, 50 cents.

NOTICE.

All orders for 'Masonic Outrages" received up to the time of going to press have been shipped as per order. If any who have ordered fail to receive the pamphlet as they should, they will oblige us by reporting promptly any error.

Please call the attention of your friends to the advertisement of the pamphlet in this week's Cynosure.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome damphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A PRIZE OF $20

WILL BE AWARDED FOR THE BEST NATIONAL REFORM SONG AND CHORUS (WORDS AND MUSIC) RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE NOT LATER THAN AUGUST 20 BOTH WORDS AND MUSIC TO BE PUBLISHED IN THE CHRISTIAN NATION FOR SEPTEMBER 1.

A PRIZE OF $5

FOR THE BEST WORDS WITHOUT MUSIC.

CONDITIONS:

1. The verses must be not less than three nor more than four in number, and of eight lines each, with a short chorus, the same for each verse.
2. One or other or all of the following sentiments to be expressed: The necessity of recognizing Christianity in our Nation's law and life; the Divine origin of our Nation, and the Bible the necessary source of National law; Responsibility of the Nation to God for its laws and life; Jesus Christ the divinely appointed Ruler of our Nation.
3. Music must be original, melody simple, easy to learn and follow, and adapted for use in large gatherings without practice.
4. All MSS. submitted become the property of the CHRISTIAN NATION.
5. MSS. to be sent us anonymously, accompanied by name of author in a sealed envelope.
6. Competent judges will decide upon the merits of the contributions. Address,

Christian Nation,
252 Broadway, New York.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

S. A. Kean & Co. Bankers.

(Successors to Preston, Kean & Co.)
100 Washington St., CHICAGO.
ACCOUNTS of Bankers, Merchants and others solicited; also COLLECTIONS. Foreign Exchange, Land Warrants. U. S., State, Municipal & leading R.R. BONDS
Send for Lists of Investment Securities.
Branch Office, Home Insurance Building.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2			75
No. 3	67	@	71
Winter No 2	76	@	78½
Corn—No. 2	42½	@	43¼
Oats—No. 2	27½		31
Rye—No. 2			51½
Bran per ton			10 00
Flour	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@	11 50
Mess pork per bbl			9 45
Butter, medium to best	08	@	19
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	50	@	1 35
Eggs			10
Seeds—Timothy	1 96	@	2 03
Flax			1 14½
Broom corn	04	@	08½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@	14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@	18 00
Wool	12	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 50	@	5 00
Common to good	2 25	@	4 15
Hogs	3 00	@	5 05
Sheep	2 50	@	4 87

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter	83½	@	90
Spring			85½
Corn			50½
Oats	35	@	45
Mess Pork	10 75	@	11 87
Eggs			14
Butter	10		17
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 50	@	4 65
Hogs	4 00	@	4 90
Sheep	1 50	@	3 00

NATIONAL SUICIDE,

AND

ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.
—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject. —INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

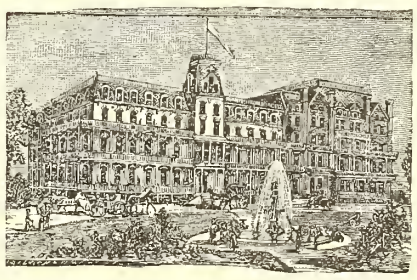
"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE

Man Traps of the City,

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of



The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the prurient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

The Medical and Surgical SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

THE HISTORY of ANTI-SLAVERY IN THE State and Nation.

BY REV. AUSTIN WILLEY.

514 pp, 12 mo. With NINETEEN PORTRAITS.

Price, Postpaid, $2.00.

Mr. Willey gives the best history of the times just before the present generation, which is precisely the history least apt to be known. He gives us the surface of the sea under the billows which swept off three million pair of fetters from our national decks. His book shows more accurate insight into the causes which produced the rebellion, and gives more clearly the working of those causes, than any other writer. He shows more clearly the moral force of the ballot and necessity of a new party to carry a fundamental reform than any one who has treated of it. We advise every young man and every reader of the Cynosure to obtain and read that history.—Pres. J. Blanchard. Address,

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

MORGAN MONUMENT,

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

FARM NOTES.

THE FARMER AND HIS FARM IN AUGUST.

August may be a very busy month, yet there is no month in the year when many farmers can better take a play spell and make a journey to the mountains, or to the seaside with their families, tarrying on the way to visit friends, or famous stock farms, or dairies or cheese factories, or other objects of interest. Summer crops are "laid by," the turnip crop is in, winter grains are safe in stack or mow, spring grains may be ready to cut, and as soon as this is done, comes the farmer's holiday. How much good it does the whole family, who can be spared from the superintendence of the house, the farm, and the dairy, to take such a vacation. All should have their turn, though they can go but one or two at a time; and no one should be more sure to go than she whom it is so hard to persuade to leave, even for one day, the daily round of home duties—the good house mother. Turnips will make a good crop sown the first week in August, even Swedes do well on light, rich land, and the small roots, as big around as a pint cup, are more marketable than bigger ones. After the rains soften the sward, we may plow for wheat, and in some sections it is a great advantage to sow early and seed to grass. In some sections the practice of early seeding to grass, without the intervention of a grain crop is successfully followed. This only abstracts value from the soil which would otherwise be appropriated by the grass. Early plowing is a great advantage to land intended for winter grain, especially if weedy, or if somewhat stiff. repeated working mellows the soil, makes sure of a good catch of grass seed and defends against winter killing. In case the season is dry-and it generally is over a great part of the country—no more favorable time can be selected for digging drains with a view to improving swamps. If the actual reclaiming cannot now be pushed, the land may easily be dried, so that it can be grubbed and further ditched during the autumn and winter.—American Agriculturist.

LIVE STOCK IN MIDSUMMER.

The milk will probably show, by its falling off how the dry weather is affecting the pastures. The water supply must be well watched, for the cows should never be forced to drink from polluted, stagnant pools. Slinking and other maladies often come from this cause. Green fodder should supplement short pasturage. Green fodder corn increases the flow of milk at once, but the quality notably deteriorates. It should be fed with some grain. A good armful of fodder corn and two parts of corn and oats ground together, will keep up both the quantity and quality. Horses will be grateful for a run in the pasture on hot nights. Harness galls, sores of all kinds, fly bites, etc., we find are best treated with carbolic soap (sheep dip) used as a salve. Keep oats growing by feeding a few oats daily. Ewes intended for early breeding should be well fed for a week or two before the ram is turned with them. It is important to tar the noses of the whole flock, to protect them against the gad fly and grub in the head. The pigs should revel in weeds and fallen or otherwise wasted fruit, and if possible should have the run of orchards, where they will devour the gnarly and worm-eaten fruit. Poultry should have the run of stubble fields, both for the scattered grain, and for the numerous insects.—American Agriculturist.

A Southern man who knows, and he might have added whisky to the list, says: "In hiring help on the farm look to the habits. A smoker is likely to burn your buildings, a careless man will waste and destroy twice his wages; a passionate man will spoil your horses and cows, and break more than he earns; an immoral man will corrupt the minds of your children; a careful, high minded, thinking man will make your labors light, will look after your interests, and will earn his money, whatever you pay him.

The gnawing of foreign substances sometimes becomes chronic with cattle. Generally it is from a lack of the constituents necessary to health in their natural food. In a pasture containing a variety of natural grasses this could hardly occur, unless the field was over pastured. We advise giving a quart of ground oats daily, in which is mixed a tablespoonful of linseed meal and a tablespoonful of fine bone meal, to each cow.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and n xt, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MAH-HAH-BONE,

COMPRISING IN ONE VOLUME,

HAND BOOK

OF

Freemasonry,

Which gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the oaths, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained:

The Master's Carpet

Which explains the true source and meaning every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, t showing the principles on which the order is founded: and

FREEMASONRY

AT A GLANCE,

Which illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, and gives a brief explanation of each, making a most valuable compilation of information concerning Masonry. Bound in fine cloth covers. 300 pages. Price $1 00. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders--Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"! Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 1st to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Cats (pictures) free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

In Brief.

Punched coins are thus valued by the treasury department: double eagle $15; silver dollar, 75 cents; half dollar, 35 cents; quarter of a dollar, 18 cents, and dimes 5 cents.

A Swiss scientist estimates that in 1970 there will be 8,600,900,000 people in the world speaking English, 127,000,000 German and 69,500,000 French.

The Detroit Free Press was the legitimate successor of the Detroit Gazette, first printed July 25, 1817. The Free Press presented its initial issue May 5, 1831, as a weekly, becoming the first daily paper in the State of Michigan Sept. 28, 1835. The Free Press has been burned out three times, and celebrated its fiftieth anniversary last Monday.

The shipments of fruit from California to the East during the month of August aggregated 1,535 car-loads. Calculating 20,000 pounds to the car, this makes 36,000,000 pounds of green fruit for 1885, as against 12,000,000 pounds for the year 1884. The rate by passenger train for green fruit is $600 per car-load, and by freight train $300.

Mail carrying in Arizona is attended with some danger. Lately the horse of a carrier failed him while he was thirty miles from his destination, Agua Caliente, but he kept on his way on foot. After he had gone fifteen miles he became exhausted, and was found on the road in a dying condition, his mail bags having been dragged off by wild animals and torn to pieces.

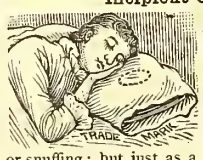
A Utica naturalist says that song birds in that region are fast disappearing. The wren is almost unknown, the bobolink, that formerly abounded on the Mohawk meadows, is disappearing rapidly, while blue birds, yellow birds, orioles, and even woodpeckers, highhoes and crows are becoming scarce. As a consequence, he says, fruit trees and all kinds of vegetation are suffering from the ravages of insects. Pot hunters and bird-nesting boys are said to account for the disappearance of the birds.

It was a Maine girl of whom the story is told that she refused to marry a most devoted lover until he should have amassed a fortune of $10,000. After some expostulation he accepted the decree and went to work. About three months after this the avaricious young lady, meeting her lover, asked: "Well, Charlie, how are you getting along?" "Oh, very well, indeed," Charlie returned, cheerfully; "I've got $18 saved." The young lady blushed and looked down at the toes of her boots, and stabbed the inoffensive earth with the point of her parasol. "I guess," said she faintly—"I guess, Charlie, that's about near enough."

In "Triumphant Democracy," a recent work by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, a Scotchman by birth, and now an American manufacturer, the author gives many interesting facts showing the progress and prosperity of his adopted country. He states that during last year 74,000 more tons of Bessemer steel were produced in the United States than in Great Britain; that more yards of carpet are made each year in Philadelphia and the vicinity than in all England, Wales, and Scotland; that the school libraries alone in this country contain 12,000 000 more books than all the public libraries of Europe combined; and that all the State and city debts of the Union added together, rating them according to valuation of property, do not amount to one-fifth of the city debt of Manchester, England, or to one-tenth of the debt of Birmingham.

A Scotch dominie, after relating to his scholars the story of Ananias and Sapphira, asked them "why God did not strike everybody dead who told a lie." After a long silence, one little fellow got to his feet and exclaimed, "Because, sir, there wadna be onybody left."

At a recent popular assembly in Paris, a speaker pathetically inquired: "Why don't the great men of Paris bestir themselves? Why do they remain cold and unmoved at the calamities of our country?" "Because they are cast in bronz!" shouted a sarcastic voice in the gallery.



☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."
E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TLELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

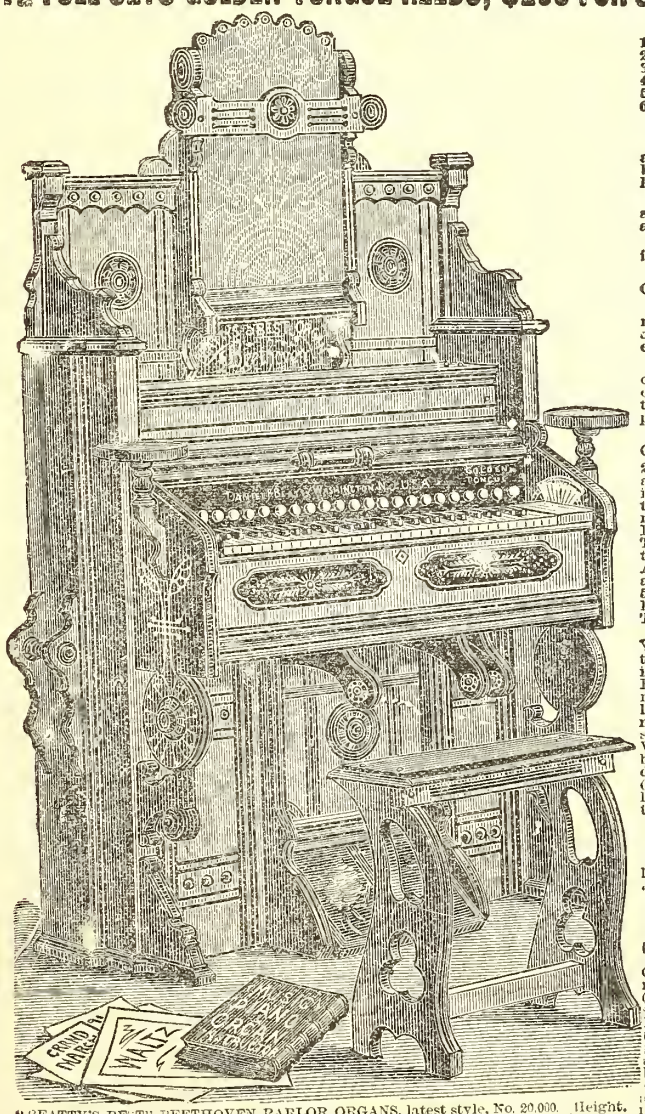
Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.
Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.
In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.



NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch o. the N. C. A	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	8
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Holiandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	4

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

PARLOR ORGANS { ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL. Money Refunded, with interest at six per cent., if not just as represented. Organ shipped same day order is received. } ONLY $88.00

It is by far the sweetest toned and most powerful Organ yet made. The case is manufactured from the choicest of seasoned and kiln-dried Black Walnut, built neat, so as not to absorb dirt or dust. It is manufactured on a new and scientific plan, so as to render sound of reeds PIPE-LIKE in tone. The Pipe Tube Cells enable this Organ to imitate a Church Pipe Organ that would cost from $500 to $1,000. The Scotch BAGPIPE, ALPINE HORN, CHIME OF SWISS BELLS, EUROPEAN FLAGEOLET, ORCHESTRA, BRASS BAND, OLE BULL VIOLIN, MUSIC BOX, the HUMAN VOICE, ANGELIC HARP, NIGHT HORN, CATHEDRAL PIPE ORGAN, are all exactly imitated in "Beatty's Best." Only $88; providing order is given and remittance made within 25 days after date of this newspaper. If ordered within 13 days, $80.00, or if order is given and remittance is made within 9 days, only $75.00 cash will buy this magnificent $200.00 Parlor Organ, including a very handsome Bench (or stool), Book and Music. The reason why this limited time price is given is to induce you to order as early as possible, thus introducing this sweet-toned instrument immediately. ☞ IF YOU CANNOT BUY NOW, WRITE, GIVING YOUR REASONS WHY, AS I WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU ANYWAY. ☜

12 FULL SETS GOLDEN TONGUE REEDS, $200 FOR ONLY $88.00. 29-Stops. Warranted 6 Years.

"BEATTY'S BEST" BEETHOVEN PARLOR ORGANS, latest style, No. 20,000. Height, 72 inches; length, 46 inches; depth, 24 inches; Upright Pianoforte Style Case

TWELVE FULL SETS GOLDEN TONGUE REEDS, as follows:

1st Set—Charming SAXAPHONE Reeds.
2d Set—Impressive FRENCH HORN Reeds.
3d Set—Entrancing PICCOLO Reeds.
4th Set—Symphonic VIOLINA Reeds.
5th Set—Powerful SUB-BASS Reeds.
6th Set—Sweet VOIX CELESTE Reeds.
7th Set—Rich and Mellow CELLO Reeds.
8th Set—Pleasing DULCIANA Reeds.
9th Set—Noble DIAPASON Reeds.
10th Set—Brilliant CLARIONET Reeds.
11th Set—ANGELIC HARP Reeds.
12th Set—Weird NIGHT HORN Reeds.

READ THE DESCRIPTION OF STOP WORK. 29 IN ALL.

1—CLARIONET.—A set of reeds that exactly imitates the musical instrument that bears its name. It is one of the most brilliant sets of reeds used in "BEATTY'S BEST"

2—VOIX CELESTE.—The sweet, pure, and exalted tones produced from this Stop are beyond description.

3—CELLO.—A rich and melodious tone is produced.

4—FRENCH HORN.—Imitates a full ORCHESTRA and BRASS BAND.

5—PICCOLO.—Variety of music which makes the Piccolo the most difficult and expensive Stop to build. Producing an effect similar to a MILITARY BAND.

6—SAXAPHONE.—The beautiful effect of this Stop is "Beatty's Favorite." This set of reeds is so pleasing that many have written to me saying: "It alone is worth the price of the Organ."

7—DIAPASON.—Draws a full set of Golden Tongue Reeds.

8—POWERFUL BOX SUB-BASS.—New and original. Its THUNDERING TONES are without a parallel. Imitating exactly the PEDAL BASS of the famous Freiberg (Germany) Pipe Organ.

9—DULCIANA.—A full set of Paris Reeds is drawn by this Stop.

10—VOX JUBILANTE.—When used in conjunction with Stops Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 peals forth most delightful music.

11. VOX HUMANA. Tremulant, which, by the aid of a FAN WHEEL, imitates the HUMAN VOICE.

12—OCTAVE COUPLER.—Doubles the power of the Organ. Couples all octaves. Oratorio effects produced.

13—Melodia. 14. Clarabella. 15. Bourdon. 16. Viol Di Gamba. 17. Viola Dolce. 18. Grand Expression. 19. Harp Æolian. 20. Echo. 21. Violina. 22. Orchestral Forte. 23. Grand Organ Stop. 24. Right Knee Stop. 25. Automatic Valve Stop. 26. Mezzo Knee Stop. 27. Maestoso. 28. Percussion, open patented Combination Swell.

29. AEROSTATIC EXPRESSION Compass or Regulator, showing at a glance the amount of pressure upon the instrument; same as a compass to the ship so is this new improvement to the Organ. The last seventeen [17] Stops are operated in direct conjunction with above twelve [12], bringing forth, at command of the performer, most charming music, with beautiful orchestral effect, from a mere whisper to a grand burst of harmony. Its MELODIOUS TONES, while using the full Organ must be heard to be appreciated. To which is added the RIGHT and LEFT Grand Organ Knee Swells, so as to enable the performer to throw on or off full power without removing hands from keyboard. Also a Third Knee Swell (patented) gives the Organ a resonant tone not obtained in any other make. Lamp Stands, Pocket for Music, Treble (3) Upright Bellows, Steel Springs, 5-Octave Keyboard, BEATTY'S PATENT STOP ACTION and SOUNDING BOARDS. Regular Catalogue Price, without Bench, (or Stool), Book and Music, ONLY $200.00. This Organ is worth, to any lover of sweet music, several times its price, $200.00.

If you ever intend to buy an Organ you should order this instead of some other make. Why? Because this instrument contains all the music to be found in an ordinary Organ that is sold at retail for $200.00. Besides, it has many varieties of sweet combinations and imitations of several musical and pipe instruments only to be obtained in "BEATTY'S BEST." Now ready for 1884. It is fully secured by United States patents. Why, then, not order the best? If you are not entirely satisfied after one year's use you are at perfect liberty to return the Organ, and I hereby positively agree to promptly refund you your money, with interest at 6 per cent. If you don't want to buy just now, why not come and see me, anyway? Look at the Organ, hear it played, and see for yourself. YOU ARE WELCOME. FREE COACH meets you at train. Don't fail to visit my factory, as it is by far the Largest Organ Works in Existence. ☞ Shipments of Beatty's Organs during the past three months were as follows: September, 1,600; October, 1,800; November, (2 Holidays), 1,600. TOTAL, 5,000. This is as many Organs shipped as any two of the largest Organ Builders in America combined, and it is beyond a doubt positive proof that the public are buying Beatty's Organs in preference to other makes.

$125.00 PROFIT, if Ordered within Nine Days.

In order to enable me to introduce this Organ at once, I beg to make the following liberal Limited Time Reduction:

"BEATTY'S BEST" PARLOR ORGANS, PRICE	$200
45 Per Cent (Agents' Discount)	$90
20 Per Cent. (General Agency)	22
	112
☞ If ordered within 25 Days only	$88
If ordered within 13 days, only	80

Or, if ordered within 9 days, only $75 buys this Magnificent Parlor Organ, including a handsome Bench (or Stool), Book and Music.

☞ You will observe in making you the above offer I have sacrificed the discount usually allowed to Traveling and General Agencies, and have allowed a special limited reduction that must come out of my pocket (manufacturer's profit) to you if ordered within 13 or 9 days. I have made this special reduction so as to induce you to order immediately, thus introducing this Magnificent New $200 Parlor Organ in your vicinity at once. Remember if ordered within 9 days after date of this Newspaper, only $75; within 13 days, $80; within 25 days, $88. After that date the price will positively be $200 in a vicinity after first Organ has been introduced. Cut this advertisement out, as it will not appear again. To secure this great offer remit at once by Post Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or by Express prepaid, or if convenient, call and select the instrument yourself. If you don't want an Organ, order as an investment anyway, thus realizing $125 profit, if ordered within 9 days. Bear in mind only one will be sold in any one vicinity, at above limited time price. You can readily dispose of this Organ at $200 cash, and make a handsome profit. I am sure that there must be some one in your vicinity who wants an Organ.

☞ Shipped without delay for BIRTHDAY, HOLIDAY, (WOODEN, TIN, SILVER, GOLDEN), or WEDDING PRESENTS. This Organ will positively be boxed and shipped the same day the order is received for those who order and state in their letter that the Organ is intended for any of the above Presents. Order immediately, and if I fail to ship Organ same day order is received, I hereby bind myself to forfeit to you $500.00 in Greenbacks. If positively will be shipped same day order is received. ORDER NOW.

Address or call upon the Manufacturer, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

It was reported Friday night that at a meeting of the Cabinet it had been decided to call in a large amount of bonds, in accordance with the surplus resolution, which the President had failed to sign. The first call will be for $15,000,000.

President Cleveland Monday sent a message to the House of Representatives stating that he had signed the oleomargarine bill, and giving his reasons for approving it.

Treasurer Jordan reports that the public debt was reduced during July to the extent of $9,000,000.

The forty-ninth Congress closed its first or long session at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Many important bills were left in an unfinished state, but all the absolutely necessary appropriation bills were passed.

COUNTRY.

By the wreck of a pleasure yacht in Lake Huron on Monday six gentlemen, of Sarnia, Ont., were drowned. Two of the young men were nephews of the Hon. Alexander McKenzie.

At Mancelona, the county seat of Antrim, Michigan, fire destroyed thirty-one buildings, entailing a loss of $85,000. The bank, postoffice, and many business houses and residences were consumed. Persons narrowly escaped death, so rapidly did the flames spread. It is thought the fire was the work of an incendiary.

The woods in Manitowac county, Wisconsin, are said to be full of illicit stills and moon shiners. Persons representing themselves to be farmers have been carrying on the trade for years, and some have done well at it.

The walls of the new English Lutheran church, in course of erection at Decatur, Ill., were blown down by a fierce gale that swept that town Thursday afternoon. Other buildings were wrecked, and fruit and shade trees were leveled.

The two-year-old son of J. W. Brown of Mansfield, Ohio, drunk the contents of a camphor bottle Thursday, and died in a few hours.

The grain production of the State of Kansas is estimated as follows: Winter wheat, 12,360,000 bushels; spring wheat, 926,000 bushels; oats, 32,194,000 bushels; corn, 120,000,000 bushels.

The Kansas Republican State Executive Committee appointed thirty-six delegates Thursday to attend the anti-saloon convention in Chicago.

From Omaha comes the information that farmers are satisfied at the prospects as they are at present. There will be a fair average of all kinds of grain, and root products are in good condition.

The July fire record in the United States and Canada shows a loss of property valued at $10,000,000. That is 20 per cent greater than the everage loss for twenty years,

Judge J. W. Hallett shot himself at Aberdeen, D. T., Wednesday, and died Thursday, without giving any cause for his action. He was an able lawyer and had the respect of his townspeople.

The branch of the Salvation Army stationed at Laporte, Mo., was captured by the mayor and officers of that town. Among the prisoners of war were several well-known citizens, whose friends demand their release. The entire army was discharged, and there is talk of prosecuting the mayor for overstepping his authority.

The Hon. Samuel J. Tilden died at his residence, Greystone, Yonkers, N. Y., at 8:50 o'clock Wednesday morning. His demise was not expected, and for the past few months he had been in unusually good health.

Two constitutional amendments will be voted on at the State election in Georgia in October. Should they pass, and there appears to be little opposition to them, Confederate soldiers will be placed on a permanent pension-list.

The Kansas State Board of Equalization has just completed its labors. The total amount of taxable property in the State is $277,110,683, an increase of $28,265,406 over last year.

The creditors of the late Archbishop Purcell held an indignation meeting August 1, in Cincinnati, and adopted a petition to the Pope demanding the recall from the diocese of Archbishop Elder, who is charged with lying and swindling, and who vigorously combatted the suit brought to subject diocesan property to the claims of the creditors. Resolutions were also passed condemning Trustee Mannix, who defaulted about $400,000, and who, it is feared, will escape legal punishment.

Michael Davitt arrived in New York Sunday on the Germanic. The Irish agitator was accompanied by James Rourke, business partner of Patrick Eagan. Mr. Davitt will be present at the Chicago convention of the Irish League August 18.

The socialists of Chicago gave a picnic at Sheffield, Ind., on Sunday, for the benefit of the anarchists now on trial. Several thousand people participated, and nearly $1,000 was raised.

At New Orleans Saturday night a man was observed by some negroes to deliberately commit suicide by jumping into the river. In the pocket of his coat, which he left on the wharf, was found a letter, in which he stated that his part in the conspiracies of Kealus, Most, Spies, Lingg, and Fielden sickened him, and he had resolved to die.

The elevator at Eggleston, Goodhue county, Minn., was destroyed by fire Sunday and fell across the railroad track as a freight train was passing. The engine was thrown from the track and the cars caught. Three tramps, who were stealing a ride, were burned to death, and three others were seriously injured. It is thought the elevator was struck by lightning.

Two coopers, William Potts and George Hazlitts, navigated Niagara's whirlpool rapids Sunday in a barrel-shaped boat. The feat was accomplished in the presence of 15,000 people. A landing was made at Queenstown, Canada, five miles from the starting place, the Maid of the Mist's dock. The voyage occupied fifty-five minutes.

On account of the long dry season forest fires have been dangerous in Wisconsin. On Sunday, Spencer, a town of 1,000 people in Marathon county, was completely destroyed. The fire caught from the woods. The Wisconsin Central depot, water tank, two churches, public school, Clifford & Thayer's two saw mills, planing mills, and about 15,000 000 feet of lumber were destroyed. About sixty families are homeless. The loss will reach $400,000, with about $40,000 insurance in different companies. No lives are known to be lost, but several persons are missing. Colby, in the vicinity of Spencer, was also scorched, and fears are entertained that the entire town will be destroyed. The fire is reported moving toward Eau Claire, and the citizens are in a state of intense excitement.

FOREIGN.

For the fourth time rioting broke out in Old Lodge road, Belfast, on Sunday, and the police were obliged to fire in order to disperse the crowd. In the afternoon the rioting was renewed with great violence in Old Lodge, Grosvenor, and Springfield roads. Many persons with gunshot wounds were sent to hospitals. Additional troops were telegraphed for. A dispatch dated August 8, midnight, says: "The rioting shows no sign of abatement. The McKenna incident, which was principally the sacking of wineshops and other public houses, was repeated to-night, the result being that two persons were killed and another was fatally wounded. Twenty-six cases of serious injury are reported, one of the sufferers being a boy who has since died. The total number of persons dead, so far, is believed to be six. The number wounded is unknown, but will probably reach 200. Inspector General Reed, with a small escort, was surrounded by a mob in Lodge street, and was obliged to run for his life."

Cholera is raging in Tokio and Yokohama. Advices by steamers from Hong Kong say that fifty people are dying daily in Yokohama. It is feared the disease will spread, as the atmospheric conditions are favorable to its propagation.

The Emperor William of Germany arrived at Gastien Sunday and was warmly welcomed by Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The monarchs will remain in conference for a few days.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS FOR $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.

Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President,
BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline
BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers. Address, W. F. BAKER, Wheaton, Ill.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N. Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,
of the Chicago Press.

THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.
ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
143 LaSalle St.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest,
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. M'f'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ

VOL. XVIII., No. 48. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1886. WHOLE No. 851.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Mr. Carpenter's Funeral.. 8
The Cutting Case..... 8
The Knights of Labor and the Pope..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Truth Vindicated.... 1
How to Oppose Evil..... 2
Chinatown and Its Problems..... 4
SELECTIONS:
Holiness and Reform..... 3
Unseen Influence..... 3
College Fraternities..... 3
Effect of Godless Education..... 3
REFORM NEWS:
State Meetings; The Illinois Convention; Reform in Michigan..... 5
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES... 9
Press Comment 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Truth Marching on in the South; From Western Missouri; More Hope for Memphis; Cat Holes for Little Lodges; Creed and Scripture; Mormonism and Masonry; Holiness Work in Michigan.....5,6
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS:
The Great Cleveland Mission..... 12
NOTICES..... 12
THE N. C. A... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
LODGE NOTES..... 13
BUSINESS..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS 13

Men who have once taken the Masonic covenant can never be released. They may indeed repent and be forgiven. They may renounce their unholy promises and repudiate all claims of the institution, but how they are regarded by the lodge is seen from the following from Mackey's Cyclopedia of Masonry: "No voluntary, or even forced, withdrawal from the order can cancel certain obligations which have been contracted, and place the person withdrawing in precisely the same relative position towards the institution that he had occupied before his initiation." With such facts before them why will men sell themselves to an order which makes no promise of release under any circumstances whatever?

The Irish National League which organized at Philadelphia two years ago with Alexander Sullivan, the murderer of the teacher, Hanford, at its head, is meeting this week in Chicago. There is a split in the ranks, caused, some aver, by the opposition to Sullivan, and others mistrust by the clashing of lodge interests. Both factions held immense out-door meetings last Saturday. One of them, which appears to have control of the League, is run by Sullivan and the Clan-na-gael order, the other by the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Bishop McQuade of Rochester, New York, a week ago denounced, in severest terms, the Clan-na-gael and Irish Republican Brotherhood, as in principle destructive of society and in their methods damnable. The outcome of all this may be a Kilkenney fight on the shores of Chicago river, with a bad effect on Mr. Parnell's revolutionary fund.

Last fall President Cleveland appointed James Matthews, a colored lawyer of Albany, to the position of Recorder of Deeds in the District, a place long occupied by Hon. Frederick Douglass. The appointment was not confirmed by the Senate, where the Democrats voted against the "nigger." Last week Monday President Cleveland proved his indifference to the race prejudice of his party by reappointing Mathews, who immediately took up the duties of the office. Mr. Douglass has accepted the presidency of the National Emigrant Aid Association of Washington; but in his letter of acceptance he defines clearly his position. The South he believes the natural home of the colored race, and to encourage a wholesale exodus would be most unwise.

The Banner of Holiness, of Chambersburg, Pa., reports an important incident in connection with the Sabbath-school Assembly at Williams' Grove, Pa., which will cheer the brethren in Denver and encourage the editor of the Interior. This meeting was held from July 21 to 24 ult., and Rev. George P. Hayes, D. D., formerly of the Central Presbyterian church, Denver, but now of Cincinnati, had a prominent part in the exercises. At one time, when he was answering questions relative to Christian work, some one asked, "Do secret societies often interfere with Christian duty by keeping persons from the prayer-meetings, etc.?" His answer was substantially as follows: "Yes, sir. When I am asked my opinion, I never dodge, I strike out from the shoulder. I have nothing for those societies. I never joined any of them, not even a college secret society." He gave more of a same character. This answer brought a greater storm of applause from the large audience than any answer to any other question asked.

A week ago Dr. P. S. Henson, of this city, spoke at the Chautauqua Baptist Circle. It fell naturally to him as a popular speaker on a popular occasion to speak of the labor question and the order that presumes to lord it over the working men. "A true knight of labor," he said, "is a true gentleman. Christ was a true knight of labor, and every honest toiler is a knight of labor." He objected to tyranny over either capital or labor. No man ever won distinction who did not work over eight hours a day. Limitations should be lifted from labor. "We will have no more frothing; no red or black flags at Chicago." In the very next dispatch following the report of Dr. Henson's speech we are told of a pseudo Knight of Labor procession over some of their number released from prison, marching to their hall, over which were two flags—the Stars and Stripes, surmounted by the lodge flag. Will not Dr. Henson, when he next speaks on the labor topic, tell us the difference between a knight of labor and a Knight of Labor, the true and the false?

The evidence in the great trial in this city closed early last week, and the pleas of the lawyers began, three on each side. Two attorneys of the prosecution made very able presentations of the case. The defence opened with a weak speech by a German attorney, a socialist and a Jew who could not refrain from a fling at the name of the Redeemer. The next speaker for the defense repudiated the principles of the Spies-Parsons gang, and very ably confined the case to the charge in the indictment. The case will go to the jury by Thursday, and the decision be known before the close of the week. While speculations vary outside the court room, there is no doubt that it will go hard with Fischer, Engel, and Lingg, with the probabilities of a death-sentence. The case of Spies and Parsons is almost equally desperate. The witnesses for the prosecution who testified of the secret conspiracy and bomb-making were denounced by the opposing attorneys as traitors and perjurers, no more to be believed than a renouncing Mason. The daily press has occasionally flung out similar stuff, denouncing these men at the same time as cowards. On the other hand Seliger's testimony showed that he had no heart in the conspiracy, but he was dragged on by the lodge leaders until he found himself an accomplice of savages and murderers.

The ruin of a nation is not the blight of corn nor the weight and impetuosity of hail stones. It is no inundation nor storm; it is no pestilence nor famine. A few years, perhaps a single one, may cover all traces of such calamity. But the country is too surely ruined in which morals are lost irretrievably to the greater part of the rising generation, and there are they about to sink and perish, where the ruler has given, by an unrepressed and unreproved example, the lesson of bad faith.—Walter Savage Landor.

THE TRUTH VINDICATED.

STRICTURES ON A SERMON, BY REV. DR. WILD, TORONTO, ONTARIO:—DELIVERED JULY 25, 1886, IN DEFENSE OF SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY REV. C. C. FOOTE.

Rev. Dr. Wild,

DEAR SIR:—Being in your pleasant city July 25, I gladly accepted the invitation of a family of your church to attend your service on that day. I was glad of the opportunity to listen to a clergyman so widely known and so richly endowed with pulpit power. I was well paid and should be glad to hear you again.

I was in full sympathy with the thunders of applause that greeted portions of your eloquent discourse; but, my dear sir, imagine if you can the consternation that came upon me like a tidal wave when I learned that I was to hear, for the first time in my life, a set defense of secret societies—societies whose history and character have been my study for more than fifty years, and against which, as a consequence of the knowledge thus obtained, I have, in the fear of God, waged a truceless war. At the close of the service I said to the gentleman whose guest I was, "A bad cause has fallen into the defense of skillful hands."

For lack of space in this rejoinder I must confine myself to some of the most salient portions of your sermon.

1st. Of the display of the Knights of Pythias you say, "Their beautiful uniform, music and drilled manœuvres were very grand and entertaining." To me they were alarming and painful. Nothing that the enemies of good government and society can do is entertaining to me. Where is the demand for the gathering of martial hosts and the drill of war in battle array, in governments at peace with all the world? If my neighbors are drilling in the arts of war, in secret, society has a right to know for what. And I challenge the world to disprove their right.

After paying your compliments to the Pythians you propound these four fundamental questions concerning secret societies, of which you specify half a score. "Are such institutions justifiable?" "Have they the seal of God?" "Have they the approval of his holy Word?" "Are they really a public good?"

To all these questions you unqualifiedly say yes. I as unqualifiedly say no. It is not the secret societies of Toronto that demand our attention, but all secret societies as well; I ask, therefore, Why you do not include the Knights of the Golden Circle, the Molly Maguires, the Ku Klux, the Nihilists, the Anarchists, etc., etc. Please remember you are defending secret societies as such, not some favorite selections.

You say, "If Providence is not organizing these things, he is permitting them for some good intention."

And for this reason you defend them. But did not Providence "permit" that horrible state of Europe in the fifteenth century and thereafter, which you so eloquently describe? Now, reverend sir, allow me to remind you that your logic compels you to defend that state of things and to condemn Luther, the Quakers, and John Wesley.

And does not Providence "permit" the dram shops of your country and mine to fill the land with poverty, crime, and woe? Why, then, do you not champion these as well? Does not your logic require as much at your hands? I hope you will see you have done "Providence" a great wrong in finding a justification of secret societies from "providential" permission. The Apostle Peter told the Jews that with "wicked hands they had crucified the Lord of glory," even though permitted by Providence.

I will now give you one all-sufficient reason for condemning all secret oath-bound societies. They are organized clans for promoting their own selfish interests as against or irrespective of the interests of outsiders. Every such organization ignores the unity of the human family and the equality of the rights of all, and the duty of all to the rights of all. Here in the first oath of the Entered Apprentice Mason is an illustration: "I most solemnly and sincerely promise and swear that I will always hail, ever conceal and never reveal any of the mysteries . . . of ancient Freemasonry . . . whereby the secrets of Masonry may be obtained through my unworthiness; . . . bindiug myself under no less penalty than to have my throat cut across, my torgue torn out by the roots," etc., etc. Masonry claims to be the custodian of "light" and "knowledge" and other "good things," as they have facilities for such an absolute perfection of the "craft" as shall "guard them against ever goiug astray;" so that we "cannot conceive that anything more can be suggested which the soul of man requires."—(Sickles's Monitor, page 97.)

Now, if Masonry can do all these things, then it is guilty of putting its "light under a bushel," for which there can be no justification. But if all this is a cheat and a lie, as it is, then no man can join or defend such an organization without committing a sin, and so palpally a sin, that no amount of sophistry can hide it. And it can easily be proved that all secret societies rest upon the same unjustifiable basis.

Your first question is clearly and fully answered. Secret societies are not justifiable.

2d question. "Have they the seal of God?" If they have let them give the one sufficient proof. Bring it forth. Show the "seal" to the world. They will, when Mahommedanism, Papacy and Mormonism can exhibit the "seal of God." These have a "seal," as have secret societies; but it is the "mark of the Beast"! Like a deep thunder scar trenched in the pate of a fallen angel! The holy God never sets his seal on anything so supremely selfish.

3d questiou. Have they (secret societies) the "approval of his holy Word?" "To the law and to the testimony' If they speak not according to these, it is because there is no truth in them." Almost the first step into these organizations is an oath to conceal, you know not what, and to do you know not what,—a thing God's Word condemns in language which cannot be misunderstood; a sin that must be confessed, repented of and renounced, or the offender must be put to death.—Lev. 5: 4–14.

The example of the Son of God was conclusive and final on this subject. He was himself the Word of God. What said he? "In secret have I said nothing." "I ever spake openly." His omniscient eye flashed down through the centuries to this "organizing age" of which you speak, and saw every secret combination and the frightful work they are now making, so rninous to hundreds of thousands of laborers and the business interests of the country.

That one burning sentence of the Saviour's has forever stamped his condemnation upon all organized secretism. Lord Beaconsfield declared that Europe was honeycombed with secret societies, and the city of Chicago is cursed with hundreds of these dark organizations and they are, with the grog shops, responsible for the recent horrible developments in that city.

The laborers among the freed people of the Southern States say that secret societies among them are like the locusts of Egypt, devouring every good thing, and ruining the church; and there is ample evidence to prove that the Y. M. C. Associations of this country are controlled, toa great extent, by secret societies. The Evangelists at the recent convention at Niagara declared that the Y. M. C. A. had so left the Gospel for things secular that they —the Evangelists—had turned away from them. Although the Y. M. C. Associations allow pretty free discussion on nearly all practical subjects, they will not tolerate any discussion on secret societies. Can God's holy Word approve of such a system? No! a thousand times No!!

4th question. "Are secret societies a public benefit?" You speak eloquently and worthily of the Lutheran, the Puritan, and the Wesleyan Reformations; but when you place modern secretism alongside these, I can summon no words adequate to express my sorrow and amazement! In the name of civilization, good morals and Christianity, I ask, What has secretism done to elevate and save the race? Nothing, literally nothing! There are thousands and thousands in these organizations who will tell you they contain "good enough religion" for them! Here, then, you have a fatal exchange of Christ's religion for human production. Is this a public benefit?

But you say, "these societies acknowledge a God!" What about France? Has not the Grand Orient, the principal secret society of that nation, repudiated God and the immortality of the soul? Yes. And have their American brethren excommunicated or repudiated them? I have yet to learn it. But, my dear doctor, what kind of a god does Blue Lodge Masonry acknowledge? A god out of Christ; this yon very well know. Bnt there is no snch god! Then in place of acknowledging the true God, the God of the Bible, they have substituted a false god, and are therefore idolators.

Their imaginary god they call the "Grand Architect of the Universe." But the Bible knows uo such god. The Lord Jesus Christ, whom they repudiate, is not an architect, but the CREATOR of the universe. Him the Blue Lodges reject. Hence the religion of Masonry is spurious, a religion of works, and not of faith. Masonry proposes to save its votaries by itself, and not by Jesus Christ. Here is a specimen of their prayers:

"Correct our errors by the unerring square of thy wisdom, and enable us so to practice the precepts of Masonry that all our actions may be acceptable in thy sight. So mote it be. Amen." —(Mackey's Masonic Ritualist, page 296.)

This is a sample of much more of the same sort. The Korau and the Book of Mormon are just as good as the Christian's Bible for the Masons. The trestle board of the Jewish Mason is the Old Testament, of the Mohamuedau it is the Koran.—(Mackey, page 59.)

What, now, my dear brother, does your affirmation that "These secret organizations are a force against infidelity" amouut to? Puttiug God's book ou a level with the books of false religions, they prove themselves to be infidels.

Next you say, "These societies are pledged to the rulers and laws of the country in which they live." Let us see.

That you may find such statements in their rituals is admitted, but it is denied in their standard books and by their deeds. "Freemasonry is an institution subject to no other laws than that which it makes itself."—(Voice of Masonry, page 459.) "We know uo government save our own. To every government save that of Masonry, and to each and all alike we are foreigners. We are a nation of men only bound to each other by Masonic ties, as citizens of the world, and that world the world of Masonry, foreigners to all the world besides."—(Missouri Grand Lodge Report for 1867.)

This is the doctrine proclaimed by Masonic writers generally. What think you of that, doctor? I have lying before me pages of just such treasonable language.

I record the teachings of Masonry, not because they are worse than others, but because it is the mother of all like her. Thus I have shown that, instead of secret organizatious giving us "thousands of men, who cannot secretly conspire to resist lawful rule," we have in these societies thousands on thousands who are taught by the instructors of these societies that they can resist lawful rule.

Fifth item of defense. "They are pledged to charity." That one endowed with your historic lore should attempt to palm off these societies on such a pretence, is to me simply amazing. This statement shall be offset by published facts. These societies bestow their so-called charities upon none but paying members of their own order. They will have your money in their coffers, before they will return to you a dime. It is not enough for you to be an Entered Apprentice, or Fellow Craft. No matter how much you have paid as such, if you are sick or die, your family cannot receive back a farthing. To call such an institution charitable is a wicked misnomer. How was it at the great fire in Chicago, in 1871? $90,000 was sent from the U. S. A. and from Canada, and all for the Masters, not a dollar for the lower degrees. And $60,000 of the $90,000 never reached those for whom it was intended, but was devoted to lodge building and favorites. These facts may be found in the report of the relief committee.

I select now from annual Masonic reports. In 1872, the Grand Lodge of Illinois gave $100 to so-called charity, out of $25,000 received that year. In 1873 they received $28,000, and devoted not a solitary dollar to charity. See pages 25 and 26 of that year. In 1880 their receipts were $32,000, out of which they gave $212. A Boston lodge gave $35 to charity, and $1,000 for suppers and liquors out of $2,000 received. The Grand Lodge of New York received in 1881 over $83,000, and gave for charity $405. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts received over $100,000, and for charity and funeral expenses paid out less than $1,600. No wonder the Supreme Court of Maine has declared that a "Masonic lodge is not a charitable institution;" and we have the testimony of the Grand Lodge of South Carolina to the same effect. This is enough to place the slab of eternal silence on the so-called "charity" of secret societies.

Next you say, that these societies "help the church and do the work that distinctively belongs to the church."

Shame on a church that will turn over her distinctive work to a worldly, Christ-rejecting organization. To his disciples, the great Apostle to the Gentiles said, "Let them labor with their hands, that they may have to give to the needy."

In the uext place you claim because of their connectiou with these secret societies, the members must be more geutlemanly, sober, and Christian. I I regret this statemeut as it imposes upon me a painful task. Had you been eontent to say, "There are many men iu these societies possessed of these virtues," I should have admitted it, for I know there are. Some good men having been led into these "lodges" are held there by what they regard as the binding uature of their horrid oaths. As your statemeut is both personal and universal my response must be so.

On my way to and from Toronto, I found myself in company with hundreds of the Kuights of Pythias, and among these I witnessed more of rowdyism, vulgar jokes, howling, yelling, smoking, liquor drinking, and drunkenness, and ungentlemanly conduct generally, than I have witnessed for years. At a State meeting of one of these societies I saw the distributiou of bottles enough to fill a cart. I can only say, Detroit does not distribute water in bottles.

At the national gathering of the Knight Templars in Chicago and San Francisco the drunkenness and the patronage of "her whose steps take hold on hell," was notorious and scandalous to the last degree.

Is it not scandalous that every man, be he preacher or libertine, saint or sinner, must on bended knee solemnly swear that he will not violate the chastity of a Master Mason's female relatives? See the ninth of the seventeen oaths a candidate takes to be become a Master Mason. What does this mean? This and nothing else: "We know you and mean to protect ourselves from your tricks! We don't concern ourselves about the rest of womankind! But we mean you to 'hands off' from ours." Shame! shame!!

With your prophesies concerning the future use of secret societies, and your fight with the Pope, contained in the discourse I am reviewing, I will not meddle. Please do not regard these strictures as a discourse on secret societies, but only a reply to what I deem your tremendous error concerning them.

Were it not for the already too great length of this article, I could add the testimony of the wisest statesman, and an army of high, seceded, and of adhering Masons, not a few, to prove the character of these societies to be anti-social, anti-democratic, and anti-Christian.

Detroit, Mich., Aug., 1886.

HOW TO OPPOSE EVIL.

BY ELDER N. CALLENDER.

Evil is too manifest to be ignored, and contact with it is certain to all in this world. How to meet and to treat it is the all important problem. All wholesome government, from the parent up through all legitimate powers, to God himself, must meet and treat evil in ten thousand forms. It is scarcely necessary to say all good authority must and will oppose it. (See Rom. 13: 1–4.)

Every true father and mother will resist it as they would the embraces of a rattlesnake. All good governments of church and state will do the same. Duty calls us to "abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good," and it is just as much our duty to do one as the other. To ignore evil by filling up the vessel with good, is an evil sentimentalism, which pleases Satan even better than it does the people of this simpering age. Fill up a cesspool with pure water, fill a stinking beer or whisky barrel, already full to the bung, with pure milk, as soon!

No, there must be a hard and heavy job done first, of emptying and cleaning, of "turning upside down;" often it is the best alternative to stave in the heads, and after severe cleansing put in new heads. The analogy is apparent to all who think for themselves, as some venture to do.

Yes, says one, we should so resist wrong doing as to keep on good and amicable terms with the evil doer. So when law and order must be enforced, the criminal should be so consulted as to keep on the right side of him, and in case of murder, the sheriff should be ingenious enough to fix the cable-tow so as not to cramp the wind of the culprit. This would be simply humane—to the criminal, less so to society and the public. "None ever felt the halter draw with good opinion of the law." But who in these days of "liberal and advanced thought" cares for law, much less God's law? Our "God is love," the villain quotes. Justice responds, "Our God is a consuming fire." "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." It has been said, and I believe it, that the love of God is as apparent in a hell for outlaws as in a heaven for the loyal. Are prisons for outlawry a malignant provision? No, being a necessity for the protection of the loyal, they evince the beneficence of government as much as hospitals do.

But we started out with the purpose to see how to oppose wrong doing and evil. One class, a very large class, contend that you must so oppose evil as to keep the good will of the sinner.

Can this be done? Answer, Yes—No.

Explanation: When a man of God, filled with the Holy Spirit, as all should and must be to be successful, comes to the mixed multitude, and kindly and tearfully proclaims God's law and his offers of mercy, some, peradventure, will be "pricked in the heart and turn from sin, change their mind, and go to God." These will not be angry with the embassadors for Christ, but will love them. They will praise God eternally that he sent his fearless servants to tell them the saving truth of God, and that "they did not shun to declare the counsel of God" to them, through fear or the desire to please men.

But, be it remembered that there will be found another class, who will adhere to their sins and "refuse to return." Who can keep the right side of these? Men, however good, cannot. God himself could not please such, without denying himself, and this he cannot do. Apply this fact to the reforms and to the reformers of any age, and your answer is, Yes—No. All depends on the penitence or the impenitence of those who hear God's law from the embassador of Jesus. The drunkard who cleaves to his cups, the infidel who hugs his unbelief, the lodgeite who adheres to Baal, will hug his idol and curse the loving embassador of the Cross. "No man can serve two masters."

HOLINESS AND REFORM.

Holiness is the root and heart of reform. It is not the helper, handmaid, or adjunct of reform, but its life, its essence, its instinct, its power. Reform belongs to holiness, and not holiness to reform. There are incidental reforms—reforms in a few directions, growing out of selfishness and the requirements of civilization—but these are not reform. They are no more born of holiness than the toad stool has to do with yellow-ripe wheat. Reform is greater than all these, and different from them. Reform is spirit; a wind from God, blowing upon the corrupt wastes of humanity, not only to clean up the outside, but to reform (re-form) the hidden life of the soul. Reform is the righteousness side of holiness. It is holiness in motion.

Holiness is reform at base. It will put reform on the statute-book, no doubt—just as God gives his holiness the form of law on the written page of his book—but this is expressly declared to be for the sinner, the unreformed, and not for the holy, the already reformed. Their hearts need no law, for they have got it. It is written on their hearts. Signs at the corners, giving the names of the streets, are not needed for those who live on them, but for strangers. Holiness sharpens the instinct of righteousness.

Yet at this point there is danger. As ingrain and instinct as reform is to the holy—as needless as the written law is to his heart—there is another sense in which it is very important to him. Holy instinct works by aid of the mind, and requirs an illuminated and rectified judgment. The instinct seizes upon facts; and if the facts be confused, the instinct operating only upon the case as presented, acts irrationally, though itself be as righteous as heaven. Hence the apostle Peter stirs up the "pure mind" of his brethren "by way of remembrance." And hence the psalmist declares his habit of meditating in the "law" both "day and night." Forgetful of the principle here laid down, some have very disastrously erred in declaring that if you only "get the heart right," other things will come right. Take out reform preaching from holiness preaching and the holiness resultant will be a poor tottering kind—a baby holiness where stalwart manhood is needed. In fact, on this line you are likely to reach no farther than regeneration. Many profess the distinctive grace of holiness who are yet babies in righteousness.

Be suspicious of the holiness that fears reform—that fears reform in a particular direction, or particular reforms. Holiness must take up the different reforms as they get into its pathway. Also, fear a holiness that has some darling reform to present, and not much else. When one reform tosses another out of the way as about useless, it is because it has got itself fixed up in clothes that are out of proportion. It needs reforming itself. This, however, is a different thing from temporarily running out on one reform with all your might; for this course is often necessary to give it the eye and hearing of the people. Every reform—as well as "every dog" in some good sense must needs have "its day." This is particularly true in a holiness meeting. Here there are times when particular reform needs a thorough and, perhaps, tremendous shaking up. Then pass it by for a season, either entirely or with only a passing allusion, and give some other form of truth a chance. Round out the truth. Holiness is as round as a dollar, and so is righteous reform. They who in purely religious gatherings only peddle out one kind of reform, are close to the boundary line between fidelity and fanaticism, or very likely passed clear beyond it. Some may have a life-work or mission to a particular reform, precisely as others do to be farmers or mechanics. Then let them follow their calling. But they must also think of something else, or be as one-sided as a wart. And they have no right to force all religious meetings into the mold of their reform; if they do they will overreach their own object, and make themselves a pest.

Let us get a clean-cut holiness, that reforms ourselves all over, and then go in for saving and reforming the world.—Christian Harvester.

UNSEEN INFLUENCE.

Cable cars are propelled by an unseen power. It is just as potent as if every movement of the great puffing engine that drives the cable were visible to every passenger. The passengers, too, are borne just as swiftly onward up or down the street. Thus the unseen powers that influence human beings and bear them up to heaven or down to hell are ever at work. We may close our eyes and so not be conscious of our progress, but we are still going on On the one hand there is the unseen hand of God lifting us up by the power of truth and grace within the soul. It is not a power that can be seen by the eye. Philosophers have been straining their eyes and using every facility which chemistry and the other sciences afford, "feeling" after this unseen One, whose power moves the world. They have not found him. But they dare not deny that the world moves and that we are all borne along, hither and thither, to our different destinies. What the Scripture saith is true. He is "invisible." In vain do men "feel after him." Faith alone sees him.

There are often unseen influences working with God in the home and in society. Men are borne upward by the hallowed conversation and prayers of the home. They go out to mingle in the world, and yet they descend not to its level. They live above its low and base methods. The world knows not why, and perhaps they themselves are not conscious that home influence is supporting them. The prayers of loved ones are following them in all their hardships and temptations, and moving God's hand that is holding them up. No doubt the closet prayers of believing fathers and mothers have often saved their sons and daughters from many a dangerous temptation.

Example has power to influence us unconsciously. How natural for us to do as others do! It requires great moral power to resist the example of those about us. In the cut of the coat and twill of the hair we feel that we must be like others. The most profane are often restrained by the example of godly persons while in their presence.

But the devil is an unseen power drawing men in the other direction. "He walketh about as a lion seeking whom he may devour." There is no evidence that Job in all his afflictions knew what hand Satan had in moving God against him. Satan is a sly, stealthy old serpent, whose movements are unseen and generally unsuspected. But his power is none the less for that in bearing men on to their awful doom.

He is helped by the silent influence of the corrupt principle in the hearts of men. The flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh. Men incline to indulge the lusts of the flesh. Corrupt appetites are strong within and clamorous for indulgence. The drunkard is an example of this. The habit of dissipation, or the indulgence of vices of any description, exerts a propelling influence that can only be felt, and it is known by the downward movement of the man.

Evil example seconds the work of the devil, makes the downward career more easy and renders reform more difficult. At home, in society, everywhere, it is exerting constantly its unseen influence. This influence is molding the lives of millions of children into conformity with this present evil world. It is so silent and gradual in its effect that few are aware of its power, none the less dangerous on that account.

The combination of secrecy is another unseen influence. Men hate the light because their deeds are evil. They combine in darkness the more effectually to promote their schemes. The late revelations of the Anarchists at Chicago, and the secret labor organizations all over the country show what power secrecy has. In secret conclave they not only mold the opinions and lives of the members of the orders, but they forge the cables by which they hope to draw the whole nation to do their pleasure, or else drag it down to anarchy and ruin. Political parties and sectarian prejudices also draw men out of the way of truth, often by their unseen influences brought to bear with unscrupulous craftiness upon the weak.

By such various and opposing unseen influences human society is manipulated and shaped continually. The good and the bad are borne along, they themselves being the active choosers, to their respective destinations. Every one must take heed for himself whither he is being carried by these unseen powers. It makes all the difference in the world whether you step aboard the up town or down town cars, forced along by the same cable, as to where you will land. Look out! get aboard the right car, and stick to it till you reach your point.—Christian Instructor.

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES.

The "secret societies" in our colleges have become a great evil. In their beginning, middle and end, they are evil and that continually. This is not a rash, unsupported statement. It is not a dashing assertion. It is established by the experience of our oldest institutions of learning and by the opinion of many wise and conservative educators. Two prime and obvious evils connected with these societies are, (a) their effect on the literary societies, and (b) their tendency to extravagance. We think it can be shown to the satisfaction even of the friends of these organizations that where they thrive and prosper the interest in the regular literary society rapidly diminishes. How could it be otherwise? Affection for the secret society, and pride and zeal in it, are sure to bring forth the fruit of indifference to the open routine of the literary society. It is a serious calamity when the debating society is reckoned of secondary importance. It is the testimony of thousands that they received incalculable benefit, while in college, from these auxiliaries.

Then look at the expense connected with these organizations. With their badges and their "banquets" they are a constant and heavy drain on the purses of parents who can ill-afford such useless outlays. It is no very uncommon thing, we are told, for one of these badges to cost one hundred dollars! Not that this is the necessary cost, but a great many are bought at that price. Think of it! A parent struggling for the education of his son—a whole family, perhaps, making sacrifices for the brother at college, and he abusing this combined self-denial in wasteful extravagance of a fraternity-badge set with pearls or diamonds. It would be almost impossible to rebuke with undue severity such filial and fraternal ingratitude. Yet this is just the temptation to which the members of these societies are exposed and to which many of them yield. The "banquets," too, must be held annually. Costly suppers they are, tending to gluttony and drunkenness.

By every lawful means we believe these "societies" ought to be discouraged. We have not spoken of their tendency to interfere with discipline, not because we do not think that is their tendency, but because the tangible proof here is not so clear and convincing.

At a late meeting of the Board of Directors of the Theological Seminary here, the following action in reference to this subject was taken, limiting the distribution of the interest on the McMillan bequest:

> Whereas, it is known to this Board that there are secret fraternities in Erskine College; and whereas this Board regards with earnest disfavor all such organizations; therefore
> Resolved, that no aid from the "McMillan Fund" be granted to any student who is a member of such an organization.

Similar action was taken by the Faculty of Erskine College in reference to the "Duane Mower Scholarship." This is a quiet, but most intelligible protest against these ensnaring organizations.—Associate Reformed Presbyterian.

EFFECT OF GODLESS EDUCATION.

We visited the school of Art and Design [Cincinnati]. The great majority of the contributions of these galleries are from pupils of the public schools of the city. It was a surprise to learn that what we were looking at were the efforts of school boys and girls. But the surprise took on a different phase when we behold effort after effort to imitate the "masters" in producing the entire model of the human body in plaster of Paris! And when I was told that these models were the results of the combined skill of boys and girls in the laboratory of the public schools, surprise gave place to indignation. Then I remembered that the Bible had been expelled from the schools of Cincinnati by the adverse decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio. Some have had the audacity to object to the reading of the Bible in the schools because of the alleged "obscenity" of some parts of it. Of course no man of intelligence or honesty ever urged such objection. But the Bible is out of the schools of Cincinnati less than a score of years, when both sexes of the pupils can labor together on models fit only for the dark halls of buried Pompeii. These are some of the blossoms of the upas tree of infidelity. Some of the first fruits have ripened and been gathered in the form of judicial and political corruption, mobs, fires, murders, debauchery and all manner of crime. And now, as if the work of ruin were not thorough enough, they have begun to poison the social and civil waters at their fountain. All the drunkenness and impurities of the Continental cities, with a weaker form of government, are fastened on the "Queen City of the West." A nightmare seems to have settled down on the city. The religious classes are aware of the danger that hangs over them. One of the ministers of the city declares it to be his conviction that Cincinnati is a doomed city.—Rev. J. H. Lieper in Christian Statesman.

THE TRUTH MARCHING GLORIOUSLY ON IN THE SOUTH.

PROF. WOODSMALL ON THE WORK OF THE CYNOSURE.

I have been attending conventions and associations of colored Baptist churches in Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee during the past month; and during that time I have met over one thousand leaders of their churches. The religious destitution in the Mississippi bottoms and regions bordering thereon is very great. There are colored churches on nearly every large plantation, and some are doing good; but the most of them are weak, and their leaders are weak, and many are immoral. They are surrounded by the worst kind of influences. Whisky is sold on nearly every plantation. No attention is paid to the Sabbath except in many places to make it a day of revelry. The people are being led into all kinds of vanity and sin. They have a perfect mania in some places for secret societies. There are good pastors and other good Christian people in almost all sections, but many of them feel that it is almost useless to attempt to stem the tide of evil. The situation in some respects, in some places, is truly appalling.

On the other hand I have seen evidence of much that is hopeful. I have found a good healthy temperance sentiment developing everywhere; very weak, it is true, in some places, but growing. I have also found evidence of a growing opposition on the part of the better pastors, and others, against secret societies. This sentiment was specially marked in Louisiana and Southern Arkansas.

The man who preached the introductory sermon at the Louisiana State Convention took for his text the passage that gives an account of the destruction of Baal's altar by Gideon; and after forcibly showing the evils of the lodge, he called upon all to help throw down Baal's altars in Masonic lodges and other secret orders.

It was evident that a large number of the leading brethren present heartily endorsed the sermon. Some, however, were displeased. I found some of the best brethren in the State who were convinced a year ago that it was wrong for Christians to be connected with these secret orders, but were not strong enough then to openly renounce them, who have since done so.

I find that the Cynosure has had more or less to do in helping to strengthen individuals and develop the reform sentiment in all sections that I have visited. Scores of brethren who are now doing valiant service have told me that the Cynosure was the means of leading them to oppose secret orders. It would greatly encourage friends who are helping to send the paper and tracts to the colored pastors of the South to see the evidences of good that is being done in this way as I do. The Cynosure ought, without delay, to be put into the hands of every pastor in the South. H. Woodsmall.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 10, 1886.

In traveling around the country we are often surprised at the remarks made by men who say they are Masons, or were some time ago, but for reasons they take no interest. In the craft now. We met one of those individuals at Monroe, who said he was down on Masonry because a Mason owed him $120 and died without paying him. We met another gentleman in Northville recently who was soured on Masonry because a certain lodge in this city had suspended him for non-payment of his dues. We met another brother Mason in this city who had taken out his Masonic charm of his watch chain because another brother Mason [who is a lawyer] had sued him in court, and he considered the claim an unjust one.—Detroit Freemason.

CHINATOWN AND ITS PROBLEMS.

BY HENRY L. KELLOGG.

(Continued from last week.)

The journey through the mazes and mysteries of Chinatown is one of the noteworthy sights of San Francisco. Other points and places of interest have their peculiar attractions: the Cliff House with its sea-lions and Sutro Heights; the Presidio with its camps and bristling ramparts; Black Point, with its homelike residence for the commanding general of the department, now Gen. O. O. Howard, and its ornament of Spanish bronze cannon cast more than 200 years ago; Alcatraz Island, with its fortifications; Golden Gate Park, with its magnificent drives, conservatory and Garfield statue; Telegraph Hill, with its noble views of bay, harbor and city; "Nob" Hill, with its palaces of the Crockers, Coltons, Floods, Hopkinses and Stanfords; the Mint, with its plain, massive front, restful to the eye amid the forest of florid, bay-window architecture of the city,—but none will compare with Chinatown, and the San Franciscans, though they may rail upon the Chinese, yet have a certain pride in the fact that no American city can furnish its guests with an equal attraction.

We elbow through these crowded, hilly streets, wondering at the dexterity of the barber who in his open shop shaves the Celestial head as well as face, and manipulates ears, eyebrows, nose and cue until his subject is thoroughly revamped. People who rest in the delusion that the Chinese are a race of laundrymen, will be quickly undeceived here. The stores, full of Chinese goods and novelties, from gimcracks to jewelry and rich silks, are small but well filled, and the American purchaser will be attended as courteously as in great stores of Geary and Market streets. Late in the evening the proprietor, often a man with every appearance of wealth and intelligence (Celestially speaking), will be seen footing up the business of the day in curious hyeroglyphics and with a counting machine similar to the abacus, with which our dictionaries are wont to open their treasures of knowledge. Next door may be a market, or a shoe shop, or a store filled with smokers' articles, and in the quarters there are two or three liquor stores, not with the gilded front of their American neighbors, but a display of genuine liquors in the original casks. Outcries of eager, but not angry voices, with undistinguishable chattering, strike the ear from an inner room. A crowd flows in and out to watch for a few minutes over the shoulders of the players the result of a game played around a large table by eight or ten men with large dominoes. It is gambling, for each of the players puts down his dime, and the manager of the game generally puts it all in his bag. There is much chaffering in a high key at the result, but no quarrelling. The domino game is never disturbed by the police, as one accommodating officer informed me, because it was open-handed and there was no cheating. But the "tan" game is pounced upon at every opportunity. Everywhere along the streets there may be seen a silent Chinaman looking quietly on the busy life about. He stands near an open door. Beyond is a narrow hall with another door or two with a guard sitting beside each. If a white stranger stops to look in, the outside watchman quietly closes his door. It is heavy with oak timber and a sheet-iron casing, which more often than not bears the marks of severe tussles with the axes of the police. The officers charge on one of these gambling dens, and break their way after half an hour with axes and crowbars through two or three barricades only to find within a few humble Chinamen meekly pursuing their peaceful and legitimate business. Seldom are the gamblers caught napping, and a few weeks since, when the officers failed to make out their case in court, the Chinese proprietor retaliated by arresting them for house-breaking.

Opium smoking is no more prohibited than gambling, but the dens must not allow the patronage of the whites under penalty of a heavy fine. In our rambles we saw many Chinamen smoking the Lethean drug. They resort to opium for any slight ailment, and many regard it as a panacea for all their ills. The common opium joint is far removed from the jarring clamor of the street. We stumbled down narrow and protesting stairs and groped through long dark passages to find two or three of these. The door opened into a low room with stifling, heavy, heated air. On low wide bunks around the sides, were a number of smokers in various stages of intoxication.

A previous explorer into these regions gives us this particular description of the strongest habit of vicious indulgence to which the Chinaman is addicted: "The opium pipe is made of a piece of mahogany or ebony wood. The stem is about three-quarters of an inch in diameter and about two feet in length. A hole, about half an inch in diameter, runs the whole length of the stem. About six inches from the end of the stem is the bowl of the pipe. It is made of a peculiar kind of sand and clay in China, and is very hard and fire-proof. The bowl is about two inches in diameter. The top of the bowl is entirely closed, except a small hole in the centre, about the size of a large darning-needle. In the bottom is a hole about half an inch in diameter, into which is inserted a brass coupling, connecting the stem of the pipe. The opium is kept in a small box, made of horn. Every Chinaman carries one. When a person desires to smoke opium, he reclines upon the bunk upon one side. With a piece of steel, about the length and size of a large knitting-needle and sharp pointed, a little of the opium is taken from the box. It is held over the blaze of the lamp until it is thoroughly cooked. The piece of steel is kept in motion all the time, and the opium when cooked is formed into the shape of a small pistol cartridge. The point of the steel needle is then inserted into the small hole in the centre of the bowl of the pipe, and gently drawn through the cartridge of opium. The smoker then turns the bowl of the pipe to the flame of the lamp, reposes upon a wooden pillow, and smokes. He gently draws in his breath in long and rapid respirations. He must be careful, however, to slightly remove his lips from the stem of the pipe when taking breath. If he should breathe slightly into the stem it stops the flow of the smoke of the opium. When the flow is stopped the sharp-pointed steel is used to open the small hole in the bowl of the pipe. It takes about three minutes to prepare the opium for the pipe, and about one to smoke it out, ten or twelve whiffs only being required. From six to twelve pipefuls are generally smoked before the smoker is satisfied." The deleterious effects of opium smoking are not so manifest among the Chinese as the whites; and a similar relation seems to exist as between Germans and Americans in the use of beer. But there is abundant evidence that physical wreck and moral ruin everywhere follow the use of opium, and nowhere in the world is smuggling carried on with such strategy as is practiced by the Chinese of San Francisco to secure their favorite drug. The Board of Supervisors of San Francisco report twenty-six public opium resorts, but there is a "lay out" in most of the sleeping rooms.

Chinese prostitution in San Francisco has been represented by the "Sand Lot" orators to be the most degrading imaginable—if degrees in this vice are possible. There are some 500 professional prostitutes out of the 1,385 Chinese women in San Francisco. But of this number those who occupy sixty-nine of their alley-way dens, are patronized only by whites, and will not allow a Chinaman to look in at their narrow windows. These figures, gathered by the authorities, tend to prove that the Chinese are far less addicted to this vice than a proportionate number of whites in a similar situation in life. It is most obvious to anyone who will walk the most frequented streets of San Francisco in the evening that white prostitution, with its "cribs" and free theatres with "box" attachment, is so bold, open and disgusting, that the Chinese is hardly to be compared with it.

It is a favorite theme with O'Donnell, the demagogue coroner of San Francisco, in his speeches on the Sand Lots, to expatiate on the amours and intrigues of Chinese servants with mistresses of California households in the absence of their lords. The vile and lying slander should choke the villain; and the character of the Irish crowd which listens to to the sentiment may be known by their applause. As a matter of duty I listened one Sabbath afternoon to the harangues of O'Donnell and his inebriate lieutenant, Mulloy. Both freely cursed Dennis Kearney, who has settled down to a legitimate business in an employment agency, for a traitor. The auditors appeared to be generally of the same nationality as the speakers, and would not look well in comparison with an equal number of Chinese, especially the female portion. Several policemen were about the edge of the crowd, and one of them in brogue informed me they never had any trouble at the Sand Lots.

(To be continued.)

—The New Haven Journal makes the following statement as to the members of the present Congress: "Of the 408 Senators, Members, and Territorial Delegates who compose Congress, 72 are Methodists, 63 Baptists, 41 Episcopalians, 37 Presbyterians, 36 Catholics, 15 Unitarians, 8 Lutherans, 10 Christians (Campbellites), and 2 Quakers, making a total of 283 who are actively connected with some church organization. This leaves 125 who either never belonged to any church or have drifted out of such associations."

Reform News.

STATE MEETINGS.

IOWA

At Birmingham, August 31, 1886.

KANSAS

At Rusco, Washington county, September 7.

ILLINOIS

At Princeton, Bureau county, September 21.

Good speakers are announced, and an interesting programme is being arranged for each of the above meetings, which, the Lord willing, I expect to attend. Each State has an abundant anti-lodge element in it to assure a grand meeting and victory if it can be brought out and unified. Bro. Hawley and the friends in Iowa are making a good start, and if the convention is what it may be and should be, the coming year will witness an advance unprecedented in that State. Will not the friends, if need be, make a sacrifice to be at that meeting, and with united prayer and consecration lay the foundation for a campaign before which the enemy will be driven as chaff before the wind. Let Iowa set other States holding conventions later a good example, and then let those that follow make each successive State meeting better and stronger until the list is completed, and we come up to the national gathering strong in victory and in the Lord.

J. P. Stoddard.

THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION.

To the Friends of Christian Reform in Illinois:—The Convention of the State Christian Association called to meet in Princeton, September 21 and 22, will in some respects be the most important of our annual gatherings. No former convention has been held there, and there has been but little discussion of the secret society question. There are, however, a few earnest reformers and a considerable number who, while they have but little knowledge of the question, are in sympathy with our cause. Among the latter class are four Swedish congregations, which exclude members of secret societies from their fellowship. The convention will be attended with some little expense, and a large, commodious hall has been engaged. Friends of the cause in Princeton promise entertainment, but will depend on those from outside to pay other expenses. It is hoped that there will be a general gathering, and that friends will be able and willing to contribute some forty to fifty dollars towards making this meeting a success.

H. H. Hinman.

REFORM IN MICHIGAN.

Williamston, Mich.

On Saturday evening, August 7th, a very large audience met at the Wesleyan church, Meridian, Ingham county, to listen to a lecture on Freemasonry, which I had announced two weeks previous. People came in loads, five, and some eight miles, to hear the lecture, and seemed to feel well paid. I announced another lecture for four weeks and all were anxious to be sure about the date, expressing themselves determined to come again. It did not affect my audience the following morning in the least.

The craft were well represented, both from the Williamston and Okemos lodges, but were very quiet, though evidently very mad. I pitied them and told them so, whenever they were driven into a close corner and compelled, for the safety of their institution, to keep entirely silent. I first showed that, according to their own admission, their word was good for nothing in regard to the expositions, or concerning Anti-masonry and Anti-masons, since by their own admission they were sworn to "never reveal," and "always conceal." Therefore, as a matter of course, when they did speak, they must falsify, or violate that oath.

Having thus impeached their testimony, dwelling upon the matter at considerable length, much to the discomfort of every craftsman present, and repeatedly calling for a public denial of a single point taken, and receiving no response, I proceeded to show how we might know what Masonry was, without the testimony of a single adhering Freemason on the entire globe, bringing forward such men as William Morgan, David Bernard, Charles G. Finney, etc., calling attention to the fact that any one of the craft present would be willing to receive their testimony on any case in law, showing the Christian virtue of breaking an unreasonable and unlawful oath, etc. Again I gave space for any remarks by way of explanation or defense from representatives of the craft present; but no response. I then endeavored to examine the charge of perjury made against these witnesses, showing that so soon as this charge is made there is a virtual acknowledgement of the truth of all their statements concerning the lodge and its work. Moreover, if revealing Masonic secrets be perjury, to charge others with perjury is to perjure one's self, since it is but an outspoken acknowledgement of the truth of their revelations given to the world.

A very profitable hour was spent in this way, with much discomfort to the craft, and advantage to the Wesleyan church at this place. Having shown how we might know Masonry without submitting to the humiliation of initiation, or heeding one word pro or con from adhering Masons, I announced that in four weeks I would tell part of what we know about the initiation. Let no Wesleyan preacher go into hysterics now. I am lecturing on my own charge, and will meet the results.

H. A. Day.

Correspondence.

FROM WESTERN MISSOURI.

Montevallo, Mo., Aug. 11, 1886.

Editor Cynosure:—The battle against secrecy is going on in Barton and Vernon counties in this State. Bro. J. W. McIntosh and D. H. Richie have just closed a holiness meeting at Lamar, in which 335 persons were converted and sanctified. I am glad to say that secrecy got some fatal stabs. The holiness people are straight against secrecy of all kinds down in this part of Missouri. Many have come out of the Masonic and Odd-fellow lodges. I preached a sermon on Masonry last month at Sheldon. The Masons were wonderfully stirred. Some of them said I ought to be tarred and feathered. Praise the Lord! That does not deter me from telling the truth.

The holiness people will have a grand camp-meeting at Lamar beginning August 25, and to last about a month. The tabernacles of Vernon, Jasper, Newton, Lawrence and Barton counties will be at Lamar to accommodate the people. We are all fighting sin in all of its forms, especially sectism and secrecy. The holiness people are making it red hot for Masons and Odd-fellows. Many of them have left the lodges. When they get sanctified out they come. A lot of Odd-fellows attended the lodge at Sheldon, when we were there, to warn and strengthen their brethren against the holiness movement, which is spreading like wildfire over this country. A certain doctor got up in the lodge and said not to have anything to do with this holiness movement, it was a fraud. But one visiting "brother" from Lamar got up, and said he knew the statement of the doctor to be false, for he knew about forty drunkards had been saved from tobacco and the taste of whisky through prayers and faith in Jesus. One old man, seventy-five years old, got sanctified, and he said he had used tobacco fifty-two years, and that the Lord had delivered him from the very desire or taste for the nasty stuff. You know Jesus was "manifested to destroy the works of the devil." (1 John 3:8.) Praise the Lord forever! Two of the Odd-fellows who came to warn their friends against us were law-breakers. One of them had been arrested at my motion for selling whisky, and he plead guilty to the charge. The other had insulted a lady in his town, and was compelled to pay $50 hush money to keep her husband quieted. Ah! the lodge is a cage of every unclean and hateful bird, and the hold of devils.

I am going to Lamar, and I want the readers of your excellent paper to send me all the Cynosure numbers they have read and all the tracts they may have on hand. Please don't fail to send any literature they may have at once to my address, Lamar, Barton county, Mo. I shall try hard to get some subscribers for Cynosure. I shall let you know how the battle goes on at Lamar. We will have the Masonic subject laid open to the bone. Thousands will attend, and many of them seceders. It will be a good time to substantiate what is said against the immaculate brotherhood. We want the prayers of God's people that this mystery of iniquity may be overthrown in this part of Missouri. Down with rum, tobacco, secrecy and sectism, and let God's people unite on one common level against the devil! Amen.

W. W. Allis.

MORE HOPE FOR MEMPHIS.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 12, 1886.

Dear Cynosure:—We are yet in the land among the living, and to God be the glory. This time last year I was in a far different frame of mind; my nervous system was entirely out of tension in consequence of the mobbing of myself and family, which took place on Monday night, August 3, 1885, between the hours of 1 and 2 A. M. How wondrous are the ways of our God, and I shall call on him as long as I live. I look back now and I am astonished to see so many men in Memphis who yet are willing to be branded as the companions of men who have descended so low in the scale of humanity that they willingly attempt to take human life. Men seem to forget that they are weighed by their associations, and I do not fail to remind the oath-bound secretists of Memphis that they are guilty of attempted murder, and have besmirched themselves and their whole membership with my blood. They hate to hear it, and they hate me; while I love them as men, and hate the institution because it opposes the religion of my Saviour, and dupes, demoralizes, and vitiates the characters of men by the taking of horrible oaths.

I remember when I was made or initiated a Mason, on the night of November 2, 1868, in Camden, N. J. I had been reading Morgan's "Freemasonry Exposed," having bought a copy from a second-hand bookstore on the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, Pa., and I really knew more than the master of the lodge. How soon I learned to lie and tell others that it was all sham! I bought a whistle when I bought Masonry, and I have paid well for it. But, glory to God, I shall never cease to cry aloud and spare not. Some of my members say, "Stop now. Let them alone. They are all out of our church." But I tell them they are yet in the world, and in Memphis. I want to rid Memphis and the whole world of the evil.

Eld. Branden, a Baptist preacher who joined the lodge last May, left it at once after the mob, and has been a statwart foe to them ever since. His church in Mississippi (like mine) was full of the lodge, but the last week he made a strong fight, following my example they turned them all out, and now he is free, and the church which God made him to oversee is free also. He wants to take the field.

On last Sunday morning I talked from the International Sunday-school lesson for the day, and in making an exposition of the verse, "And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me," spoke of how Satan mistakes his aim. Always the lifting up of Jesus was to disgrace him and wipe out his cause. So thought and intended the emissaries of Satan, the Jews. So did the Masons in the killing of Morgan, and more recently their work in Memphis is against them. Then God helped me to paint the secretist, the emissaries of Satan, in their proper hue, and as my soul abhors the institution, I had no trouble in showing them how they stood. I declared every man in them as an abettor to the crime of mob and attempted assassination. Men who were not present know who the parties are, their wives know; and as they chose to conceal and hide it they are all alike guilty.

After my sermon one man, a stranger to me, came forward and said, "Sir, I thank you for your sermon. I was just going to join the lodge of Masons. You have saved me. God bless you." We are striving to let the folks know what these things are. My people have no idea, they are in them, but they are perfectly ignorant of their true inwardness or principle. We are fighting it out on this line for truth and right.

R. N. Countee.

CAT HOLES FOR THE LITTLE LODGES.

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 9, 1886.

Editor Cynosure:—I understand we have had in this region lately a traveling Masonic magnate lecturing to the faithful Hiramites. I also understand that part of his teaching is, that Masonry must not be called a religion. Although claiming for it every function of religion, they must deny its being such. Said magnate is said to be a preacher and ought to know.

In looking over a prominent Masonic journal, on the same page with an article claiming all of the above, I found the following verse:

THE CREED OF MASONRY.

"Whoe'er believes in an Almighty Cause,
And strict obedience pays to moral laws,
Of whatsoever faith or clime he be,
He shall receive a brother's love from me.
For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight;
We know he can't be wrong whose life is right,
What tho' we here such different roads pursue,
All upright Masons, all good men and true,
Shall meet together in the lodge above,
Where their good names shall certain passwords prove."

I have shown this verse to numbers of the craft who were very certain of the non-religious character of their pet institution, and were not a little amused at their awkward attempts to get around the last two lines. To-day I met a prominent secretist who also belongs to the Presbyterian church. He saw nothing in the verse but Masonic beauty and consistency. (Evidently had not heard the Rev. magnate.)

On my referring him to John, tenth chapter, where Christ declares himself to be the only door, and also speaks in not very complimentary terms of those who seek to come up some other way, he became quite excited, and told me I did not know what I was talking about. "Such folly!" said he. "Only one way, indeed! Are we not told there are twelve gates?"

This being new to me I send it on for the benefit of your readers. After the Masonic and Odd-fellows' gates they have discovered ten openings for the next most important secret cliques of the thousand. How the remaining fraternities will get in will be, perhaps, by small openings in the gates, such as New England farmers provide in their kitchen doors for cats. If we ever discover the exact status of the small fry we will endeavor to inform the public through your columns.

H. D. Whitcomb.

CREED AND SCRIPTURE.

The allusion to Andover "progressive theology" in the Baccalaureate address of Pres. J. Blanchard, and the quoted remark of the Rev. Dr. Goodwin, of the First Congregational church of this city, that "It spans the gulf of perdition with a rainbow of hope," reminded me of the first number of that "review" which treated of inspiration, as if the old church creeds had and should have as much authority as the Scriptures!

The Andover theology, however, goes to the other extreme, and would make every man his own pope, accepting the Scriptures only as far as his own darkened, foolish heart would pronounce them in harmony with the ever-changing caprice and fancy of "false philosophy" or vain deceit, both of which features are so popular in Chicago to-day.

Nay, nay, the natural powers of man must have remained in darkness if God had not spoken "to the fathers by the prophets and to us by the Son." Let man do his best without this, and he remains condemned by that moral law which to man is the law of sin and death, but never of justification. It is the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus that makes his people free from the law of sin and death, and no other name is given under heaven whereby sinful man must be saved from his sins, the teachings of philosophy in Andoverian universities, or by platonic Swings, or by doubting Thomases, when Masonized, to the contrary notwithstanding.

In the school of the Christian the Great Teacher's greatest scholar is he who most resembles the trustful child, who is never wise above what is written, and ever looks to Jesus as this Lord and Saviour, whose law, for all the members of his body, is the perfected and fulfilled law of God, henceforth to all believers the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and no longer the schoolmaster's law of discipline and condemnation. T. H.

MORMONISM AND MASONRY.

Beaconsfield, Iowa.

A part of Mormonism is a secret sect of swindling fanatics, and can so put on the appearance of benevolence and virtue as to deceive its own members and outsiders as well. In this respect it is the same as Freemasonry. It has been recorded,—not by Anti-masonic authority—that "A part of Mormonism is a secret and irresponsible government operated by a few leaders." The same may be said of every secret society that has a government. There can not be society without law, and law to be founded upon pure principles must aim to benefit all mankind. It has been truthfully stated that the Constitution does not recognize the government of a secret sect which controls by a small and compact circle, working out its secret chamber decrees against liberty; and everything that works against liberty (which is controlled by open law) is blighting to all that is good and pure and holy. This is the chief crime of Mormonism and its fruit is polygamy. To control and overawe the administration of law by its own power is the crime of Masonry and its fruit is every evil work.

Cyrus Smith.

HOLINESS WORK IN MICHIGAN.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 9, 1886.

Editor Cynosure,

Dear Sir:—Being a member of the Michigan State Holiness Association, I am constrained to let you know something of our methods of work, and how the dear Lord is blessing our labors. Bro. Shaw with his co-workers, organized into two bands, are out in the vineyard with tabernacle and small tents, holding meetings for the promotion of scriptural holiness. During the short time they have been in the work God has honored them and given them to see some of the fruits of their labors. Thousands of souls have been born into the Kingdom, and sanctified wholly, and the spiritual light, knowledge, and enlargement God's dear children have received cannot be estimated. Nearly two years ago I came to them filled with prejudice and, I am sorry to say, much sectarian bigotry. But the blessed Spirit of truth and love has removed all that manifestation of the carnal mind, and now I realize a holy, compassionate love going out to all the world, and a peculiar bond of fellowship uniting me to all true Christians, regardless of church relations.

We have just closed a camp-meeting, held in this city, which was attended by holiness people from all evangelical denominations. Many souls were sanctified, sinners converted, and a blessed spirit of love and unity prevailed.

Our "Holiness School," under the superintendency of Lura Mains, is established at Dutton, Mich. It is carried on on the faith line, and is a school where poor students can gain a good, practical education, fitting them for a life of Christian usefulness at a very trifling expense.

May God bless and prosper your work of love, is the prayer of your humble servant,

Lily D. Blakeney.

Bible Lesson.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON IX, August 29, 1886.—Jesus Comforting his Disciples.—John 14: 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me.—John 14: 1.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Faith in Christ the channel of Divine comfort. vs. 1 4. To the unbeliever these words are meaningless; to the heart of faith they speak in the clearest language. Before Christ can be our Comforter we must enter into full sympathy with him; we must understand him; we must feel that we are united to him; he must be as real to us as our dearest friends. We cannot truly "believe in him" till these requirements are met; and this is the great reason why so many Christians in sorrow "mourn as those without hope." They have not that personal living faith in a personal, living Christ which alone can make them capable of receiving his divine comforting. "In my Father's house are many mansions," etc. He comforts by making us partakers with himself in that prescience of final victory which uplifted his own soul in his hour of darkness. He knew he should conquer; that the battalions of sin and Satan would fall back defeated from his open tomb, and this same assurance he breathes into the ear of every tried and troubled saint, "Whither I go ye know, etc." He has made the way a familiar one and not only familiar but safe. No lion or ravenous beast shall go up thereon. Christ, the good shepherd, has met them in mortal combat and laid down his life for the sheep.

2. Christ the manifestation of the Father. vs. 6–11. Christ never loses his sweet, divine patience; never wearies of reiterating the mysteries of the kingdom even to ears so dull of comprehension. Not only was he the way, the truth and the life, but whoever had seen him had seen the Father; whoever had known him had known God also. It is here that the need of faith is absolute, imperative; Christ cannot comfort unless he is received as the God-man. Then it follows that any system of belief which rejects Christ or ignores his divinity is powerless to comfort in the hour of affliction. Granted that Masonry teaches belief in God, yet by rejecting Christ, the only manifestation of him, it shows itself to be what it is—infidelity disguised. As a matter of fact what Mason ever found the teachings of his order a stay and support in the hour of affliction and death? If Masonry ever succeeds in becoming the universal religion, it will be to make of all humanity, as the original Greek reads, "orphans." Rejecting the Son, they reject the Father also.

3. The wideness of the Christian's hope. vs. 12–14. Faith is not only the source of all divine comfort; it is the source of all divine power. As there is nothing impossible with God, so there is a sense in which nothing is impossible to the Christian with this God-power in him. It is in itself a source of immeasurable strength that he knows what a vast reserve force is always waiting for him in the "whatsoevers" of the Gospel; in knowing that all drafts drawn in Christ's name will be honored in full; that there is absolutely no limit to the fullness of the promise but the measure of his own faith.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How is Jesus the way? Heb. 10:20. How does Christ manifest the Father? Col. 1:15; Heb. 1:3.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Ye believe in God, believe also in me." Believing (1) that God is stronger than all enemies can be; (2) that God controls all the forces of the universe; so that (3) he can make all things work together for good; (4) that he loves us even as he loves his only begotten Son (John 17: 23): and therefore will let nothing but good come to his children. Those who thus believe can find comfort in the darkest hour. In the dark hour that had come they were to look up in stronger confidence to this good and mighty God.

"If it were not so, I would have told you." If our separation was to be an eternal one I would have forewarned you; I would not have waited for this last moment to declare it unto you.—Godet.

"I will come again, and receive you unto myself." The coming again of the Lord is not one single act,— as his resurrection, or the descent of the Spirit, or his second personal advent, or the final coming in judgment,—but the combination of all these, the result of which shall be his taking his people to himself to be where he is. This coming is begun (ver. 18) in his resurrection; carried on (ver. 23) in the spiritual life (see also chap. 16:22, etc.), the making them ready for the place prepared; further advanced when each by death is fetched away to be with him (Phil. 1:23); fully completed at his coming in glory, when they shall be forever with him (1 Thess. 4: 17) in the perfected resurrection state.—Alford.

"Jesus saith unto him, I am the way." (1) Because he is the express image of the Father, and therefore when we know Christ, we know the Father. (2) Because he reveals the Father by his words. Only he has seen the Father, and he is declaring the Father, so that we know what he is. (3) He has made atonement for our sins, and opened the way for us to be reconciled to God, and to come to him. (4) He imparts the new divine life, by which alone we are able to see the Father, because we thus become like him.

"But by me." Because there is no other way of seeing the Father but by his express image, nor of fully knowing the Father save by Jesus's revelation of him; no way of coming into loving communion except through the atonement; no way of knowing the Father except through the new life Jesus imparts.

"And have seen him." Because Jesus is God, and expressed to them what God is. The practical lesson for us clearly is that the way to come to a true spiritual knowledge of the Father is by a study of the life and character of Christ, and above all by a sympathetic and personal spiritual acquaintance with him.—Abbott.

"Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me." My true character, and nature and relations to God. There is a possibility that men should be in the closest apparent nearness to Christ and yet have never learned the meaning of the words they constantly hear and utter; and have never truly known the purpose of Christ's life.—Ellicott.

"Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in me?" The relation existing between the Father and the Son was of so close and vital a nature that the Father could not be revealed apart from the Son. The relation was one of mutual indwelling so intimate and continuous that the words and works of the Son must be considered as proceeding also from the Father.—G. W. Clark.

"Shall ye do also; and greater works than these shall he do." This has been fulfilled, not in greater miracles of healing, but (1) in the spiritual works, marvels of conversion, which are greater than any physical miracles. (2) In the wondrous progress of the Gospel among men. More were converted in one day at Pentecost than during all Christ's ministry of three years; and nation after nation has since been converted to God. (3) Christianity has done more for the healing of the sick and giving sight to the blind, and for the physical comfort and relief of men than all the miracles Jesus did when on earth. Under his divine power new skill has come. A new benevolence has arisen, that builds hospitals and asylums, and invents means and methods for the help of men. Thus Jesus is every year doing greater works through his disciples than he did when on earth.

"And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do." For analagous promises of answers to prayer, see Exod. 22:27; Deut. 4:29; Ps. 34:15; 37.4, 5; Jer. 29:12, 13; Joel 2:32; Matt. 7:7,8; Mark 11:24; John 15:16; 16:23; James 1:5; 1 John 3:22; 5:14, 15. A comparison of these passages shows clearly that God does not give an unconditional promise of affirmative answer to every prayer. This would be to place omnipotence at the command of ignorance and selfishness; it would be a curse, not a blessing. The condition here is embodied in the words, in my name: the promise is only to those petitions asked in the name of Jesus Christ. To ask in the name of Christ is not to introduce his name into the petition, as in the familiar phrase, "For Christ's sake"; nor is it merely to approach the Father through the mediatorship of Jesus; this, but much more than this, is included. "In the name" of any one, as used in the New Testament, generally, if not always, signifies representing him, standing in his stead, fulfilling his purposes, manifesting his will, and imbued with and showing forth his life and glory. With John it always has this signification. Here, then, the declaration is that whatsoever we ask, speaking for Christ, seeking his will, representing him and his interests, and his kingdom, not merely our own special and personal interests (Phil. 2:21) will be granted. So in Matt. 6:9 the Lord makes the petition, "Hallowed be thy name," the portico to every prayer, so teaching us that in every prayer the desire for the glory of God should be supreme. And this will carry with it the petition, "Not my will, but thine be done."—Abbott.

OBITUARY.

ABNER C. READ was born Aug. 31st 1808 at Moretown, Vt.; was converted and joined the M. E. church in his twentieth year; was united in marriage October 16th, 1831, with Miss Mary B. Buffum at Uxbridge, Mass., who still survives to mourn her loss. To them were born three daughters and five sons, of the former but one survives, viz., Mrs. J. E. Turner, of near Albion, Ohio. Of the latter four, viz., John W. and James W. of West Salem, O., Edwin A. of Brownhelm, O., and G. M. Read of Albion, O.

Shortly after his marriage he with his young wife removed to Parish, Oswego Co., N. Y., entering upon a life of toil and hardships incident to pioneer life, as they built their cabin three miles further into the dense forest than any other white settler had ventured to do in that locality. Think of the nearest neighbor being three miles distant and only a blazed path by which to find your way out. In 1835 (four years later) he sold his improvements made and removed to Ohio, settling on a farm in the township of Penfield, Lorain county, and subsequently in 1846 removed to Jackson, T. P., Ashland county, where they lived and prospered until the year 1875, when they found themselves alone on the farm, their children having grown up and married and one after another had gone—and they al so left the old homestead on the farm and took up their residence in the village of West Salem, O., where on Wednesday at 11 A. M. July 28th, 1886, the subject of this memoir, after a brief illness of two days, passed sweetly and triumphantly to his reward on high, for his was an eminently Christian character and life. For more than 40 years he was a zealous working member of the M. E. church, much of the time filling the offices of class-leader, steward and trustee.

He was always strongly in favor of reform; voted in turn with the Whig, Free-soil, Republican and American parties; was a constant reader of the Christian Cynosure from the first issue of that valuable paper. He was conscientiously opposed to secret societies, and was so strongly impressed with the enormity of that evil that seemed to him was ruling and ruining the M. E. church (the one of his choice) to a great extent, and feeling that he could not conscientiously support ministers who upon the Sabbath entered the sacred desk and perhaps during the week were practicing the secret rites of a Christ-rejecting institution, he, after much prayer and many tears, concluded to withdraw his membership from the M. E. church, with a hope of finding a home in some branch of the church free from secret orders, and accordingly withdrew with his wife, and after struggling along a few years and no Christian organization being formed within their reach strictly excluding the secret orders, they united with the Evangelical church of which he remained a consistent member until death. When one clasped his hand and looked into his cheerful face they saw the unmistakable expression of Christian love and kindness. We mourn, all of us mourn, but it is because of our loss and not his; while from our grief-stricken hearts we are led to exclaim—

Life's labor done as sinks the day,
Light from its load the spirit flies,
While heaven and earth combine to say,
How blest the righteous when he dies!

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

Five Dollar

LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.
PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.
NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.
1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.
1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.
1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A. Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Familics are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming ycar. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;
OR
THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

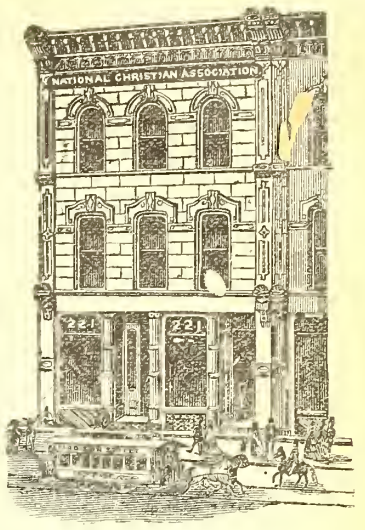
Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.



OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. J A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres. Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec., John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO THURSDAY, AUGUST 19. 1886

THE SOUTHERN FUND FOR THE CYNOSURE.—Several liberal responses to the appeal of last week encourage the belief that this fund will be made up, but the friends must not forget that it should be done quickly. We cannot conceive that any friend of the reform would hesitate for a moment to contribute, if the importance, the value, and the necessity of this part of the work were fully realized. Read in this number the excellent letters from different parts of the South, and do with love and faith what your ability will allow. A paper in the home of some colored pastor a year may save a church for Christ.

A PRESIDENT of one of our most useful colleges writes that he has never joined any secret society, and is heartily opposed to the whole lodge system. He adds, however, that he does not approve of the methods of those who oppose them, and has no advice to give in reference to what ought to be done. We are not strenuous about methods, so only they are Christian, but we are anxious that all men in positions of influence and especially all educators of youth should, at least, do something to remove the abomination that maketh desolate. The truth is, that the men who criticise our methods have no others to practice or suggest. It is easy to criticise. It would be wiser to illustrate.

OUR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES begin in a short time their year for 1886–87, and in ten thousand homes the days of preparation will soon begin. Careful parents who are anxious for the future of their sons and daughters that their culture be of that liberal, just, and Christian character which shall be best adapted to fit them for the most useful life. No institution can construct mental capacity, that is already given of God, but there is the widest difference in our colleges and seminaries in the method of training the mind for the greatest usefulness among men, so that it shall amount to the very utmost for the good of men. Parents who desire this for their children should by all means examine the catalogues of the institutions mentioned in the Cynosure, not only in college training but in the preparation for the Gospel ministry also, there is an important choice. Culture is too often the end; the spiritual grace and preparation which only can make a preacher of the Word a power for God and the church, is neglected. In how many of our theological schools is that baptism of the Holy Spirit, for which Finney used so eloquently to plead, and for which the first preachers waited in Jerusalem,—in how many is that induement considered a requisite for the Gospel work?

THE GRAND ARMY.—"Last Sabbath morning the Grand Army of the Republic left Chicago on their excursion for California. Toward evening they thundered through Monmouth in a train of fourteen heavy loaded cars, in a cloud of dust, and with John A. Logan on board, defying the laws of both God and man. I say the church which will allow the members of such a Sabbath-breaking, God-defying organization as the G. A. R. in its communion, ought to be shaken up, until such fellows are shaken out. Lord speed the day."

In sending the above to the Crank of College Springs, Iowa, Rev. M. A. Gault derives his conclusion from the fact that the constitution of the G. A. R. contains no clause that forbids such violation of God's law, nor could it; because the society being composed in great part of ungodly men, it could not be expected that they would legislate against themselves. Believers in the Grand Army are thus "unequally yoked with unbelievers," and this violation of a plain scripture cannot safely be allowed in any church.

A LATE DISPATCH to the Inter Ocean has the following:

One of the most remarkable religious manias of which there is any record has broken out in a little circle in Cincinnati. A party of thirty or forty people, most of them prominent and above the average in intelligence, believe that Mrs. John B. Martin of Walnut Hills, is Christ manifest in the flesh, and that her sister, Mrs. John F. Brook, is the Holy Ghost. The followers of these two women meet at Mrs. Brook's house, and worship them both. Mrs. Martin has exerted some strange and wonderful influence that has put them completely in her power, and they are fanatics on the subject. One of the followers of this woman Christ is named Jerome. He was a bookkeeper there for the Cincinnati agency of D. Appleton & Co, the New York publishers He gave up his position of $1,800 a year to serve the female Saviour of mankind. To an Enquirer reporter who saw him to-day he said in an earnest and eloquent conversation: "I have seen God face to face in the last half hour." A young man named Cook, who works in the auditor's office of the Adams Express Company, has also been captured. He resigned his position and has attached himself to the new sect. They believe that all churches are frauds, and the preachers are a set of fools."

An exactly similar delusion still exists and spread from Byron, Ill. A Mrs. Beekman was deified and worshiped as Christ. She died, and her demoniac followers kept her corpse till it became rotten, in the full belief that she was not to die. "Many shall come in my name saying I am Christ and shall deceive many." Matt. 24: 5.

MR. CARPENTER'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Deacon Philo Carpenter, at the First Congregational church on Sabbath afternoon at 2 o'clock, was largely attended. The old citizens were especially noticeable. The floral decorations were beautiful and appropriate. The pastor, Dr. Goodwin, was unavoidably absent in Colorado, but the services were conducted by Prof. F. W. Fisk of the Theological Seminary, assisted by Dr. Joseph E. Roy, and Dr. Flavel Bascom. Dr. Roy made the opening prayer, Dr. Bascom read Scripture selections, Prof. Fisk gave a most interesting discourse, describing the character of the deceased. He gave notice that Dr. Goodwin would give a memorial address on his return. A letter was read from the officers of the First Presbyterian church, which Deacon Carpenter helped to organize, and a delegation from that church was present. Prof. Fisk's was an able presentation of the leading traits of character of the deceased, and did not omit to mention that he was the untiring opponent of secret societies.

Many took a last look of the face of the departed, and there was a large procession to Graceland Cemetery. Perhaps no citizen of Chicago was ever more respected for his perfect integrity and practical benevolence.

THE CUTTING CASE.

A. K. Cutting is for the moment notorious as the agent of a serious complication of affairs between our Government and Mexico. A man of roving life, able, fearless and independent, he has made a varying success as a journalist, until he was arrested in June in Paso del Norte, Mexico, across the river Rio Grande from El Paso, in the extreme west of Texas.

The cause was a published attack on a Mexican editor. He was forced by the Mexican court to retract the libel and was set at liberty. He immediately crossed to El Paso and printed in the Herald of that town a card reiterating the attack on the Mexican. On returning to Mexican soil he was arrested again for libel and contempt of court, for an offense committed in Texas. By advice of the U. S. Consul (Brigham) he refused bail, and to acknowledge the right of the Mexican court to hold him. Our State Department demanded his release which was refused, and the House, just before the adjournment of Congress, passed strong resolutions on the case. The Governor of Texas and the State behind him are ready for war, and the Mexicans across the river reciprocate the hostility. Cutting's trial took place August 5, and he was sentenced to a year's imprisonment and to pay a fine of $600. It is folly to talk of war for such a matter; but our Government has gone too far in the effort to rescue an American from an unjust foreign prosecution to recede. An amicable adjustment of the difficulty will doubtless be made.

The very general denunciation of Cutting by the American press is the most remarkable feature of the case, but it is a problem easily solved. Cutting is opposed to all the lodges, and especially the printers' union. Nearly all the daily papers are under the heel of this order. This is their revenge. Brave lodges, to strike a man who is down!

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR AND THE POPE.

Cardinal Taschereau, the new Canadian prelate, who lately had a controversy with the Freemasons of the provinces, is riding down the other lodges that interfere with the spiritual domination of the Catholic church. Last week he issued a circular to his bishops informing them that he had submitted to Rome the objections to the decision of the Pope in September, 1884, condemning the Knights of Labor. A reply has been received from Cardinal Simeoni reaffirming the judgment of two years ago absolutely, and the bishops are directed to proceed to cast the order out of their churches.

This is in Canada. But the prelates of the States profess to be in profound ignorance of any such decision or the reason for it. Archbishop Heiss, of Milwaukee, thinks it applies to Canada alone, because the Canadians are so exeitable. The order among them might be dangerous and produce an explosion. The hierarchy of Chicago know nothing of the decision and seem inclined to ignore it. Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, has spoken more at length on the matter, revealing the principle of opposition to the secret system by the Romish church. He says: "Whether or not secret pledges are taken by the Knights here is a question on which more light should be thrown by their leaders. Vicar General Conway, of Chicago, who examined the constitution of the body carefully, assures me that it bears no resemblance to that of the Freemasons, Odd-fellows, and other organizations which the church has always antagonized. A distinction must be made, too, as to the nature of the secret pledges. We hold that if a man joins a society swearing never to reveal any of its workings, no matter how criminal, and to obey the dictates of its officers blindly, he surrenders his personal liberty, becomes a slave to his fellow-man, and cannot partake of the sacraments of the church. On the other hand, if a man joins an organization, swearing to keep secret its workings, with the proviso that nothing therein shall be contrary to the laws of the land, to his conscience and religious tenets, we hold that his action is perfectly justifiable. The whole question as to the church's attitude toward the Knights of Labor depends on which of these oaths the members take. If the latter are in accordance with Mr. Powderly's statements, then the church says to the Knights of Labor: 'God speed you.' If, however, the absolute, blind pledge is taken, no matter how laudable the objects of the society are, the church can never countenance it, and will call on her children to withdraw under the pain of excommunication. So everything depends on the proviso."

The difficulty of managing this ease with us is easily seen, for Powderly is a Catholic and thousands of Catholics are in the order. But what a happy condition must ultimately result from the prohibiton of an order in Canada and tolerating it across the line may be readily conjectured.

—The interesting account of the Peoples' Tabernacle in Cleveland, in the department of Religious News, will be read with greater zest when it is known that both Mr. Doan, the founder of so noble a work, and Mr. Johnson, the pastor, are both in sympathy with the movement against the lodge.

—Elder Browne reported from Baraboo, last Thursday, that the meetings in Fairfield church early in the week were succesful. On that day he was purposing to go northward. Friends in Wisconsin, note carefully his appointments and keep adding to the list, so it shall never grow less.

—The Iowa friends are making noble efforts for the work in their State for the ensuing year. If Bro. Hawley keeps on as well as he has begun, the State meeting at Birmingham will have to make a jubilee of one sitting. Let all the brethren be encouraged and resolve on better and greater results then ever next year.

—Rev. C. F. Hawley, State Lecturer for the Iowa Christian Association, says the Birmingham Free Press, dropped into Birmingham suddenly last Monday to make arrangements for State work, and to prepare for the annual meeting. His stay was short. On Tuesday morning a few friends of the anti-secret movement had a conference at the house of Dr. J.N. Norris.

—Bro. Countee, of Memphis, still holds his ground, and more and more the intelligent and truly pious colored people are joining themselves to him, and giving up the lodge as a system where only evil lurks continually. He shows in a late number of the Living Way how the railway companies are able to control the lodges in their interest. They arrange with the leaders to get up an excursion or picnic. The lodges are ordered out and respond by the thousand, filling the railway treasuries. Such an exeursion, numbering 7,000, spent on a careful estimate $54,650 in one day, and this by poor people who had no need of such kind of recreation.

—Mrs. I. R. B. Arnold, who has for some time accompanied her husband in his illustrated lecture touring, writes to the Wesleyan Methodist of their visit at Baldwin City, Nebraska, where is located a Methodist school, Baker Univeristy. She says of this institution: "The college has five different literary societies, which seem to be 'each against his fellow.' The initiation, the vow of secrecy concerning the business of the society, with its money penalty attached to each violation, all look like the work of some one who is anxious to pave the way for secret oath-bound societies."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. B. A. Imes, pastor of the Congregational church in Memphis, is visiting in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

—John G. Mattoon, of Ohio, a beloved brother in our reform, died a few days since from the effect of a fall. He was for some years a frequent contributor to the Cynosure.

—Rev. H.H.Hinman returned to Chicago last Friday morning after visiting Princeton, Sheffield, Tonica, Wenona, Streator and Atkinson in behalf of the State meeting at Princeton. On Monday he started for Washington city.

—Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Monmouth, Ill., is spending a brief vacation in Chicago and vicinity, making some character studies on our busy streets. He will preach two or three times during his visit. He hopes to attend the State Convention at Princeton, and be ready for every call of duty.

—Rev. C. W. Hiatt, pastor of the High Street church, Columbus, Ohio, was united in marriage last week to Miss Florence E. Johnson of Wheaton. The Cynosure's warmest congratulations to both bride and groom. Both are graduates of Wheaton College, one in 1880, the other in 1885. Miss Johnson's graduation essay was published in the Union Signal and the Cynosure. With Bro. Hiatt's seminary life at Oberlin and his subsequent success in pastoral work in Gustavus and Columbus, Ohio, our readers are familiar. May their united efforts for Christ and his kingdom be doubly blessed.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

Prof. Ed. F. Reid has decided to decline the presidency of Muskingum College and retain his connection with Monmouth College.

New York City has over thirty schools for the Chinese. Mr. Huie Kin, formerly under the care of Dr. Ells at Lane Seminary, is now permanently engaged as a missionary among his countrymen there. The prospect is that a church exclusively for Chinamen will be formed soon.

Professor Henry Garst, of Otterbein University, Ohio, has been elected president of that institution. He had been for years professor of Latin in the college. As he is understood to be opposed to the principles of the United Brethren in their separation from secret societies, this election turns over the leading college of the church to the lodge interest.

The whole number of teachers in the public schools of the States and Territories is 307,804. Of these, 198,000 or nearly two-thirds, are women. In the schools classed as secondary, ranking as academies, there are 3,312 male, and 4,011 female teachers. In the 286 female colleges, there are 617 male and 1,963 female teachers. The special aptitude of women for teaching is urged as a strong argument in favor of higher education for them.

Professor Peabody and the preachers of Harvard University announce that next term they will hold daily service of prayer in the college chapel, and an evening service, with preaching on Sundays throughout the year. In a circular they say: "We have recommended to the corporation that attendance at all such exercises be made voluntary, and at our recommendation the change from compulsory to voluntary attendance has been made."

Pres. L. N. Stratton, of Wheaton Theological Seminary, has been spending some time among the Wesleyan connection of churches collecting funds for the theological school of which he is the head. The results sum up $500 in cash and pledges, all to be paid by January next; a will of $800, and a vote of the Wesleyan Educational Board of Trustees to favor the erection in Wheaton of a dormitory of "flats" for the home of young men who come to Wheaton to study theology. An extensive correspondence reveals the purpose of an increased number of promised attendants at the opening of the ensuing fall term, October 5. Tuition is free. Board is cheap. A capable board of instructors, besides free access to all college classes, promise much to learners. Correspondence is invited.

The celebration of the five-hundreth anniversary of the University of Heidelberg began officially on August 3d. The German Crown Prince was in attendance, and the ceremonies were opened by the Grand Duke of Baden, who is Rector Magnificentissimus of the University. The Grand Duke presented the anniversary medal and a new official seal and chain of office of gold. The city was filled with strangers, bent on making as much of the holiday as possible. Torchlight processions took place every night, and the ancient castle was illuminated. The grand procession took place on August 6th, and was a great success from an artistic point of view. On the morning of August 5th, the ceremony of conferring honorary degrees began. The degrees bestowed upon Americans were as follows: that of Professor of Arts, on Alexander Graham Bell, of Washington; that of Doctor of Philosophy, on Prof. Simon Newcomb, of Washington; Prof. John W. Powell, of Washington; Charles Marsh, of New Haven, and Edward D. Cope, of Philadelphia.

The fall term at Wheaton opens September 7th next. Several changes have been made necessary in the faculty from the resignation of Prof. O. F. Lumry and the retirement of the two lady teachers, Miss A. J. Carothers and Miss F. H. Hiatt to the more private duties of home life, one as Mrs. Pres. C. A. Blanchard, the other as Mrs. Rev. Erastus H. Scott. The college has secured for the chair of ancient languages, Prof. C. M. Lowe, an Oberlin graduate, a teacher of experience, and who comes to Wheaton from Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio, where he has been professor of Latin for three years. Miss Gertrude Hulbert, a graduate of Smith College, is expected as lady principal. Her father was for a time president of Middlebury College,and she has had experience as a teacher. She is a devoted Christian lady, and will be a guide, friend, and helper to the young ladies under her. Before her acceptance of the position at Wheaton, she was offered a similar place in the college at Beirut, Syria. She wished to choose the position that presented most opportunities for usefulness as a Christian teacher, and decided in favor of Wheaton. Her assistant will be Miss Alma Blount, daughter of Dr. Blount, of Byron, Ill., a graduate of Wheaton in June last, and much esteemed in the institution for excellent scholarship and Christian character.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

The college motto is "Pro Christo et patria." Adherence to this motto causes the institution to be a friend of the principles advocated by the National Christian Association, and of every other reform and principle in church and state. No surprise is excited upon finding the president of the college to be at the present time presiding officer of the Association. So practically is the principle of anti-secrecy carried out in this school that all the professors, members of the board of trustees, and nearly all the students, are opposed, upon principle, to secret societies. So far as known, there are no secret fraternities in the college, and its authorities have never, within the knowledge of the writer, had a case of discipline on account of them, nor been troubled by their maneuvres.

This much to show the effect of proper training on the subject. Many of those connected with the college have been readers of the Christian Cynosure for years, and have recognized in it a worthy and ably conducted paper. Some have stood with the N. C. A. in its good fight since its origin. There has been not only negative but positive opposition. In the opinion of the writer, the Association can receive much more aid from this institution in its opposition to secret societies, if the Association will only call for it.

The institution is favorably and peculiarly situated in a manufacturing district of which Pittsburgh is the center, where exist perfect hornet's nests of secret orders, trades unions for laboring men, etc.; where even the churches pledged to the reform grow careless, where some churches are run (into the ground) by secrecy.

While National Reform is the special work of the institution, yet oppositio n to secret societies is recognized as one of its branches, and can be, and is, undertaken in connection with the general work. It is the desire of the college to be recognized co-ordinately with other institutions in the work of the N. C. A. It wishes to encourage the open manliness and independence that will heartily despise secrecy in all its forms, and to aid in extending that education which teaches that taken altogether, secret societies are not profitable. Yours truly,

EDMOND P. THOMPSON.

—The Norwegian missions, both in Zululand and Madagascar, have suffered from the disturbances with which those countries have been afflicted. The missions in Natal include nine central stations. The life of these stations has been preserved through all difficulties, and the latest reports speak of work going on at them, with a few faithful converts, and the missionaries hopeful and trusting. The old missionary ship "Elieser" has been replaced by a three-masted vessel, the "Paulus," which reached Durban safely in the fall of last year.

PRESS COMMENT.

See here! We want it understood that we're in for prohibition, all there is of us. But we're not in for Good Templarism nor any other ism that is not in perfect harmony with Him who "ever spake openly." Just bear this in mind.—Free Methodist.

The Knights of Pythias try to teach the lesson of bravery by ordering a man to jump upon sharp spikes. If one should jump upon real iron spikes with his bare feet, he would be a fool; if he knows the spikes are rubber, he merely shows what a simpleton he is; if he imagines he is showing the least signs of bravery, it is plain that his head is the softest part of him.—Birmingham Free Press.

A new secret order has just been invented, professedly for temperance, called "Ineffable Temple of Honor." Its obligations are said to be "as binding as the Masonic." This is another spawn of Freemasonry. The assumption of the title is next to, if not quite profane. To invent a secret clan and then assume that it is "ineffable" is, however, on a par with the general egotism of secretism. "Great is Diana" of these secret heathenisms. Beware of secret societies, new or old.—Wesleyan Methodist.

The order known as the "Nobles of the Mystic Shrine," is being organized in the principal cities of the United States. Only 32-degree Masons are eligible. In Arabia and Hindoostan the home of the order, only members of the highest caste are eligible, and they must believe in the Mohammedan Koran. The Globe Democrat in giving a friendly notice of the order, says that the organization in America will "in a way blend the two leading religious organizations of the world." Yet with these facts thundering in their ears, professed Christians still maintain that secrecy is not a foe to Christianity. The religion of Christ blends with none, nor can any professor retain Christ in his heart and blend any system of the world with his worship.—Western Crank.

The tyranny of strikers and Knights of Labor becomes more and more odious, as its details are known. A master plumber is forbidden to employ his own sons as apprentices; a widow who keeps a little shop is threatened with the loss of patronage unless she stops her subscription to a newspaper that has offended some union printers; five peaceable workmen, minding their own business, are set upon and beaten by members of the Empire Protective Association because they will not rot in idleness at the demand of its officials. Let us have done with all nonsense about the rights of labor, and with milk and water compliments to demagogues, who are posing as philanthropists. It is time to call them by their right names, and to treat them as conspirators against liberty, and as law breakers and plunderers.—N. Y. Sun.

Admitting the fundamental proposition on which the Socialist, the Communist, the Nihilist, and the disciple of Powderly unite and agree,—the proposition that capital is an oppressor of labor,—the Socialist is logically right; and the dupe of Powderly, that bamboozles himself with the notion that he is not a Socialist, is logically wrong. Labor and capital are things that never have existed apart from each other, and how they could exist apart from each other it is not possible to imagine. They are indissoluble. The laborer of average intelligence, as well as the capitalist, ought to be able to discern this simple but important truth in a mere definition of what each of the inseperable associates is. What is labor? It is the exercise of a person's capability of production without any extraneous aid to his own faculties. What is capital? It is commodity or combination of commodities actually employed to increase a person's capability of production by the profit derived from such employment. Without capital, labor can exist only in the natural capability of each individual to produce something by the exercise of his own muscles or brains; and without labor, capital cannot exist at all. Modern society rests on the recognition of their mutual dependence, and the supreme object of its organization is the protection of their just freedom in that relation. If either is making war against the other, its motive is to change or destroy that relation, and therefore to overturn the social edifice. If there is a war against capital, it is a war against society that secures the rights of capital. It is a war that can no more be prosecuted by the method of ballot-boxing than the career of a comet can be arrested by the effect of a papal decree against it. The social Nihilist is in the right of it. The only possible weapons of victory in a war for the subjugation of capital are those that will overturn all existing governments, all existing laws, destroy the social organism itself, and remit the world to primitive barbarism.—Chicago Times.

The Home.

AFTER HARVEST.

A song for the reaper, a song for the wain,
With its mountainous heaps of the sweet-smelling grain;
A song in the heart from the lips springing high,
As the jubilant flight of the lark to the sky.
A song for the fields, they may rest from their labor;
A song for good-will binding kinsman and neighbor;
Ye people, strike boldly a resonant chord,
And crown the glad summer with praise to the Lord.

From the nations afar float dull echoes of strife,
And dark plains are dyed with the crimson of life;
From seaboard and hill comes the ring of debate,
Fierce din of opinion waged early and late;
There is crashing of fortunes in market and town
When, a touch, and the houses of cards tumble down.
But heeding no clamor, perturbed by no care,
The corn lifts its gonfalons brave in the air,
And the dizzy bee whirls in an ecstacy over
A white world of fragrance in buckwheat and clover.

O silent is Nature and tranquil and sweet,
As patient she broods o'er the ripening wheat.
She kisses the flower, she plays with the leaf.
But deeper her pride in the cluster and sheaf.
When her four winds have blown, and their mystical passes
Have winnowed the furrow and fluttered the grasses,
When weary but happy she sits in the sun,
A mother whose work for the moment is done.

A song after harvest, a song and a cheer,
For the bounty whose benisons guerdon the year;
A song after harvest, the ages go by,
And the wealth of the earth is the gift of the sky;
And what though to-day there be trouble and sorrow,
There is weeping at night but joy waketh to-morrow;
Ye people, strike grandly the conquering chord,
And crown the glad summer with praise to the Lord.

—M. E. Sangster in S. S. Times.

NECESSITY FOR AN ADJUSTMENT BETWEEN SOCIAL AND BUSINESS LIFE.

One characteristic of the nineteenth century is its unwise ambition in the eager hastening to a chosen goal. Is this goal desirable? Are the means used for its attainment best suited to promote the physical, moral and mental good of the people? Can there be found a better adjustment between the social and business life of this age? These are important questions, and merit careful consideration from men and women willing to devote some portion of their thought and labor for the public good. Americans, as a people, are the hardest workers on earth. They should work less and play more. They give to rest and recreation the minimum of time, and count those moments lost which are not given to the actual furtherance of a chosen purpose.

The very children in our public schools are eager aspirants for fortunes which to them consist of marks. They strain forward towards the prized 100, and often spend the moments set apart for recreation in the rapid reviewing of lessons for the coming examination. The hot heads and cold hands tell us at what expense of nerve force their goal is reached. Nor is this excess of study confined to our public schools. Our academies and costly establishments for the cultivation of what are called the highest branches, suffer from the same evils. They cram our young men and maidens with Latin, Greek, French, German, and mathematics, and rob them of their natural appetite for bread and butter, fresh air and exercise. Witness the crowds of young men graduated yearly, knowing everything but how to earn an honest living; and the multitudes of invalid young women, educated to be unable to bear with ease and happiness the necessary and natural strain and burden of woman's life. I have the record of a girl's boarding school in which this system of overwork without recreation is persistently pursued. To lessons and music ten hours of the tweaty-four are given, and in order to prevent foolish conversation an instruction book is read at dinner, and the recreation which is generally prescribed consists of a walk of half an hour in the morning and twenty minutes in the garden in the afternoon. As if this were not quite enough to wreck a nervous system, written examinations occur once a month, and all the examinations of a class are required on one and the same day. If each department had its own separate day for examinations a child might possibly get through it satisfactorily, but, as a wise schoolmaster once said, "the child does the first department examination very well, the second tolerably, and the next becomes muddled and stupid." I have a neighbor whose zeal for the culture of her children's minds so far outruns discretion that the little people spend mornings in school, afternoons robbed of two hours for practice, and a French professor is served at tea every night but Sunday. Her children are frail, she can't tell why. She cannot spare time for the music that was the joy of her girlhood; the magazines, if any are taken, lie with leaves uncut, because she is cumbered with much sewing. She finds herself to busy to help form a club. Her one recreation is the church sewing society, where women who are living in grooves similar to her own, meet to do a bit of charity work and discuss absent members. What wonder then that this childhood, without a due amount of recreation, should produce invalid young women, who after one or two years in society, come under the doctor's care? They complain of physical debility, anemia, dyspepsia, loss of sleep and loss of appetite. The nervous system and mental faculties are also affected; they are irritable, depressed, melancholic; partially lose their memories, have violent headaches, and cannot settle down to work, and because childhood or girlhood was robbed of its playhours.

All work, notably brain work, is facilitated when at special seasons, we do nothing, giving head and hands both holiday. This is specially true of brain work of young children whose museles must keep pace with their minds. And what shall I say of the housewife, full of multitudinous cares, who forgets that her strength is not equal to perform the work of three women; who tries to do all her own sewing, baking and preserving; who devotes evenings, spent by her husband in the clubs, to darning of stockings, and the patching of pants? The goal of this good woman is to help her husband get rich. She succeeds maybe; breaks down in the effort, goes to the insane asylum or hastens to her reward in the next world, and leaves wife number two to enter soon into the enjoyments of the fruits of her labors and economies. With the rapid increase of wealth, especially in our large cities, we find a rapidly increasing number of what are called "society women." These women have the wealth that should give leisnre for education and are called "social leaders," not becanse they excel other women in beauty, virtne, worth or ability, but from superiority of riches. Do these improve that leisure, and so present a perfect intellectnal and physical development? Verily, no. Their days and nights are filled with toil, shopping, visiting, attending board meetings of fashionable charities occupy the long days. Accepting too many invitations for the evening, the society woman passes rapidly from house to house, gaining no useful recreation, no real rest, because oppressed by a sense of her duty to society, which gives no time for the enjoyment of rational conversation or even the leisurely sipping of a cup of tea. The fashionable physician counts these martyrs to society among his best patients; and the children of such mothers inherit grave nervous weakness. The physical endurance of the society woman is a marvel to me. Surely there shonld be some plan devised to save her from the consequences of her useless overwork.

Why should there be so many broken down men and women; why the multiplicity of sanitariums and rest cures; why such a large number of insane people? I make answer, and feel sure physicians generally will agree with me, 'tis because men and women take too little recreation. There is not enough leisure time in our lives; business obtrudes upon our social life. The best work can be got from a machine when it is taken care of. The steam engine, with the just amount of fuel and care, runs for years without strain or injury, accomplishing its regular task with safety and precision. With a trifle too much steam, the boiler bnrsts and the whole machine becomes in a moment a useless wreck. The best work is done by men and women who take care of themselves.—Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, in Woman's Journal.

THE DUNCE OF THE FAMILY.

It was commencement day at X Female College. The sun shone warmly into the hall, which was filled with a brilliant assemblage of visitors. The girl graduates were ranged on the dais. The other students, numbering three hundred, were grouped around them. As the Principal took his place to read the standing of the students for the past year, there was an eager stir in the audience.

"I have little fear of my girls," said Mrs. Waring, a complacent smile on her thin lips. Mrs. Waring was a sharp-featured woman in a shabby silk dress. She had published one or two long poems, which no one read. But on the strength of them she gave herself to literature and lumbago for the rest of her life. She was talking now to a stout, jolly-looking, bearded man, whom she called Cousin George.

"I intend each of my elder daughters to study a profession. They must be independent. Their father can make no provision for them—as you see," nodding significantly towards a dark, moody man who sat near, his fine face flushed from drinking. "They must find their own careers, as men do. And they can do it!"

"But you have three daughters, Maria."

"I have. But Catharine, the youngest, is—I will be candid about it—she is a dunce. She does not inherit even her father's intellect. He had a certain ability once. He is altered since you went to California."

"Yes, greatly. He was a noble fellow when I knew him."

"While you were amassing a fortune, he was going down—down. He began by hating his home, and then came drink."

"I am afraid he hears you," warningly.

"Serve him right if he did! There, listen! That's my Maria."

"Miss Maria Waring, one hundred being the highest mark attainable, has received ninety-nine."

A round of applause followed.

"What does she study?" whispered Cousin George.

"Greek, Latin, and the higher mathematics," said the proud mother. "Jane has three studies, also. But her specialty is science."

"Miss Jane Waring. One hundred. Miss Waring is also gold medallist for the year."

Another outbreak of applause.

The list of other pupils followed, the rank going lower and lower, Cousin George Justus listening, with twinkling eyes, for the name of the poor dunce of the family. Fifty, forty, twenty, ten, five. At last, "Two, Miss Catharine Waring."

Her mother's thin lips shut like a steel trap; her father nodded stupidly, for he was bored with the whole affair. When the exercises were over, Mrs. Waring found her disgraced daughter and dragged her up before Mr. Justus.

She was a plump little girl of seventeen, with a turned-up nose and a round, ngly face, swollen with much crying.

"It is a mere waste of money to keep her here," said Mrs. Waring, severely. "The Facnlty inform me that she was not indolent, that she exerted herself conscientiously. The bald fact is that she is good for nothing. She is a"——

"Nothing of the kind!" interrupted George compasionately. "Nothing of the kind! I will wager you a diamond ring that my little cousin will yet prove herself good for something."

"You can return home with your father this afternoon, Catharine," said Mrs. Waring. "I will wait during the week for the concluding exercises. "Jane and Maria," turning to Mr. Justus, "will remain here during the vacation, in order to take a private course in geology."

Catharine cried all the way home, and most of the night after she reached home. She had been for four years at school, making an honest, vain effort to conquer quadratics and other like mysteries. Besides, there was little at home to soothe the ache of disappointment in her heart.

In these years of absence, while her mother had been growing into a complaining invalid, and her father into a drunkard, the house had become bare, almost shabby and miserable. Carpets were becoming worn, almost ragged, windows clouded with dust, blotches of hair-filling were bnrsting from some of the chairs and sofas. The day after her arrival Catharine made a tour of inspection. Her eyes, though still swollen, were keen.

Then the servant was startled from her long dream of indifference and idleness to find herself actually at work. Two helpers were bronght in and paid from Catharine's little store of pin-money, that came from a small property of her own. Catharine herself was behind them. They could no more lag or dawdle than could a train of cars with an engine at their back. Dust flew out of the house; windows shone; carpets were mended; curtains washed and prettily draped; pictures came out of their long obscurity of cobwebs and smiled down from the wall; vigorous, booming plants filled the windows.

When Mr. Waring came home, at the end of the second day, he found a sparkling fire in the grate; the table drawn close to the hearth; a dainty meal ready, and a saucy little girl, with curly hair, laughing eyes and a tip-tilted nose, waiting for him at the door with a kiss.

"Why—why, Cathy, my dear!" he muttered. "It is Cathy? Really, this is pleasant!" looking about him. "Something as it was when we were first married. I'll go up and change my coat, my dear." It was long since he had changed his coat for dinner.

Cathy watched him moving slowly up the stairs with a great gulp in her throat. But she was smiling bravely when he came down, and offered her his arm to lead her to the table. Something of the old instincts and habits of the days when he was a gentleman among gentlemen, awoke in him as he sat facing his daughter.

He had not lost his power of appreciation, and he saw that she was bright, sincere and gentle. He grew more watchful and more courteous and tender. It was a gay meal, however. John Waring had been a famous conversationalist and a wit; and Cathy, if she were a dunce, had that fine tact which made her the best of listeners.

As the week of Mrs. Waring's absence passed, her husband discovered that his little girl had learned one or two other things well. She was a dexterous seamstress. His clothes were put into perfect order. The girls had had a cooking club, and Cathy showed a positive genius for compounding dainty, appetizing dinners day after day.

"Bring some of your friends home, and I will give you a game supper," she said.

The friends came. The supper was delicious. The old fellows all fell in love with the cheerful little girl who listened to their stories, and untiringly sang them old ballards and ditties in a voice which, if unskilled, was as sweet as a bird's and full of pathos. They went home in high good-humor and —sober.

Mrs. Waring came home at last, so ill that she was carried to bed. Instead of Martha's sour visage, Cathy's rosy face beamed down on her. Something in the changed appearance of the room startled her.

"So you've been playing house maid?" she said. But she soon grew too ill even to grumble. When after a month's tedious suffering she recovered, her physician said: "You owe your life to the care of your daughter as much as to me. Miss Cathy was born to be a nurse."

"She was unfortunately not born for anything better," said the mother. "My ambition has been terbly thwarted in the girl, doctor. She is no scholar."

"It is something, after all, to be a woman," said the doctor, dryly.

But when the disease returned and Mrs. Waring rapidly sank under it, it was to Cathy she turned, and on Cathy's breast she leaned while dying. Cousin George was there, strong, quick, and kind. He seemed to know by intuition all the plans that Cathy wished to carry out in her little world, and silently helped her in them.

In the year that followed Jane and Maria began their careers; one as professor of Greek the other as a student of medicine. They did not come home again.

"What with the habits of their unfortnate father, and poor stupid Cathy," they said, "the atmosphere of home was stifling. All mental life died in it."

But home and poor stupid Cathy grew every day dearer to Mr. Waring. His old tastes and habits, his finer nature, revived under the sunshine of his daily life. He sought out old friends whom he had avoided for years, and brought them to the house to present to his daughter. He struggled desperately all that winter to break loose from the yoke he had carried so long.

His property had been largely spent, some of it lost in poor investments, and his income had become quite small. Catharine discharged the two servants, and took the whole management of the house. Yet, with the sharpest economy, she found herself not able to keep it up.

"If I were not such a dunce!" she said to herself. She could not teach. She was not a musician nor an artist. She could not write anything but letters, and she was very anxious about the grammar and spelling of them. She knew nothing about fancy work or art embroidery. But she was an admirable seamstress. She took in some plain sewing that winter, and worked at night, and so paid the bills.

One evening in May Mr. Waring came home late. He was pale and his eyes shone with repressed excitement. But Cathy did not observe it. She kept herself in the shadow of the coffee-urn, and spoke but little. Cousin George, who had that very day returned from California, saw that her little round face was red with crying, but said nothing.

"Why, what is the matter my child?" exclaimed her father, as they rose from the table and came into the light.

"Oh, nothing, father. Only a letter from Jane. She and Maria are doing so much, 'filling a place in life,' she says; and she asked me if there was no work for me in the world, no talent which I could cultivate. There don't seem to be any, really," looking up at her father with quivering chin. "It seems as if I never could learn anything, no matter how hard I tried. Jane says I spelled 'psalm' in my last letter 'sam.' I must have been in a great hurry, for I do know that word."

"Let Jane find her own work," said her father. "Book-learning is a good thing, Cathy, but there is wisdom and work, too, outside of books and the schools. "As for your work"—his voice grew hoarse. He stopped, came up to her, as she stood before the fire, and held out his arms—"your work has been—O Cathy, you have saved me! I was going down into hell, and you have brought me back. I have drunk my last drop, with God's help."—Youth's Companion.

A GOLD-LINED NEST.

Close to the United States mint, on the roof of the place of business across the street, there is a small bird-box, which was formerly occupied about this time of year by a pair of robins, but lately occupied solely and entirely by a pugnacious and tricky English sparrow. This miserly fellow—and the sparrows are all an avaricious set—after driving the robins out, has occupied the box for two seasons without even so much as a mate. As might be supposed, one who was able to do that is foremost in looking out for himself in other ways. Among the girls, and even among the girls in the mint, nearly all of whom bring their dinners with them, this particular sparrow has been long a favorite because of his boldness, and so freely does he fly in the window and flit in the back door of the smelting room to pick up crumbs, that they jocularly say he is the only one who has the "free run of the mint." A short time ago a boy in the building went where Mr. Sparrow has made his nest, and peeking into the box to see if there were any of the young folks at home, as the boys love to do, he was surprised upon drawing his fingers out to see them sparkling in the bright sunshine. No miner who strikes an unexpected vein was more excited than that boy as he seized the box and carried the whole thing downstairs, where it was found that the inside was not only flecked with gold dust, but that the accumulations of the precious metal had formed a sort of a carpet of sparkling, soft, yellow gold, the whole proving a veritable "bonanza." The sparrow had regularly been carrying off quantities of gold dust in its feathers which it shook out when it made its toilet in the morning.—Sel.

TEMPERANCE.

A TEMPERANCE REVOLUTION.

The following declaration of the Merrill Good Templar Lodge of Los Angeles, California, is a document worth reading and preserving in these days when the temperance lodges are making all capital out of the great prohibition movement. Let it be remembered in connection that the Geo. B. Katzenstein herein denounced is one of the leading spirits to the Good Templar order. He was lately its head and is now chief secretary. Cases prosecuted in the highest tribunal of the order by the very lodges named below, and on the same grounds, have been decided in his favor! So that Good Templarism is made responsible for the abuses mentioned by Merrill Lodge. Mr. Gould, a prominent lawyer of Los Angeles, and Capt. Wood of the Censor of that city, leading members of Merrill Lodge, now realize that the temperance reform has got beyond the secret practices of Good Templarism and are in favor of open work. The action of the lodge reads thus:

Whereas, Merrill Lodge, No. 299, I. O. G. T., for many years has been the "banner" lodge in California, and has paid more than $3,000 Grand Lodge tax, and has contributed liberally to all Grand Lodge enterprises, and has expended much larger amounts for the advancement of the cause of temperance in Los Angeles county, and had, with great effort, accumulated nearly $20,000 toward the establishment of temperance headquarters in Southern California, and had become the wealthiest Good Templar Lodge in America; was the first lodge in this portion of the State, and has always had prohibition for its watchword, and has taken advanced ground on every phase of the temperance reform; and has organized and maintained the best Band of Hope on this coast; has had among its membership the most worthy people in the community; has always given its influence and granted the use of its hall and property to promote every good and benevolent purpose; and,

Whereas, This lodge has been assailed because of its good works, and is now compelled to change its plans, and the good of the cause of temperance demands that it make a public declaration, as follows:

This lodge condemns the infamous proceedings of the last Grand Lodge; the use of free tickets to bring delegates to Grand Lodge, pledged to do what was done; the continuing in absolute power of a ring of "fraternal" politicians; the absorbing of the funds of the order in exorbitant salaries; the wasteful management of the Home for Orphans; the seizure and destruction of the Rescue, when it had a weekly circulation of nearly 5,000 copies; the seizure of every means of communication in the order by the Grand Secretary; the attempt to put out the light and silence forever the best and noblest friends the order ever had in this State; the employment of incompetent and immoral Grand Lecturers; the sham organization of the children; the counting in as officers of the Grand Lodge persons who were never elected; the payment of $3,000 a year salary to Geo. B. Katzenstein for services which (if faithfully rendered) are not worth more than $100 a month—besides office rent, office expenses and annual leave of absence to go East, with his expenses paid in the sum of more than $350 per year—all this while giving a large portion of his time to other fraternal societies and business; the perquisites from sale of lodge seals for $9 and more, that can be bought in the open market for $4.50 or less; the sale of regalia at more than fifty per cent above dealers' prices; the payment of more than $2,000 annually for Grand Lodge printing; the casting of more than 100 illegal votes by officers and deputies at each Grand Lodge session, and the continuing of ring power by reason of such illegal voting; the arrest of charters and destruction of lodges for protesting against outrage and wrong; the decision of appeals by officers to whom no appeal had been made; the continuous assault upon faithful officers and members who refuse to be parties to these wrongs, and the continuance of a policy that has driven out of the order in this State, during the past three years, more than twice as many members as now remain in it; therefore,

Resolved, That Merrill Lodge, having donated more than $10,000 worth of property to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Southern California, and transferred to them its Band of Hope, and having put its house in order, now refuses to longer loan its good name or to contribute of its funds to the support of an order whose management in this State has fallen so low that it has become unjust, immoral and an impediment to the cause of temperance; therefore the lodge will never again pay a dollar to the support of Geo. B. Katzenstein.

Thus Merrill Lodge now follows the example of the other lodges in this county at Pomona, Compton, Orange, El Monte, Alhambra, Newhall, East Los Angeles, Westminster and Downey, and nearly all of the lodges in Southern California, and recommends that all other lodges do likewise, and organize for temperance work in some society which is not controlled by men allied with the enemies of our cause and engaged in war with temperance workers.

PROHIBITION IN GERMANY.

Bismark says: "Beer makes people stupid, lazy and impertinent," and that it must be prohibited; yet Germans, when they come to America, have been surprised that beer and wine are not drank by every body, and that there is a strong element in favor of prohibiting their sale; they say that America is more tyrannical than Germany. It is interesting to know that Germans sometimes have passed strict prohibitory laws, albeit they are not against wine and beer, but against boys smoking. The Government has become anxious about the effect of tobacco on the physique of the soldiers of the future, and in order to rectify in some measure the evil, ordered the police to arrest all boys found smoking in the streets if they were under sixteen years old, and to have them punished by fine and imprisonment.

According to reports, resulting from Government investigation, a clearly defined line has been discovered between the smokers and non-smokers who attend the polytechnic schools, those who do not smoke being decidedly superior in general scholarship and mental vigor. The poisonous nicotine, so far counteracted in the adult smoker by the resisting forces of his mature constitution, takes hold of the forming tissues of the young and does its injurious work without hindrance. But the father's smoking slays half his babies.—Exchange.

That last sentence should not be comforting to smoking parents.

The Bethesda Inn, which was opened July 3, by the Central Union of Chicago, has given 1,250 lodgings, and 1,500 baths. Many such home-like lodging houses in this city would do much to keep men from the saloons.

The United States stands third in the list of beer-producing countries, Great Britain at the last general estimate brewing 1,000,000,000 gallons, Germany 900,000,000, and the United States 600,000,000. Last year 18,000,000 barrels were produced in this country.

A bill prohibiting the sale or use of intoxicating liquors on State and county fair grounds passed the New Jersey Assembly recently.

Religious News.

—Rev. C. H. Carpenter and wife expected to sail from San Francisco last week in the City of Pekin, due in Yokohama Sept. 2nd. These missionaries, who go out at their own charge, ask the prayers of all good people for the poor Ainos of Japan.

—A great grandson of William Carey, Rev. W. P. Carey, son of J. S. Carey, of Tiverton, has been appointed by the English Baptist Missionary Society to the charge of the mission station at Howrah, near Calcutta. He is the third William Carey, now living, who has devoted himself to Indian missions.

—The mission of the Moravians in Alaska is now one year old. The annual report in the Moravian last week shows the mission to be well established and to have been quite successful for the time it has been operated.

—The masses are being reached in France to a large extent. It is estimated that more than 400,000 persons attended the McAll mission in Paris alone last year, while Mr. Gibson reports 35,000, and Miss DeBroen, in the Belleville mission, counts 20,000 a year.

—The Protestants of Ireland are not the "insignificant minority" that is popularly imagined. The Episcopalians number 600,000, the Presbyterians number 485,000, the Methodists and Unitarians 110,000, the Congregationalists, Baptist and other denominations make up about 60,000 more.

—"A grandmother," hearing that the translation of the Pilgrim's Progress, made by the Corisco Mission, could not be printed for want of $500, appeals in the Presbyterian to the grandmothers of that church to contribute the needed amount to give the immortal dream to those natives of West Africa.

—The Spirit of Missions for August publishes the following paragraph: "The refusal of the native Christians at Pwo Kan, in China, to take part in the heathen village ceremonies has greatly incensed the unconverted villagers. They have 'boycotted' the Christians, and denied them access to the public wells, and dispute their right to use the public roads." This is about as good an illustration as one could wish for of the essential savagery of the boycott.

—A remarkable revival has been taking place in the Persian field of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. Places of worship have been crowded, and there have been many conversions. In Syria, it is reported, a large number of Mohammedans have been converted, twenty-six persons in Beyroot having joined the church. This mission, established fifty years ago in Persia by the Presbyterians, held a jubilee a short time since in honor of the fact. The churches count 2,000 members, and nearly 50,000 persons listen to the preaching of the Gospel every Sabbath.

—At the sixteenth anniversary of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian church in the United States, held lately in Brooklyn, the attendance was large, and the public interest as usual. There were present a Syrian lady and a Hindoo pundita. The latter is a remarkable woman, still young, but old enough to have committed to memory the whole of the "Rig Vedas." She is a recent convert to the Gospel, and came to America to study medicine in order to be helpful to her conntrywomen. She speaks English with accuracy and fluency. A Bible presented to her by a Presbyterian missionary was the instrument of her conversion.

—At the annual breakfast of the Zenana Mission in India, given during the London May Meeting Season, the following report was made: "Our stations in India are Calcutta, Barasct, Delhi, Allahabad, Agra, Benares, Bankipore, Dinapore, Serampore, Monghyr, Dacca, Soorie, Barisal, Likari, Khan, Commilla, Simla, and Madras. We have a staff of forty-two lady zenana visitors, twenty-five assistants, fifty-four native Bible women, and fifty native school teachers. We have also forty-one girls' schools and women's classes containing 1,330 pupils. About 928 Zenanas are visited for regular instruction where there are 1,560 pupils. But there is much work besides, which cannot be reckoned in this way; the thousands who come to Mrs. Wilson's dispensary at Agra, and Miss Thorn's at Delhi, and who receive Gospel teaching as well as bodily healing, and the many hundreds visited by Mrs. Ellis in Calcutta, and by some of our Bible women there and in other places, who go from house to house simply to read and explain the Word of God."

—China has been considered the most hopeless of fields by the critics of missions; but the work is now beyond the reach of criticism, notwithstanding the grievous disadvantage from the brutal treatment of the Chinese in Christian lands. Miss Gordon Cumming, the intelligent and entertaining traveler, says that Christianity is fast making its way in China, and of this the Spectator says, "Well it may, for there is no state of society of which we have ever read so like that of the later Roman empire, as that which prevails in China to-day. What will be the result of the introduction of an explosive and democratic force like Christianity, into an ancient but decadent civilization such as China is to-day, no one can tell. It can hardly fail to be startling.

THE GREAT CLEVELAND MISSION.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 12, 1886.

Editor Cynosure:—I have been requested by a subscriber and reader of your valuable paper to write a short sketch of the People's Tabernacle work in Cleveland, in which I have been engaged for the last seven years. The old People's Tabernacle, on the corner of Ontario and St. Clair streets, had its origin in the mind and heart of Mr. W. H. Doan, who built it in 1877, more particularly for Gospel temperance meetings. It was during the great Murphy excitement which started in Pittsburgh. The building, a plain frame, veneered with brick, about one hundred feet square, with a gallery on three sides, seated with plain unpainted wooden chairs, cost about $10,000. Meetings were held every night, and all were urged to sign the pledge and then give themselves to Christ. Different workers had charge of the work, employed and paid by Mr. Doan, from the opening until the fall of 1879, when I was requested by Mr. Moody and Mr. Doan to take charge of the work. The work is really an undenominational mission work for the evangelization of the non-church-going masses.

On Sunday there is preaching at 10:45, Sunday-school at 3, prayer-meeting, in winter at 6:30 p. m., and in summer an open-air service on the Public square, and preaching service or evangelistic meeting at 7:30. This evening service is always followed by an after-meeting of Christian testimony and inquiry-meeting for seekers. The week night meetings or cottage-meetings, on Monday evenings, Gospel temperance on Tuesday, prayer and praise-meeting on Wednesday, and a meeting for conversational Bible study on Thursday evening; also a rehearsal for the large chorus choir on Friday evening. This choir, led by a competent music conductor, Prof. N. Coe Stewart, leads the Sunday services.

Now how is this work carried on? for the expenses of evangelist, music leader, janitor, gas, coal, etc., are very large, over $5,000 per year. How are they paid? Is there a large finance committee begging the public all the time for funds to sustain the work? No; not at all. The finance committee is one man, W. H. Doan, the builder, who has cheerfully paid all the expenses since the beginning, only allowing the people to contribute the little mites in the Sunday evening collections which they please. He has not only paid the expenses every year, but has during the last year purchased a lot and put up a fine permanent building 94 by 150 feet, costing, with the lot, about $80,000, having a seating capacity of nearly 5,000, with two large galleries running round three sides, while the platform, chorus seats, and pipe organ, occupy the other side.

The reader may suppose that Mr. Doan is a very rich man, and that the amount he pays out for this work he does not feel; but he is not what Clevelanders call a wealthy man by any means. He has made all he has since the war, in the oil and gasoline business, and he has been successful too. But he has been converted, pocket and all, and he holds his property as belonging to the Lord, and is using his income as he thinks the Lord wants him to. He has no children, and his wife enters heartily into all his generous plans for carrying on the Lord's work. Mr. Doan not only gives his money for the work, but his time and strength as well. He never misses the Sunday-school or the Sunday night meeting, and always leads the Wednesday night praise-meeting in his own happy way. Mr. Doan's sunny face and hearty hand-shake, as he stands at the door while the people are passing out, are a benediction never to be forgotten by the multitudes who attend the services.

We also, as part of this work, publish a weekly paper, The People's Tabernacle, containing programme for Sunday evening meeting, with hymns; the Sunday-school lesson helps and items of interest connected with the work. A copy of this paper is given to every person in attendance, and is the only reading which goes into many of the homes represented.

Now what are the results? I cannot answer this question definitely; but will say that there has been a warm revival interest in the meetings from the beginning of the work until the present. We never have a Sunday pass without some souls expressing a desire to "see Jesus." The converts go into all parts of the world; some unite with other churches or the city, and some are members of our People's church, which was organized two years ago, and now has a membership of one hundred and ninety. Our church is undenominational, having the same basis and plan as the Chicago avenue church (Mr. Moody's) in Chicago. I hope this hurried, homely sketch of this work among the neglected city masses will stir up some men of means to imitate the grand example of the founder and supporter of this Tabernacle work in Cleveland.

William Johnson, Evangelist and Pastor.

IOWA STATE MEETING.

The regular annual meeting of the Iowa Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will convene in the United Presbyterian church at Birmingham, on Tuesday, Aug. 31, 1886, at 7 p. m.

Able and eloquent speakers will be present from abroad, and ample arrangements will be made to entertain all the delegates who may come. Conveyances will be at Fairfield to meet the delegates who come on the trains. But those intending to come will please send word beforehand and announce the train by which they will arrive.

The names of the speakers can not be fully announced at present, but we expect Pres. C. A. Blanchard, the Rev. J P. Stoddard, the Rev. C. E. Harroun, Jr., the Rev. C. D. Trumbull, and the Rev. M. A. Gault, and the State Agent. The Rev.C.F. Hawley, is preparing the way for future work. Come on to Birmingham if you wish to see an enthusiastic meeting. — George Warrington, President.

KANSAS CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Kansas Christian Association will hold its next annual meeting at the Rusco church, seven miles north of Vining, Washington county, commencing at 7:30 p. m., Tuesday, Sept. 7th, 1886.

The following programme of work is suggested:

I. Report from State agent of work done during the year, with the future outlook.

II. Should secret lodges be opposed, and if so on what considerations?

III. Wherein lies the secret of lodge power?

IV. Knights of Labor, how related to Freemasonry, and to society generally?

V. Secret fraternities in their relation to family, church and state.

VI. How can secret orders be most successfully opposed?

W. W. McMillan, Sec'y Kansas C. A., Olathe.

The Location.—Those coming from the southeast, south, or southwest can come to Vining, seven miles south of the church, on the Republican Branch of the Kansas Pacific R. R., from Junction City or Clay Center. Those coming from the east or west, come on the Central Branch to Clifton, one mile east of Vining. There will be teams at both places waiting for those coming on the 7th. The friends of the cause are cordially invited.

R. Loggan.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

The Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold its meeting in Opera Hall, Princeton, Bureau county, Tuesday evening, September 21st, at 7:30 o'clock, to continue through the 22nd and 23d. Addresses are expected from Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Pres. L. N. Stratton, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, Rev. Dr. Wm. Wishart, Mrs. L. H. Plumb of Streator, Rev. C. A. Bockman of Galesburg, Samuel E Holyoke of Galesburg, and others. Discussions of such interesting topics as are at present forced upon the public mind by the hostility of secret societies to social order and the personal independence of workingmen, will be ably maintained. Princeton is a beautiful town, distinguished for its culture and widely known as the home of the late Owen Lovejoy. As a result of his influence and that of his co-laborers, it occupied an enviable position in the ranks of reform during the anti-slavery struggle. Entertainment will be provided for delegates from abroad. The central location and convenience of railway connection invite a large attendance of the friends of the Association. All churches and local associations in sympathy with the object of the meeting are earnestly requested to send delegates, and let every patriotic, Christian man and woman in the State make an effort to be present or to have a representative on the floor of the convention, that our counsels and prayers may be united for the enlightening of all our people upon the nature and evil tendency of the secret orders.

J. L. Barlow, President.

H. L. Kellogg, Secretary.

WISCONSIN APPOINTMENTS.

Aug. 16 and 17, Potter's school-house, Juneau Co.
" 18, U. B. chapel, Big Creek.
" 19, Wesleyan chapel, Big Creek.
" 20, Valton, Sauk Co.
" 22 (Lord's day), Valton and La Valle, Sauk Co.
" 23, La Valle, Sauk Co.
" 24, Valton, Sauk Co.
" 26, 27, 29, Pleasant Ridge, Monroe Co.

LODGE NOTES.

The Grand Legion of Select Knights, A. O. U. W., closed its session at Erie, Pa., Thursday. The Knights prohibit the sale of intoxicants at their demonstration, and will not accept any manufacturar or dealer in liquors to their order.

The Executive Committee of the Knights of Labor, who had been confined in the Labette (Kan.) prison for nonpayment of fines imposed for conspiracy against the Missouri Pacific Road, were released Thursday. They were given an ovation on their arrival at Parsons by their fellow lodgemen. The fines will be held against them to insure good behavior.

Martin Irons, the Knight of Labor leader in the Southwest keeps a saloon and restaurant in Kansas City.

In his sermon at Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 8, Bishop McQuade attacked the Irish Republican Brotherhood, the Clanna-gael and kindred societies of alleged Fenian affiliation. "The principles of these societies are destructive of societies and good goverment," said the Bishop, "and they are damnable in their methods."

There are said to be 326,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic enrolled.

There are about seventy thousand Knights Templar in the United States. Over ten per cent of them are credited to New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Rhode Island; Illinois and Ohio follow in order, each having upwards of five thousand. Michigan and Iowa each have over three thousand. Missouri and Indiana about reach twenty-five hundred each. The balance of the States have less than two thousand. The State having the smallest quota is North Carolina, beiug less than two hundred.

The printers of Cleveland, Ohio, have declared a boycott against the Cleveland Leader which ostracises union men.

The Knights of Labor have been beaten in their fight against the International Cigar Maker's Union, and the manufacturers have invited their old employes to return to work.

A business and social meeting of the Order of Railway Conductors was held in Des Moines, Iowa, last Sabbath, attended by about 200 representatives. Grand Chief Conductor C. S. Wheaton, of Elmira, N. Y., was present. The sessions were secret.

The National Bakers' Union and the Knights of Labor are at odds. The complaint of the bakers is that in Pittsburgh, where the local bakers' union is also a local assembly of the Knights of Labor, there was a strike which was authorized both by the National Union and the district assembly of the Knights, After it had lasted two weeks and negotiations were pending for its successful settlement the Knights of Labor stepped in and ordered the men back. The bakers claim they were sold out and will withdraw from the Knights.

Arthur H. Hall, Charles J. Burroughs, William C. Stevenson, and a dozen other members of the St. Alban Legion, No. 16, Select Knights of the American Order of United Workman, have begun an injunction suit in the Circuit court against George W. Linn, Grand Commander of the order in this State. On Saturday evening while the lodge was in session at 679 West Lake street, Linn took the chair in the absence of the Select Commander, William Sylvester, and when the Vice-Commander, Stevenson, objected and claimed the right to preside, he was ejected from the hall. Stevenson and the other complainants allege that Linn has revoked the charter of the St. Alban legion, and has declared his intention of reorganizing the society. The reason they have appealed to the courts they say is because they have no remedy within the order until the biennial meeting of the Grand Legion of Illinois, which does not occur until October, 1887,

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome damphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

BUSINESS.

COMMENTS ON "MASONIC OUTRAGES.

Changes and enlargements "when you get out a new edition," which have been suggested will be duly considered when that time comes; but the practical thing now is to hasten that time! One copy in each family will be carefully read now that it is something new, and advance the cause more than to have a lecturer visit your town. Friends donated the money to put a copy into each home in Wheaton and it can be done in many places. The pamphlet will be sent postpaid to 100 different addresses, or 100 to one address for $12.50. We shall be glad to make a list of places in which every family has been supplied with this effective little work.

A number of places may have already been supplied as above suggested, as some of the constant workers like A. C. Moffatt have ordered liberally and may have supplied every family in their town. Let us have the names of all such places.

Rev. C. E. Walker writes:—"Have received first copy of 'Masonic Outrages.' It is just what is needed; ought to be sown 'knee-deep' all over our land and wherever Masonry has grown."

Mr. Thos. Hodge writes:—" 'Masonic Outrages' is a clear and temperate statement which, though short, does away with the fancy that the opponents of Masonry have only a 'Morgan' to talk about as a victim of that secret order. The most of it was no doubt written before the recent startling devel opements which Anarchism has revealed in Chicago, and that in our free country we have the same fiendish doctrines taught in the dens of lodgery which our trusting and credulous citizens had thought were confined to oppressed desperadoes in foreign countries.

"The cover of this interesting little book has an excellent woodcut of the handsome monument to the martyred Morgan and an excellent likeness of that excellent President of our country, John Quincy Adams.

The matter of fact style in the whole treatment of the subject sharpens the appetite for more knowledge of the vast system of secret control over workingmen and others among us which compels an unquestioning slavish obedience to a despotism stronger than our own slaveholding and as devilish as the Danites of Mormonism, the Ku Klux, the Molly Maguires, and Fenians, labor unions, etc., whom we have nursed as vipers in the bosom of our body politic and whose systems too often demand the sacrifices of their victim's good name and even of life itself."

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

This is the fund from which the colored ministers of the South have received the Cynosure. It seems very desirable to continue this fund, and hence the special appeal in the Cynosure of Aug. 12th.

The following named persons have contributed to this fund this year, 1886, and such names will be added from week to week as donate to it in the future:

Jno Dorcas, J F Icke, Mrs A E Tyler, H Holbrook, Wm Mathews, O Hansen, Mrs S B Skeel, Mrs A F Rider, F W Capwell, A Hamilton, Mrs C H Richardson, N Martin, R Johnson, J Aylsworth, Mrs T S Couch, I Bancroft, S A Pratt, J Rutley, A Hamilton, H A Fischer, Mrs N E Kellogg, Mrs A B Kellogg, T Kingsnarth, M Phillips.

Not reported before: Mrs H L Kellogg, $10.50; Susannah G Recd 60 cts.; Lemuel Lester, $10.00; W O Percival, $2 00.

The orders for the "Baccalaureate Sermon" have been very liberal. Sam'l. H. Davidson writes: "I think that document is the greatest effort in that line I ever saw." Remember that this is intended to give the religious basis of this reform and is sent to any address for two cents (one postage stamp.) See advertisement.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A PRIZE OF $20

WILL BE AWARDED FOR THE BEST NATIONAL REFORM SONG AND CHORUS (WORDS AND MUSIC) RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE NOT LATER THAN AUGUST 20. BOTH WORDS AND MUSIC TO BE PUBLISHED IN THE CHRISTIAN NATION FOR SEPTEMBER 1.

A PRIZE OF $5

FOR THE BEST WORDS WITHOUT MUSIC.

CONDITIONS:

1. The verses must be not less than three nor more than four in number, and of eight lines each, with a short chorus, the same for each verse.
2. One or other or all of the following sentiments to be expressed: The necessity of recognizing Christianity in our Nation's law and life; the Divine origin of our Nation, and the Bible the necessary source of National law; Responsibility of the Nation to God for its laws and life; Jesus Christ the divinely appointed Ruler of our Nation.
3. Music must be original, melody simple, easy to learn and follow, and adapted for use in large gatherings without practice.
4. All MSS. submitted become the property of the CHRISTIAN NATION.
5. MSS. to be sent us anonymously, accompanied by name of author in a sealed envelope.
6. Competent judges will decide upon the merits of the contributions. Address,

Christian Nation,
252 Broadway, New York.

HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY

Gives the experience and advice of the most successful Bible students of the day. Shows how to interpret parables, prophecy and the Scriptures generally; gives the meaning of the peculiar symbols of color, size, number and substance; contains an analysis showing the character of contents of every book in the Bible, its central truths and practical lessons, the errors refuted, promises and prophecies fulfilled, its connection with other parts of the Scriptures, and many useful suggestions; intended for those who are thirsting for a deeper acquaintance with the sacred volume, and desire the plain pointed truth and in cheap form. Printed on good paper, strong cloth covers, 50 cents per copy.

TRACTS on Holiness, Tobacco, Pride, Dress, Secret Societies, Backsliding, Justification, Repentance, Dancing, Prohibition, Church Entertainments, and others. Either of these can be had at 25 cents per hundred, or an assorted package of all for 30 cents.

LEAFLETS for letters and general distribution. An assortment of pointed, short, red-hot truths on vital themes, 10 cents per packet.

MOTTO NOTE PAPER, on which is printed a variety of striking and useful mottoes. 30 cents per block of sixty sheets.

TRACT ENVELOPES, assorted packet, 10 cents. We can take American bills or postage stamps, but not silver. If bills are sent, register the letter. Address, REV. A. SIMS.
Uxbridge, Ontario.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

NATIONAL SUICIDE,

AND

ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.
—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

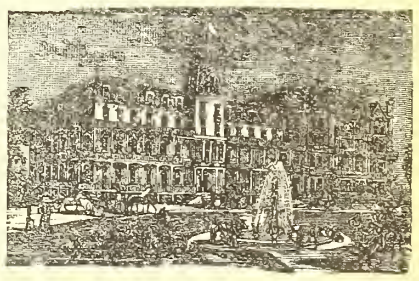
THE

Man Traps of the City,

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.



A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the prurient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

The Medical and Surgical

SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

HOME HINTS.

CONVALESCENT CHILDREN.

Very often the convalescence of children is retarded by a depressing ennui. Little children have not the mental resources nor the philosophy of grown-up invalids, and if too young or too weak to read, it goes hard with the patient—and with the nurse, too—if he must lie still all day, sighing and moaning: "Oh, I wish I could get up"—"Oh, dear, I am so tired of this old bed,"—"Oh, when can I go down stairs?" and all the fretful lamentations familiar to mothers and nurses.

As it taxes one's ingenuity to amuse and pacify these little patients, I will mention two or three things I did for my boy when he was recovering from diphtheria, hoping the experience may be of use to some other mother. Of course I soon exhausted stories, and the mild play with such toys as weak little hands can manage, and the old cry of "Oh, mamma what can I do?" set in again.

The walls of the sick room were of bare plaster—as all sick room walls should be, for a coat of lime makes them all fresh and pure again—and when my weary child sighed, among his many sighs, "for something new in the room to look at," I bethought me of a roll of pictures saved from a year's numbers of a London illustrated newspaper. These I brought into the sick room and pinned all about the walls. The effect was very enlivening. The room seemed suddenly enlarged—as if all at once opened out up on all the quarters of the globe. There were broad landscapes and wild marine scenes, battle fields, Christmas firesides, noble portraits of horses and dogs, brave generals and fair women, pretty groups of children and tumbling waterfalls. The small invalid was delighted. Then I brought him a long, light stick—a piece of inch moulding, it happened to be—with which he could point at the different pictures while he asked as many questions as he liked. This stick was an inspiration. It was like having arms six feet long, and the boy had great fun "visiting all around the world" with it, as he expressed it. As long as he stayed in bed his first demand in the morning was —"Give me my poke-stick, mamma." As I had to be out of the room a good deal I fixed a call-bell on the foot of the bed, and we arranged a code of signals that proved quite entertaining. Three taps on the bell with the "poke-stick" meant a drink of water; four taps, a clean handkerchief; six taps meant "I am hungry," eight taps, "What time is it?" and twelve taps signified that the the pillows needed shaking up and the bed straightened generally.

After a while I attached to the stick a bit of string with a bent pin attached, scattered some old toys about the floor, and the invalid had a grand season of "fishing." It was amusing to see how shy some of the fish were, and what a time it was before they would consent to bite. And then the excitement of landing them in the bed—which was now a boat, of course—was immense.

I am sure these little beguilements helped on my boy's recovery for they kept his "spirits" in a cheerful condition, and cheerfulness is a very helpful medicine.—American Agriculturist.

ICE IN THE SICK ROOM.

A correspondent of the National Druggist makes the following seasonable suggestion:

"The writer's son suffered with typhoid fever during the heated term of last summer, when the temperature of the room often rose to 90° or 95°, and the patient's temperature ran up to 105° F, and over.

"A number of tubs were placed in the room, and kept filled with ice, and the doors kept closed. The temperature of the room sank to 80° or less, an average of 12° or 15° degrees below the temperature of the other rooms in the house; and the cooler atmosphere not only added to the comfort of the patient, but aided in keeping down the body temperature, and materially contributed to a final recovery."

HOW TO COOL A CELLAR.

A great mistake is sometimes made in ventilating cellars and milk-houses. The object of ventilation is to keep the cellars cool and dry, but this object often fails of being accomplished by a common mistake, and instead the cellar is made both warm and damp. A cool place should never be ventilated unless the air admitted is cooler than the air within, or is at least as cool as that, or a very little warmer. The warmer the air, the more moisture it holds in suspension. Necessarily, the cooler the air, the more this moisture is condeused and precipitated. When a cool cellar is aired on a warm day, the entering air being in motion appears cool, but as it fills the celllar the cooler air with which it becomes mixed chills it, the moisture is condensed, and dew is deposited ou the cold walls, and may ofteu be seen running down them in streams. Then the cellar is damp, and soon becomes mouldy. To avoid this, the windows should only be opened at night, and late—the last thing before retiring. There is no need to fear that the night air is unhealthy—it is as pure as the air at midday, and is really drier. The cool air enters the apartment during the night, and circulates through it. The windows should be closed before sunrise in the morning, and kept closed and shaded through the day. If the air of the cellar is damp, it may be thoroughly dried by placing in it a peck of fresh lime in an open box. A peck of lime will absorb about seven pounds or more than three quarts of water, and in this way a cellar or milk-room may soon bc dried, even in the hottest weather.—Scl.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MAH-HAH-BONE,

COMPRISING IN ONE VOLUME,

HAND BOOK

OF

Freemasonry,

Which gives the correct or "standard work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the oaths, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained:

The Master's Carpet

Which explains the true source and meaning every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, showing the principles on which the order is founded: and

FREEMASONRY

AT A GLANCE,

Which illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, and gives a brief explanation of each, making a most valuable compilation of information concerning Masonry. Bound in fine cloth covers. 99 pages. Price $1.00. Address,

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS;

—OR—

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination hut an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, hut thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts. 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS" in Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 8th to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

Farm Notes.

HOW TO MAKE A GOOD STRAW STACK.

Straw may be so stacked that it will keep in good condition until it is fed out during the winter. It is the common opinion that the straw stack furnishes the hardest positions about the thresher; hence, the men usually take the other positions, leaving the straw stack to be mismanaged by the boys. If you wish the straw properly stacked you must see, first of all, that capable men are put upon the stack, and you must insist upon their doing thier work well. A very common fault is to start the stack too wide. It will always spread of itself, and becomes so wide that it must be drawn in abruptly and the water sinks into it. Another fault is not to keep the center highest and trampled solid. Let one man be delegated to lay the outside, and each of the other men to stack and trample down a certain section of the interior, and not to stand in a hole and throw the straw idly about him. It requires close supervision and good work to make a straw stack. And when it is made, do not allow the top to be blown off for lack of a few "keepers," or the cattle to waste half of it—being allowed to run to the stack. Put a fence close around the stack, and build racks or mangers close to the fence. Then, during the winter, cut down the stack with a knife, and fill the mangers. Put the chaff in a pen and roof it, or else have it evenly distributed through the stack. Do not allow it to accumulate in a mass around and under the straw carriers, to spoil. The above is written for the benefit of those who have not mow room or barracks for the straw.—American Agriculturist.

WATERING COWS.

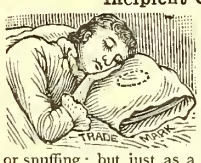
One word about watering cows that are in milk. For six years I have followed the practice of giving my cows warm water in winter. The size of my dairy has varied from 12 to 50 cows. I began warming the water after I had purchased in one lot, forty-one cows, and had succeeded in making them do almost everything but give milk. I had a partner in the business, a bright enterprising man, and we laid awake nights, and studied hard days to think of some scheme whereby we could stop the drying up process and carry the election in favor of more milk. We fed them hay, and then cornstalks and clover, we tried bran and then shorts, and then both, we fed oats and corn ground together, and then made one grand general purpose move, by mixing up every kind of ground feed known to our market, and giving them fifteeen pounds each day of that. They held the fort and continued to shrink. We then commenced giving them warm water in the stable, with a small amount of bran and shorts stirred in. Within two weeks our milk supply increased twenty-five per cent. The cost of that supply had not increased five per cent. The cows drank more water, digested their food better, ate a little more, and looked the pictures of comfort and health. A cow takes a lot of cold water into her stomach and it takes heat from her body to warm it up, it takes feed and vitality to make that heat. They are better expended in making milk. So, we can make our wood-piles reduce the cost of our butter and our cheese. In other branches of farm work a large primary expense often limits materially the cost of products. Machinery costs considerable, but there is an easy rule that should control its purchase. Where the interest on the cost of a machine and its annual depreciation in value by wear amount to less than labor in another form would cost, it plainly reduces the cost of a crop to buy it.—Ex.

STABLING HORSES IN SUMMER.

The keeping of horses in stables in summer almost as much as in winter, which in some parts of the East prevails, is very injurious. Not only is it warm and unpleasant for the animals thus treated, but it also deprives them of a large portion of nature's own washing by the warm summer rains, and going into water holes and creeks. This stabling must or certainly should cause a large amount of extra labor, for an animal that loses a large portion of nature's cleaning must necessarily need considerable more cleaning by hand, both of currying and washing, than an animal that receives all of nature's washing. In feeding animals, especially at noon, in summer, it is far better to have shade trees to feed them under than to feed them in a stable.

Through the warmer months a horse, after working and being fed, should be turned into a pasture for the night, and if that is not practicable he should be staked or given his liberty in a corral, but under no circumstances should he be kept in a stable. When not working the proper place for an animal is either in a pasture or corral, at any rate outside. I hope some day to see the stabling of horses and mules, in warm weather, entirely abandoned.—Cor. Farm, Field and Stockman.

LEGISLATING AGAINST THISTLES.



The recent Indiana Legislature enacted that any person knowingly allowing Canada thistles to grow and mature upon his land, or land under his charge, shall be fined not less than five nor more than twenty dollars; and for the second and each subsequent offense, double the amount of the first fine. Supervisors of the highways of the State who allow thistles to grow on any road in their districts are subject to like penalties; as are also road masters of railway lines who allow the pests to grow about stations or along the right of way under their supervision. This is a wise law, and worthy of enactment in other States.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the Pillow-Inhaler, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

Hon. E. L. Hedden, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the Pillow-Inhaler has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. Hedden, 38 West 49th St., New York.

Mr. H. G. Teele, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a Pillow-Inhaler, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the Pillow-Inhaler has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.

Main Office: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the Tract Fund for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

No.		No. Pages
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	8
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	3
6	Warning against Masonry	4
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men	3
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	6
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	6
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	3
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,
Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago Ill

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

This is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"Lucille Vernon" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his name to the letter, but attaches his affidavit to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Russia

ILLUSTRATED History of RUSSIA

from the Earliest Times to 1877. By A. Rambaud. Translated by L. B. Lang. In two large 12mo volumes, Long Primer type, with numerous fine illustrations and maps. Fine cloth, gilt tops, Library style. Price reduced from $18 to $1.75.

RAMBAUD'S is doubtless the best history of Russia in any language. Russian history begins almost in myth, proceeds into a wilderness of conflicting traditions, and emerges into a clear light only in comparatively recent times. It is studded with imposing personalities and darkened by hideous crimes; striking events make it dramatic, the sufferings of a great people lend it pathos; the unrest of the present hour and the uncertain outlook for to-morrow invest it with deep interest. M. Rambaud puts the reader's mind fully in train to consider the situation of the hour.—Literary World, Boston.

$18

THE PERIOD covered is from the earliest times to 1877. It is more interesting as told by M. Rambaud than any romance. It is a cloth of gold studded with diamonds, not of moral brilliance but of intellectual vigor and fascinating personality. Ivan the Terrible, Peter the Great, Mazeppa, Catherine, Nicholas, and other monarchs of iron will and broad ambition relieve the monotony of war, and the Mazeppa of Byron comes in as a charming episode. The high civilization attained without the adoption of a civilized form of government, leaves no room for surprise at the strength of Nihilism.—Inter-Ocean, Chicago, Ill.

$1.75

THE HISTORY of Russia now published is the most satisfactory history of that country ever brought before English readers. The history of the rise of this wonderful nation is remarkable. Its power of absorption and diffusion is phenomenal. "The World," said Napoleon once, "will one day be ruled by the Slav and Teuton races." The prophecy is under fulfilment. How the Russian Slavs expanded from small districts about the Upper Dwina and Dneiper and the Volga and the Oka until they dominate one-sixth the territorial surface of the globe, containing a population of 103,000,000, is most admirably told by Rambaud. The work is well supplied with maps, and well indexed.—Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn.

RUSSIAN history is full of cruelty, oppression, tyranny, and all sorts of crime, with few peaceful passages to note the advance of civilization. This very fact makes it dramatic and full of stirring incidents, and those who crave this kind of reading, or who desire to know the history of Russia for its own sake, will find M. Rambaud's volumes well suited to their needs. He has taken vast pains to make his history both full and accurate; his style is nervous and forcible, and he gives a graphic picture of the bloody centuries through which the Russian Empire rose. His book lifts to a great extent the veil of mystery that hangs over the origin and growth of Russia.—Inquirer, Philadelphia.

Illustrated

NO STUDENT of history and no observer of public events can afford to be ignorant of Russia—that Polar Bear which stretches one huge paw toward Constantinople and the other toward India—that "muffled destiny" of whose future no one knows save that it is to be great and must affect to a remarkable extent the condition of well-nigh the entire human race. No more weighty matter of debate exists among the nations than that which constitutes the "Eastern Question," and of this question the White Czar, representing territorially the greatest nation on earth and one of the strongest, most ambitious, shrewdest, far-seeing, and persistent, is the central figure. What is the best History of Russia in the English language? Undoubtedly that of M. Alfred Rambaud.—Morning Star, Boston.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, 132 pages, 4 cents; Condensed Catalogue, free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York.

The Alden Book Co.: Clark and Adams Streets, Chicago; 420 Yonge Street, Toronto, Canada. [Mention this paper.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The death is reported by cable from Sierra Leone of the Rev. Moses A. Hopkins, Minister Resident and Consul General from the United States to Liberia.

The President has appointed all of his nominees under the Interior department whose cases were not acted upon by the Senate. There are twelve gentlemen, mostly in the Indian service, who are thus reappointed, and among them is George W. Julian to be Surveyor General of New Mexico, and Israel Green to be Indian Agent at Sisseton Agency, D. T.

Acting Secretary Fairchild Thursday issued a call for the redemption of 3 per cents to the amount of $10,000,000.

COUNTRY.

From various parts of Illinois and other States come reports of the ravages of the storm of Thursday and Friday. Two men are reported killed by the lightning; houses are unroofed, stores flooded, trees stripped and grain damaged ten bushels per acre. It is said to have been the worst storm this year. Near St. Charles, Ill., lightning killed William Gorham and his hired man. The unfortunates were looking out of the barn window when they were struck.

A gale at Edina, Mo., overthrew the tent of Sells's circus, while a performance was being given, Friday. The canvass and poles fell upon the audience and many persons were injured fatally and seriously. The terrible effect of the stampede that followed was noted in the number of persons who had broken legs and arms.

The watch factory at Elgin, Ill., was struck by lightning. A number of operatives were shocked, but aside from breaking a few panes of glass no damage was done. Six cows in the immediate vicinity were killed.

It was reported to Governor Hubbard, of Minnesota, that 102 families in the vicinity of Marshall were homeless from the effects of the July storms. They will be assisted from the cyclone fund.

John McCarthy, of Boston swallowed his artificial teeth one year ago. He lived, but the passage of the food to the stomach was seriously interrupted. Lately he was unable to take any food, and Thursday Dr. Richardson took out the man's stomach, removed the teeth and then replaced the organ. McCarthy is doing well.

Six young men of the town of Coral, the county seat of Montcalm, Mich., were arrested Thursday charged with "egging" the Rev. S. W. Ladue, while that gentleman was preaching in the Methodist Episcopal church there.

Anton Kabok, a baker doing business at No. 3617 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, committed suicide because of despondency growing out of the boycotts raised against him by the labor unions.

Captain Frank D. Longsford, of Gloucester, Mass., was impaled Tuesday by a sword fish which he had harpooned. He will probably die.

The heavy rains in Maryland have proved destructive to the tobacco crops. An extensive tobacco planter in Calvert county says there will be but half a crop in that and other counties of Maryland.

In the vicinity of Aberdeen, D. T., a tornado destroyed farm-houses, granaries, etc., Wednesday. Considerable damage was done, but no close estimate of the loss can be given.

On the Foster farm, near Jefferson, Wis., five persons were killed by the explosion of the boiler of a threshing machine Tuesday. Several others were scalded, one fatally.

The schooner Orizon capsized in Boston Harbor Thursday night, and four persons were drowned. A few minutes later the sloop Frolic sunk, and it is thought three of her crew were drowned.

J. M. Howey, law professor of the Mississippi State University at Oxford, shot and killed H. M. Sullivan, Secretary of the Board of Trustees.

The stables of the Sprinfield Avenue Horse-car Company at Newark, N. J., caught fire Monday and sixty horses were burned to death. The loss will reach $20,000.

The people of West Somerville, Mass., were startled to learn Thursday of the arrest of Mrs. Sarah J. Robinson, a comley widow of 48 years, for poisoning her son William, 23 years old, by administering arsenic in his food. It is feared that the woman has been engaged in the poisoning business for years, and that her husband, her three children, and seven other people have fallen victims to her cold-blooded scheming.

Until rain fell late in the week the forest fires raged fiercely in Central Wisconsin. From points in the vicinity of Green Bay come reports that the citizens had been fighting the flames since Sunday. In a stampede of citizens from near Pensaukee an infant in a cradle was caught by the flames and burned. Bodies of horses, cows and other animals have been found along the roads over which the fire has passed. Along the line of the Wisconsin Central Railroad for 100 miles forest fires were raging Monday. People are fighting the flames that threatened to destroy the towns. At De Pere, Monday, a disastrous fire occurred. Almost thirty families were burned out, many business blocks were destroyed, and the Presbyterian church was also laid in ashes. The loss will reach $50,000.

Daniel Madigan, a teamster, fell from the roof of a house in New York, upon Thomas Donovan who was passing. Madigan was killed; Donovan was fatally injured.

Hundreds of thousands of acres of openings where the second growth of pine was growing have been burned over in Wisconsin. From the best information obtainable it is estimated that fifty saw mills were consumed along the line of the Wisconsin Central Railroad, and thousands of cords of piled wood, ties, etc., are in ashes. The number of homeless families is estimated at seven hundred, representing some 3,500 people.

foreign

The British Parliament is to be prorogued on Tuesday. It is said that the prospects of the Conservative party have greatly improved, owing in a large measure to Lord Salisbury's speech at the Lord Mayor's banquet, and the confidence in European peace. An effort is being made to induce Lord Hartington to accept the leadership of the Unionist Liberals, on the ground that the Gladstone Liberals are certain to secede and that Gladstone will surely drift toward Parnellism.

Rioting commenced in Belfast early Sunday morning. From the housetops and the street-corners well-armed partisans fought a bloody and hard contested battle. The military was called, and charged the mob, which fled, leaving dead and dying on the streets. In the afternoon another mob formed, and when attacked by the police fought a stubborn battle, but was compelled to give way. At Widnes, Lancashire, England, an Orange procession was jeered. The men broke ranks, attacked the mob, and left two or three of them dead.

At Berlin a German-African society has been formed, with a capital of 2,000,000 marks, the capital stock to consist of 2,000 shares, each worth 1,000 marks. This society will begin its work on the territory of the East African society.

FOREIGN.

A dispatch from Leigh, Lancashire, England, Aug. 13, states that a terrible explosion occurred that morning in the Wood-end colliery at that place. One hundred and forty miners were below at the time. Forty miners perished by the explosion.

A balloon called the Torpilleur, fitted with a patent steering and propelling apparatus, has just made a journey from Cherbourg, France, to London in seven hours.

The latest advices from Mexico are to the effect that a strong war feeling gains there. Some of the prominent citizens across the Rio Grande are of the opinion that the United States in case of war would not have Mexico alone to cope with, they hinting that Spain and Great Britain would take a hand in the controversy. There is little change in the Cutting affair. The U. S. Government's demand for the surrender of the prisoner is still on file in the office of Mexico's Secretary of State. It is said, however, that the United States will stand firm by its demand for the release of Cutting. The government denies that any foreign power has the right to arrest, try, and imprison an American for crimes committed in this country.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD
FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases,

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS FOR $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing, Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting. German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.

Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President, BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline
BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost, Horatius Bonar, Henry Morehouse, George C. Needham, D. L. Moody, D. W. Whittle, J. H. Brookes, A. J. Gordon, William Lincoln, J. H. Vincent, Chas. M. Whittelsey, R. C. Morse, L. W. Munhall, Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers. Address, W. F. BAKER, Wheaton, Ill.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,
of the Chicago Press.

THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.
ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
143 LaSalle St.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE

TESTED TO OVER 1600 LBS. TO SQ. INCH

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists,
London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING
ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 49. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1886. WHOLE No. 852.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞ No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid. ☜

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
Guilty..... 9
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Strength of the Church 1
How they love the Cause. 2
The Black Host..... 2
The Work of God and Satan in South Africa.... 2
SELECTIONS:
What Shall be Done with Utah?..... 3
Secret Societies not after the Model of Christ.... 3
REFORM NEWS:
Iowa State Meeting; Wisconsin Work; To the Friends of Reform in Ohio..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Nathan Brown; Lawyer Black of the Anarchist Trial; Organized Anarchy; Pith and Point.. 5,6
Press Comment 4
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE 11
THE N. C. A... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
LITERATURE..... 12
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
NOTICES..... 12
LODGE NOTES..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 13
MARKETS 13

The order of the Secretary of the Treasury calling in $24,000,000 worth of government bonds for redemption,and the probability that $16,000,000 worth more will be canceled before winter, calls out the boast from the Republican press that under the administration of their party the reduction of the debt would have been $40,000,000 more than it now is. In nineteen years the United States national debt has been reduced by the enormous sum of $1,347,948,622 while the reduction of the annual interest charge for the same period is $103,653,866. The marvelous recuperative energy of our country which these figures manifest are the wonder of the world, and especially are they a surprise to the financiers and statesmen of Europe. Twenty-five years ago it was feared the war debt would be a legacy to several generations, but no sooner was our most exhaustive and and expensive war over than the debt payment began and has continued until nearly one half has been paid and the rate of interest at the same time correspondingly reduced. The wisdom of this course, instead of expending our revenues on vast armaments,will more and more appear as the years pass.

The meeting of the Irish National League in this city last week was a characteristic and tumultuous gathering. From first to last Irish pugnacity well-nigh eclipsed Irish patriotism. The war of faction began weeks ago, and between parties and individuals it was continued to the very end, when Finerty, late member of Congress from this city, had to be held back by force to prevent his falling upon one-armed Michael Davitt, the "father of the Irish Land League," who was present as a guiding genius and representative of Parnell. Alexander Sullivan, the assassin of school teachers, was the champion of the controlling party in the League, which had the offices and meant to keep them. He is pale, smooth-faced, high-browed, determined, and as ready for a fight as a cow-boy just out of a saloon. The speaker of the oppostion seemed to be W. J. Hynes, an able lawyer, an eloquent speaker, and a devoted Catholic. The hand of the church of Rome was seen in the sprinkling of priests in the convention, and the prominence given to them. A Methodist preacher named Pepper and an Episcopalian named Betts, were apparently the only persons outside the Irish Catholic lines who took part. The former spread himself in a short speech, and raised a whoop by offering to fight for Ireland; the latter is Grand Prelate of the Grand Encampment of the Knight Templar Masons of the United States. This Freemason was chairman of the most important committee in the convention—on platform and resolutions! The election of officers and hearing of reports seemed to be the only business of the convention, but the end of all the eloquence and enthusiasm was evidently moral support and money for Parnell. Davitt and three eloquent companions were present from the Irish members of Parliament, and by their calm and steady repudiation of desperate measures, at mention of which the convention was ever ready to cheer, did much to recommend them to observing Americans; but a disinterested spectator, though kindled with the eloquence of the speakers and the impetuous zeal of the members, could hardly feel satisfied with Gladstone's Home Rule measures if their execution were not left with men of more coolness and judgment.

Gen. Logan is making fast the Pacific States to his Presidential raft. He is touring up and down the coast and everywhere rousing enthusiasm and making votes. The Grand Army is already solid for him, and his well-advertised and almost public initiation into Royal Arch and Knight Templar Masonry in Chicago was just as urgent a request for the votes of the Masonic lodge as if he had gone from lodge to lodge like a mendicant Rob Morris, begging for them. But he has not all the field to himself. Mr. Blaine was a while since published as a Knight of Labor. It was a doubtful rumor, considering that he has all through life kept out of secret traps. But ambition may have at length humbled conviction. The latest report is that he has been investigating the principles of prohibition and has accepted them. This is perfectly right. Every one should do as much, especially distinguished citizens of such a State as Maine. But Mr. Blaine is ambitious,and we are not yet satisfied that he is not once more the foremost aspirant for the Presidential nomination, since he has so nearly reached the office once and again. Then Roscoe Conkling, the lordly and irascible antagonist of Blaine and Garfield, is now reported to be laying his lines for the great catch. He has been out of politics long enough to quiet the prejudices of five years ago, and wields a strong Masonic influence. Such are some of the men who want the office. We hope the people are yet too wise to want them.

The assassination of Rev. G. C. Haddock, pastor of the Methodist church at Sioux City, Iowa, is rousing the indignation of temperance workers throughout the land. He was a most aggressive prohibitionist and had spent the day before the murder in the court room, where he was prosecuting forty-eight cases against saloon keepers. Several years ago in Wisconsin a shot was fired at him, and he had been more than once threatened in Sioux City. He was a clenched fist to some men, an open palm to others, said one of his friends. This pugnacious feature of his character may account for the unusual hostility of the saloon party. Sioux City has long been in their power, and they have defied all efforts to enforce the State law. Another case of attempted assassination is that of J. W. Tufts, a lawyer of Atchison, Kansas, who has been active in pushing the law against the saloons. Explosives were used to blow up his house, but fortunately without much effect. The building was shattered, but no one was killed. This return of the mob spirit to the saloon party must be regarded an evidence of its downfall.

Some weeks ago we hailed with great joy the news from so reliable a medium as the Christian Statesman that the great Pennsylvania Company had come to believe that obedience to the law of God respecting Sabbath rest was the best policy because in accordance with natural and Divine law. The Instructor of last week dashes to earth all those precious hopes of the beginning of a great and noble reform by our railways. The freight trains, it says, continue to run on the Lord's day without relaxation. There may have been a temporary order issued, but it no longer seems to be in effect, and the Assistant General Passenger Agent of the road says that, as for excursion trains, no order was ever issued or contemplated which should cause them to lay by on the Sabbath, and they are ready to run any day in the year that the public may demand. It is a short-sighted policy that in the end will prove fatal that thus defies God as well as human law. These companies are very obedient servants of the public if asked to violate the laws of God, but if urged to do justly with their employes by paying better wages, or with the public by reducing the rates, the response is the "rough" answer of wealth, monopoly and greed.

THE STRENGTH OF THE CHURCH.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

The eightieth Psalm has been for thousands of generations the litany of an oppressed and afflicted Zion. Not only did the old Hebrew church find in its wailing notes the embodied expression of her woe as she looked on her desolated temple,her walls burned with fire, her lands devoured by strangers; but in the gloom of Papal tyranny, when wrong and corruption reigned triumphant, how must the Waldenses, the Hussites, the Lollards, and all that poor and despised handful, who in those dark ages boldly contended for the faith once delivered to the saints, and sealed the witness with their blood, have found in its sublime plaint a language that never failed!

The day of persecution for the church has gone by. The vine brought out of Egypt and planted in the fruitful soil of our American Canaan has become a great tree,and"the hills are covered with the shadow of it and the boughs thereof are like the goodly cedar." Yet when she glories in her greenness and her beauty, when her heart is lifted up within her, when she forgets that she is but a branch of God's planting which "he has made strong for himself," then comes the real trial of her faith and her love. Like some mighty tree, green to its top while a concealed worm preys at its heart and its giant trunk grows to be but a rotten, empty shell, so she may nourish in her bosom the sins of worldliness and pride and self-seeking; she may let popular evils alone and find too late that they have entrenched themselves in her very heart and drained all the life sap from her limbs.

Would such things be if the twice-repeated thought in this eightieth psalm could sound like the blast of a clarion in the ears of every individual Christian:—"Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, upon the son of man that thou madest strong for thyself." A Christian has no right to be weak. When the chrism of the new birth was poured upon him, when Christ was revealed to him as his Redeemer and everlasting Friend, when he heard the call to give battle in his name against every form of ungodliness and worldly lust, when the voice of sainted loved ones seemed to cheer him on, and the glorified souls of saints and martyrs seemed to bend from the opening heavens to gird him for the warfare, then God's hand was upon him, the man of his right hand; then he made him strong for himself. And why in the church to-day this faltering, this turning back, this compromising with the enemy? Why has her strength in so many cases become weakness? When Samson gave up the secret of his God-given strength at the tears and pleadings of Delilah, he acted much like the Russian prince who stole the imperial crown jewels to satisfy the avarice of a profligate woman,only his was robbery of the King of kings, of him who had made him strong for himself, who had strung those sinews of steel, and made that mighty frame responsive to every breath of his Spirit! God has a right to expect that we shall stand firm, that our courage shall not falter nor our hearts fail us, even when the tide of battle seemingly goes in favor of the enemy. Was there ever a time when we needed more the lesson of our text?—when we needed to realize more fully that if we are weak it is our own fault?

But we who hold his banner with a grasp even death shall not unclose; who have "dared to lose with God" as Faber sublimely puts it, shall find the thought grow more precious, and more sweet, and more joy-inspiring as the years go on. And sweet as vesper chimes over blue waters at sunset shall come this answering refrain over life's troubled sea: "The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

Wellesley, Mass.

HOW THEY LOVE THE CAUSE!

BY GEORGE W. CLARK.

I see by recent issues of such Republican organs as the Detroit Tribune, Chicago Tribune and their ilk, that they are just boiling over with solicitude for the dear and greatly imperiled temperance cause in this country, and are pouring out the sweetest and most delightful gush over their devoted Prohibition brethren. Such loving and honeyed epithets as "Professional hypocrites;" "Selfish, unworthy, third-party schemers;" "Insincere and malicious mischief-makers;" "Mouthing frauds of the St. John stripe;" "Plotting Anarchists," etc.

And now, who are these "mouthing frauds" and "plotting Anarchists" so venomously anathamatized by these Republican party "organs?" I have known them and their "works" for more than half a century, and can say, they are as honest, conscientious, law-abiding, order-loving, industrious, exemplary, worthy and honorable a class of citizens as live in the United States or any other country on the globe. A class of citizens who are striving by every moral, social, religious, and political means within their power to banish from our country the greatest curse and scourge that afflicts human society—the liquor traffic.

While these "organs" are thus vilifying the earnest and consistent workers in the temperance cause, they are themselvs directly supporting the whole nefarious liquor business by sustaining a party that not only legalizes the traffic, but openly and shamelessly advocates the iniquitous license scheme, takes the "blood-money" and are thus particeps criminis in the terrible crimes and miseries that flow from it. But who are these men with hands so clean that they can thus vilify the Prohibitionists? And what right have they any way to malign the motives of the purest class of their fellow citizens?

And now, what have these temperance men done that they should be singled out, and thus outraged by such party organs as these? Simply carried out their honest convictions; been true and consistent with their professions; exercised the privilege which belongs to every American citizen; nominated men who represent and will carry out their principles, men known to be pronounced Prohibitionists, a thing which the old parties would not, dare not do, so completely are they under the control and subservient to the liquor power.

Coming out of the old pro-license parties, temperance men exercised not only a sacred, civil and moral right, but discharged a most solemn duty to their God, to society, to their homes, to their country and to posterity. And these "organs" should know that such vituperation, such spleen and spite will not win back these true and noble men and women to the support of the iniquitous license system, or seduce them into the embrace of any political party that is not out and out for PROHIBITION.

Detroit, Mich.

THE BLACK HOST.

A question may be asked, Can a reason be assigned why the United States Government should not charter and grant powers of incorporation to the Anarchists' society as well as to its twin, Freemasonry. The fact that the former do not swear to mutilate the human body after murder, as Masonry vows to do, is not a valid excuse.

Wofully ignorant and almost excusable are the masses for ignorance of Masonry, when even Abraham Lincoln, acting as President, was duped to sign the act incorporating Masonry; and, in the act of so doing, the highest Masons claimed that the Government was only doing a chore as the clerk of the Masonic government, that was over and above and controller of all governments.

We have recently seen one State, with a whisky bibber and blaspheming Masonic governor at its head, having recourse to every subterfuge and sham excuse, and backed by the Masonized press, tolerate murder and destruction of property, rather than prevent it by military force, for fear of hurting or offending some Masonic brethren in the mob. In another State we have seen an Anti-masonic governor (combating a more formidable force) call out promptly the military and sustain the law and preserve and maintain peace, and no violence ensued to life or property.

France and England each claim to be the head and seat of the world of Masonry, to which all Masons owe an allegiance above what they owe or can owe to any other government, as all other governments must sit at the feet of Masonry. The only difference is that France holds that Masonry should be founded on atheism, and England insists on deism; the latter assigning that the church can be more easily held in subjection to Masonry, and more readily take the bait.

This beast, Masonry, has cost the Catholic church much precious blood and treasure, of which the present generatiou are uot couscious. The wail of the Protestaut church is yet to come; for it has yet to reap what, defiant of heaveu, it has sown. Secret societies are now rampant and permeatiug the nations, all of them bold in their demand for renewed crucifixion of the Just One. Royal Arch Masonry, where the elite aud favored entrench themselves, rejoices in being the controlliug power to wield all the secret forces against church and state, for its self-aggraudizement. It demauds empire aud subjugation of the world, and the overthrow and demolition of the church to-day, as it carries the well-filled Pandora's box of secretism that 'ere long will fly open, to startle that church in its embrace of death.

O. S. O.

THE WORK OF GOD AND SATAN IN SOUTH AFRICA.

BY REV. WILLIAM HAZENBERG.

It is now little more than a year ago that I wrote for the Cynosure, and conscience accuses me somewhat for having postponed it so long, but trust the following may be interesting to many readers of the Cynosure, especially to those of Dutch descent. The last time I wrote was from Ventersdorp, in Transvaal, after we had come there with a bullock wagon, drawn by sixteen oxen, and worked a little while at this place for the conversion of sinners and the healing of the sick.

We went all through the Transvaal from one side to the other, working at the following villages: Teerust, Veutersdorp, Klerksdorp, Hartebeestfontein, Potchefstroom, Heidelberg and Standerton.

Satan has opposed the work as much as possible, and he has done much mischief. Still he could not prevent, that many souls have been converted, and not a few sick people healed of bodily diseases through prayer. At the first-named place he worked in the hearts of some of the baser sort to threaten us with shooting (formerly I wrote to the Cynosure what kind of shooters the Boers are), if we should hold religious service at a certain place. We went in spite of their threatening, trusting in God for protection, and the result was that we kept our lives, and that a great and divine blessing was experienced. Afterward we heard that the enemies had been around the house with loaded guns, but no shot was heard. Many sinners have been converted at these places named, having left off drunkenness, swearing, fighting, dancing, etc., and serving the Lord in spirit and in truth.

There is one, S. J. Du Toit, formerly minister in Cape Colony, but now superintendent of schools in Transvaal, who has been a very faithful servant of Satan with regard to our work in South Africa. He has written a pamphlet against us, stating that we heal the sick through Beelzebub, and indicatiug that I am the anti-Christ, and the people, in general ignorant of the Scripture as well as of our persons and work, are apt to believe such blasphemy, and dread very much our presence. We doubt not that God will visit this evil-doer with punishment, and his influence is nearly lost already in every respect.

At Potchefstroom, which is a large village, here called a city, we labored nine weeks in succession, preaching every evening the Gospel, and the attendance often was very large. My wife held meetings with ladies and children in the afternoons, which were greatly blessed by the Lord. The work of the Lord has been marvelous at this place. Formerly they used to hold prayer meeting once a month, while the attendance was very small, whereas since our labor there they keep it weekly, with almost a church full of people.

C. W. Du Toit, minister of this place, and brother of the above-named, was very friendly to us, favoring our work with his presence and otherwise as much as he dared to, for the opposition from the officers of the church was such that they refused us the benches of the church to use, much less were we permitted to hold meetings in the church. Formerly we had an idea that the people of Transvaal were in general a truly religious people, but in this we have been very much disappointed. Drunkenness, lying, swearing and dancing are very common among them, though almost all of them are members of the church, partakers of the Lord's supper, and boasters of their orthodoxy. If it be the Lord's will that we have to visit America to work among our Dutch people, then we expect better treatment of them, although perhaps Satan will also be able to use some of them to oppose us, and the work God is doing through us. We have labored a year in Transvaal, and we praise our God that he has to such an extent blessed our work, in spite of all the wiles of Satan. Finally we crossed the Vaal River, the boundary between Transvaal and the Orange Free State, with our own bullock wagon, which we had traded from a Boer in Transvaal for a large organ, giviug him £15 or $75 besides. We felt our need of such a vehicle, since we ought to have our own bedding, furniture and cookery with us, in order to be able to occupy a house in a village wherever we happen to come.

The first minister in the Orange Free State, who heard that we visited a member of his congregation, advised him to send "the pest" away. In the district of Bethlehem, in Orange Free State, we met some people who had left the church, and pretend to practice faith-healing. They had among them an infectious disease which is quite common in South Africa, and they refuse the use of medicine, saying that they have also experienced healing from the Lord. These people, however, were possessed of an evil spirit of pride, condemning every one as unconverted, who does not in everything fully agree with them. They have caused us much sorrow.

Satan tries to oppose the work of the Lord in various ways. A few days ago we arrived at Bethlehem, which is a nice village, mostly inhabited by English people, as is usual with the villages in the Orange Free State. Here is a beautiful church building of the Dutch Reformed church, costing £14,000 or $70,000. Some members say the blessing of God was more experienced in the old church than in the new. Pride and selfishness are apt to destroy all religion. At our arrival we first visited the minister of this church, who is a pious man, and received us kindly, procuring a house for us to live in, and bestowing upon us all manner of kindness. We are preaching here already, and expect great blessing upon the work. Forget us not in your prayers.

Capetown.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH UTAH?

July 24th, 1847, an advance company of about 150 Mormons emerged from the Wahsatch through "Emigration Canon," and entered Salt Lake Valley, and that day has ever since been kept with great eclat. No other anniversary approaches it in interest and exhilaration, for the Saints of the Great Basin, and it has now come to be a sort of Fourth, Christmas and Thanksgiving, all in one. This year some features attended the celebration, of which the American people will do well to take note.

In Salt Lake the Big Tabernacle was thronged with not less than 10,000 people. The four tiers of benches and pulpits, set apart for the exclusive use of four grades of church officials, were empty, every one, and heavily draped in funereal black. Over the upper tier, which mourns the long and hopeless absence of John Taylor, Geo. Q. Cannon, and Joseph F. Smith, the triune head of the Latter-day hierarchy, an arch stretched of somber hue, and bearing this motto: "The First Presidency: In exile for conscience's sake." In front, and below, a second arch bore these words: "Of the Twelve Apostles and Counsellors: Those not here are in jeopardy, in prison, and in foreign lands, because they prefer to obey God rather than man." Still lower a third inscription alleged as follows: "The Presidency of the Stake: Having tasted of the vengeance of their enemies, and felt their cruel disregard of law, their labors and visits are like the angels, seen only by those who have faith." The allusion is to Angus M. Cannon, who spent six months in prison, and since has not been visible to Gentile mortal's eye. The lowest of all was spanned with this sentiment: "Of the Presiding Bishopric: Those who are absent choose to be wanderers in their own land, in preference to being victims to those who have selected them for ruin."

By a band preseut was furnished at intervals music of a most melancholy and lugubrious sort—e. g., "Pass under the Rod," a dirge, "Rest in Peace," and "The Dead March in Saul." The speaking, likewise, was wholly set in the minor key. Thus, Eliza R. Snow, who some years before the "revelation" on "celestial marriage" was "sealed" to the Nauvoo prophet "for time and eternity," and after his death for time to Brigham Young, and who ever since has been the high priestess of polygamy, furnished a lamentation for the occasion, which began from the day when "Joseph Smith, my beloved husband, [though Emma had been his wife for twenty years], the choice of my heart and the crown of my life, a prophet of the living God, and by him appointed to open the last dispensation, was cruelly assassinated," and came down to the time when "our dear brother [Apostle Lorenzo Snow] with whom I have often taken sweet counsel is incarcerated in prison, like a felon, confined within grating bars, and clad in a felon's suit. What has he done? He has held sacred and inviolate all constitutional laws of our country, and the unconstitutional one (Edmund's Bill, to-wit) he has fully obeyed. Then why in prison? Persecution has driven him there. The highest judicial court in these so called United States acknowledged its imbecility and its powerlessness in meeting out justice to Latter Day Saints," etc., etc.

Next Bishop O. F. Whitney sang the praises of the Pioneers, likening their achievement to that of the Hebrews at the Exodus, and to that of the Pilgrim Fathers. He solemnly protested that their children of to-day are not traitors or foes to their country, and prophesied that the day was at hand when the Mormon Church "would rescue that sacred instrument, the Constitution, from the hands of those who would destroy it!" And finally, Elder B. H. Roberts explained once more why the Saints are so sad, and have hung their harps on the willows, as it were. The honored of Israel were absent or in dungeons. Pioneer day should never more be a season of joy until those silver haired chiefs were able, without fear of marshals, again to occupy their wonted seats in the Tabernacle. "Who shall come between this people and their God, or dictate what shall be their religion? Can our enemies hope to crush the convictions of our hearts? With united voice we tell them, No! They cannot. It will not be done." Just before the benediction the great audience was asked to indorse these patriotic sentiments by uplifted right hands and a thunderous Amen.

What a sad and alarming spectacle this in the nineteenth century and in America! An alien host, a hostile church, a treasonable government set up in the very midst of the Republic. Two hundred thousand taught daily, in the name of God, to hate what we love. A reckless band of theocrats, tugging with might and main to overthrow institutions, the choice fruit of ages of most painful endeavor, which, a century since, our fathers poured out their precious blood to plant, and our brothers of a generation since, their blood to defend and perpetuate. Surely, this perversity and folly combined must be severely taken in hand, and looked to with zeal and determination which never flag, or else mischief the gravest will be wrought. Delenda est Carthago!—Independent.

SECRET SOCIETIES NOT AFTER THE MODEL OF CHRIST.

These societies constitute one of the most marked features of the social economy of our times. In council and lodge rooms thousands are in nightly conclave throughout the land. The strong propensity of men to associate for some common purpose of brotherhood and benevolence seems to have run wild in this direction. And even the women, catching the infection, are organizing in a similar way. An outsider is astonished when one of these great orders marshals its forces for a street parade.

It is well known that these societies receive the countenance of many professing Christians. Many who are not yet members of them are subject to their solicitations. It becomes, therefore, a vital question, what should be the conduct of a Christian in this regard? Is it in accordance with his position, as one of the Lord's peculiar people, called out from the world's darkness, to identify himself with them? To the scattered brethren in Christ who read these pages, and who are anxious to know the Lord's will, we need offer no apology for this endeavor to answer so serious an inquiry. But, first, to clear the subject of extraneous matters which do not affect our present inquiry, we would premise that we are not now considering whether a man of the world may not join in these orders, and, in some cases, with benefit to himself and family. Our inquiry is simply, Has a Christian any place among them? Nor, secondly, do we propose to enter into the frequent comparison made between them and existing church organizations. We have already alluded to the dangers that beset the church in her attempts to represent the doctrine of Christ in the world. If she has failed, this does not prove these substitutes and imitations of her organization a proper refuge for her members. Nor, thirdly, do we propose to discuss the claims of these orders on the low ground of reason. Many a thing may be logically maintained as according to the principles and deductions of the natural mind, and yet be wholly contrary to the word of God. We may admit that the annals of these orders are adorned by many a good deed, that the effect of their culture is sometimes humanizing. The same thing, however, is true of almost every false system, such as Mohammedanism or Brahminism. These systems may surpass our existing churches in some outward acts of piety, and benevolence and self-mortification. And yet no Christian would, on that account, dream of joining them.

Coming, then, directly to the point in hand, we charge against these organizations, first, that they contain a system of religion; and, secondly, they are devised and built up after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of this world, and not after Christ.

First, they contain a system of religion. The term "religion" is sometimes used as synonymous with Christianity. But they are very different terms. "Religion" applies to any system in which God is worshiped under any form, even if senseless stocks and stones are invoked to aid the worship. Christianity is the worship of God in Christ, the only way in which he can now be worshiped. For he that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him. These systems, then, are religious, inasmuch as they generally inculcate reverence for God in some form. In one of them, the most ancient, and the one that seems to have furnished the model for the others, there are, if we mistake not, prescribed forms of worship; at least on public occasions, such as corner-stone festivals, funerals, and the like, religious forms are used. Some of them find their object of worship in an idea, such as the common brotherhood of man. This, or some such central idea, furnishes at least the altar around which their affections cluster and their homage is paid. But the worship of an idea, unless that idea or image be Christ, "the image of the Invisible God," is just as truly idolatry as the worship of Juggernaut. That the votaries of these systems either designedly or unwittingly regard them as forms of religion is apparent from their frequent comparisons between their societies and the Christian church, and the frequent remark that to be a good Odd-fellow or Mason is all the religion a man needs. It is also proved from the undeniable fact that these orders do gratify and appease that religious instinct which, we have said, is common to mankind. It also appears in the fact that, among church members, the most zealous attendants on their meetings are the least reliable attendants on the weekly gatherings of the church for prayer and the study of God's word. Even their formal attendance on the Lord's day is easily interrupted by these rival claims. Unknown, perhaps, to themselves, devotion to these orders becomes a religion to their members, and gradually displaces, alas! in many a Christian, the only true worship and allegiance to God in Christ.

This deteriorating effect is produced because, secondly, these systems are begotten and developed according to the rudiments or elements of this world, and the traditions of men. It is so with all human religions. The Mohammedan excels many a Christian in the frequency and fervor of his prayers. But his devotion results from faith in human fictions and traditions. Paganism is full of imposing forms of worship, and furnishes many instances of self-abnegation and acts of mercy. These systems may be said to be humanizing. But they are all constructed on worldly principles. And so the systems under review take man as they find him, and build him up into some brotherhood, or devise some method by which he imagines himself to be serving his Maker, without testimony to his ruin by sin and his radical need of new life from God in Christ, before he can do the first act acceptable to him. They draw from this system of nature, as they find it coming from the hands of its great Architect, as they say, their principles of order and harmony and beauty, without recognizing that for his own inscrutable reasons God has suffered the blight of sin and death to fall upon Creation, and that it cannot adequately express to us his glory until all things are made new. This is the grand underlying reason of that prohibition in the second commandment. It is not in the present outward forms of nature that we are to look for God, or discern his likeness, but in Christ The most ancient form of these false religions, for such we cannot but deem them, is so entirely a system of naturalism or deism, so entirely devoted to this idea of the universal brotherhood of man, whether Jew, Turk, or Pagan, that the name of Christ is systematically left out, at least in all its public exhibitions, and, we opine, no less so in its private.

It may shelter itself, perhaps, behind the pretence that it reverences the God of the Old Testament; but to revive Judaism now, is to revive a system that crucified the Lord of glory, and that still puts him to an open shame. This in a Christian is worse than paganism. The grand crime of Judaism was, that it did not recognize Jesus Christ as the form under which the Jehovah of the Old Testament had appeared, nor that all worship of the One Living God was henceforth to be rendered in his name. For a Christian now to identify himself with a system that pretends to worship God in any way except as he has made himself known in Christ, or that seeks to consolidate men in a wide system of brotherhood, except as they are made one in Christ, is such a sad and grievous apostasy from him that, were it not done in ignorance, it would be ruinous. All of these systems virtually deny man's ruin out of Christ. They pretend to make of human nature that which is not possible to it without the renewing grace of God. By striving, as they say, to make men unselfish and benevolent, they are merely putting new wine into old bottles, and patching up this miserable old garment of man's righteousness with here and there a shred of new cloth. And the effect of all this is to conceal from men the knowledge of their guilt and ruin, to foster their self-esteem by the performance of a few good deeds, to shut their eyes to the only divine provision for their salvation in the death and resurrection of Jesus. Reader, if you have watched the workings of these systems in the community, and in the lives of individuals, you will find that just this is their tendency.

Can a Christian contribute in any way to sustain systems that mislead and blind the souls of men? Is this the way he is to let his light shine in a dark world? If the light in us be darkness, how great is that darkness!

That these orders are built up according to the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ, and are hence a denial of Christ, is farther apparent in their desire to make a fair show in the flesh, in their fondness for parade and applause, in the air of secrecy with which they surround themselves, in the sensuous baits they throw out to attract others, in their selfish promise of aggrandizement and business advantage, in their skillfully devised systems of rank and hierarchy, appealing to the ambition of their members and their fondness for display, beckoning them on, step by step, up the bewitching heights to the "honor" that comes "from men." Is not all this according to the ordinary principles of human nature—"the rudiments of the world?"

It may be said that, in these criticisms, we have overlooked a noble element, that they are organizations for improving and benefiting men. We expressly stated, at the outset, that we might concede to them such an element, although we cannot do so without remarking that it is not Gospel charity which is based on the commercial principle of the payment of dues in order to be entitled to benefits. Nor is that the benevolence of Christ which first inquires whether a neighbor in distress be one of our own clan. We do not, however, propose to discuss this point. Still less would we be willing to do the least injustice to these orders, or fail to recognize a good and kind act, by whomsoever done.

We are now addressing Christians. To such we feel bound to say that these systems were constructed "after the tradition of men and the rudiments of the world," and not after Christ, and therefore we should have nothing to do with them. We dare not keep silent when so many brethren are beguiled by the great enemy, in these angel garbs of light, into associations and affinities where they cannot carry Christ with them, where his vital doctrine is surrendered, or at least ignored; yea, where his name is publicly dishonored by the strange fire of worship not kindled at this golden altar, the only meeting-place between God and man. Be assured, "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God. This is that spirit of anti-Christ, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world."

These systems are too effectually aiding to ripen the world for that crowning system of apostasy—built up so cunningly and compactly after the rudiments of this world, as to deceive, if possible, the very elect—the system of final and flat denial of man's need of God in Christ, ending in crowning man his own god and saviour in this temple of nature. This grand and bewitching and almost universal idea of human brotherhood, and of a common era when it will be realized in peace on earth and good will to men, is anti-Christ, because it proposes to do all this without Christ; and it is significant how readily modern Judaism, the still unrelenting rejecter of Christ, falls in with these ideas. Surely we need to guard well against these flattering devices, this cunning craftiness of men, whereby they lie in wait to deceive. It cannot be otherwise than that by so much as these orders engage the interest and command the support of Christians, by so much will they be less true and faithful to their Lord. We beseech brethren who have been thus beguiled to examine this matter in prayerful study of the word of God. And may God enlighten us all more fully in the knowledge of our calling and position in Christ, in that his death has forever separated us from the evil of the world, and his resurrection kindled within us motives and aspirations entirely transcending the whole order of this present world, in which its children find so much to satisfy and amuse them. Brethren, we are blessed with blessings, infinitely greater than all these, a companionship infinitely more sacred, a love of far wider range. We have that which may far better engage all our time and energies, and stimulate all our noblest feelings and desires. Our business is here in an age that disowns Christ, in every way to confess to the glory and the grace of our absent Lord, as the great need of dying men, and of a world lying in the wicked one: to reply to all the vain philosophies and deceits of men that in Him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge; to say to those who would meet the felt wants of their sinful human nature by these worldly systems, that we have no need of them, that we "are complete in Him, the head of all principality and power;" and that our life work is, as we "have received Christ Jesus the Lord, to walk in him, rooted and built up in him, in whom," for us, "dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily."—Evangelical Repository.

PRESS COMMENT.

The secret of much of the labor depression and agitation of the past year may be found in the report of the department of Internal Revenue. It appears that the consumption of beer has increased 1,524,980 barrels. The consumption in 1885 was greater than ever before, and, adding the officially reported increase as given in the New York Tribune, it appears that no less than 642,000,000 gallons of beer were consumed last year, or 10.83 gallons for every inhabitant, children included. Considering that thousands of our population have been educated up to temperance principles, this would indicate an equivalent of a pint a day for half the adult population. The increase in the consumption of whisky was 1,606,108 gallons, which makes the consumption for the year 70,763,010 gallons, or 1.19 per capita. The increase in the consumption of tobacco and cigars is also remarkable, especially in their least healthy forms, particularly snuff and cigarettes, the latter appearing at present to be the lowest, most degrading form the habit has assumed. And all this has cost this land of the free over $800,000,000. Figures may sometimes lie, but they also preach eloquent sermons.—Baltimore Observer.

The London Times directly charges the Orangemen with the responsibility for the riots and bloodshed. It tells them plainly that theirs was the victory. Their party was in power. They themselves were in the majority in Belfast. They had everything in their own hands. The mayor, the magistrates, the money, the means—all were in their hands. And they set to work to celebrate their victory by hacking and hewing and harrying and insulting and goading on to desperation the minority of their Catholic fellow-citizens. The truth of the situation is this: the Orangemen fought for sheer deviltry and for the love of inflicting death and wounds and loss on the Catholics; the Catholics had to fight for their lives and property.—Catholic Review.

The Presbyterian Banner, of Pittsburgh, says: "Rev. J. T. McCrory, a United Presbyterian minister of this city, and principal officer of the Anti-Desecration Society of the eleventh ward, has received a letter in which the taking of his life is threatened unless he ceases his efforts towards shutting up the saloons on the Lord's day. Mr. McCrory is not a man to be alarmed by warnings of that kind. But the saloon men may as well know that such a warfare can have only one termination, that is the wiping out of their business." Later information is that Bro. McCrory has received a second warning from those cowardly miscreants; but the Lord is with his servants that trust in him and do their duty.—The Midland.

No milder word than butchery can be applied to the work of the Belfast mobs, and those who took part in it were not men, women and children but fiends, Protestant fiends and Catholic fiends. There have been bitter and bloody religious feuds in the history of the world, but never a more senseless or satanic quarrel than that which the hateful name "Orange" perpetnates between the Protestants and Catholics of Ireland. That word has been responsible for enough bitter feeling, bloody rioting and fiendish outrages to condemn it to eternal reproach and the organization which defends it to the contempt of mankind. One of the worst riots we ever had in New York was due to the bad blood excited by an Orange parade. The hateful feud has existed long enough. The Battle of the Boyne is almost two centuries old, and it is time its bitter memories were buried. We do not mean to intimate that all the blame for the Belfast rioting belongs to the Orangemen. It is certainly shared by the Catholics, and as to brutality both certainly excel.—Independent.

The Socialists are nearly all infidels. We do not include in this class the gentle sentimentalists who patronize socialism in order to be odd or original, or because they think there ought to be some new pathway out of the ills of life. These infidels are especially mad against God because he is the impersonation of law and authority. They like better the idea of nature coming out of primitive chaos by fortuitous accidents. But in this up-coming of nature the strong have always trampled upon the weak, devoured them, and appropriated the fruits of their labor. But here again is the pet animosity of the socialist. He does not want any man to exercise any physical or mental power that shall lift him above the enforced average level. He will not have God, nor any other ruler. He will not have the laws of blind nature. He cannot make the universe over to suit himself. What, then, does the socialist aim to do? From all that can be seen of him his ambition is to have the labor unions tax themselves to support him in idleness.—Interior.

Government by Snap of the Finger.—A few days ago a cigarmaker walked into the office of Mr. William Strange, of Paterson, N. J., who employs 1,200 persons in his large silk mills, and demanded that he sign an order which would revolutionize the dyeing shop. Mr. Strange declined to do so, whereupon the cigarmaker at once went out, and as he passed the dyeing shop snapped his fingers, at which signal all the operatives in the shop dropped their work and left the premises. They subsequently admitted that they had no grievance, and that they were indignant at being ordered to stop work, but they claimed that under the laws of their labor organization they had no option. The love of power is an instinct with all, and it is not surprising that the labor element, now that it sees the strength to be derived from association, should like to use that strength more or less wantonly. But ignorance and passion will ruin any cause. Labor can only be really strong by being right. And the labor cause will break down unless it studies the principles of human society and obeys them. In the case just cited, if the facts are as reported, these fundamental principles of liberty and order were ignored; and the result can only be confusion and ruin. Whatever the remedy for labor troubles may be, certainly it is not the snap of the finger.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

—Rev. C. B. Graham, our brother of the Midland, has embarked on the turbulent sea of politics. But as he is aboard a staunch craft, and is not afraid of water, and has good hope in his God, he fears not wind or wave. Since the prohibition movement took shape in politics in Nebraska, Bro. Graham has been among the foremost supporters of the cause and most eloquent. He prevented the Good Templar lodges from capturing prohibition and dragging it at the chariot wheel in that State, and has compelled all parties to respect the convictions of the Anti-masons of Nebraska. His nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, therefore, is a deserved and respectful recognition of his services. We hope that he will be elected. Let every Christian reformer vote for him.

Reform News.

IOWA STATE MEETING.

Iowa now has an efficient, competent and acceptable agent in Rev. C. F. Hawley, who has been "often tried, never denied, and who is willing to be tried again," either by Masons or others. He is a safe, fearless and energetic Christian man, well posted and of pleasing address. Friends have made a good start in pledges for his support for the year to come, and many have shown a willingness to take hold of the reform work with renewed energy and zeal. The next step is a rousing convention at Birmingham on the 31st of August and the 1st and 2d of September. The outlines of this convention have been well drawn, and what remains to make it a victory must be supplied by the friends of the cause throughout the State.

After the blessing of God, the one thing needed above all else is the attendance of friends from every county, and from all parts of the State churches should appoint delegates and provide for their traveling expenses. Hospitality is guaranteed and will be furnished at the convention. Individuals should be willing to make sacrifices, if need be, to attend this annual gathering, and all should come filled with the Spirit. The recent outbreaks of secret anarchist societies and the derangement of business interests by secret labor orders, have called public attention to this question, and everything conspires to render the time favorable and the demand urgent for the largest, most enthusiastic meeting ever held on this subject west of the Mississippi river. Pres. Charles A. Blanchard is among the speakers of ability who have promised to be present, and those who attend may rely on a bill of fare that will well repay the cost, trouble, and if need be, sacrifice of being at this feast. God calls for volunteers, because the cause needs them, because the issue is squarely joined between Christ and anti-Christ in this battle for supremacy, because he has chosen weak human instrumentalities to defend the truth and the bride of Christ on the field of mortal combat. Brother, sister, will you come and stand face to face with the "prince of the power of the air" in this crisis and crucial test of moral heroism. I expect to meet and greet many of you where the fight has been sharp and the ground successfully held by the heroic Dr. Norris and his associates for these years.

J. P. Stoddard.

WISCONSIN WORK.

On Lord's Day, August 8, I preached, by invitation of Bro. W. Van Driessen, in the Wesleyan chapel at Lyons, near Baraboo, morning and evening. A collection was taken for the cause. On Monday evening, August 9, I lectured in the Wesleyan chapel at Peck's Corners, Fairfield.

It was harvest time and I had arranged for only one lecture, but at the close a goodly number signified their desire for another lecture on the next evening, so one was announced. A larger audience on the second evening was encouraging. Two seceded Odd-fellows, Bro. John Gillem being one, sat in a front seat. Bro. Wallace Porter and several members of his family came several miles to both meetings. His zeal is unabated, and, at his desire, I expect to lecture in the Adventist chapel near him before long. At the close of the second lecture Elder Halstead called for a collection, which was taken, though the extraordinary drougth and hard times make collections small. Quite a number publicly signified their purpose to help this cause of reform to the best of their ability. I enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. Bennett, Gillem, Halstead, and Herron.

Through the efforts of Bro. Albert Watkins, of near Baraboo, I was invited to preach at the weekly prayer-meeting of Adventist Christians, who assemble two and one-half miles southeast of Baraboo. I spoke to them with considerable liberty, and hope to lecture there in future. After meeting I rode home, six miles, with Bro. Watkins. He is a seceded Mason, and has much interest in this reform.

Calling at J. W. Wood's the next day, some conference was had about the next State meeting. Bro. Wood is a careful Bible student, and as I sat down, he exclaimed, "We're in for it, Bro. Browne," and then called my attention to passages that had lately attracted his attention, describing the idolatry of the Israelites in practicing false worship "on every high hill and under every green tree," and to the fact that the same worships are now practiced in secret lodge, Freemasonry claiming openly to derive its practice in the matter of the location of lodge-rooms, from the customs of these very idolaters of old. Yes, as Bro. Wood says, "We're in for it," unless the nation repents of these idolatries. The unchangeable Jehovah who punished ancient Israel for false worship, will punish in like manner the United States for the same false worship, unless there shall be repentance. Are we doing all we can to enlighten the people? to save the country?

Thursday, August 12, I went to Friends' church, Friendswood, west of Ironton. Got there about 6:30 P. M., just as the prayer-meeting was begun. I went to a spring and washed off some of the stains of travel, put off the request of my stomach for supper, attended the meeting, and, after it had closed, spoke on the anti-Christian character of secretism, to an attentive audience. Bro. J. W. De Lap was over from Big Creek. Bro. Solomon Cook, a Friend Quaker, kindly entertained me that night.

The next day I went with Bro. De Lap to near Valton, at which place it was arranged that I should lecture on the 24th and 25th. Returning I lectured in Bethel Wesleyan chapel, near Friendswood that evening, August 13. The audience was larger than on the preceding evening, quite a number having come from long distances in various directions, several "brethren of the mystic tie" among the rest. When called on after the lecture, a good many men and women raised their hands in pledge that they would do all they could to help on the reform. But times are hard, and the collection was small.

Shall this work be continued? How? Let's hear, at once, from those who will pledge help. Write without delay, friends, to your treasurer, M. R. Britten, Vienna, Walworth county, Wisconsin, and say what you think you can do.

Where shall the State meeting be? We want to hear from you about that, too, and soon.

Yours in the work, J. F. Browne.

TO THE FRIENDS OF REFORM IN OHIO.

Dear Friends:—It is my purpose to resume work with you the 1st of September, now at hand. It seemed best that during the summer months I take rest and a change of work. During this season I have spent some time in preparing new work. I have now completed a chart representing the process of initiation into the Odd-fellow's lodge, which will, I trust, be a help to many in seeing the evils of this institution and the relation it sustains to the parent lodge.

We are planning for a vigorous fall and winter's work. Your State officers will soon mail you a circular letter, in which a report of the work done during the past year will be given and a request for your continued support. We should accomplish double the work this year, and we will, if all interested will lend a helping hand. Remember this is not only my work and the work of those who have been identified with, and have nobly sustained it in the past, but it belongs to all who desire to see the enemy of Christ and our free institutions overcome, and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus built up in the earth.

There are several hundred more readers of the Cynosure in Ohio this year than last. If you have found it to be what was recommended, true on all the reforms of the day, especially opposing the works of darkness, will you not give the light to others?

We had expected to have our State convention in October; but as many, if not all, our friends are interested in the Prohibition work, it is thought best wait until after the November election. There should be no conflict between our cause and Prohibition. They should go side by side, for God is at the head of both.

I know of no State where there is a better foundation on which reform sentiment may be built than your own. During my stay among you I was especially impressed with the frankness and honesty of your farming communities. In most instances they have been willing listeners, weighing carefully what was said, and adopting what they thought to be true. This leads me to believe that yours is a very hopeful field of reform. There are many churches in your boundaries pledged to reform principles. Among these may be mentioned the Reformed and United Presbyterian, United Brethren, Friend Quaker, Lutheran (partially), Free and Wesleyan Methodist, Mennonite, Brethren in Christ, German Baptist, River Brethren, Omish and other local churches.

Now if all these could have the secrecy question set before them in its true light, and the Holy Spirit so affect their hearts as to unite them in one grand purpose, what a terror they would be to evil doers! How the dark haunts of vice would tremble as they marched on to victory!

Is this not worth striving for? I believe every child of God's heart will respond, yes! Then let us work as never before. Let us pray as never before. Let us launch out more fully on the promises of God and we shall see a glorious work accomplished this year. Other States are preparing for a grand work; why should Ohio be behind? Will you not come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? My address will be as heretofore, No. 214 W. Second ave., Columbus, Ohio. Any desiring work done in their community or information should write as soon as convenient. W. B. Stoddard,

Ohio State Agent.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NATHAN BROWN.

Menomonie, Wis.

Dear Cynosure:—Your notice last week of this veteran missionary interests us deeply. It was indeed with great pleasure and profit that we used to read the American Baptist, of which he was the editor, and in which he so faithfully championed the anti-slavery and anti-secrecy reforms. And we sorrowfully felt that when the American Baptist became the Baptist Weekly, it not only had another name, but was another paper; not that it was not evangelical and Baptistic, and all that, but that its spinal column as a grand reform paper had dropped out, and that it was either without eyes to see that the secret empire of the country needed to be exposed and abolished, or had not the courage of its convictions. And as Samson without his locks was weak as other men, so the Weekly, without ringing articles on these great reforms, seemed like any other good Baptist paper, good enough as far as they went, and preferable on the ground of a much longer acquaintance, and so we discontinued the reading of the Baptist Weekly.

It was perhaps during the last year or last but one of the American Baptist, it contained an article of about two columns, written by a missionary in China, giving an account of four great secret societies in that country, each answering in their structure, workings and objects to the Freemasonry of America, and declared that these societies were the greatest obstacle the missionaries had to contend with in spreading the Gospel. Such an article in most of the leading religious journals would endanger the subscription lists, and might threaten great denominational interests. But Nathan Brown did not stop to take counsel of any such matters. He knew that "right is right, since God is God," and that wrong is wrong because opposed to God, and ought to be withstood, exposed and destroyed.

The late Deacon William Martin, of Hudson, Wisconsin, who died a few months since, was a schoolmate, and, I think, class-mate of Mr. Brown. Often did he delight to speak of this, and of their ardent friendship. Deacon Martin contributed liberally and specifically for the support of Mr. Brown, and watched with eager delight the progress of his work in the translation of the Scriptures into the Japanese language.

A year ago last May I stopped over night at Deacon Martin's and made him my last visit on earth. About eighty-four years of age, his powers were fast giving way, but his soul was brightening for immortality, and was waiting the joyful summons to go home. It was with the liveliest interest that he spoke of his correspondence with the great missionary, and gave me two of the letters he had received from him. They now lie before me, one dated Yokohama, April 21, 1882, and the other October 25th of the same year. In the first he speaks of money just received of Deacon Martin and other friends of his work, and of the urgent need of more printing presses and printers in order to supply the demand for the Scriptures, coming in from all quarters; and after detailing at some length the progress of evangelizing in out-lying districts, goes on to say: "The work is moving on in this country with a strong, deep current, and I am confidently expecting that in fifty years from this day the country will be either Christian or infidel; pagan idolatry will be buried, dead forevermore in Japan. On us it devolves to say whether a pure religion and a pure Bible shall be now given to them, or whether cold infidelity, which is openly preached both by high-class natives and infidel teachers from our own and other so-called Christian countries, is to have the ascendency. May we have grace to stand in our lot, and endure unto the end. We (you and I) have but a little while longer to stay, but perhaps we may, from the shores of a future world, be enabled to obtain some glimpses of what is going on in the world after we have left it. My great remaining object now is to get the Scriptures circulated among the common people, in their own character; not one in a hundred of them know any other."

In the second letter he says: "I came with fear and trembling, but with faith that I should live to accomplish something, and my expectations have been far more than realized. I have printed in the past year two million, two hundred and ninety thousand pages of the Japanese Scriptures (this is the third edition), and they are being circulated all over the empire."

Mentioning that he had a few days before received two large Washington printing presses, sent by his old friend, T. P. Childs, of Troy, Ohio, he says: "I shall have four presses running instead of two. You can scarcely form an idea of the work it is to keep four presses running fast enough to supply Scriptures for thirty-six millions of people. Bro. Childs retains the ownership of the presses in his own hands on account of the disputes between the societies, and to secure them I am going to put a plate upon each, engraved, 'Child's Mission Press,' No. 1, and No. 2. I hope they may be used to print Bibles as long as the iron lasts. I shall send you a copy of one of the Gospels which I have printed with your money. If you should send me any more, I should be glad if you would authorize me to use it, or a part of it, in printing another edition of our hymn book. It is out of print. We have about 150 excellent hymns, including all subjects: Repentance, Faith, Baptism, etc., etc.

"I shall never see you again in the flesh, but I hope we shall meet and take our walks again together beside the rivers of Paradise, as we did in days of yore beside the Hoosac, and in the pleasant villages of Schaghticoke and Whitesboro, only it will be in a sinless world, without any sorrows or shadows. Ever your affectionate brother, N. Brown."

We may now think of these two aged reformers, Anti-slavery, Anti-masonic, Bible and mission-loving men walking together, and singing songs of triumph and praise to the Atoning Lamb. These are only two of a mighty multitude who have fought and gained the victory, and will have many stars in their crowns of rejoicing.

One can hardly help contrasting with the editor, translator, missionary and reformer, Nathan Brown, the Masonic champion, Rob. Morris, L. L. D., writing books in explanation and defense of Masonry—that Christless institution; going to Palestine and other countries to hunt up Masonic relics; sending and bringing them home to sell to people simple enough to invest their money in such things. We hope Mr. Brown's biographer will not rob God and the world of the anti-secrecy phase of the great missionary's career. We know that he cannot rob him of the glorious reward of his labors in the cause of Christ and truth. W. W. Ames.

LAWYER BLACK OF THE ANARCHIST TRIAL.

The part taken by Captain W. P. Black, of the law firm of Dent & Black, of Chicago, as leading attorney in the defense of the Anarchists now on trial, brings to mind the time, some years ago, when both he and Mrs. Black, his wife, conducted holiness meetings and were prominent leaders in the holiness movement. They wrote holiness contributions to the Christian Harvester and tracts upon that subject. At that time Mrs. Black read Bernard's "Light on Masonry" and thought Freemasonry shockingly blasphemous; but Captain Black, being a Freemason did his best by all the arts of sophistry to defend Masonry, which convinced me that the truth was not in him. And of course his holiness became in my estimation only a device of the wicked one.

When we read of Mrs. B. carrying bouquets to the Anarchists in the court room and telling the florist of whom she purchases the bouquets that they are for the saints at the court house suffering martyrdom at the hands of tyrants, it is enough to make one's blood curdle at the thought of what Satan can do in the name of God and holiness; but it is no more than Christ and the apostles forewarned us of in the Scriptures that should come to pass in these latter days. It is said that Mrs. B. denies having made the above quoted remark to the florist; but be that as it may her conduct to the prisoners implies a sentiment similar to that.

So far as my observation of the general drift of holiness meetings goes, in regard to the manner in which the truth is treated in them, and the readiness with which leaders of holiness place themselves under the religious care of lying blasphemers of the secret lodges, it would not be surprising if Captain Black and his wife were as devout holiness leaders as ever. Oh, what a solemn warning to us all to see to it that God's law is written on our own hearts and that we really know God and have the pardon of our sins and his approbation. Wm. Fenton.

ORGANIZED ANARCHY.

Darlington, Mo.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—I have addressed the following letter to the Chicago Daily Inter-Ocean which the editor of that paper does not see fit to print:

Editor Inter Ocean:—In your yesterday's issue (July 23, 1886) is an editorial on "The Great Plot." The words "conspiracy," "despotism," etc., are used. Are you aware that at this hour there is in the United States an organization six hundred thousand strong, drilling under "Worshipful Masters, Kings and Grand Kings?" Every man tied to the order by a death penalty. We speak of Freemasonry. It imposes on its membership such death-penalties as to have the throat cut across and the tongue torn out by the roots, the left breast torn open and the heart and vitals taken out, the body severed in twain and the bowels taken from thence and burned. It is only a matter of hundreds of civil affidavits that such a diabolical system is operating in our very midst, a very school of assassination. These barbarous death-penalties are imposed and invoked with a solemn appeal to God for the sacredness of the murderous compact. That appeal is simply blasphemy of the darkest dye. God can be no party to such throat-cutting and tongue-pulling, breast-tearing and heart-plucking, body-severing and bowel-burning Blue Lodge covenants. Every time a Freemason visits the lodge and gives a sign or due-guard or sees one given it brings to his mind a murderous death-penalty or a blasphemous obligation. Now, sir, can men constantly familiarize their minds with crime and not come to look upon it with complacency? Is not the natural tendency toward criminality, to say the least?

And, Mr. Editor, it is a well known fact that in your city at this moment is a respectable and responsible firm publishing to the world the workings, doctrines and teachings of practical Freemasonry as now existing, backed in every instance by the civil affidavits of many patriotic citizens who have been members of different Masonic lodges. Here is a grave conspiracy. Its candidates are tied to the very life to "Most Worshipful Grand Masters, Kings, and Grand Kings." The Constitution of the United States positively forbids titles of nobility and cruel and unusual penalties. The candidate is sworn to keep the secrets of Freemasonry when the truth is it has no secrets, hence the pledge is a roaring farce. When the Mason has taken three degrees and gets hold of a sworn exposition, he learns that he has paid thirty dollars for information that he can get word for word as near as his memory can recollect for thirty-five cents outside of the lodge, and therefore he has been swindled out of twenty-nine dollars and sixty-five cents on a square deal. All this is calculated to school men in deception, imposition and organized swindling. Why tackle one anarchist society and let another go?

We submit for your perusal the words of that great American commoner, Thaddeus Stevens, who declared: "By Freemasonry trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

President John Quincy Adams, the old man eloquent, declared "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity or of the land."

William Wirt, Attorney General of the United States, speaking of Freemasonry, affirmed:—"I view it as at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man, that ought to be put down."

Charles Sumner, an eminent American statesman in 1854, penned these words: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions, and tend to centralizationand anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free as our ancestors designed it."

Wendell Phillips, the silver-tongued orator of emancipation, shortly before his death wrote to Pres. C. A. Blanchard: "I wish you success most heartily in your efforts to arouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them. Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organizations, such should not be allowed to exist."

Thurlow Weed, the President-maker, and for more than fifty years the Warwick of American politics, testified: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

William H. Seward, Secretary of the United States under President Lincoln, said: "Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men in a secret lodge, order, class, or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them, for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men."

Daniel Webster, Secretary of State in the cabinets of Harrison, Tyler, and Fillmore, avowed: "All secret associations, the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others, are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths and the formation of all such obligations should be prohibited by law."

The learned and scholarly Charles Francis Adams says. "Every man who takes upon himself a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

The foregoing witnesses are patriots and unimpeachable. The testimony is from men who stand head and shoulders with the statesmanship and jurisprudence of the nation. We might give the testimony of the Toledo Blade, New York Witness, Chicago Tribune, Times, and many other popular journals corroobrating the evil nature and effects of oath-bound secretism. Then why denounce foreigners and let Americans go? Why not go to the bottom? All secret societies with extra-judicial oaths, royal nomenclature or despotic principles are dangerous, and especially Freemasonry should be outlawed. At least a little agitation on that line won't hurt anything. Yours for civil and religious liberty.

M. N. Butler.
American Lecturer and Organizer.

PITH AND POINT.

OUR LIBRARY.

I send you to-day the "Labor Reports of New York." The Cynosure office should be supplied with a reference library on secret societies, and I contribute this for that object.—B. Tunnicliff, Schuylers Lake, N. Y.

Thank you, brother. There is such a library begun in our office, and any other like contributions will be gratefully received, and kept for reference.

A TRACT FOR THE W. C. T. U.

I have been thinking that a tract for our Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, to show them that the rum seller and secret societies help each other in many ways, and that probably they would fall sooner if they were both assailed at once.—T. Fraser, Galt, Ont.

Bible Lesson.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON X, September 5, 1886.—Jesus the True Vine.—John 15: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I am the vine, ye are the branches.—John 15:5.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The conditions of fruit-bearing. vs. 1–6. The prime condition of Christian fruitfulness is abiding in the vine. To sever the connection between the Christian and his Saviour is to make him at once a dead branch. Another condition is that the branch be properly pruned. "All things work together for good to them that love God,"—not because everything which befalls them is good in itself, but because, for such, all the ways of Providence are disciplinary. In the sense commonly used there is no such thing as "special providences." All which can happen to us, whether joy or sorrow, pleasure or trial, is sent with a special end in view; and it is only our human inabilty to see the links between, that causes us in those few cases where we do seem to catch a glimpse of the divine plan, to make this unscriptural and misleading distinction. Another condition is, breaking off from all known sin. If we would be fruitful unto every good work we must strive after holiness. Any conformity to, or union with, the world deadens the Christian life. This admitted, we see why with the increase of the lodges the working power of the church wanes, for a working church is always a living church. The sixth verse contains a terrible warning for all churches and ministers, who, while claiming to be branches of the True Vine, belie their professions by fellowshiping the lodge with all its idolatrous, Christ-rejecting rites. They are in danger not only of the final judgment, but of being cast, in this life, into that furnace of popular wrath and scorn which sooner or later awaits all who sell the truth for gain. If, as many assert, Christianity is losing its hold on the masses, it is largely because the church has allowed secret, oath-bound organizations to take her place as their instructor and guide. When the socialistic lodge becomes the church of the working man it will be an evil day for an apostate ministry. For nothing is so merciless to hypocrisy as infidelity, and the reign of the lodge in America will mean what the same thing did in France in 1792, the reign of atheism.

2. The blessings of abiding in Christ. vs. 7–11. We have (1) the privilege to ask anything we want with the certainty that it will be granted, because abiding in him we can have no will of our own, and, therefore, cannot ask amiss; (2) of continual, loving companionship with Christ and the Father; (3) joy: joy not only belongs to life, but it pre-supposes a free, healthful, abounding life, not of a branch half dead, partially severed from the parent vine, but one whose verdure and fruit prove a close and perfect connection with it.

3. They only who abide in Christ can know the things of Christ. vs. 12–16. There is a sense in which the branches serve the vine, while at the same time one with it. So with the believer and Christ, a servant and yet a friend. In that union of perfect love and sympathy with the Great Teacher there is no divine truth into whose mysteries he may not hope to penetrate. In the economy of grace he has the greatest knowledge who loves most.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What is it to abide in Christ? Col. 1: 23; 1 John 2: 6. How did God once give Abraham a proof of his friendship? Gen. 18: 17. Must not apostate churches expect to be punished by the scorn and contempt, or worse, of the very world whose alliance they seek? Rev. 17: 16, 17.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"I (Jesus, who is speaking) am the true vine." The genuine, the ideal, the perfect vine. He is the one who can fulfill to them the perfect relation of a vine to its branches, in distinction from a natural vine; and from others who have been called a vine (Isa. 5; Ps. 80); and from all things that might seem to be the source of the Church's life and power.—P. This true vine is Christ; not the man Christ Jesus, but the living, abiding Christ, the Christ who is with his people alway, even unto the end of the world (Matt. 28: 20), who reproduces himself in every true disciple, since only they in whom is the spirit of Christ are truly his (Rom. 8: 9), and who is thus far more widely and potently in the earth to-day than he ever was or could be in the flesh. This living and perpetually inearnate Christ is in a sense identical with his living Church, as the vine is identical with its branches. Throughout this last discourse with his disciples, Christ speaks of himself not as a man about to die, but as a living Christ, forever incarnate in the hearts and lives of his own, living on in the world with mightier and wider influence, and in more intimate communion and companionship with his disciples after his crucifixion than before. It is this ever-living Christ, reproduced in all his members, and spreading over the whole earth, that is the true vine, in contrast with the old Israel, which proved to be no true vine.—Abbott.

"He purgeth (cleanseth) it, that it may bring forth more fruit." Everything is removed from the branch which tends to divert the vital power from the production of fruit.—Westcott. Christ cleanseth the soul (1) by the operation of the law that right doing develops right feeling, and opens the heart to higher influences (chap. 7: 17); (2) by the sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit, which is given to each soul in the measure in which each proves itself worthy of and willing to receive him; (3) by the discipline of life, which is the manifestation of God's special love to the soul (Heb 12. 6). The object of all this redemptive work is in order that the soul may bring forth more fruit. Thus Christian fruitfulness in the life is both the condition and the final result of the divine purifying process in the life of the soul. —Abbott.

"Now (already) ye are clean through (because of) the word which I have spoken unto you." They are clean, yet (verse 2) needing to be cleansed. They need daily purging in order to fruit-bearing, because daily exposed to defilement; yet they are born, through the incorruptible world, with a birth to which no uncleanness attaches (1 Pet. 1: 23; Jas. 1: 18), and, therefore, in regard to their standing before God, they are absolutely clean.—G. W. Clark.

"And is withered," loses its power of bearing fruit; in time loses even the appearance of life. This is true of individuals and of churches. Their life is lost apart from Christ; they wither away. An unfruitful branch is not "withered" immediately when broken off from its parent stock and stem; on the contrary, it retains a deceitful greenness and freshness for a little while; deceitful, because upon all this the sentence of death has irrevocably passed. Churches which, through abandonment of the Catholic faith, individuals who, by unbelief and by the sins which spring from unbelief, have separated themselves off from Christ, their Head, may keep for awhile the show and semblance of life; but little by little, sooner or later, they come to an end of all which they took with them.—Trench.

"That my joy might remain in you." This joy is (1) the joy of a free activity in doing right, like the joy of motion in health, like the song of a bird in the morning. (2) The joy of entire consecration and submission to God. (3) The joy of doing good, of self-denial for others. (4) The joy of perfect faith in a wise and loving God, committing everything to his care. (5) Joy in the conscious love of God to us, communion and friendship with him. (6) The joy of loving others. (7) The joy of seeing others saved. (8) The joy of victory. (9) In the end, outward delights and pleasures to correspond with the inward joy.—P.

"But I have called you friends." I take you into my counsels, I reveal to you my plans, and you serve me, because you love me, and carry out my plans. The highest service in the world is that of friendship and love. And this is the high privilege of all Christ's disciples.

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you." Pupils among the Jews generally selected their own rabbi or teacher; Jesus reverses the order and calls his disciples (Matt. 4: 18–22; Mark 2. 14). Their appointment to this high office was purely of grace. They were not his champions, noble of birth, powerful in influence, or of great wealth, but chosen vessels to whom he was pleased to commit the great treasures of the Gospel (2 Cor. 4; 7).—G. W. Clark.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE'

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A.Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wiseonsin.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of easte and elannishness by which our eitizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass politieal ends, a method direetly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independeuce, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the Amerieau people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a goverument without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotie motto will soon be not only eehoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of scienee and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contraet labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Morengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

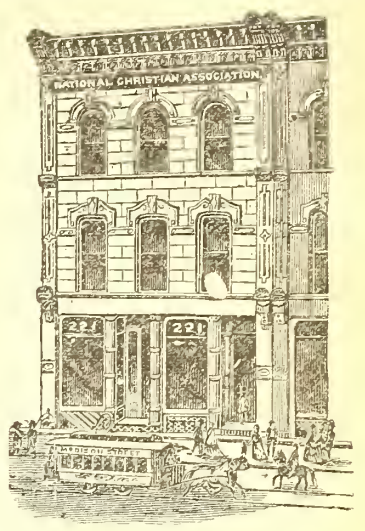
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.



The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddoek, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. J A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; See'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. See'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; See'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merriek, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Ree. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. See., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec., John Bosley, Graftno. Treas,. H. B. Higgins Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

Editors

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1886

Mr. Carpenter's Will.—The earnest men and women who hope and pray for the triumph of our reform principles will rejoice to know that Mr. Carpenter's large-hearted care for that success was maintained to the last. During the first eight years after the inauguration of the movement at Aurora he gave for its support probably some $30,000, including the building and property deeded to the N. C. A., and occupied as its headquarters. After turning over the building, and knowing that the Association was, by that gift and the co-existing fund contributed from the country abroad, placed on a good financial basis, his yearly payments ceased, as the income from the property amounted to about his former annual donation. But in his will, drawn up in 1881, he makes a still further contribution of $6000, to be disbursed by his surviving daughters, Mrs. Cheney and Mrs. Hildreth, and Dr. J. E. Roy of the American Missionary Association and also of the N. C. A. Board. This noble addition to his former munificent gifts to this reform will be employed possibly in opening new fields, promoting new enterprises for the triumph of the Christian church over the lodge enemy. God bless the memory of the giver! The will disposes of personal property amounting to $100,000, and real estate estimated at $500,000. Numerous friends and relatives receive a share, and one-fourth of the real estate, or $125,000, is bequeathed to numerous charitable, religious and educational institutions and interests.

Why they do not invest?—The Springfield, Mass. Republican is responsible for the following:

The Masonic fraternity in North Adams are interested in the antics of one E. Spaulding, who threatens to expose their secrets and also to confer the degrees in his house for $2 unless his appeals for help are heeded. Spaulding came to North Adams from Watertown some time ago, and has one son who is a peddler. The local lodges have helped him, Lafayette to the amount of $78 and Greylock $5, to neither of which he belongs. His further demands being refused, he has issued recently a handbill offering to expose the order, and he recently offered an advertisement to the same effect to the local newspapers. These handbills he has sent to Masons in the locality, threatening to distribute them if he is not aided, and his demand is in the nature of blackmail. The lodges have investigated him and find that he is not entitled to assistance, and some of his letters to individual members have in them a smack of threat similar to the Morgan exposure. The lodges will offer no opposition to his course, and it is understood that he is getting ready for conferring degrees surreptitiously at his house.

The lodges of the United States know just as well as the Cynosure that Freemasonry has been public property for sixty years, but more especially during the last decade, therefore they are not alarmed at the threats of a provoked Mason, who, if not an ignorant person, should know that his work was long ago anticipated, but with other and better reasons. But what an evidence of the shamelessness of the lodge, that the fraud of selling secrets that are no secrets is kept up, and a system of pagan foolery, falsehood and blasphemy is continued in ten thousand lodges, when to conduct their ceremonies openly as everybody knows them, would be certain death to the order! Every Mason who hangs out his pin or badge advertises his own shame and hypocrisy.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Perry, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Aug. 14, 1886.

Dear Cynosure:—We came out with Mr. Capwell's family to a temperance assembly at Silver Lake, and I have come down here to preach to-morrow in the Second Baptist church. Elder Barlow, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Secretary Stoddard, and his son, W. B., have all been here, and I am stopping with a family, (Mrs. Tinkham,) which has taken the Cynosure from the first number.

The assembly at Silver Lake is a large gathering by a beautiful sheet of water, and we have had grand speaking on the subject of temperance, especially by an Episcopalian from Canada named Carswell, and Rev. Mr. Boole, (Methodist) from New York. These speakers forcibly bring to mind John Randolph's oath: "By all the gods of Olympus, I never witnessed such dancing, whether by bear or human kind." This was in reply to an English lord who called a speech of Daniel O'Connell in Parliament "the bear dance."

This Silver Lake assembly was started by a Rev. Mr. Mead eight years ago, and it has grown to a sort of temperance Feast of Tabernacles. The tall young forest trees shade cottages and tents, inhabited for a week or two by an interesting crowd from the surrounding farms and cities, and the gathering besides being a vast help to the cause of prohibition, is a joyous, rural religious festival. We are lodged in a nice tent made of the cloth which veiled the Morgan Mouument. Mr. Capwell bought the cloth and says he would not take $100 for it.

Mr. Capwell has circulated anti-secret literature from year to year; and though J. N. Stearns, secretary of the National Temperance Society, has become partner in its management, the secret temperance orders are at a decided discount and fast becoming more so.

Rev. Dr. Hutchins, pastor of a wealthy Baptist church in Brooklyn, N. Y., is here. He has been pastor in Brooklyn six months longer than Rev. Theodore Cuyler, and has long held a prominent place in the counsels of the Baptist denomination. His first vote was given for Wirt and Ellmaker in 1832, and in spite of years he is a powerful preacher. He has written to Dr. Cheney, of Norristown, Penn., who, he says, is a giant antagonist of the lodge, and one of the mightiest minds in the denomination, to attend the proposed Congress of Christians in Chicago, and will attend himself if the committee should invite him. Both these venerable men were fearless Abolitionists, and Anti-masons. Elder Barlow knows them well. Elder Cheney has property in Wisconsin, and both visit Chicago. Elder Hutchins baptized Dr. Lawrence of the Second Baptist church, Chicago, and gave him his credentials when licensed. When he hears from Dr. Cheney he will forward his letter to me, and the Cynosure will hear the result of Dr. Hutchins' letter; and the committee of seven can get two lion-like men if they wish. I am here in the midst of Baptists, and they all speak of Dr. Cheney as the great man of the whole denomination.

Silver Lake Camp, Aug. 16.—I preached to the church where Elder Cheney was once pastor, and came back to camp in the afternoon in time to hear a political sermon from Rev. Mr. Boole, of New York, the gentleman who spoke Saturday. No words can describe this speaker. He is fearless, logical, witty, and sweeps an audience like a whirlwind. At night we had a speech from Narcissa E. White, and if adjectives had not been exhausted I would attempt to describe her. She has been speaking on the Pacific Coast, and Miss Willard must look out for her laurels. Miss White has a faultless form, good voice, and a steady flow of oratory, beaming with piety, tenderness and sense. Rev. Mr. Mead, the projector and manager of the assembly, holds the helm steady.

THE LODGE.

Rev. Dr. Marsh, the former National Temperance secretary, went with Dr. Jewett against the secret temperance lodges, and they put him out and put J. N. Stearns in, and keep him there. The one argument which the advocates of the secret temperance lodges use, is the same which prevailed with Judas Iscariot and Ananias and Sapphira—money. "We can get more money by secret societies," and this is true. More money can be raised by secret societies than by anything else except popery and Mormonism; and Finch and Stearns used to have a place in the programme here for "The Sons," "Good Templars," etc. This year they have no place assigned, and no allusion has been made to them except by Stearns, and he lugged them in so manifestly out of order and taste that no response was had, and no other allusion has thus far been made to them. It is plain that the lodge is sinking out of this assembly. We go on our way to Saratoga in the morning fully assured that God is leading us and has led us to this place. The assembly here is a reproduction of our first convention in Aurora—each last speaker seems the best. The morning prayers are a strength for the day, and Miss White's speech last night was better for the conversion of sinners than a direct effort for it. She is a United Presbyterian.

Aug. 17, 1886.—A powerful shower drove us to our tents yesterday afternoon and made the parched earth glad. Meetings were held on the large platform and in a large tent. But last night the crowd risked the wet plank seats and listened to the stirring music and to Mr. J. W. Bengough, a cartoonist, who kept the multitude in successive roars of laughter, and, it is to be hoped, from taking cold, by his pictures in chalk and words. Miss Coleman, yesterday morning, analyzed good "communion wine" by putting a flask over a lamp and driving off the alcohol, which blazed as it came from the bottle till the crowd learned thoroughly the principle of spontaneous combustion. She handled the words of Christ at the institution of the supper with singular clearness and force. He said, "bread" (Greek, artos, any wholesome esculent); but he did not say "wine," but "the cup" and "the fruit of the vine," fresh, unfermented grape juice, such as kings' cup bearers squeezed into cups. This is not alcohol which is the result of decay.

We leave for Saratoga this morning, rejoiced to have been here, guests of our Bro. Capwell. His family have been Baptists in their generation, and have enjoyed the confidence of the people as Christian citizens. By his judicious firmness he has driven the secret societies out of sight and almost out of hearing from the platform here. Secretary Stearns is the only one who is left to advocate them; and he has thus far confined himself to a simple mention that he had joined the Sons of Temperance. But he is a seven degree Mason, sworn to stand by every brewer, distiller or saloon keeper who is a Mason, and if his oath is good for anything he will do as he has sworn; if not, he is unfit to be secretary of the National Temperance Society and should be removed.

The Methodist preachers here, Boole and Polson, are men of great power over a crowd. Mr Boole was an original Abolitionist when the M. E. church was pro-slavery; and when men who censured Storrs and Scott for praying at an Abolition meeting were shouting over slavery fallen, he reminded them that they had been on the other side. Mr. Boole has a second wife, a Presbyterian, a lecturer and a fine Christian woman. He has taken seven degrees in Masonry, but he loves Christ and hates the lodge. On the whole, I am charmed with the Silver Lake assembly and hope it will soon speak for Christ against the lodge which excludes him.

FAREWELL TO SILVER LAKE.

Attica, N. Y., Aug. 18.—We are here over night en route to Saratoga. By an incompetent or knavish train officer our trunk was left on the platform yesterday and I went back for it. After we left, J. N. Stearns boomed out on secret societies. He proclaimed that "Sons of Temperance," "Good Templars," etc., were "chained to the ballot"; and introduced a long, lank Yankee, born in Georgia, as "Grand Worthy Chief Templar of Washington, D. C.," where prohibition had scarcely a vote last election, the Good Templars all voting for the old parties! Thus Dr. Ayedelotte's words were true. "The lodge is lie all over."

The Mayor of Toronto being detained by a lawsuit at home, good Dr. Hutchins of Bedford Avenue church, Brooklyn, was thrust into the chair, and kept up the interest of the crowd.

I met Senator Colquitt of Georgia, and thanked him for his speech which I heard in Washington. He did not know the American party, so I told him of it. He said, "Had you not better keep on voting with the Prohibitionists?"

"We mean the Prohibitionists shall vote with us," was my reply. "Secret societies curse and kill every good thing which they light on." He did not object.

So, farewell to Silver Lake. If Mr. Mead continues to run its assembly, it must have a future. Its little swan-like pleasure steamers; its fair fields reaching to the marge of the clear water; but, above all, its trust in Christ, fervid eloquence, and sound teaching on reforms will shake off the alligators of the lodge as Florida alligators would die in these clear, cold waters. All denominations of Christians give to it their best; and, though the Methodist Episcopal preachers have generally been run through the cider mills of the lodge, they are not all pomice. Those among them who love Christ (and they are many) already hate the worship of devils by the lodge without knowing yet why. But they are fast learning, as Charlotte Elizabeth teaches in her "Principalities and Powers," that "All worship not paid to Christ is paid to the devil;" that lodge-worship is Gentile worship. And so to Silver Lake,

> "Farewell; a word that must be and hath been;
> A sound which makes us linger—yet farewell."

One is proud to look in the bright faces of such a crowd as gather there from the surrounding vales and hillsides. The spot is a sort of "Vale of Avoca," and Tom Moore's description of that Irish valley would do well enough for this:

> "Yet it is not that Nature has shed o'er the scene
> Her purest of crystal and brightest of green:
> 'Tis not the soft magic of streamlet or rill,
> O, no! it is something more exquisite still.
> 'Tis that friends, the beloved of each bosom are near,
> That makes each dear scene of enchantment more dear,
> And who feels how the blest charms of Nature improve
> When we see them reflected from looks that we love."

NEW PARTIES.

Elmwood Hall, Saratoga Springs, Aug. 18.—Last week Thursday the Prohibitionists here had a grand turnout. Prof. A. A. Phelps spoke in the morning, Mrs. Mary A. Lathrop, afternoon, and St.

John at night. A day or two later Miss Willard spoke here in the First Presbyterian church. All the speaking here, as also at Silver Lake, insisted on a new political party as the only mode, rational or possible, to abolish the liquor traffic. Dr. Emory Potter of this place predicts that in 1892 there will not be enough left of the Republican party to put candidates in the field. That, too, is my own judgment.

The Prohibitionists are moving on the South, and on the white people of the South. When I was in Tennessee an agent and lecturer was pushing the organization of that State into secret temperance lodges. The thing for the American party to do is to put a ticket in the field next June with Fred Douglass, or some other colored man selected by themselves, as candidate for Vice-President. The race prejudice in the white Prohibitionists of the South, strong now, in 1887 will yield to nothing but the desire of securing the colored vote for their new party; but they will yield to that desire in 1892 if we give the colored voters a representative on our Federal ticket, and thus gain their confidence and win them over from the Masonic parties. Let the work be pushed South. J. B.

GUILTY.

We, the jury, find the defendants, August Spies, Michel Schwab, Samuel Fielden, Albert R. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, George Engel and Louis Lingg, guilty of murder in manner and form as charged in the indictment, and fix the penalty at death.

We find the defendant, Oscar W. Neebe, guilty of murder in manner and form as charged in the indictment and fix the penalty at imprisonment for fifteen years.

This was the fearful sentence heard by the eight men who have been for two months on trial for the massacre of policemen at the Haymarket square, Chicago, May 4th, 1886.

Already the daily press of Friday morning had intimated that the death penalty had been fixed upon for several of the anarchists, and such an understanding prevailed about the police stations; but not until the opening of the court was the full severity of the verdict known. States Attorney Grinnel finished his able plea Thursday forenoon, the instructions of Judge Gary were given immediately after recess, and the jury retired about 3 o'clock and had agreed on their verdict before 8 that evening, with great unanimity.

The decision was everywhere hailed as soon as known as most just. Hardly a dissenting voice has been heard. The very fact that three weeks were required to secure a jury and over 1,200 men summoned for examination proved that the popular verdict had already been given against anarchism.

The trial began June 21 and closed August 20; and, deducting the Sabbaths, fifty-four days were consumed by the trial, twenty-one of which were taken up in securing the jury and nine in the closing speeches. The prosecution examined 143 witnesses and the defense 79. The conduct of the case by prosecuting attorney Grinnell and his assistants, Walker, Furthman and Ingham, assisted by the police, was careful, considerate and able; on the part of the defense, while in some respects skilfully conducted, it was in others weak and ill-managed. This was especially marked in the pleading of the four attorneys. Salomon and Zeisler are evidently Jews, and both sympathize with the atrocious doctrines of the anarchists. Zeisler referred to one of the police officers who had been active in the case as the Jesus Christ of Chicago. Their defence and eulogy of the condemned men fell upon no sympathizing ear among the jury. Captain Black, who closed for the defense, and was the leader upon that side, also condoned anarchism and attempted to put the crown of martyrdom upon the wretched men on trial and even ventured to blasphemously compare them and their principles to the Lord Jesus Christ and his trial before the Sanhedrim. Mr. Walker, however, while denouncing the anarchist doctrines, very ably contended for the release of the men because not proved guilty under the indictment.

Judge Gary's conduct of the trial and decisions are praised of all for fairness, candor and legal force. It is hardly possible that the argument for a new trial or an appeal to the Supreme Court will do more than briefly postpone the final scene.

It has been on the whole one of the most remarkable trials in history. Seldom have so many men been on trial at once for life, and never before in this country, for putting in practice the infamous doctrines for the overthrow of all legal authority and social order which are taught in the secret lodge groups of the International Workingmen's Association, the "Internationale" of Europe.

The immense importance of this trial can hardly be appreciated by Americans. Distance or time will reveal it. Hon. B. C. Cook, of this city, an eminent lawyer, and during the time of war and reconstruction a leading member of Congress, is now traveling in Europe. He writes that this trial is the most important ever brought before any tribunal in any country or age. Mr. Cook realized that the nations of Europe, as Lord Beaconsfield declared, were continually harassed by this secret International society in the form of Socialism, Communism or Nihilism. They have watched this trial with peculiar interest, because to them it was one of the severest tests of national stability, of the firmness of popular government. It is moreover a proof to the restless spirits of Europe that if there may be room for them here to pursue an honest business, there is not for the promulgation of their doctrines.

—The General Agent is to spend the Sabbath, August 29th, at Denmark, Iowa, and lecture Monday evening at the same place on his way to the convention at Birmingham. He will make a brief call at Princeton on Friday, the 27th, to confer with friends there about the Illinois State meeting. From Iowa he expects to go to Kansas, for the convention on the 7th of September. If friends in Kansas will arrange for meeting he will remain to speak for a week or ten days after the convention.

—After a long lapse of time Rev. William Hazenberg, an independent evangelist in South Africa, writes again of his work among the interesting people of that region. His request for another grant of tracts, etc., was answered by the prompt shipment of several packages of literature. From this seed sowing in a remote and unfavorable soil, we may yet see glorious results.

—Says the Daily News of this city: "A clause in the will of the late Philo Carpenter provided for the holding in trust of $6,000 for the purpose of combating secret societies. Mr. Carpenter was an earnest laborer in behalf of certain social reforms, and his zeal led him to believe that secrecy was not calculated to promote the greatest good among men." The News, though meaning to speak kindly of one of the oldest and best citizens of Chicago, does Mr. Carpenter an injustice in attributing simply to his "zeal" that earnest conviction against secret societies which ever characterized his public and private life. Zeal may be blind; but it was no fanaticism or visionary impulse that led to his action in this respect; but rather a profound conviction and enthusiasm, founded upon the truth and Word of God. From this impregnable position he attacked the world system of lodgery, and died confident that in his own time the living and true God, who is rejected by the secret system, shall triumph over this iniquity also.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman was several hours delayed on his way to Washington by a washout on the Baltimore and Ohio railway. He expects soon to journey to the South from Washington, visiting various points in Virginia and the Carolinas and across to New Orleans.

—Bro. William Fenton, who gives us interesting information on the Anarchist trial on another page, called at this office last week on his way from St. Paul to Buffalo, where he was last week attending the annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

—Rev. E. Hildreth, summoned with his family to the funeral of his father-in-law, Mr. Carpenter, will remain in Chicago until September 10th before returning to his home in Santa Barbara, California. He finds the equable climate of that region more favorable to his health than any other.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard, having spent the summer at his home in Wheaton, is about to begin work again in Ohio. He starts for Columbus late this week. Ohio friends, read his letter in another column and resolve that the grand work of last year shall be eclipsed by the renewed effort of this.

—Professor Calvin E. Stowe, for many years a prominent character among the Congregational churches, died on the Sabbath at Hartford, Connecticut, aged 84 years. He was husband of Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and was himself the author of several popular religious works. He was formerly professor in Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, and afterward in Andover Theological Seminary. He was an old-time Anti-mason.

—Henry Reilly, editor of the first daily paper in Rochester, N. Y., died in that city Tuesday last. He is best known for his implacable hostility to Thurlow Weed, being not only a political opponent, but also combating him and his Anti-masonic colleagues during the Morgan excitement. In later years both Reilly and his daughter have been brought forward by the Masons to counteract the crushing statements of Mr. Weed just before his death. Their promised evidence never amounted to anything.

The Wesleyan Methodist Seminary of Wasioja, Minn., E. G. Paine, A. M., principal, receives students of both sexes and any age, and fits for business, teaching, or college. The fall term begins September 1, 1886. The friends of Wheaton College will be interested in knowing that one of her graduates, Elsie S. Dow, A. M., has been added to the faculty.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Dear Cynosure:—Leaving Chicago on the B. & O. road at 5:15 P. M. of the 16th inst we reached the Ohio river without incident where the report of a washout in West Virginia stopped us for a time and then sent us round by the way of Pittsburgh. This is the region of natural gas, and we saw one immense blaze coming out of the earth. I had also seen three similar gas fires in the night as we passed through Ohio. At last we reached Washington, D. C., over four hours behind time, and I found family and friends in usual health.

In this vacation period there is a marked exodus of clerks, ministers, and many of the wealthier citizens; leaving the churches with a slimmer attendance and affording a needed respite to all but the criminal courts and their feeders, the dram shops. The President's absence is being improved in renovating the White House, and the Capitol is having its annual cleaning and painting, but the work on the new terraces has proceeded but slowly.

The new Library building to be erected on the east side of the Capitol is to be speedily commenced. It is to be a magnificent building, 679 by 575 feet, of white marble, and will be an extension of the Capitol grounds on the east. There will be a space of 130 feet on the front and rear to the street each way, and 109 feet to the streets on the north and south. These grounds are expected to be made attractive, and the whole to become one of the finest features of this beautiful city. There will be space for millions of books, and it is hoped to make it one of the finest libraries of the world. It will build up and and draw attention to East Washington, which has been comparatively neglected.

The appropriation of a million of dollars by the late session of Congress for heavy ordnance is to be expended in this city. It will necessitate the expenditure of one-fourth of the amount in the necessary machinery and buildings, of late years termed the "plant." Aside from giving employment to some idle workmen (who might surely be better employed) I can see no good, but much evil, likely to result. Whatever increases the preparations and affords facilities for war, whether offensive or defensive, renders the reign of peace more insecure. All such expenditures are needless and wasteful.

The President has, through the press, given his reasons for refusing to sign some of the acts of Congress that failed to become laws. Notably is the Morrison Surplus bill, which he thought embraced too much, was unnecessary and might embarrass the Treasury department. Whether there are good reasons is debatable, but it is on the whole refreshing to have a President that has positive convictions, and who dares to oppose even party friends who differ. It is altogether probable that, though this measure failed to become a law, it has served as a useful hint to the Secretary of the Treasury, and that its provisions will be substantially carried out.

There seems to be a disposition on a part of the press, especially in the Southwest, to goad on the Government to declare war against Mexico. There is little sympathy for Cutting. No one supposes that he gets more than he deserves, but there is now as there was forty years ago, a strong desire to "revel in the Halls of the Montezumas." Still we need not despair of the practical common sense of the people or the administration. The relation of the Knights of Labor to the Roman Catholic church still elicits much discussion. It is held by many that Cardinal Taschereau's edict which forbade Catholics from having membership in the order applied only to Canada. But since it was endorsed by the Pope it is hard to see why it should not be universal in its application. As a large proportion of the "Knights", including Grand Master Powderly, are members of the Roman church, there must be at least a very strained relation between the church and the order.

The vacation of the ministers makes no abatement, but rather increases the work of the missionaries and Gospel wagon. So long as sin and misery are abroad this kind of work will be always in demand. H. H. Hinman.

The Home.

OUT OF TRIBULATION.

Dost thou feel the slings and arrows
By outrageous fortune cast?
Do they cloud thy sky with sorrows,
And embitter all thy past?

Art thou growing weary hearted
With the strife that will not cease?
Dost thou think thy soul hath parted,
For all time, with joy and peace?

Think not thus. Though toils environ,
Others have the same withstood;
'Tis by constant blows that iron
Grows more powerful for good.

Every tree is fuller fruited
For the wound of pruning shears;
Every tree is firmer rooted,
For the tempests of the years.

If the fire that burns thee sorely,
Be indeed a fiery cross,
It refines thee, slowly, surely,
Cleansing all thy gold of dross.

And the perfect man is builded
Faster in the evil day:
Every loss a cornice gilded,
Every care a stronger stay.

So that, though the world grows colder,
And thy bosom friends be less,
Thou to every true beholder
Shall increase in comeliness.

So that, out of tribulation,
Thou shalt have more perfect light,
And a fuller compensation
For the darkness of the night.

—The Quiver.

HOW THE BIBLE TREATS THE AFFLICTED.

An angelic creature from another planet would infer from the contents of the Bible that ours is a suffering race of beings. As a foreigner, not used to our language, once expressed it, "This is a hurt world." To every class of men the Bible has something to say that is characteristic; but to no other class has it so much to say as to the afflicted. From a full collation of the biblical passages addressed to them, the angelic stranger might infer that it was inspired for them only. What, then, is the tenor of its message?

1. In even a cursory review of it one is struck with the boldness with which it claims the infliction of sorrow as the intentional work of God. We find no adroit hiding of the divine hand, no obtrusion of second causes to relieve its stern, often its appalling procedures It is the way of science to evade the name of God. The way of revelation is to proclaim and exult in it, even when the deed done makes the ears of men tingle at its tragic story. "See now, that I, even I, am He. I kill, I wound. The Almighty—He maketh sore; He woundeth. I was dumb because Thou didst it." Fragments of Scripture like these might be extended to a volume.

2. The Bible gives equal emphasis to the fact that God is the chief comfort of those who suffer. The hand that wounds is the hand that heals. The word that kills makes alive again. The Scriptures which teach this have become household words. Our morning and evening prayers rehearse them, and our children sing them. "God is our refuge," has but a short time ago made a belt of song around the world. "I, even I am He that comforteth you. Fear not; I am with thee; I will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not." A child in the dark trusts in confiding silence to the unseen hand that leads him; such may every sorrowing man be, in the consciousness of God's proximity.

3. Scriptural thought also incloses human suffering within God's purposes in redemption. There is a world of strength in the assurance that suffering is not an isolated anomaly. It is not a mystery, the solution of which we must find, or seek and not find, in its own impenetrable bosom. It is not evil unmixed, which has no benignant outcome. It has part in the grandest alliance of beneficent agencies which the history of the universe discovers.

Time has wrought into volumes of Christian song the words in which the Bible makes sorrow tributary to the designs of God in redemption. It is not merely that suffering is so ruled and overruled by a tortuous providence that glimpses of the benevolence of God can be extorted from it. The sun and the stars effect that without extortion. The seed time and harvest and summer rains do more than that in gentle evolutions. But this mystery of sorrow is a gift which takes rank in dignity with the gift of prayer, with the gift of Christ, with the gift of the new heavens and the new earth. It proclaims eternal purposes of which a dying and risen Saviour is the center.

Suffering, as a factor in the redemption of men, was ordained when the foundation of the earth was laid. When the morning stars sang together, the "sisters of sorrow" were visible in the distant perspective, as servitors of the same cause for which Christ died. They stood locked hand in hand with the angels of Gethsemane. Never did a good man bear a throb of pain to which the heart of Christ was not responsive. Never does a great affliction fall upon a trusting believer which is not recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life.

4. The Bible also abounds with passages which represent God as superintending the discipline of pain with watchful solicitude for the result of it in the character of the sufferer. The favorite emblems by which inspiration designates good men in sorrow are the precious metals. "I will refine thee as silver is refined. I will try thee as gold is tried. I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction. He shall sit as a refiner of silver."

A Christian woman once inquired of a silversmith in England, what was the process by which the precious metals were purified from dross. He replied in substance: "It is a process which requires infinite care. It must be watched minute by minute. I sit down beside my forge while the heat rises to the melting point. I do not allow my eye to wander from the crucible. I watch it till I can see my face reflected from the molten fluid." "So?" thought the Christian inquirer, "I understand now why the Bible represents God as sitting by the furnace of affliction, and watching the discipline of his people."

5. Again, suffering is represented in the Scriptures as one of the factors in the personal discipline of Christ for his redemptive mission. Men are fond of tracing resemblances between the Bible and other books of ancient ethics and philosophy. They tell of other than Biblical incarnations and Messiahs. But where has moralist or philosopher or poet, uninspired, ever given to "a hurt world" such words of healing as these: "A bruised reed he shall not break; the smoking flax he shall not quench. The Lord hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary. He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to comfort all that mourn?"

When these words were first uttered, there was not a blind asylum, nor a retreat for the insane, nor a school for deaf mutes, nor a hospital for invalids, nor a home for orphans in all the world. The wisest of men put their dead into the tomb, or laid them on the funeral pyre, doubting as Cicero did when his only daughter died, whether the immortality of the soul were a truth or a dream. It was on the ears of such a world that the words of Messianic promise first fell.

6. Once more, the Scriptures emphasize God's benign remembrance of the afflicted by their representations of heaven as a place of repose from trial. There the weary rest; the wicked cease from troubling. The inhabitant doth not say, "I am sick." Tears no longer flow. Sorrow and sighing take flight forever. There is no more death. What this world is in respect to all the causes of human sorrow, that heaven is not. Thus does the Bible seem to make the heavenly conditions meet by contrast the woes of this world and the longings of suffering men here, as if heaven were made for them alone.

Such is the religion of the Bible in its benignant care for the afflicted and the desolate. Where now is the man or woman, who is far enough along in years to know what life is, who does not feel the need of it? Who does not foresee his need of it, if the pressure is not upon him now?

The time must come in every life, that carries with it in any great density of meaning, when revolutionary changes will drive the soul in upon itself. A thoughtful man who is conscious of such a deepening significance in his own life learns to read by intuition the lives of others. He cannot walk the streets of a crowded city without observing in a multitude of faces as they pass a look which tells of unspoken conflict. Some are bearing their lot patiently; some are battling with it angrily; a few are triumphing over it; all are walking in the shadow of it. This one is not like that one. None can understand fully the trial of another. It is no selfishness in any that none can very essentially help his fellow. Each must bear his own. Each treads a path in which he is the only traveler.

We need in such a life some friend who can and will save us from the abyss of stoical despair to which unblessed affliction dooms a man. There is but one such Friend in the universe.—Prof. Austin Phelps in Congregationalist.

JESUS CURED ME.

In the family of a missionary pastor in Kansas, was a daughter of twelve years of age, seriously afflicted with rheumatism. For three years she suffered, until the leg was shrunken, stiff at the knee, shorter by two inches than the other, and the hip joint was gradually being drawn from its socket. The child read of Mrs. Miller's cure by prayer, originally published in the Advance, and wondered why she could not also be cured by the same means. She repeated to her mother some of the promised answers to prayer, and asked: "Don't Jesus mean what he says, and isn't it just as true now as then?" The mother endeavored to divert her attention by representing the affliction as a blessing. The physician also called and left another prescription, and encouraged the child to hope for benefit from it. The child could not, however, be diverted from the thought that Jesus could and would heal her. After the doctor's departure she said: "Mamma, I can not have that plaster put on."

"Why, dear?"

"Because, mother, Jesus is going to cure me, and he must have all the glory. Dr. ——— doesn't believe in God; if we put the plaster on, he will say it was that which helped me; and it must be all Jesus." So earnest was she, that her mother at length placed the package, just as she had received it, on the shelf, and said no more about it.

The little girl and her mother were alone that day, the father being absent from home. When the household duties were done she called her mother to her.

"Mother, will you pray now to Jesus to cure me? I have got the faith; I know he will, if you will ask him." The mother, overcome, yielded to her daughter's request, and commenced praying. She was blest with unusual consciousness of the presence of God, and became insensible of all outward surroundings, pleading for her child. She remained in this state of intercession for more than an hour, when she was aroused by her daughter, who with her hand on her mother's shoulder was joyfully exclaiming, "Mother, dear mother, wake up! Don't you see Jesus has cured me? O, I am well!" and she danced about the room, literally healed.

One week after that day, she was seen by the writer in the Advance, who says she was out sliding on the ice with her companions. From that day to this she had no further trouble; the limb is full, round and perfect; there is no difference between it and the other.

To every question asked she replies, with the overflowing gratitude of a loving heart, "Jesus cured me!"—Manna.

WHAT GOD DOES FOR BOYS.

God wants the boys, all kinds of boys,
To love him, serve him, do his will;
He wants those boys that make a noise,
And those who keep so very still.

God calls the boys, yes, every one,
Those that are in and out of school;
Though jumping, shouting, full of fun,
He leaves none out: that is his rule.

God loves the boys of every kind,
The rich and poor, the short and tall;
Even for wicked ones you'll find,
His grace is given to one and all.

God gives the boys a tender heart,
And says, just so they all can hear,
"Will you not choose the better part
Just now, while Jesus is so near?"

Christ died for boys; he knows their need,
Of all his precious blood can do,
The "Bread of Life" their souls will feed,
And give them "living water," too.

—Mrs. A. P. Graves, in the Standard.

STOOPING SHOULDERS.

A cure for the evil habit of stooping shoulders, all too prevalent among American children, is suggested by Dr. Dio Lewis, as follows:

Unless you rid yourself of this crook while at school, you will probably go bent to your grave. There is one good way to cure it. Shoulder-braces will not help. One needs not an artificial substitute, but some means to develop the muscles whose duty it is to hold the head and shoulders erect. I know of but one bull's-eye shot. It is to carry a weight on the head. A sheepskin or other strong bag filled with twenty to eighty pounds of sand is a good weight. When engaged in your morning studies, either before or after breakfast, put this bag of sand on your head, hold your head ereet, draw your chin close to your neck, and walk slowly about the room, coming back, if you please, every minute or two to your book, or carrying the book as you walk. The muscles whose duty it is to hold your head and shoulders erect are hit, not with scattering shot, but with a rifle-ball. The bones of the spine and the intervertebral substance will soon accomodate themselves to the new attitude. One year of daily practice with the bag, half an hour morning and evening, will give you a noble carriage, without interfering a moment with your studies.

SOME OF THE LARGEST THINGS.

The Talker has in the course of his reading picked up the following interesting facts about the highest and largest things in the world. The highest chimney in the world has just been completed at the Meternich lead works in Germany. The whole height of the structure is approximately 440 feet, eleven feet of which is under ground. The largest hammer in the United States is in the works of the Cleveland City Forge and Iron Company. Its weight is about twenty tons; with that of the anvil and appendages, three hundred and forty tons. Its height is 38 feet and the diameter of the cylinder 38 inches. The largest and oldest chain bridge is said to be that of Kingtung in China, where it forms a perfect road from the top of one mountain to another. The deepest mine, according to Prof. H. Hoefer of the Acadame Imperiale des Mines, is the Przibram silver mine in Bohemia. The lowest depth is nearly 3,300 feet below the surface. The new railroad bridge over the Ohio between Evansville, Ind., and Henderson, Ky., which was formally opened for traffic in the early part of last August, has the longest single span girder of any bridge yet constructed. The structure has a length of 3,200 feet and rests on sixteen piers, each span being 250 feet long, with the exception of the one over the main channel. This is 522 feet, and is the longest single girder in the world. Probably the largest rock in the known world is the South Dome of the the Yosemite. Standing at the fork of the upper valley it rears itself, a solid rocky loaf, 6,000 feet above the ground. The largest ventilating fan in the world is in the St. Hilda colliery, South Shields, Wales. Its diameter is fifty feet. The largest china vase in the world has been made by a firm of English potters. It is eleven feet high and six feet four inches in diameter. The largest literary work in the world is a Chinese encyclopedia of 5,000 volumes, a set of which has recently been added to the British Museum Library. —Sel.

TEMPERANCE.

DRUNKENNESS IN ENGLAND.

The vice of drunkenness is said to have been of rare occurrence in England prior to the reign of Elizabeth. But, when a portion of her troops went over to the Netherlands to assist William of Orange in defending the liberties of his country against Phillip II. of Spain, they there acquired convivial habits, which on their return were speedily spread over their own land. Camden states, in his "History of Queen Elizabeth," that "The English, in their long wars in the Netherlands, first learnt to drown themselves with immoderate drinking, and, by drinking other's healths, to impair their own. Of all the Northern nations, they had been before this most commended for their sobriety." The same assertion had been made by Tom Nash, in his "Pierce Penniless," which was written at the very time when inebriety had begun to degrade and enslave the people. "Superfluity in drink," says this writer, "is a sin that, ever since we have mixed ourselves with the Low Countries, is counted honorable; but, before we knew their lingering wars, was held in that highest degree of hatred that might be. Then, if we had seen a man go wallowing in the streets, or lain sleeping under the board, we should have spet at him and warned all our friends out of his company."

Disraeli advances the opinion, in his article on "Drinking Customs in Europe," in the "Curiosities of Literature," that all the terms of drinking which once abounded in England were of Dutch, Danish, or German origin. Thus the phrase "half-seas over" he regards as borrowed from the Dutch. The term op-zee, or over-sea, was given to a stupefying beer introduced into England from the Low Countries, and by an easy transformation and expansion ran finally into the expression half-seas over, or nearly drunk. Rouse and carouse came from the Danes,—rouse being the name of a large cup in which a health was drank, and carouse the act of drinking healths by a company.

It was a favorite notion with writers on drunkenness, in the time of Elizabeth, that a man in the different stages of intoxication exhibited the vicious qualities of different animals; and in this notion Mr. Disraeli fancies that the expression peculiar to the English, "drunk as a beast," or "beastly drunk," had its origin. Among the writers cited in illustration of his idea, a sketch of different classes of drunkards is quoted from Nash, which is of sufficient interest to merit repeating: "The first is ape-drunk; and he leaps and sings, and hollows and danceth for the heavens. The second is lyon-drunk; and he flings the pots about the house, * * * breaks the glass windows with his dagger, and is apt to quarrel with any man that speaks to him. The third is swine-drunk; heavy, lumpish, and sleepy, and cries for a little more drink and a few more clothes. The fourth is sheep-drunk; wise in his own conceit when he cannot bring forth a right word. The fifth is maudlin-drunk; when a fellow will weep for kindness in the midst of his drink, and kiss you. * * * The sixth is martin-drunk; when a man is drunk and drinks himself sober ere he stir. The seventh is goat-drunk; when in his drunkenness he hath no mind but on lechery. The eighth is fox-drunk; when he is crafty-drunk, as many of the Dutchmen may be, which will never bargain but when they are drunk. All these species, and more, I have seen practiced in one company at one sitting; when I have been permitted to remain sober amongst them only to note their several humors."

At the time of the Restoration excesses of every sort were at their height. "Dueling and raking," says Green, "became the marks of a fine gentleman, and grave divines winked at the follies of 'honest fellows,' who fought, gambled, swore, drank, and ended a day of debauchery by a night in the gutter." Beer or ale was the beverage of the people, being as Macaulay states, "not only all that beer now is, but all that wine, tea and ardent spirits now are. It was only at great houses, or on great occasions, that foreign drink was placed on the board. The ladies of the house, whose business it had commonly been to cook the repast, retired as soon as the dishes had been devoured, and left the gentlemen to their ale and tobacco. The coarse jollity of the afternoon was often prolonged till the revelers were laid under the table."

The introduction of coffee in the latter part of the seventeenth century had a visible effect in diminishing the use of intoxicating drinks; and inebriety among the upper classes was, according to Lecky, never quite so general as between the time of Elizabeth and the Revolution. "It was computed in 1688," remarks this author, "that no less than 12,400,000 barrels [of still beer or ale] were brewed in England in a single year, though the entire population probably little exceeded 5,000,000. In 1695, with a some what heavier excise, it sank to 11,350,000 barrels; but even then almost a third part of the arable land of the kingdom was devoted to barley." The English manufacture of spirits was greatly extended by the prohibition in 1869 of the importation of foreign liquors. "It was not till about 1724," writes Lecky in his most graphic history of drunkenness in England, "that the passion for gin-drinking appears to have infected the masses of the population; and it spread with the rapidity and violence of an epidemic. Small as is the place which this fact occupies in English history, it was probably, if we consider all the consequences that flowed from it, the most momentous in that of the eighteenth century, incomparably more so than any event in the purely political or military annals of the country. The fatal passion for drink was at once, and irrevocably, planted in the nation. The average of British spirits distilled, which, is said to have been only 527,000 gallons in 1684, and 2,000,000 in 1714, had risen in 1727 to 3,601,000, and in 1735 to 5,394,000 gallons. Physicians declared that in excessive gin-drinking a new and terrible source of mortality had been opened for the poor. * * * Retailers of gin were accustomeed to hang out printed boards announcing that their customers could be made drunk for a penny, and dead-drunk for two pence, and should have straw for nothing; and cellars strewn with straw were accordingly provided, into which those who had become insensible were dragged, and where they remained till they had sufficiently recovered to renew their orgies."

The Government finally interposed to lessen the frightful prevalence of the evil. In 1736, a measure (Act 9, Geo. II., c 23) imposing an enormous tax upon all salable liquors recited in the preamble that "The drinking of spirituous liquors, or strong waters, is become very common, especially among the people of lower and inferior rank,—the constant and excessive use whereof tends greatly to the destruction of their healths, rendering them unfit for useful labor and business, debauching their morals, and exciting them to perpetrate all manner of vices." In consequence of this tax, the consumption of liquors fell for a brief space; but in 1742 the production, again increasing, amounted to 7,000,000 gallons. "In 1749," to return again to the narrative of Lecky, "more than 4,000 persons were convicted of selling spirituous liquors without a license, and the number of private gin-shops within the Bills of Mortality was estimated at more than 17,000. At the same time, crime and immorality of every description were rapidly increasing. * * * The London physicians stated in 1750 that there were, in or about the metropolis, no less than 14,000 cases of illness, most of them beyond the reach of medicine, directly attributable to gin."

Fielding declared, in his pamphlet, "On the late Increase of Robberies," published in 1751, that gin was "the principal sustenance(if it may be so called) of more than 100,000 people in the metropolis;"and predicted that, "should the drinking of this poison be continued at its present height during the next twenty years, there will, by that time, be very few of the common people left to drink it." It is added by Lecky that in 1750 and 1751 it was computed that more than 11,000,000 gallons of spirits were consumed each year, "and the increase of the population appears to have been perceptibly checked."

Hints of the universal custom of excessive drinking are found in many writings of the eighteenth century. Mrs. Delaney relates in her autobiography, at the date, 1719, that Sir William Pendarres was in the habit of assembling his boon companions around a copper coffin filled with punch and set in the centre of his hall. The potations of the party gathered about this ghastly "wassail-bowl," we may conclude, were both long and deep. Lady Cowper makes the following entry in her diary, in the year 1716: "At the drawing-room, George Mayo turned out for being drunk and saucy. He fell out with Sir James Baker and in the fray had pulled him by the nose." On several occasions this noble lady notes the occurrence of drunkenness among her servants. At one time she writes: "Dined with Aunt Allavern. Go to the Master of the Rolls. The servants got so drunk I was forced to send one of them home."And again: "I dine with Mrs. Clayton. Left by chairman and servants all drunk. I can hardly get to the Princess." It is recorded that in some houses a servant-lad was kept for the express purpose of loosening the neck-cloths of the guests who fell under the table.

By active and efficient legislation the evil was gradually subdued; and it is observed by Lecky that among the favorable results ensuing was the decrease of dropsy, which had risen in London to a wholly unprecedented point between 1718 and 1751, but now "immediately diminished, and the diminution was ascribed by physicians to the marked decrease of drunkenness in the community." Still, continues this writer, the measures passed "formed a palliation and not a cure, and from the early years of the eighteenth century, gin-drinking has never ceased to be the main counteracting influence to the moral, intellectual, and physical benefits that might be expected from increased commercial prosperity. Of all the pictures of Hogarth, none are more impressive than those in which he represents the different conditions of a people whose national beverage is beer, and of a people who are addicted to gin; and the contrast exhibits in its most unfavorable aspect the difference between the Hanoverian period and that which preceded it."—Chicago Tribune.

WAGE WORKERS' LIQUOR BILL.

There are some facts connected with the Internal Revenue which should be faithfully studied by every citizen and Christian. During the last year 624,000,000 gallons of beer were used, which would be 10 83 gallons for every one in the land, babes included. During the same time 70,763,010 gallons of whisky were drunk, or 1.19 gallons per capita. One hundred and ninety-one million, twenty-three thousand, six hundred and sixty-three pounds of tobacco for smoking and chewing are reported, or 3.22 pounds for every person. There were 3,510,372,539 cigars consumed, or 59.2 per capita, and 1,310,556,512 cigarettes, or 22.1 for each one. The Tribune remarks in relation to these figures: "It remains to add that, supposing cigars to average only five cents each, and cigarettes twenty cents a package, tobacco a dollar a pound in retail forms, beer five cents a glass, and spirits five cents for half a gill, prices which are certainly not as high as those paid by most consumers, the cost of these articles to the people of the country is over $1,189,000,000 or $19.82 for every inhabitant. This burden is borne by about 20,000,000 wage-earners, however, and for them it averages $59.46 yearly. All the money that trade unions have added or ever will add to the wages of labor will not equal half the sum spent last year, mainly by working people, in the consumption of liquor alone, which costs them much over $800,000,000." Accepting these statements as reliable it follows that at least half of the American Nation is made up of fools, and the other half has hardly good sense. Just think of the sums lavished on appetite! The complaint about hard times seems shameless. Here is a splendid chance to reform and bring on universal prosperity. There is need for it among the disciples of Christ, for they are assisting in this foolish expenditure..—Midland.

LITERATURE.

Our Penal Machinery and its Victims. By John P. Altgeld. New Edition. Pp. 151. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

It is about a hundred years since John Howard, the English philanthropist, was making his way with difficulty among the horrible prisons of Europe, and himself set the example and led the way in person for the alleviation of the rigors of prison life. To-day there is scarce a prison or jail in our country whose heavy walls are not penetrated with a ray of that "purest light serene," the Gospel of Christ and his love for fallen men. Like to Howard in his devotion to the wretched inmates of our prisons is Bro. W. S. B. Mathews of Onarga, Ill., who has given himself to the work of disseminating good reading among them. The various problems suggested by dealing with criminal classes in and out of confinement have of late years engaged the attention of philanthropists, and the idea of reformation as well as punishment is becoming more and more firmly insisted upon. The wonderful success of Mr. Brockway in his reformatory institution at Utica, New York, is leading the way to great changes in prison discipline. Mr. Altgeld discusses the whole question with a humanitarian spirit, and derives from the statistics of our police departments, houses of correction, and penitentiaries some striking arguments for a reform.

History of the Conquest of Mexico, with a preliminary view of the Ancient Mexican Civilization and the Life of the Conqueror, Hernando Cortez. By William H. Prescott. Vol. I. Pp. 467. Price per set of two volumes, $2.25. John B. Alden, New York.

Along with his "Ferdinand and Isabella," this history of a remote period, with its romantic and mythical surroundings, has for many years been honored as one of the finest products of American literature. The late eminent critic and essayist, Edwin P. Whipple, has remarked that it is "a history possessing the unity, variety, and interest of a magnificent poem. It deals with a series of facts and exhibits a gallery of characters, which to have invented would place its creator by the side of Homer; and which to realize and represent in the mode Mr. Prescott has done, required a rare degree of historical imagination." The expiration of the copyright allows the present publisher to issue this history in fine exterior and at a nominal price.

Vick's Magazine for August combines an extensive floral catalogue with its usual valuable contents. Leading articles are "The Supply of Home-Grown Fruit," "Spring-Blooming Bulbs," "Grape-growing and Raisin-curing in California." The latter industry yielded in Southern California in 1885, about 475,000 boxes, or 9,500,000 pounds, and more than a quarter of these were grown and cured in the San Bernardo Valley. The grapes grown for raisin curing are the Morocco, Muscat of Alexandria and the Sultana, the Muscat being greatly in excess of the others. It takes one ton of grapes to make about thirty boxes of good raisins, and vines in this district, three, four and five years old, will yield ten, fifteen and twenty pounds, respectively, to the vine; this is the average of a fairly good vineyard.

Among the articles worthy of note in the September number of Demorest's Magazine are "Thirty Years in Journalism," by Jenny June; "The War of the Rum Power on the People," by W. Jennings Demorest; "Four Friends in a Phaeton;" "Madam La Fayette: Her Hero Husband and Her Home;" and "A Night Refuge in Paris." The frontispiece is a beautiful oil picture of a charming child.

A cable dispatch to the N. Y. Evening Post announces that "a contract has been sealed between the Century Company and T. Fisher Unwin, by which the Century Magazine in the future will be published by the latter. Mr. Unwin is the most enterprising and experienced of the younger publishers here. During several seasons a number of the best books by English and American authors have issued from his house. The Century could not be placed in better hands." Frederick Warne & Co. will continue to publish St. Nicholas.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—According to the Interior, the Presbyterian church ought to give $10,000,000 a year for missions.

—The Utah M. E. Mission received 168 members during the year, of whom sixty-one had been Mormons.

—The Christian Advocate has a letter from Mr. Ratcliffe, one of Bishop Taylor's missionaries at St. Paul de Loanda, West Africa. He says they have met with no opposition from the Portuguese, but they have invariably been kind and patronize the schools in which the children are taught the rudiments of the truth.

—The English Society of Friends have twenty-four missionaries at work in India and Madagascar. In this latter country they have 133 native teachers and 104 congregations, with over 14,000 children in their schools.

—A new departure in church action is the engagement of Mrs. Goodell, the widow of the Rev. Dr. Goodell, of the Pilgrim church, St. Louis, as an assistant in the Parish work of the church of which her husband was the late pastor, at a salary of $1,200 a year.

—The statistics of Presbyterian missions for the report of 1886 show the total number of communicants in the mission churches to be 20,294. This shows a gain during the last decade of nearly 136½ per cent.

—Not long ago there was a meeting of educated natives in the city of Calcutta, and they acknowledged the fact that it was not the cannon of England that bound India to her, but the band of Christian workers there.

—In ten years more than 30,000 people embraced Christianity in the Samoan Islands. It is thought there are not twenty houses in the whole group where there is not a Bible and family worship. A native trade of a good many pounds a year shows the relation of Christianity to the advancement of commerce.

—Rev. John McKim, one of the missionaries in Japan, describing the funeral of an aged convert, says: "She was very anxious that all the heathen neighbors should be requested to look at her body after she was dead. Her reason was this: The Japanese have a dreadful belief that the bodies of dead Christians are all nailed inside the coffin in the form of a cross! This old woman's request was made in order that her neighbors might know the falsity of the belief. I had a carpenter make the coffin and bring it to my house, where the tailor we usually employ trimmed it very neatly."

—The Chicago Daily Telegram, in a notice of the mission of Pastor Seguin in this city, says: "The Evangelical institution at 135 W. Van Buren street is doing a great deal of good work, and should receive hearty support from all people who are interested in the teaching of the Gospel to young children. It is pure, disinterested mission work. No sectarian discussions are allowed at the meetings, and everything is conducted in a most pleasant and satisfactory manner. At 10:30 a Sabbath school is open to both French and English children; at 2 P. M. the Chinamen are given a chance to learn of Christ and the Gospel; at 4 P. M. services in French are held, and at 8 P. M. each evening, Saturdays excepted, Gospel meetings are held in English.

—The Board of the American Baptist Publication Society have employed in the business department at the home office three bookkeepers. The head bookkeeper acted also as cashier. For the last four years the auditors employed a competent accountant, not connected with the society, to audit the books. On the report of these special accountants the officers and Board confidently relied for security. But unfortunately this reliance has proved vain. On the examination of the books in the business department for the year ending March 31st, 1886, the accountant discovered that the bookkeeper and his first assistant had stolen money not only during the last year, but also for the three years preceding, the accounts of which had been audited by special experts, and pronounced correct. These two bookkeepers who have thus conspired together to rob the Society, are men of families and professors of religion. The head bookkeeper had been with the Society for fifteen years. The total amount abstracted is $30,421.42. Of this $4,015.15 has been recovered; leaving the shortage at this date $26,406.27.

—Mr. Moody's Summer Bible School at Mt. Hermon, Mass., was closed on August 1st. Two hundred and fifty students were in attendance. The Mt. Hermon meetings began on July 7th, and were carried through by Mr. Moody, assisted by L. D. Wishard, College Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. The aim of the school was to send a direct impulse for personal Christian work into all the American colleges. The success is attested by the numbers in attendance. One hundred colleges were represented at the meetings. A delegation of fifteen came from Randolph-Macon College in Virginia; Yale and Dartmouth sent twelve men each; Amherst, Williams and Princeton, ten each; Cornell, nine, and the University of Vermont, ten. Harvard was also represented. Canadian colleges were invited, and representatives were present from the universities of Toronto, Queen's College at Kingston, Ont., Magill College at Montreal, and others. Twenty-five States were represented. Several Indian boys from Carlisle, Penn., were present. Talks and sermons were received by the Rev. Doctors Gordon, Brooks, Moorehead, Ashmore, Pierson, the Rev. William W. Clark, and Major Whittle. The college meetings gave way to the annual conference which Mr. Moody conducts at Northfield.

A FRENCH LADY FOR HAYTI.

Pastor P. A. Seguin, 135 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, would like to secure the services of a French Protestant lady who is conversant with music and embroidery work and willing to go to La Grande Riviere du Nord, a small city located near Haitien Cape, Hayti. Any of the readers of the Christian Cynosure would render a great service to the cause of Christ by communicating with Pastor Seguin or Mrs. J. Straight, 41 Magazine St., Cambridgeport, Mass., on that subject.

Will the exchanges of the Cynosure reproduce and oblige P. A. Seguin, Pastor.

IOWA STATE MEETING.

The regular annual meeting of the Iowa Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will convene in the United Presbyterian church at Birmingham, on Tuesday, Aug. 31, 1886, at 7 P. M.

Able and eloquent speakers will be present from abroad, and ample arrangements will be made to entertain all the delegates who may come. Conveyances will be at Fairfield to meet the delegates who come on the trains. But those intending to come will please send word beforehand and announce the train by which they will arrive.

The names of the speakers can not be fully announced at present, but we expect Pres. C. A. Blanchard, the Rev. J. P. Stoddard, the Rev. C. E. Harroun, Jr., the Rev. C. D. Trumbull, and the Rev. M. A. Gault, and the State Agent. The Rev. C. F. Hawley, is preparing the way for future work. Come on to Birmingham if you wish to see an enthusiastic meeting. — George Warrington, President.

KANSAS CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Kansas Christian Association will hold its next annual meeting at the Rusco church, seven miles north of Vining, Washington county, commencing at 7:30 P. M., Tuesday, Sept. 7th, 1886.

The following programme of work is suggested:

I. Report from State agent of work done during the year, with the future outlook.

II. Should secret lodges be opposed, and if so on what considerations?

III. Wherein lies the secret of lodge power?

IV. Knights of Labor, how related to Freemasonry, and to society generally?

V. Secret fraternities in their relation to family, church and state.

VI. How can secret orders be most successfully opposed?

W. W. McMillan, Sec'y Kansas C. A., Olathe.

The Location.—Those coming from the southeast, south, or southwest can come to Vining, seven miles south of the church, on the Republican Branch of the Kansas Pacific R. R., from Junction City or Clay Center. Those coming from the east or west, come on the Central Branch to Clifton, one mile east of Vining. There will be teams at both places waiting for those coming on the 7th. The friends of the cause are cordially invited.

R. Loggan.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

The Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold its meeting in Opera Hall, Princeton, Bureau county, Tuesday evening, September 21st, at 7:30 o'clock, to continue through the 22nd and 23d. Addresses are expected from Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Pres. L. N. Stratton, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, Rev. Dr. Wm. Wishart, Mrs. L. H. Plumb of Streator, Rev. C. A. Bockman of Galesburg, Samuel E Holyoke of Galesburg, and others. Discussions of such interesting topics as are at present forced upon the public mind by the hostility of secret societies to social order and the personal independence of workingmen, will be ably maintained. Princeton is a beautiful town, distinguished for its culture and widely known as the home of the late Owen Lovejoy. As a result of his influence and that of his co-laborers, it occupied an enviable position in the ranks of reform during the anti-slavery struggle. Entertainment will be provided for delegates from abroad. The central location and convenience of railway connection invite a large attendance of the friends of the Association. All churches and local associations in sympathy with the object of the meeting are earnestly requested to send delegates, and let every patriotic, Christian man and woman in the State make an effort to be present or to have a representative on the floor of the convention, that our counsels and prayers may be united for the enlightening of all our people upon the nature and evil tendency of the secret orders.

J. L. Barlow, President.

H. L. Kellogg, Secretary.

R. R. FARE TO THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION.—The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road will return delegates who pay full fare on that line at one-third fare to the point where the ticket was purchased, provided:

1. You get a certificate from the agent where you buy your ticket, that you have paid full fare.

2. You must obtain the signature of J. P. Stoddard to your certificate at the Convention, and present it so indorsed to the agent at Princeton from whom you will get your return ticket for one-third rate.

3. To secure this reduction there must be at least twenty-five tickets taken over the C. B. & Q. R. R.

The Illinois Central road will give the same rates to Mendota, from points on that line. In the case of the I. C. R. R. the arrangement will be a little different, and will be fully explained next week.

Clergymen with permits are not included in the above arrangement.

LODGE NOTES.

A meeting of representatives of the many fraternal beneficiary societies doing business in the United States and Canada have been called to convene in Washington, in October next. These societies represent many million dollars of insurance and a membership scattered through every State and Territory. The Supreme Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen has taken the initiative toward securing uniform legislation, the collection of social statistics, and other subjects affecting these societies.

A dispatch from Montreal dated Aug. 20th, says that Archbishop Fabre, honorary chaplain to the Catholic circle of the Knights of Labor in that city which contains 300 members, has intimated to them that they must immediately sever their connection with the order.

At a meeting of delegates from the Knights of Labor assemblies in Northern Indiana, held in Fort Wayne last Thursday, steps were taken looking to the formation of a State assembly, and a meeting will be called to be held at Indianapolis during the coming State Fair.

The session of the Grand Lodge, Order of the Sons of St. George, opened in Buffalo August 17. About 200 delegates are present, representing nearly every State in the Union. F. W. Fleck, of New York, was elected Grand President, and Thomas Brown, of Philadelphia, Grand Vice President.

The national meeting of the Knights of the Golden Rule, a secret benefit society, met in this city in a hotel parlor last week. The list of officers elect marks the extent of the order, but show, also, that it is of little prominence: Past Supreme Commander, Sir Knight J. S R. Thompson, Spartansburg, S. C.; Supreme Commander, S. M. Bernard, Louisville, Ky.; Supreme Vice Commander, J. D. Irving, Toledo, Ohio; Supreme Secretary, T. J. Smith, Cincinnati; Supreme Treasurer, O F. Adair, Macon, Ga.; Supreme Medical Examiner, Dr. C. C. Higgins, Chicago, Ill.; Supreme Prelate, C. R. Curtis, Boston, Mass.; Supreme Herald, Friend Tuttle, Spartansburg, S C.; Supreme Warden, Lady Joanna W. McCoy, Louisville, Ky.; Supreme Sentinel, Lady Flora W. Bowker, Lawrence, Mass.; Supreme Trustees, J. R Clausen, Philadelphia, G. W. Menz, Louisville, Ky., and Robert W. Haynes, Jackson, Tenn.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome damphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

BUSINESS.

COMMENTS ON "MASONIC OUTRAGES.

Changes and enlargements "when you get out a new edition," which have been suggested will be duly considered when that time comes; but the practical thing now is to hasten that time! One copy in each family will be carefully read now that it is something new, and advance the cause more than to have a lecturer visit your town. Friends donated the money to put a copy into each home in Wheaton and it can be done in many places. The pamphlet will be sent postpaid to 100 different addresses, or 100 to one address for $12.50. We shall be glad to make a list of places in which every family has been supplied with this effective little work.

A number of places may have already been supplied as above suggested, as some of the constant workers like A. C. Moffatt have ordered liberally and may have supplied every family in their town. Let us have the names of all such places.

Rev. C. E. Walker writes:—"Have received first copy of 'Masonic Outrages.' It is just what is needed; ought to be sown 'knee-deep' all over our land and wherever Masonry has grown."

Mr. Thos. Hodge writes:—" 'Masonic Outrages' is a clear and temperate statement which, though short, does away with the fancy that the opponents of Masonry have only a 'Morgan' to talk about as a victim of that secret order. The most of it was no doubt written before the recent startling devel opements which Anarchism has revealed in Chicago, and that in our free country we have the same fiendish doctrines taught in the dens of lodgery which our trusting and credulous citizens had thought were confined to oppressed desperadoes in foreign countries.

"The cover of this interesting little book has an excellent woodcut of the handsome monument to the martyred Morgan and an excellent likeness of that excellent President of our country, John Quincy Adams.

The matter of fact style in the whole treatment of the subject sharpens the appetite for more knowledge of the vast system of secret control over workingmen and others among us which compels an unquestioning slavish obedience to a despotism stronger than our own slaveholding and as devilish as the Danites of Mormonism, the Ku Klux, the Molly Maguires, and Fenians, labor unions, etc., whom we have nursed as vipers in the bosom of our body politic and whose systems too often demand the sacrifices of their victim's good name and even of life itself."

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

This is the fund from which the colored ministers of the South have received the Cynosure. It seems very desirable to continue this fund, and hence the special appeal in the Cynosure of Aug. 12th.

The following named persons have contributed to this fund this year, 1886, and such names will be added from week to week as donate to it in the future:

Jno Dorcas, J F Icke, Mrs A E Tyler, H Holbrook, Wm Mathews, O Hansen, Mrs S B Skeel, Mrs A F Rider, F W Capwell, A Hamilton, Mrs C H Richardson, N Martin, R Johnson, J Aylsworth, Mrs T S Couch, I Bancroft, S A Pratt, J Rutley, A Hamilton, H A Fischer, Mrs N E Kellogg, Mrs A B Kellogg, T Kingsnarth, M Phillips.

Not reported before: Mrs H L Kellogg, $10.50; Susannah G Reed 60 cts.; Lemuel Lester, $10.00; W O Percival, $2.00, Prof E Whipple and A G Laird, each, $1.50; Prof H A Fischer, $4; L Woodruff, $5.

A PRIZE OF $20

WILL BE AWARDED FOR THE BEST NATIONAL REFORM SONG AND CHORUS (WORDS AND MUSIC) RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE NOT LATER THAN AUGUST 20. BOTH WORDS AND MUSIC TO BE PUBLISHED IN THE CHRISTIAN NATION FOR SEPTEMBER 1.

A PRIZE OF $5

FOR THE BEST WORDS WITHOUT MUSIC.

CONDITIONS:

1. The verses must be not less than three nor more than four in number, and of eight lines each, with a short chorus, the same for each verse.

2. One or other or all of the following sentiments to be expressed: The necessity of recognizing Christianity in our Nation's law and life; the Divine origin of our Nation, and the Bible the necessary source of National law; Responsibility of the Nation to God for its laws and life; Jesus Christ the divinely appointed Ruler of our Nation.

3. Music must be original, melody simple, easy to learn and follow, and adapted for use in large gatherings without practice.

4. All MSS. submitted become the property of the CHRISTIAN NATION.

5. MSS. to be sent us anonymously, accompanied by name of author in a sealed envelope.

6. Competent judges will decide upon the merits of the contributions. Address,

Christian Nation,
252 Broadway, New York.

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY,

of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

S. A. Kean & Co. Bankers.

(Successors to Preston, Kean & Co.)
100 Washington St., CHICAGO.
ACCOUNTS of Bankers, Merchants and others solicited; also COLLECTIONS. Foreign Exchange, Land Warrants. U. S., State, Municipal & leading R.R. BONDS
Send for Lists of Investment Securities.
Branch Office, Home Insurance Building.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2			77¾
No. 3			74
Winter No 2	79¼	@	79¾
Corn—No. 2	41½	@	42½
Oats—No. 2	26½		30
Rye—No. 2			50½
Bran per ton			10 00
Flour	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@	11 50
Mess pork per bbl			9 45
Butter, medium to best	10	@	23
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	75	@	1 50
Eggs			12
Seeds—Timothy	2 05	@	2 12
Flax			1 13
Broom corn	04	@	08½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@	14
umber—Common	11 00	@	18 00
Wool	12	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 80	@	5 25
Common to good	2 25	@	4 60
Hogs	3 90	@	6 70
Sheep	1 75	@	4 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter	87½	@	90
Spring			89
Corn	52	@	53
Oats	33	@	43
Mess Pork			10 50
Eggs			15¾
Butter	10		22
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 50	@	4 60
Hogs	2 65	@	5 00
Sheep	1 50	@	3 00

France

History of France from the Earliest Times to 1848. By M. GUIZOT and his daughter, MME. GUIZOT DE WITT. Translated by Robert Black. In eight volumes. Bourgeois type, leaded. Library Edition, 8 vols., small octavo, fine cloth, beveled boards, gilt tops, 427 fine illustrations. Price, $8.40. Pearl Street Edition, 8 vols., large 12mo, fine cloth, gilt tops, 427 fine illustrations. Price, $6.00. This is fairly equivalent to the Library Edition except that it is printed on smaller paper, giving narrower but good margins.

Far the best popular history of that country. Clear, vigorous, graphic, even eloquent, it is as fascinating as a romance: and it is as well comprehensive and thorough. The work has been one of the longed-for prizes of the general reader of history. All in all, the neatest volumes this publisher has yet issued.—Republican, Springfield, Mass.

427 Fine Illustrations. "In style of cover, firmness of binding, quality of letterpress, affluence of illustration, and lowness of price, this edition of one of the noblest historical works in existence, is one of the most remarkable publications now offered to the public."—Morning Star, Dover, N. H.

Guizot takes rank among the most illustrious representatives of his age and nation. The style is easy, familiar, clear and entertaining, and the publishers have done a good service in giving to the public in so fresh a form this best work of a modern French historian.—Advance, Chicago, Ill.

It is a wonderfully full and attractive history by one of the first historians of his age—a history worthy of being the last production of the brain and pen of Guizot. His country needs no better historical monument; the student needs no better history.—Interior, Chicago, Ill.

The matchless brilliancy of Guizot's style, graphic descriptions of men and events, painstaking minuteness of detail, the lucidity and ease, and the admirable philosophic reflections, all combine to render it worthy of the description it bears as the most popular history of France. It is as fascinating as a novel, and as life-like as a theatrical representation of the events and personages it describes. How the set can be sold for that price remains, after much reflection, a mystery, for the work is not sham work, it is well done; altogether it is a marvel of cheapness. Mr. Alden has done much for the cause of good literature, but nothing better than this. —Daily Times, Buffalo, N. Y.

Guizot is the Macaulay of the history of France. His narrative is full of emotion, like a quick stream; his characters rise before us as in the flesh; they are men and women, not historic lay figures. It is as charming as any romance. There is only one drawback . . . it seems more like getting a present than making a purchase.—Dominion Churchman, Toronto.

THE COST Of the Imported Edition, with substantially the same illustrations, is $36.00, while this is certainly the best in form and the most satisfactory for the library. "From the pen of a master. How Mr. Alden can give the eight volumes for $6.00, and this on good paper, and clear type, including the multitude of illustrations, is a thing we have ciphered over, but we fail to understand it."—Christian Leader, Boston, Mass.

$36 FOR ONLY $6

France has had a history second to no country on earth. Histories innumerable have described her deeds of chivalry and glory. But in accuracy, brilliancy, and all that goes to make a history, none compare with the fascinating pages of Guizot. He is as brilliant as Macaulay and as painstaking as Hume. This edition is profusely illustrated and they are illustrations that do illustrate. —American Baptist Reflector, Chattanooga, Tenn.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, 132 pages, 4 cents; Condensed Catalogue, free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York.

The Alden Book Co.: Clark and Adams Streets, Chicago; 430 Yonge Street, Toronto, Canada. [Mention this paper.

HOME HINTS.

SUMMER CARE OF BABIES.

Babies often suffer intolerably in the hot months, either from too much or too little clothing. We remember one dear baby we once saw clothed in a double woolen dressing gown, and with woolen socks on his feet, a hot July day. The drops of perspiration stood thickly over his little head, and what wonder that he cried from sheer discomfort? The little feet needed no covering, and the woolen wrap should have been replaced by a thin cotton or linen garment during the warm portion of the day, the dressing gown being near at hand to slip on as soon as the air grew cool at night. Underclothing pinned tightly about us in warm weather would be insufferable. Why should we suppose it is any easier for baby to endure it? Physicians are advising giving babies cold water at least once an hour, or rather offering it for their acceptance. A bit of ice picked from a lump with a pin may be put on baby's hot gums with good results, and best perhaps of all when the little creatures grow peevish and fussy, when they are a burden to themselves and everybody else, is the plan adopted by wise mothers, big sisters, and aunties, of partially undressing the little body, wiping away the heat and dust with a soft, cool sponge or cloth in a cool, shaded room, and with pleasant, cheerful talk soothing away the "tired" and coaxing the pilgrim to take a nap by the way. "Come now, you've got to have a nap," will rouse rebellion in almost any baby soul, but to be inducted into something nice before one knows it—ah! how we big folks enjoy it; and why shouldn't the baby?

There is another than the hot side of the baby question, however. It is the taking cold. Cribs are left in draughts; baby is left asleep in a room where windows are open: the wind changes, and nobody remembers the helpless little victim of our caprices and thoughtlessness. There is a case on record where a baby was forgotten and left out on a piazza through a heavy thunderstorm, but there are few houses where that could happen, happily. There are homes, however, where the baby really suffers from lack of clothing. The infant mortality in a mountain town, where there was always a chill in the air night and morning, was something frightful. Long sleeved dresses (which most babies now wear), with the feet and bowels kept warm, might have saved some of these precious lives. The babies' illness took the form of bowel trouble, sometimes the result of a summer cold. There is nothing, everybody knows, that will relieve a stomach or bowel pain like a hot application. Indeed, some people who have a tendency to such complaints are seldom without their flannel bandage, and in case of any disturbance of the organs mentioned, know that the flannel bag with smartweed and tansy quilted into its folds will act as a charm. Some physicians say everybody should wear flannel next to the skin the year round. Others say flannel should never touch the skin. The truth will be found to lie between the two extremes. Wear flannel when it is needed, leave it off when it does harm. To be well, however, a person must be warm. If not warm naturally there is probably something wrong in the person's system, but until a natural circulation and warmth can be secured, artificial means must be used. Of one thing be sure, babies' feet, arms, and bowels must be taken care of, and the care of the outer part of the stomach is quite as important as attention to the inner wants. In conclusion let us say, no garment worn during the day should be worn at night by old or young. Cleanliness, if not splendor, is possible to all, and is necessary to health.—Boston Budget.

Symptoms.—A story is told of the late Archbishop Trench, the well-known writer, which shows how active a part the imagination plays in determining the state of our health. After the eminent prelate suffered from breaking health he was always accompanied, whether in his rural rambles, on the train, or even at formal dinner parties, by his daughter, who was constantly by his side. The story here quoted was originally told in Dublin society.

The last course had been served at a certain grand banquet, when his Grace is stated to have said to his daughter, with some slight agitation:

"My daughter."

"Well?"

"I fear that I am threatened with one of my bad attacks."

"Why?"

"I have been pinching my knee for the last five minutes, and I cannot feel the slightest sensation."

"Make your mind easy, your Grace," rejoined a person on the other side.

"Why so?"

"It was my knee you were pinching all the time!"—Ex.

Mr. Gould's Appetite.—"I am very fond of baked potatoes," said Mr. Jay Gould the other day; "they are about the simplest thing one can eat; and I find that the simpler my food is the better for my head. At home I do not care for what you call 'fancy dishes.' Plain meats and vegetables, good bread and butter, good milk, sometimes porridge, or grits, for breakfast satisfy me. As you may suppose, I find my time filled up pretty well with business, and I certainly find that I can get along better when my food is the plainest of the plain. I have never lost my fondness for the country food I used to be accustomed to in my boyhood."—Ex.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

Single Copy 30 Cents.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison Street. Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT,
20 Cents each.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 8th to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

FARM NOTES.

HOW TO RECLAIM SWAMPS.

Col. John P. Fort, of southwestern Georgia, can fairly claim to be one of the benefactors of the race. He has discovered a method by which swampy and bog land can be drained at small expense. His very simple process will give to farmers tens of millions of acres of land that were worse than useless, for they were the seats of malarial disorders. Col. Fort simply digs or drives a hole into the earth at the point in his submerged lands that is deepest. He goes to work in the same way as oil wells or artesian wells are opened up. A descending drill always meets subterranean channels into which the water will flow if the hole is kept cleared. On one of his great swamp-farms may be seen two apertures in the earth. One sucking up the stagnant water of the swamp, the other spouting up sweet, clear water from a strata far below. On Col. Fort's farm these wells are only two hundred feet apart. Heretofore, it has been supposed that the only way to drain swampy land was to build ditches and lay underground pipes to convey the water to a distance, and yet the cess pool might have given a hint of how superfluous surface water might be removed. Farmers who own large quantities of swampy land would do well to try this experiment, and perhaps they will find that they not only can get rid of malaria, but come into possession of wonderfully fertile farm lands, far superior to ordinary soil.—Demorest.

MUCK FOR MANURE.

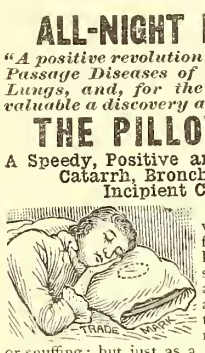
By careful management, a large addition of manure—the richest resource of the farm—may be made at the cost of some labor and little money out of pocket. A considerable bill for fertilizers is an eye-opener, and sets one thinking how he can save the large lot of money for so small a lot of manure. An excellent way to make a big manure heap is as follows: Dig from the swamp—and if the farmer is so unfortunate as to have none, let him offer his more fortunate neighbor to dig drains in his swamp for the muck he throws out; but, in some way, get a lot of swamp muck; 200 or 300 loads. Make a heap, a big one, in a field; spread a foot in depth of the muck, roughly, whiten it all over with fresh lime from the kiln; add more muck and more lime, and so on, until the heap is five feet high. It will soon get hot, and keep hot, and in the spring will be a sweet, dark, rich mass of valuable fertilizer, having from twenty to fifty pounds of nitrogen, worth fifteen to twenty cents per pound in artificial fertilizers, in every ton of it. More muck may be put in the cow-yard, in the stable gutters, and especially in the pig-pen, along with the horse manure, which will all be turned over and over, and worked up to a rich compost with the refuse of the pig-pen. Making manure is a fine art far too little studied by farmers. Where swamp muck cannot be procured, leaves, straw, chaff, and any or all other vegetable matter may be gathered for this purpose.—Independent.

A FLORAL AWNING.

If any of our readers have doors or windows for which they would like an awning, they may make one that will be more satisfactory than any they could buy, all through the season in which awnings are needed. It will be more satisfactory because it will be ornamental, and that is something that cannot be said of awnings in general. Procure some strips—lath is just what you need—and saw off four of them the width of the door or window you intend your awning for. Nail these together in a square, and fasten two other pieces across from corner to corner. This makes the top frame-work of your awning, and is to be fastened to the top of the door or window frame. As a support to it, put on a strip on each side, to run from the outside corners down to about the middle of the door or window. In the triangular space between this brace, the door-frame and the top of the awning, fasten an old barrel hoop. Over this rough frame-work train morning glories, or any other quick growing vines, and you will have, after a little, a perfect network of greenery and blossoms. Such awnings are easily made, and are extremely graceful in appearance. —Agriculturist.

CUTTING TIMBER IN AUGUST.

Experience has shown us that the best time to cut timber for posts, rails or stakes, is in August. The bark will then come off readily, and the wood becomes harder and endures longer than if cut at any other season. Hickery never makes a good post or stake, as it rots rapidly in the ground or on it, and if cut when the bark adheres, will soon rot, or likely be cut to pieces, before it can rot, by worms. But if cut in August, very few, if any trees, make a more durable rail for off the ground. The bark drops off, and the wood becomes so hard that it "jingles" when struck, while the worms do not attack it. Hickory rails, made from trees cut in August and kept off the ground, will last for fifty years.



White oak makes a durable rail or post cut at any season, but its durability is increased fifty per cent by cutting in August. "Pin oak" is unfit for posts, or for rails either, on or off the ground, when the tree has died, and is entirely unfit for posts, and almost unfit for rails, if cut when the sap is not flowing; but rails made from a pin oak tree cut in August, will last at least twenty years off the ground. What is true of pin oak is true of red elm. If cut in August it is as durable as hickory or white oak, as long as it is not set in or on the ground. White elm is fit for firewood only, no matter at what time it is cut, and this is true of wild cherry also. With but few exceptions the gain by cutting in August is sufficient to compensate for cutting at that time. It is not necessary that the rails or posts be split out then. The trees may be felled only, and the further work put off until cooler weather. But it is better to split the trunks into rails or posts for later use as soon as felled; the wood will then season rapidly, and the highest point of durability is attained.—Agriculturist.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TERLE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association.
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidatee, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover. 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

The Broken Seal: or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Baiu. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on MASONRY. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

A bond call for $15,000,000 3 per cents was made Aug. 19. This is the third call during the present fiscal year. The first was for $4 000,000, the second for $10,000,000, and that of Aug. 19 for $15,000,000, making $29,000,000 in all. The condition of the Treasury under the hoarding policy of the present administration amply warrants these financial operations.

President Cleveland, accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Folsom, and Colonel and Mrs. Lamont, left Washington Monday morning, last week, for his summer vacation in the Adirondack mountains.

COUNTRY.

The convention of the Irish National League met in this city last week, and adopted resolutions indorsing the policy of Parnell and the Parliamentary party, and pledging them the undivided support of the Irish in America. Mr. John E. Fitzgerald, of Lincoln, Neb., was elected president, and Mr. Hugh McCaffrey, of Philadelphia, first vice president.

Natural gas was struck at Mattoon, Wednesday. Workmen employed by the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville Railroad were employed digging a well, and at a depth of seventy-eight feet the gas was discovered. Pipes were immediately connected, and soon a number of jets were burning.

F. W. Schafer, a tailor of Keokuk, Iowa, succeeded in making himself crazy drunk Thursday, and then started out to burn up the city. He fired it in three places and then was captured. The populace attempted to take the prisoner, with the intention of lynching him.

Ex Councilman Thomas Reed, of Cleveland, Ohio, was killed in a frightful manner Wednesday. While returning from Akron to Cleveland he leaned from the platform of his car, and his head was smashed by a girder on a bridge near Peninsular.

Galveston, Texas, was visited by a violent storm Friday, which did great damage. The street railway tracks along the shore were washed away, and the waves broke over the gallery of the Beach Hotel. The southern portion of the city was inundated, and the citizens were compelled to flee to save their lives.

It is reported as the latest news of the storm in Dakota, Aug. 15th, that the town of Newark was entirely destroyed. Five persons were killed, Mortimer Kennedy, town site proprietor of Newark, being among the victims. South of Lamoure, William Rowan was killed in his house, which was blown down. Later reports from districts over which the storm passed show that its effects were more serious than was at first stated. From those towns whose immediate connections with the outer world had been cut off by the prostration of telegraph wires comes now the news that many persons were killed and much property destroyed.

Ten head of cattle died on the Peck farm, in Rountree township, Montgomery county, Illinois, from what is thought to be Texas fever. Grave fears are entertained that the disease is spreading, as twenty five more cattle are sick.

Mrs August Becker, of Milwaukee, administered carbolic acid to her 8 year-old son, August, by mistake, Friday. The little fellow died in great agony shortly afterward.

General Sedgwick, who was sent to Mexico to investigate the Cutting case, arrived at Paso del Norte Friday. He had a conference with Consul Brigham, and immediately left for the city of Mexico to see Minister Jackson. Notwithstanding the fact that he was announced as a special envoy from the United States, his baggage was thoroughly overhauled by the Mexican customs inspectors.

A number of gas pipe bombs, with fuses attached, were discovered by the police Sunday in the rear of a private residence at No. 565 East Twenty fifth street, in this city. Experiments will be made with them on the lake front, or elsewhere.

A train bearing an excursion collided with the newspaper train on the Camden and Atlantic railroad, near Ancora, Sunday. Seven persons were injured, two fatally, it is thought. The excurionists were from Philadelphia.

William J. Kendall, of Boston, swam in a cork vest the whirlpool rapids of Niagara river Sunday. The trial was to settle a wager of $10,000, made by Boston parties, he to receive $1,000 of the stakes. He was exhausted and nearly dead when rescued, having only past the first whirlpool.

Nearly $2,000,000 worth of property was destroyed by fire in San Francisco Saturday. The blaze had its origin in a machine shop and spread with startling rapidity, destroyiug business blocks and residences for blocks on either side of the shop.

William Gray, Jr., one of the best known business men in Boston, treasurer of the Indian Orchard and Atlantic Cotton mills, became a defaulter for over $500,000. In desperation he drove out into the wild region of the Blue Hills near Readville, Mass., and shot himself. He owned the yacht Huron, was part owner of the Puritan, a park commissioner, railroad director, and was assessed last year $1,000,000. He had a wife and nine children.

Boston was treated to another sensation Thursday, when George Snell, treasurer of the Lowell Bleachery, was arrested, charged with embezzling $40,000 of the company's money.

A case of hydrophobia developed in Bay City, Mich., Monday, when Ethbert Smithson, nineteen years of age, who had been bitten by a poisoned dog, suddenly snapped and bit at everything near him. Two men tied the unfortunate boy, and he is now in the hospital. Great alarm is felt in the neighborhood, as many other boys and some men were bitten by the dog.

A very earnest petition has been forwarded to the President by Gov. Ross of New Mexico, signed by all the Federal officers at Santa Fe, urging the adoption of Gen. Miles's plan for the removal of the Apache and Chiricahua Indians from Arizona.

FOREIGN.

Two stone-throwing mobs assembled in Belfast Thursday, but were soon dispersed. No further serious rioting is feared. Nine policemen have been indicted for wilful murder, in unnecessarily firing upon citizens during the recent outbreaks.

Several thousand barrels of petroleum were burned Friday on Dudgeon's wharf at London.

In the British House of Commons the under-secretary of foreign affairs stated that negotiations for the settlement of the fisheries dispute were proceeding satisfactorily between England, the United States, and Canada. Thomas Power O'Connor maintained that Lord Churchill's speeches were the original cause of the Belfast riots.

From Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, it is reported that the town was buried beneath 50,000 tons of peat some time ago. The avalanche occurred at night, and two persons were caught in it and killed The inhabitants thought the island was visited by an earthquake, and hastily left the town. Much property was destroyed.

A dispatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, dated Saturday, says, that the populace and the troops quartered in the Capital surrounded the palace early that morning, and forced the abdication of Prince Alexander, who was escorted over the frontier. There was no disorder. The populace then assembled, and adopted a resolution praying the Czar to re extend his sympathy to the Bulgarian people.

It is understood that the Supreme Tribunal, of Chihuahua, Mexico, will order the release of A K. Cutting, the Texas editor, on the ground that he has already suffered enough imprisonment for the offense which be committed.

On account of threats of a renewal of the savage mobs in Belfast, enormous forces of military and police, preceded by eight magistrates, paraded the disturbed districts on Saturday night. This had the effect of overawing the rowdy element. The Albert Street Presbyterian church, which is in the Catholic district, was open for the first time Sunday since the beginning of the riots. When the service was over a mob booted and stoned the retiring congregation and maltreated Mr. Montgomery, the minister, in spite of the troops and police called for their protection.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD

FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS FOR $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting. German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GENEVA COLLEGE.

FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed

ENDOWMENT FUND OVER $100,000.

Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.

Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.

Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President, BEAVER FALLS, PA.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost, Horatius Bonar, Henry Morehouse, George C. Needham, D. L. Moody, D. W. Whittle, J. H. Brookes, A. J. Gordon, William Lincoln, J. H. Vincent, Chas. M. Whittelsey, R. C. Morse, L. W. Munhall, Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers. Address, W. F. BAKER, Wheaton, Ill.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.

DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

FOR LOVE AND BEARS.

BY JAMES DALY,

of the Chicago Press.

THE MOST interesting and picturesque book ever issued in the West. Ably and entertainingly written. Superbly illustrated. Printed in imitation of type writer manuscript, and illustrated with one cabinet photograph and over sixty pencil sketches. It is at once a curiosity and ornament to every centre table in the land.

Mailed free upon receipt of $1.00.

ARCADE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
143 LaSalle St.

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mfd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1, $3 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ

VOL. XVIII., No. 50. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1886. WHOLE No. 853.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
A Hero Gone..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
A Foolish Bondage..... 1
The Woman's Reason and the Lord's..... 2
Chinatown and Its Problems..... 9
The King's Daughter is all Glorious Within..... 4
SELECTIONS:
The Lord's Table to be Kept Pure..... 2
Logan as a Masonic Lecturer..... 3
Italian Freemasonry..... 3
Heathenism..... 3
REFORM NEWS:
Princeton and the Illinois Meeting; Reform Work in Wisconsin; From the Wisconsin Agent; Testimony for Elder Browne's Work..... 4,5
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
CORRESPONDENCE:
Tennessee Emerging from the Lodge Flood; Masonic Perjury in the Lodge; The Real American party; Sam Jones and Society; Save your Influence; Shut away from the People; Pith and Point..... 5,6
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
RELIGIOUS NEWS:
Free Methodist Conference on the Lodge; Christian Convention in Old Orchard, Me..... 12
THE N. C. A..... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

In two or three speeches last week which are regarded of national importance, Mr. Blaine leaves no doubt of his position on prohibition in politics. He is just as much opposed to the movement as he was in 1884. The Republican party is enough for him. It will solve the labor problem by a protective tariff and the liquor question by letting the saloons alone. It promises little that the Republican party will ever drive the saloon from Michigan, that a minority report maintaining that the Republican party was the only true temperance party, deploring the existence of the liquor traffic, and in favor of its ultimate suppression by law, was voted down with a vim at the State Republican convention the other day.

Slowly but surely the coils of the anaconda of slavery are unwinding from the crushed races of the earth. A few weeks since there came the glorious news from Spain that Cuba was freed from the curse. In the Chamber of Deputies, says the dispatch, Senor Labra moved a resolution that the Government free as soon as possible the remaining 26,000 slaves in Cuba. The Government agreed to the resolution and it was passed unanimously. The President of the Chamber congratulated the members on the "crowning of the glorious work of the abolition of slavery. Brazil is gradually manumitting her slaves, and with the united efforts of Christendom for the civilization of Africa, the system that has filled her graves with horror will be banished with its ferocity and cruelty. A species of slavery exists in China; it is torpid but actual, and will be long in yielding to the influences of civilization and Christianity.

The question of the Bible in schools was ably discussed last week before the Teachers' Institute of Du Page county, Illinois, by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, in an address upon the dangers of secularization in our public schools. The position of the Chicago schools under the present rule excluding religion and the Word of God was seen last June to be most deplorable, when prayer was refused at the High School graduation, though held in a church. Possibly cities overruled by infidel foreign influences and Romanism, like Chicago and Cincinnati, may have to profit by the example of Holland. Twenty-five years ago the reading of the Bible was forbidden in the public schools of that country. Now, it is said there is scarcely a town of any importance which which has not its free, popular Bible school; and in many public places the public school is almost deserted. These Bible schools are maintained by private expense and cost the Christian public nearly two million dollars.

Some time since a brother in Michigan wrote to "General" Booth at the headquarters of the Salvation Army in London to know in what relation the secret lodges were to be held by the new religious movement. The reply was in favor of the lodge. But with more light on the nature and principles of the orders this decision was reversed, and word went forth condemning the lodge, and all rejoiced who knew of the hostility of secretism to Christ. But Rev. Albert Sims of Uxbridge, Canada, makes the serious charge in the Free Methodist that members of secret orders who would join the Free Methodists but for their firmness in maintaining the principle of Christian opposition and separation from the lodge, "go to the Army and there they make the discovery that they can have full and free salvation, be happy, and still belong to their lodges! And away they go! You can find Freemasons, Odd-fellows, Foresters, Orangemen, and nearly the whole brood of secret societies in the Salvation Army. Is it then any wonder that with all these abominations plastered over with ditties, fun and frolic, these people are sweeping through the land?" This is sad news, and if generally true makes the Salvationists an army whose private practices makes war on their marching orders.

It is a happy omen that before the rising power of national independence the plottings of princes and despots are coming to naught in Europe. When Turkey was dismembered after the conquest of Russia, the States known as Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia desired to be united in government, and so read the treaty of San Stephano. But Beaconsfield compelled, in the Berlin Congress, this natural and chosen arrangement of the people to be given up, since it would be pleasing also to Russia. Two States were made and existed with strained relations until last year, when Eastern Roumalia revolted and joined Bulgaria. Servia attempted to secure some territory in the readjustment, but her incursions were defeated by Prince Alexander. It seems that the new Bulgarian union under Alexander was not pleasing to Russia, because fostering too great independence of her control. Her agents and money have been freely used against Alexander, and when he was kidnapped a few days ago by Russian intrigue, it was reported that he had signed an abdication, and a provisional government was set up. The Bulgariaus did not submit tamely to such an outrage upon their nation and the ruler whom they loved. The provisional government was removed, the Russian agents driven off, and now Alexander is returned from the brief exile in Germany to the bosom of an enthusiastic people. Russia has spent 400,000 roubles in the plot to create a revolution without revolutionists, and the general satisfaction at this failure of one of her many political intrigues with the pleasure expressed by the kings of Roumania and Servia at the result point to a peaceful and happy termination of a threatening affair.

It is possible that Prince Bismarck's religious convictions, so nobly expressed by him years since, as told by ex-minister Kasson in the North American Review, have undergone a serious change with the passing of years and the hardening influences of politics.In 1847 he said in the Prussian diet that in his opinion Christian supremacy in the European States was the very soil in which those States had their root, and "that every State which wishes an enduring existence, if it desires to point to any justification for that existence when called in question, must be constituted on a religious basis." "Let us not," he added, "deprive the people of the belief that our legislation is derived from the fountain of Christianity." With the convictions of forty years ago he should have anticipated long since the need of the workingmen of Germany for a Sabbath day of rest and religious instruction, and should hardly need to be enlightened on this matter. But such is the pressure against the workingman's rest day that a thousand carpenters of Berlin have felt constrained to address the following petition to the Chancellor: "Prince Bismarck: You have declared that you will not legally forbid Sunday work until convinced by the voice of the laborers that they demand rest on that day. Here, then, is their voice. We declare implicitly, that we desire a law which will grant us protection in the enjoyment of freedom from work on Sunday. Sunday labor leads to misery, crime and vagabondism." Let this petition be heard round the world.

It was reported in a few papers during July that George Muller, the great philanthrophist and example of the mighty power of faith, was dead. It was not widely credited, and some papers even corrected the report as a mistake. Mr. Muller went to Australia some months ago, preaching and teaching the Gospel way of faith and holiness, and little news of him has since been seen in those papers which give prominence to intelligence of that character. But the Belfast Witness accepts the news as correct as given by telegram from Australia, May 4th. If so the Christian church everywhere has occasion to mourn, for since the Apostles the world has seldom known a man of so great faith, whose life seemed to be so hid with Christ's in God. None who ever heard him speak of his regard for the Word of God will be likely to forget the tone and manner of inexpressible love. His teachings on the second coming of Christ, [the life of faith and the baptism of the Holy Spirit were powerful and convincing. He was born, says the Witness, September 27th, 1805, in Kroppenstadt, Saxony, and went to England as a preacher of the Gospel in 1829. In April, 1836, he opened his first orphan house in Bristol, and devoted himself with unexampled success to this cause for 43 years. From the year 1875 he felt the duty laid upon him to testify in all lands of his living God and Saviour, who hears everywhere the prayer of faith. Accordingly, he visited the various countries of Europe, and afterwards Palestine, India,and Asia Minor, and in last autumn, notwithstanding the burden of his eighty years of age, he journeyed also to Australia; and there, in the midst of his labors, suddenly he was not, for God took him.

A FOOLISH BONDAGE.

BY S. HART.

"My father was a Republican and my grandfather was a Republican; and if I had a relative that I knew to be a Democrat I would not own relationship." How often have I heard such expressions from partisan lips.

"My father took his dram whenever he wanted it, and it didn't hurt him either, for he could work with any man; and he lived to a good old age." I have known as good men who took a dram occasionally, as those who are always harping on temperance." "A man who can't drink without making a brute of himself, ought to be kicked out of decent society." Such declarations proceed from under the beautifully blossoming nose of the genteel tippler, the moderate drinker, and the one who brings a pint or more home from town for "warming up," "cooling off," "snake bite" and "bitters."

"Why, I'm just as good a temperance man as you; it don't bother me; I can take it or let it alone. I hardly ever touch it; sometimes when I go to town I drink with my friends just to keep from offending them." "Why, many of my best temperance friends are opposed to prohibition—my best customers—and they would be awfully down on me if I should leave my party." "The fact is my folks are all opposed to prohibition, and I would be considered a 'crank' or 'fanatic' if I should vote prohibition."

Thus they argue, and excuse themselves, while they remain in bondage to relations, friends, and party; in many instances praying for temperance and blindly working and voting against it in the vain hope of accomplishing the object through their party, and thus saving themselves from ridicule and loss. But the most silly, contemptible bondage to friends and relations is brought out in the anti-secret reform. One influential person will compromise a whole line of relations on that question—will hush them all to silence. One lodge in a town will terrify and compromise hundreds. One or two secretists in a community will keep down agitation. One or two in a congregation will menace the harmony and interests of the church.

A lady said to me, "Some of my people belong to the lodge and they may be better than I, I don't feel like judging them." I saw her bondage and said no more. Another, whose husband had been a non-affiliated Mason for seventeen years, would not sign the Washington Monument protest. I asked her if she had ever read the Cynosure. "All I want to," she curtly remarked. Her brother, I understood, was a rich Mason. Another, whose father was a Mason, wouldn't read nor hear anything against it. Another had a dear brother who belonged and, therefore, couldn't believe that it was wrong.

I once put out my hand to an old acquaintance, when he suddenly drew back and said, "I won't shake hands with any such a man as you!" He gave me to understand that I had insulted his friends by handing them Anti-masonic literature, (for which I had already been mobbed). Another Mason, whose friends I had insulted the same way, took occasion, when surrounded by his friends, to roundly abuse me, shaking his fists in my face and threatening to do terrible things if I ever did the like again.

"Odd-fellowism is good enough religion for me," said a father to his son. "A man can't help being a Christian if he lives up to its teachings." But his son did not see it so easily from what he knew of it, and argued the point. Another son joined his "good-enough-religion" lodge, and they two swindled this anti-lodge son out of his share of the property that had been given to him, and then cast him off. And all his relatives by this means soon dropped him; for they were all mixed up with the lodge in the way of sons-in-law, brothers-in-law, etc., and of course must needs avoid offending their lodge relatives and friends, in showing the usual friendship to this very fanatical, cranky, anti-secretist.

I might cite many more instances of this cowardly servility of the great mass of the people to an overbearing minority. But suffice it to say that the hardest thing to remove is this dread of offending friends who are connected in some way with some secret society. A father, or brother, or son, or son-in-law, or brother-in-law, or cousin, or uncle, or the pastor, or some relation or friend is, or has been, or is going to be, connected with the lodge, and, therefore, "it must be a good thing." Thus the shackles are riveted, and they are inactive and silent. Shame!

Lecompton, Kans.

THE WOMEN'S REASONS AND THE LORD'S.

When the sons of the patriarch Jacob received their Hebrew names, their mothers assigned the reasons why they so called them. Indian women, I presume, could give reasons why they named boys Red Cloud, Sitting Bull, Cornstalk, White Feather, Young-Man-afraid-of-his-Horses, etc. There is, however, deep instruction in Scripture appellations at first not often recognized. Ingersoll and his fraternity of infidels would regard the reasons assigned by Indian women at equal value.

Take the names of the tribes and, with the aid of a concordance, trace them through Bible and Testament, and their doctrinal importance becomes apparent.

Let us observe cursorily Jacob's experience. Who did he behold at the top of the ladder? What did he hear him say? Was his dream a medium of divine communication? Was he joined or consecrated to Him when, "yidder yankob nedar," he vowed a vow? Did he wrestle with Him, overcoming victoriously, although in weakness? What knew he of praise, of reward? Did he receive any light in his judgment of things spiritual or temporal? Was he blessed? Did the Lord grant him a habitation or dwelling on earth and in heaven? Did he have an increase or growth in grace? Did he receive the proceeds of vital faith-salvation? Thus we see he had the tribes in a duplicate manner. No wonder he said, "Bereave me of my children and I am bereft." His grief was not merely human, but also a type.

Solon, the Greek, lost a son. When told of his death he replied stoically, "I begat him mortal." Jacob's religion was more than Solon's philosophy.

In the word Benjamin, Yamin signifies: first, faith; secondly, right hand, this being given in compacts in pledge of faith. Hence we see why it was changed from Benoni. If one trace these words through Scripture and perceive their doctrinal import he cannot say that any one of them is not canonical. In the early Quaker books one may see these doctrines illustrated, although the writers knew not Hebrew.

When in old age Jacob blessed his sons, his remarks concerning Simeon and Levi are noteworthy: "Hearing and Joining are brethren. Instruments of cruelty are in their habitations. O my soul, come not thou into their secret." They had at one time formed a secret fraternity for murder and evil. The manner and spirit of it was Masonic. The tragedy was Masonic. A long while after they stood before their aged father to receive, as from the Lord, his blessing. The stain of blood was yet upon their skirts. They had not condemned their extra-judicial oath and engagement. They would urge their Masonic reason, but their fate was fixed. "I will divide them in Jacob and scatter them in Israel."

Masonry seeks a place in Israel; stealthily seeks it, and its fate is fixed. It will become more and more contemptible there. Ministers of the Gospel and enlightened churchmen who hear, obey and join the oath-bound secret lodge, must one day receive, if unrepentent, an Asher as heart-rending as Jacob pronounced. Benjamin will be Benoni to them, their Issacher or rewards, at most, what Satan promised Christ—the world, the flesh, and the devil. "Unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united, for, 'b' appam chargu ish,' in their anger they slew a man," or the fraternity did, for whose crimes they become, by affiliation, partakers.

QUAKER BOY.

CAN THE AMERICAN INDIAN BE CIVILIZED?

BY REV. C. E. WALKER.

I will not make a grave attempt to prove this proposition, for the simple reason that it has been too often proven for doubt. The Indian can be Christianized, has been Christianized, and if under the treatment he has received from white men (who are called civilized) and the goverment, he can be brought out as a man, certainly there is reason for strong hope when he shall have been properly treated.

From my table as I write, I look out across the highway to where Bro. Amos Merow, a Dakota Indian is harvesting his little field of about forty acres. He is driving his ox team and self-raking reaper, and four of his church brethren are binding after. They are doing good work, and what is to be commended, they go to work in the morning very early in order to give the poor oxen a chance to rest in the heat of the day. Most white men would prefer to sleep while it is cool, and not regard the poor oxen.

Bro. Merow is not a full-blood Indian, but as to any advantage arising from the white blood in his veins, there is good reason for doubt. However, he is a near neighbor, and I know him to be a pleasant man, a good Christian, very attentive to his church obligations, and a good worker. His present dwelling is of the usual Indian style of log hut, but he is about to replace it by a fair frame house. He is enlarging his cultivatable land by breaking some of the beautiful prairie each year. His children are pleasant and polite, although they cannot talk with me, not having learned English.

He takes a paper, the Japi Oaye, published monthly for the Dakota mission of the Presbyterian church, and in the Dakota language; and in this little paper they gather information as to what is going on in the world.

When I have attended the religious services at the Indian church at Brown Earth, about five miles from my home, I have praised God for what I saw. I could judge, of course, only by what I saw and felt, as I could not understand; but for whole-hearted sincerity in the service of God, I never saw it excelled elsewhere.

I gave these people a talk on temperance over a year ago, taking a text and presenting the Bible demand in this direction. The closest attention was given while I talked to those dear people, only a very few of whom could understand what I was saying, until Bro. Thomas Renville, brother of Rev. Daniel Renville, the pastor, translated my discourse into the Dakota for them.

Give the Indian a chance, and when he is treated as a man, and given a Christian education—as all persons ought to have—he will show us that he can be a good neighbor, a good citizen, and go to heaven at last. May the Lord open the eyes of our Christian people to a realization of their duties to the red man (and the yellow man from over the sea, too), and help this nation to do fairly and justly by an oppressed and much-abused people.

Twin Brooks, Dak.

THE LORD'S TABLE TO BE KEPT PURE.

The right of self-preservation belongs to all who have a right to exist. Their right to exist implies the right to use proper means to prolong that existence. It is self-murder in a man not to make use of such means to preserve life as are at his command; he is held to be guilty of suicide. The same is true of civil governments and church organizations. If they have the right to exist at all they are bound to use the means of self-preservation. In the case of a denomination it has only a right to exist when maintaining Christ's truth. This is the purpose for which the church had its being. It can plead for a lease of life only when doing this work. Then its right to exist depends on keeping the purity of the faith. So soon as, and just in proportion as, truth fails to be set forth in its doctrine and life, so soon sentence of death goes forth from the law of God against it. To prevent such a dire calamity God said to the church of Sardis, Rev. 3: 3, "Remember, therefore, how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast and repent. If, therefore, thou shalt not watch I will come on thee as a thief in the night, and thou shalt not know what time I will come upon thee."

This is the condition of many churches at this moment. They are opening the doors to all comers who have the mere name of Christian. They stop not to enquire concerning their doctrine or their life, but throw open wide their doors. They say, "We throw the responsibility upon the individual; if he is not worthy that is not our concern but his own." Thus the Presbyterian and Methodist, the Calvinist and Armenian, the Universalist and Swedenborgian, the Unitarian and the Spiritualist, have been known to all sit down at the same table on equal terms. It is thus practically declared to be the table of the Lord and the table of devils. For here are the absolutely contradictory doctrines of all these individuals present, and if any of them be true the contradiction must be false. Such communion of light and darkness, truth and error, God has not promised to join in and bless. The poison of error thus tolerated and received into the church will soon paralyze the life and destroy the power to testify of the truth, and on the principle of self-preservation the church has a right to decline such communion and close the door against errorists.

This is perfectly evident from the command, "Purge out, therefore, the old leaven that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ, our passover, is sacrificed for us. Therefore, let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators: yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous or extortioners or with idolaters; for then ye must needs go out of the world. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolator, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with such an one, no, not to eat." 1 Cor. 5: 7–11. This passage establishes as clearly as noonday the obligation to maintain a holy communion, and the duty of the church to scrutinize the doctrine and character of all persons who may seek to sit at the communion table, and exclude such as maintain error of doctrine or life. Of the same import is that passage, 2 Thess. 3: 6, "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly and not after the tradition which he received of us." Verses 14 and 15, "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother."

All these passages, if they have any meaning at all, require the church to enquire into the Christian doctrine and life of all whom she admits to the Lord's table, and exclude all who are not known to be worthy according to the Scripture test. How open communion churches are to answer in the great day for their ignoring of these injunctions is not for us to say. But it must be plain to the most casual observer that they make no effort to obey them, when they invite all of every denomination to the table. They are not purging out the old leaven, but putting it in and mixing it up so that no man can distinguish it, and eventually the whole lump, if God in mercy prevent not, will be thoroughly leavened.

Let it be remembered that this is the Lord's table, not man's. The Lord, then, makes the rules that regulate it, and not man. The Lord's rule is substantially, See that nothing defiling or impure and offensive to him be brought in here. "Purge out," etc. Open communion does away with this and says, "Invite all who think they love God, no matter what their errors or their life; they themselves are to be the judges." Are we not justified in arraigning this doctrine as an outrage upon the authority of Christ? How can we look for any but the most bitter fruits of unrighteousness from such dereliction of duty? With all the scrutiny exercised by the most vigilant, and what are called by way of reproach, most exclusive churches, it is feared many who are wholly unworthy feast themselves without fear at this table. How much greater the danger when the safeguards God has set about this feast are broken down, and the officers of the church boldly proclaim it, that they make no personal scrutiny of any one who may want to come?—Christian Instructor.

LOGAN AS A MASONIC LECTURER.

It was hardly possible that General Logan, in his Presidential junket to the Pacific Coast, would neglect cultivating the Freemasons. Monday evening, August 16th, the Golden Gate Commandery put their rooms in order for a banquet. None of the ladies of Logan's party were allowed at the Knight Templar meeting, but they were escorted through the rooms of the commandery before their lords were ready to begin their lodge meeting in the Bacchanalian degree, as if to tantalize,—or rather insult them. Without taking time to analyze Logan's speech, attention is called to several passages that are an evidence that the speaker had fallen back for his eloquence upon some of the hackneyed phrases of the professional lodge lecturer which abound in euphony, but not in truth. This is the reported speech:

"Sir Knights, I feel that I am not up to the occasion. I had heard much of California prior to coming here. I have known something of your history in the past. No man has yet visited the shores of California who has not gone away thankful that he has made the visit. I can say that the people who lately visited your Golden State have returned to their homes with grateful hearts that they had visited a land of such surpassing beauty, a land of flowers and fruit and great productions. We meet here to-night in the capacity of friends, as Sir Knights, members of this great organization. If I could speak of the history of this grand order I could only compare it to the great ocean that is formed by the little streams that trickle down the hillside. Geologists tell us that each and everything in history of this order has made a track through ages which is visible to all. The world can read its history as it goes along as one reads the stars of night. All that is good in human nature it brings together, not the friendship of the lip, but the friendship that ties man to man, because he knows him well, and knows him as a brother. So, too, when freedom pined, manacled with chains in the darkness of a dungeon or crushed beneath the iron heel of tyranny, the Knights flashed forth their swords and lifted it up into the light of day, and proclaimed it there as the inheritance of man. Christianity itself advances under the light of the mystic eye. When Knights meet they cross their swords as indicative that they are to draw them in support of civilization and Christianity. Charity is one of the grand rocks on which this organization stands. We have built our temple on the rock of charity, a charity which you find existing from the homes of the humblest man to the palaces where princes reign. Our organization has done much to elevate man, to put him in that place where he himself can say, 'I am a man.' Our organization is better and greater than all the others you can find in the world. It has no kindred tie with any other organization existing except, indeed, that tie which binds all together—the common tie of friendship. But these are the ties which live longer than any other; which will live when you and I shall have passed away; when the God that rules all things shall have judged us; when we shall appear before the white throne of mercy to account for all our actions in this world. If then we leave a family behind, we leave them under the eye and to the care of brothers, well knowing that they will be sedulously guarded and cared for, that truth will be preserved and justice protected, and that the child of mercy and charity will return to its God as it came from his hands. The lesson of loyalty is here taught because the mystic tie has a controlling influence in every government on God's earth, and our order ever sustains and advances a loyal feeling.

"We are ever ready to draw our swords in defense of that grand old banner which shall wave forever and ever over this mighty republic of ours.

"For this kind reception I thank you from the depth of my heart. To be with you here to-night gladdens my soul; to meet so many distinguished Knights is indeed a pleasure, and when I leave the Pacific shores I shall do so with not only the kindliest remembrance, but also with deep gratitude. In time to come I shall never so forget myself that I shall not have a good word to say for the noble people of this grand old State of California."

ITALIAN FREEMASONRY.

On the 5th of March, 1875, the Freemasons of Rome dedicated a new temple with Garibaldi for the chief attraction. A correspondent of the London Daily News, writing from Rome a few days before, gives the interesting particulars of the Italian lodges printed below:

In Italy the Freemasons trace their origin up to the commencement of the sixteenth century. Lodges existed in Venice under the Republic, and in Rome there are seals proving that under the Bourbons and the Popes the brethren held their meetings in Naples and in Rome. The rulers of Italy, however, treated them with much severity. The first Napoleon was a great patron and protector of the society; and during the Napoleonic era the lodges sprung up rapidly everywhere. Joseph Napoleon was Grand Master; Beauharnais, when he came to Milan, was named Grand Master and Commander-in-Chief of the Supreme Council of the thirty-third grade.

With the fall of Napoleon the Freemasons were persecuted even more fiercely than of old; the rulers of Italy enacted laws against them; the Popes excommunicated them; an individual suspected of being a Freemason was condemned to ten years of the galleys. The lodges were of course dissolved, and gradually the Carbonari Society absorbed the old members, who were called cousins instead of brothers. The early revolutions of the present century were directed by the Carbonari. In Naples alone they numbered 652,000 and 200,000 in Sicily. In Piedmont all the Liberals were Carbonari. The cry was the Constitution, and Constitutions were granted in Naples and in Piedmont. Charles Albert was a Carbonari when Prince of Carignano. But when the new Constitutions and their partisans were overthrown, the members dispersed, the society naturally lost its vigor, and the young initiators of the new era found it inadequate to their wants. Mazzini, a Freemason, was also a Carbonari, but he substituted the young Italy party for both. Still the Freemasons were not extinguished. During the wars and revolutions of 1848 and 1849 lodges were re-established in all the chief cities of Italy, and again suppressed when "order" was restored In 1859 the association revived, especially in Florence, and in 1860 in Naples and Sicily. In Rome, despite the vigilance of the Pope, Freemasons of the lodge Fabio Massimo met at each others houses secretly and with the utmost precaution. When Rome was proclaimed the capital of Italy it was decided to make it the seat of the Grand Orient, with which there are now connected 186 lodges, with about 9,300 members. Up to that time Gen. Frappoli was Grand Master, but he resigned when he went to France to offer his services to the French Republic fighting against Prussia, as both the Emperor of Germany and the Crown Prince are Grand Masters. Guiseppe Mazzoni was named Grand Master in his stead. In him the Freemasons have a chief of intelligence, spotless integrity and stainless patriotism. As an advocate at Prato he had acquired fame for his honesty and skill. When Archduke Leopold II. granted a Constitution, he was named Deputy for Prato to the Assembly, then Minister of Justice, and, when the Grand Duke fled, was elected, with Guerrazzi and Montanelli, Tuscan Triumvir. When the Grand Duke was brought back by the Austrians, he condemned Guerrazzi to perpetual imprisonment; Mazzoni escaped the same fate by flight, but was condemned by default, and also to pay the entire expenses of the trial, and as his property lay in the Grand Duke's domains, he was reduced to absolute poverty, and supported his wife and daughter by giving lessons in Paris. On his return to his native city in 1859, he remained stanch to his principles, maintained the unity of Italy above all secondary ideas; but when Tuscany was annexed would have no office, or emoluments, or decorations, living at Prato as he had done from his youth. Only in 1872, after long and obstinate refusal, did he allow himself to be named Deputy for his native city of Prato, and he now sits on the Mountain, speaks rarely, and votes with the Opposition. For his rigid severity in all that concerns the order and morality of the society he is surnamed Cato.

The first lodge opened in Rome took the name of the "Roma Constituente." This lodge was dissolved, and the "Universo" and "Tito Vezia" replaced it. A third, to be opened a few days after the solemn inauguration of the Temple, takes the title of "Uguaglianza." Rome numbers about 1,000 members, many of them Deputies and Senators. The Grand Secretary of the Italian Freemasons is Luigi Castellozzo whose life has been spent half in prison and half in the field. In 1848 he fought in the students' legion of the Piedmontese Bersaglieri; then followed Garibaldi to Rome, fought to the end, and was imprisoned by the French. He fought again in 1859 with the Piedmontese; in 1866 with Garibaldi on the Volturno, when he was seriously wounded; and again with Garibaldi in 1866. In 1867 he went into Rome to prepare the revolution, and was seized by the Papal authorities and kept in prison until liberated by the Italian army in 1870. Of Garibaldi little need be said save that he is a member of every lodge in Italy and of many in North and South America, France and England. He is a "good brother," and the Masons are very proud of him. On Friday the inaugural ceremony—to which only the initiated, of course, are admitted—takes place at 1 P. M. Most of the Italian lodges will be represented. Deputy Mauro Macchi, Grand Chancellor, represents the French Masons, Castellazzo the Hungarians. Other adhesions are expeeted. There will be no public procession, as in Rome they are not permitted save in funeral ceremonies, and all the Masons will dress as they please, but all will wear the insignia of their special grade. The procession will form in the hall of the Passi Perduti, cross the Hall of the Council and the offices, until it reaches the Temple. In the evening a social meeting, to which are admitted the wives, sisters, and mothers of the members, will be held. All the opera singers have offered their gratuitous services. Such a Masonic demonstration has never been witnessed in Rome.

HEATHENISM.

A Polish immigrant received his first lesson in American civilization from a New York policeman lately. The immigrant and his wife were walking up Broadway on their way to some cheap boarding house. The thermometer was registering ninety-five in the shade, and all pedestrians were suffering from the heat. The Pole, a strong, sturdy man, was sauntering along with his hands behind him, smoking his pipe, and enjoying his first glimpse of the land of the free. Behind him his wife was painfully toiling under the burden of an immense bundle, apparently containing clothing, swung on her back, a tin can that could hold a gallon in her right hand, while a healthy child was carried on her left arm. A policeman caught sight of the couple, and immediately proceeded to rectify the injustice. Striding up to the man he wheeled him around by the shoulder, and taking the bundle and the big can from the woman, put them into his hands and motioned him to proceed. The fellow grinned, and intimated by a gesture that the duty belonged to the wife. The ominous scowl on the officer's face and the minatory flourish of his club ended the argument. The immigrant walked on sulkily with his load, the woman smiled her thanks, and the crowd applauded the policeman. The Pole had learned his first lesson by being made to bear his own burden. It may be hoped his education will not stop there. Christians can tell him of a still higher law existing, but very much neglected even in this land of Bibles, which he will do well to obey (Gal. 6: 2).—Ex.

Occasionally there may be seen in print a fling at Calvin and his doctrines from an ill-informed and sectarian pen, which serves rather to betray the ignorance of the writer than to detract from the sentiments of one of the world's profound thinkers. George Bancroft, the historian of America, is far from being a follower of Calvin, but as an historian he singles him out as one of the benefactors of his race and of America. He says: "We boast of our common schools: Calvin was the father of popular education, the inventor of free schools. We are proud of the free States that fringe the Atlantic: the pilgrims of Plymouth were Calvinists; the ships from Holland that brought the first Calvinist to Manhattan were filled with Calvinists. He who will not honor the memory and respect the influence of Calvin knows little of the origin of American liberty."

THE KING'S DAUGHTER IS ALL GLORIOUS WITHIN.

MEMOIR OF MRS. JULIA SMITH.

BY REV. C. C. FOOTE.

She finished her pilgrimage of 76 years Aug. 19, 1886. For more than half a century I have known her intimately, and have given her a place among my choicest friends.

Among the whole realm of womankind I know of no one that deserves more richly the appellation at the head of this sketch. From her girlhood she was noted for her devotion to the happiness of others, the simplicity and purity of her life, and her rich spiritual experience. These peculiarities have been the controlling law of her precious life. She was a Dorcas for the poor, a Phebe for church service, "a widow indeed, that trusted in God and continued in supplications and prayers night and day, well reported for good works, brought up children, washed the saints feet, relieved the afflicted and diligently followed every good work: faithful in all things." (1st Tim., 1st and 2nd chapters), and a Mary sitting at the feet of Jesus.

In all my acquaintance I have never found a woman who so completely wrought out in her own life Paul's description of a Christian widow, which she was for nearly thirty-eight years. Her house in Oberlin was peculiarly a home for the friendless. She was an earnest friend of the McDowell Reform from the beginning, and I think she was a patron of the Christian Cynosure from its beginning.

Every reform and every good work found in our dear sister a friend and co-worker. Her sphere of action was in the "higher Christian life." She was one of the band of wholly consecrated women, who watched and labored and prayed for Pres. Finney's standard of Christian life.

Her husband was a thoroughly consecrated man. He once said in an address to which I listened, "No one will be admitted to heaven, to whom God cannot say, 'Well done, good and faithful' without telling a lie." Surely, the subject of this brief sketch will receive justly and gladly from her blessed Lord this plaudit. The grand impulse of her life was a burning, quenchless love that wrought in her a self-denial and self-sacrifice surpassed by few.

With Paul she could say, "These hands have ministered to my necessities and them that were with me." These hands have ministered to the education of my children, and to the support of Oberlin in her wants, and to the aid of missions in distant lands. To few will heaven be more precious than to our dear departed sister.

Mrs. Smith was a native of Eaton, Madison county, N. Y. She married at West Bloomfield in 1836. Her only daughter, a graduate of Oberlin, died in 1861. Her second son died in 1878. She leaves two sons, Dr. D. B. Smith, of Cleveland, O., and Rev. Hinds Smith, now of Oberlin.

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

The following table indicates the number of young men in the Protestant colleges and higher institutions of the United States, and the extent to which Christian work has been organized in them under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

NO. INSTITUTIONS.	NO. YOUNG MEN.	NO. ASS'NS.
300 Colleges	45,000	157
275 Normals	25,000	13
150 Preparatory Schools	10,000	27
90 Schools of Science	12 000	11
150 Medical Colleges	15 000	2
200 Commercial Colleges	45 000
50 Law Colleges	3,000
1,215	155,000	210

These men will, because of their education, do more for or against Christ than any other class. If they are saved it will be through the influence of the men with whom they are more immediately associated than they ever will be with men after leaving college. While statistics are somewhat difficult to obtain in most of these institutions, it has been clearly ascertained that less than half of the young men in the 300 colleges are professing Christians. It is the testimony of many educators that an exceedingly small per cent of men who leave college unconverted, ever accept Christ. In order to do this vast and critical work, the entire Christian force in our colleges must be so organized and distributed that every Christian student will do definite work for a definite person This the college Young Men's Christian Association aims to accomplish.—L. D. Wishard.

REFORM NEWS.

PRINCETON AND THE ILLINOIS MEETING.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Aug. 28, 1886.

A brief stop and hasty calls on friends at Princeton convinced me that nothing will be wanting on their part to make the convention, Sept. 21st and 22nd, what it should be. There are many, and some strong friends of our reform in and about Princeton, and what is more to the purpose, they are not afraid to avow their principles. The "spirit of burning" hatred to oppression, inspired by Lovejoy's fearless arraignment of slavery still lingers with those remaining of the "old guard," and their posterity have in measure inherited the love of liberty and the desire to be free men and women which made Lovejoy a leader, and the city and people where he lived noted for courage, and the execution of deeds that live and will live in history.

Bro. Hodgeman kindly took me in his carriage to see the old home of Lovejoy, where his widow still lives. Would it not be a fitting time and the right thing for Bro. David West of Sycamore, Bro. Benj. Williams of Warren, Dr. J. Blount of Byron, Peter Howe of Wenona, John Morrison of Tonica, Elder Osgood, of Lostant Hon. J. B. Walker of Wheaton, Elijah Smith of Itasca, Bro. Northrup Bloomingdale, and Pres J. Blanchard, the personal, political and intimate friend of Owen Lovejoy, with a host of other veterans and their children to meet with the State convention in a memorial service and invite Dr. J. E. Roy to deliver an address fitting to the occasion. Brethren, a visit to the old home would do you good and brighten the sunset skies of your lives with a glad radiance.

Another day could be added if need be to the convention. Friends at Princeton will provide a picnic dinner at the hall, and do liberally in general entertainment. The railroads give special rates (see terms in Cynosure.) And why not come up from your quiet homes in the autumn of life and shake hands, talk over old experiences, pay a merited mead of honor to the worthy departed, encourage the hearts of those at Princeton and everywhere who are battling against the slavery of lodge and rum. Why not come, since expenses are to be reduced to the lowest? Why not invite Bro. Geo. W. Clark, that pioneer for prohibition and for freedom, to come and put in the "rousements" and pay his expenses? I'll give one dollar special. What will you give? Why can't Bro. C. C. Foote take this convention into his wide circuit and fire us up as he only can?

Brethren, when you read this, don't stop to recount your aches and pains, your poverty or your wealth, or stare at the lions in the way. The beasts are bound, and they are soon going to their final place in the "pit." Look on the "bright side" on the can and not on the cannot. Your very weakness is strong in the strength which God supplies, and "the angel of the Lord encompasseth round about." This is your opportunity. When will you ever have another like it?

Write me at once at Chicago. When I am away Bros. Phillips and Kellogg attend promptly to my mail. Finally, and in conclusion, brother, sister, what are YOU going to DO about it?"

J. P. STODDARD.

REFORM WORK IN WISCONSIN.

PORTAGE, Wis., Aug. 20, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been spending August quite profitably, preaching and lecturing on National Reform among the United Presbyterians in Wisconsin. I am glad to see that Bro. J. F. Browne is likewise busy among the Wesleyans and Free Methodists. His experience at the Monona Lake Assembly was similar to mine. He says that Hon. Elihu Colman of Fon du Lac, who was president of the assembly, refused to allow him as agent of the National Christian Association to show the literature of that Association on the grounds of the assembly. This was a public and glaring insult to the many noble Christian men who compose our National Christian Association. The W. C. T. U. and the Chautauqua L. S. C., and other associations had tents for the exhibition of their literature, and why should the National Christian Association be excluded. I suppose it was after Bro. Browne's interview that I talked with Pres. Coleman in regard to the work of the National Reform Association, for he was exceedingly snappish and discourteous. I asked him how he regarded the idea of the supremacy of God and his law in government—the idea expressed in the American platform, and which the Prohibitionists were putting in their platform every time. He said: "If you wish me to speak plainly, I will say that I think it is simply nonsense. I do not want to worship a God who has to be acknowled in constitutions and political platforms." Such are the words of the grown up man, who was president of this assembly and who is proposed as the republican candidate for State Attorney. Such is the insult he dares to fling in the face of the best Christian sentiment in the land.

The idea of this Assembly was that on the shaded banks of Lake Monona, a mile from the capital of Wisconsin, the people of the Northwest might gather and tent out for fifteen days, and have the privilege of hearing each day addresses by some of the best public speakers in the land. And yet the managers of this camp ground were so devoted to the interests of the old Republican party that they carefully ruled out all third party sentiment, and even cautioned Miss Willard not to speak on prohibition from a partisan stand point. I heard loud complaint against the managers that they had ruled out of the programme those burning questions uppermost in the people's minds.

The Assembly was conducted chiefly in the interests of the Chautauqua L. S. C. of which Dr. J. H. Vincent is the head. This Chautauqua Circle is like a great university comprising fifty thousand students who recite a prescribed course of reading by correspondence and examination while they reside in all parts of the land. I suppose the Cynosure readers are aware that Dr. Vincent uses his great influence in the interest of secret orders. I heard him say with emphasis in his lecture at Monona Lake Assembly, before an audience of four thousand people, that he believed college secret societies were a valuable feature of American colleges, which he would not dispense with. To say this in the light of the fearful results of secretism within the last few months, as shown in the trial of the Anarchists at Chicago, is enough to stamp Dr. Vincent as a dangerous public teacher. Every anti-secret reformer should be careful how he lends his influence to such an educational system.

During the warm busy summer weeks, I have been preaching twice or three times on Sabbath, and lecturing two or three evenings during the week. I have spoken twice at Lodi, twice at Arlington and at Caledonia, Dekorra and Poynette in Columbia county, and am here resting a few days at the hospitable home of Bro. R. G. Campbell, on the banks of the Fox river, in Marquette county. I am to deliver four lectures in his church at Buffalo. Those I am requested to give most frequently are my lectures on "Prohibition," "Shall we have a National Sabbath?" "The Bible in our Education," and "Dangers which Threaten the Republic." In correspondence with ministers they often select the last named lecture, not knowing that it is my dynamite lecture, more than half of which is devoted to describing the dangers arising from secret orders. I spend next week in Waukesha county, and then lecture in Racine and Rock counties. M. A. GAULT.

FROM THE WISCONSIN AGENT.

DEAR CYNOSURE: — Lord's day, Aug. 15, I preached in the forenoon in the Wesleyan chapel on Big Creek, Sauk county, by invitation of Bro. J. W. De Lap, the pastor, who took me in the afternoon thirteen miles from there to Friendswood, where I gave a Bible reading on lodgism. Being encouraged to do so, several persons asked questions and made suggestions as to the points raised. The meeting was interesting and profitable. In the evening I preached in the M. E. chapel in Ironton, and had a good hearing. A friendly Odd-fellow there has since sent me word that I may have the hall that he owns in which to lecture on lodgism, if I desire it.

Monday evening, 16th, I lectured at Potter's School House, Juneau county. Jerome Potter, an ardent Freemason, attempted to defend the order, asserting that Washington always adhered to Masonry, that nearly everything in Masonry was taken right out of the Bible, that Christ was a Grand Master of Masons, that Masonic lodges are now dedicated to Christ, etc. His assertions being denied and proof called for, he wanted to—to bet that what he had said was so, and roundly abused the speaker. I tried to avoid wrangling with him. "The man of God must not strive." The next evening a somewhat larger audience assembled, Mr. J. Potter being absent, though he had been offered $10 to prove from any good authority a single assertion he had made. We had a good meeting.

The meetings at the United Brethren and Wesleyan churches on Big Creek, on the 18th and 19th, were not large, partly on account of threshing and other local causes. Also an approaching storm kept many away from the prohibition meeting at Friendswood on the 20th, which I addressed by invitation, though the occasion was an interesting one.

I have been hospitably treated by many friends, especially by Bro. Groat, Adventist minister, near Ironton, Bro. John Du Bois, near Potter's School House, Bro. Jno. Fessey, Mr. Rose's family and Bro. De Lap, of Big Creek, and Bro. H. Davis of Friendswood. Bro. De Lap has spent several days, and has driven many miles in taking me forth and back to my appointments, and it was mainly, and in some cases entirely, through his efforts that most of these meetings were arranged.

Some changes have been made in my programme; the meetings proposed for La Valle have been, at least for the time, given up; and I am to lecture in Cazenovia on the 23rd, in Valton on the 24th and 25th, and on the 26th am to speak in the Adventist chapel in Fairfield, a few miles from Baraboo.

I have many invitations and plenty of places to speak in this vicinity and around, but how shall the expense of the work be met? Times are hard and collections very small, and so far none of the books so kindly donated by Bro. E. A. Cook to this State Association have been sold. So, as the amount in the hands of Bro. Britten, treasurer of the Association, will not much more than meet demands now due, the question arises, Shall I keep on at work in this State or stop? What say you,friends of reform? Yours for the cause,

I need some rest and intend to rest on Saturdays, but Saturday evening, Aug. 21, Bro. Hatch, pastor at Valton, Sauk county, made with me a run through a rain gauntlet to the church house at Valton where we found a small audience assembled, and as Bro. H. asked me to preach, I did so. That made the tenth address for that week—six lectures and four sermons and Bible readings. Lord's Day, Aug. 22, I preached at the Wesleyan church near Friendswood, gave a Bible reading at Friend's meeting-house, Friendswood, and in the evening preached at Valton. It was the occasion of the United Brethren quarterly meeting. Besides the presiding elder, Bro. A. Whitney, Bro. Mabbott of Elroy was there. He spoke to the people about me and my work very kindly, and urged them to attend the lectures during the week.

Monday evening, 23rd, I lectured at Cazenovia, Richland county, where I had a good hearing. The meeting there had been arranged by Bro. Orange Warner, son of William Warner, gospel minister, lately deceased. While in Cazenovia I enjoyed the Christian hospitality of sister Warner and her son, Orange.

Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, 24th and 25th I lectured to large and evidently interested audiences at Valton. Several Odd-fellows attended, who had got enough of the order and were in sympathy with the meeting. At Valton I was kindly entertained by friends Samuel Mortimer, the Hutchinses, Wm. Bradley and Mr. Miller. On Wednesday I had the privilege of attending the Friend's mid-week meeting. It was a truly blessed occasion. After the lecture Wednesday evening, I rode home, five miles, with Ezra Davis. I've had many kind invitations to return from friends in these localities. They also kindly remember brethren Hinman and Bancroft.

Thursday I returned to Baraboo. There was met by Bro. Albert Watkins,who had already come from his home four miles south-west and who took me on five miles north-east to Leach Creek Adventist chapel, where I spoke to a small audience. Besides traveling eighteen miles to attend the meeting, Bro. Watkins helped me financially and he has done the same before, lately. May God bless and multiply such workers.

After meeting, I went home with Bro. Wallace Porter, another well-known staunch anti-secretist, and a believer in the real oneness of God's people. Friday, 27th, I returned to Baraboo with Bro. Porter, and went to La Valle, on my way to Big Creek, where I am to be over Lord's day, Aug. 29. I am now, Saturday morning, waiting for conveyance to Big Creek. Last night I enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. R. E. Klett.

Next week I expect to start on my way to visit Mauston, Portage, Rio, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh and Hortonville, in Outagamie county, to which last place I am invited by Elder Jacob Griffin and wife, who have been dear friends of mine since my childhood and who though now nearly worn out in God's service, are still deeply interested in this and other reforms.

I believe that God is accomplishing good through this work, though times are very hard here, and there's not much financial support. Every little helps. Send in your mite, in money or pledges, to your Treasurer, M. R. Britten, Vienna, Walworth Co., Wis. Yours hopefully, J. F. BROWNE.

THE WISCONSIN YEARLY ANTI-SECRECY CONVENTION.—Where shall it be held? Have you any requests or suggestions? Time and place should be decided upon soon. Write at once to J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill. Don't put this off, friends. Let us do our best to have a successful meeting. To this end write of the advantages or disadvantages of your place. J. F. B.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TENNESSEE EMERGING FROM THE LODGE FLOOD.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 21, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—This month has been so far a very interesting one to me. I have been, by God's grace, able to strike some effectual blows at secretism.

We had a very large delegation of ministers here last week attending an association. The States of Tennessee, Mississippi, and Arkansas were represented. I attended two days and was invited to participate with them, which invitation I accepted. Elder J. B. Roberts, a very fine young man, and pastor of the St. Paul Baptist church, this city, was moderator of the assembly.

The second day of the association, visiting brethren were allowed five minutes each to address the body; several of them responded and confined themselves to the time allotted. I was unanimously called for, and declined to speak unless more time was given me, whereupon they granted me ten minutes, and as I proceeded, Masons, Odd-fellows, and others of the Christless religious fraternity became very uneasy, and when my ten minutes were out they arose in haste and simultaneously exclaimed, "Bro. Moderator, Bro. Countee's time is out." The brethren cried, "Go on! Go on!!" "Move that he have twenty minutes more." "Second the motion." So I proceeded, and as I pictured the sublime humbuggary of secretism, the faithful with one accord left the building, and returned no more. I called to them to come back, but they would not. God helped me as he always does. Praise his name. As I spoke many said, "Amen." I urged them to preach Christ and him crucified, and point men to him and not to the lodge.

I spent thirty minutes, and the moderator was in favor of my having thirty minutes more. He was at one time a member of the lodge to which I was last July, a year ago, summoned to trial for preaching the truth; in fact, he was a member at that time.

After my remarks several of the brethren came forward and clasped my hand. Elder J. L. Lee said, "Bro. Countee, put my name on the list opposed to secret societies." (See Living Way.) Elder W. T. Webb, of Jackson, Tenn. (the city which immortalized itself by lynching a Mormon a few days ago), and a Bro. Taylor, of Holly Springs, Miss., had their names added to list.

Meanwhile the West Tennessee Association was in session at Stanton, Tenn., about forty miles away. Elder Brinkley and Elder Branden, of whom I wrote in my last letter, and Elder Woodsmall were there at work, and they had an excellent harvest. Pray for us that the good work may go on.

We have a large window in the front of my church with a Masonic emblem which cost $250. Ten dollars were donated by St. Peter's Commandery, or by two of its members, and the church paid the remaining $240,—so completely was I then absorbed in the Masonic system. Now they taunt us with it, and we will take it out as soon as we are able to replace it with other glass. R. N. COUNTEE.

MASONIC PERJURY IN THE LODGE.

ST. PAUL, Minn.

In conversation a few days ago with a 32-degree Mason of this city, I remarked that the Masonic fraternity, according to their own definition of perjury, was but a miserable perjured wreck of an institution, having broken its own Entered Apprentice obligation by writing and publishing "Ecce Orienti" and the "Cabala."

He denied my charge of perjury, and said that the use of the "Cabala" in the lodges is forbidden. I said, "If you will not admit that the fraternity has committed Masonic perjury, you must admit that the publishers of 'Ecce Orienti, have." He replied to this, "IN MY OPINION, THEY HAVE."

His reply is an important concession from a Mason of his standing. It ought to be sufficient to open even his own eyes to the supreme folly of trying to sustain Masonry, and convince him that to go on must be an act of insincerity at every step. He has "Given away his Masonry" as completely as is possible. How could the Masonic publishers have perjured themselves if "Ecce Orienti" be not true Masonry? No mere quibble on a word can save him from the charge of having exposed Masonry. I would rejoice before the Lord if it might be the means of opening his eyes to the reality of his position in a deceitful, wicked brotherhood which includes liars and murderers. He is a very reputable citizen, save that he delights on public occasions to display his Masonic regalia, and ornament his name with a lot of hocus pocus, bombastic titles, such as "Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret," etc., etc. Why cannot he discern the truth? "Because the God of this world has blinded his eyes."

Probably the scribes and Pharisees were as fair to look upon as he, and without that Masonic badge of infamy—the badge that glories in Masonic murder and other outrages upon society, and that before God. Jesus plainly said to the Scribes and Pharisees, "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word. Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar and the father of it. And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not." John 8: 43–45.

The Freemason before us will say that he is far from rejecting Christ. He is a church member in good standing, according to the way of the world. But that is far from sufficient proof that a man is a Christian. Christ himself declared that many would call him Lord when he would say to them, "I never knew you. Depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. 7: 23.

Had they known the wisdom of God, "they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." 1 Cor. 2: 8. So, if the Masons knew the wisdom of God, they would not cast the Lord of glory out of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry, and proclaim a salvation of soul without him. Oh, that God would open the eyes of Masons before they die in their sins.

W. FENTON.

THE REAL AMERICAN PARTY.

WEST UNION, Iowa, Aug. 24, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—At present in our town the Teachers' Normal is in session. The following questions were asked by one of the teachers and answered in substance as follows by the instructor in History:

Question: "What about the Anti-masonic party?"

Answer: "It was a party that originated after the disappearance of a man named Morgan, who was supposed by some to have been murdered by the Masons, and it only lived a few years."

Question: "Well, what about the American party?"

Answer: "The American party originated about 1850; was of short duration, was known as the Know-Nothing party, and had no important issues."

Can we have any information on this subject through the Cynosure?

(Signed) MEMBERS OF THE NORMAL.

ANSWER.—The replies above are in part correct.

1. The Anti-masonic party originated in Western New York in 1827 and became national in 1831 when it held the first national nominating convention in our history. It became thereafter absorbed in the Liberty, Free Soil and Republican parties, of which was the origin. Morgan "was supposed by some to have been murdered by the Masons"; it is known by millions that such was the fact on just as good evidence as hangs anarchists.

2. The American party,or Native Americans,better known as Know Nothings, became a national party and participated in the elections of 1856 and 1860, when it dissolved. The popular vote for its candidates, Bell and Everett, in 1860 was 589,581.

The principle of opposition to un-American secret orders entered again into politics in 1872 with the nomination of Adams and Barlow. The party was named American in 1873, and has cast several thousand votes at every Presidential election since. It is the only party rightly named American, as an examination of its principles elsewhere will show.

SAM JONES AND SOCIETY.

This wonderful evangelist, in his appeal to "Mothers of America," in Cincinnati, Ohio, February 6, uses the following language: "I never went in society any. They would not let me in. I don't know whether it was because I was poor, or for fear I would tell on them." Though this language has special reference to the social customs of female society, could Sam Jones use it honestly and consistently, and yet be an adhering member of the lodge? In our humble opinion, he is not a member of any secret order or else his heart and conscience are so utterly debauched by lodgery and tobacco that his condition is as bad if not worse than the "heartless woman" which he so forcibly and so justly condemns. Is a heartless woman worse than a heartless man? Can the customs of female society, bad as they are, be worse than the society of the smoking rooms and the lodges? No. If the social customs he condemns are a "leech of the heart," as he says, then the lodge viper poisons to death every drop of the life blood of the soul. With the many excellent points in the character of the great Southern evangelist, I will not, I cannot, believe him to be a Freemason. God help him out if he is.

His reference to Masonry in Chicago, and his intimacy with the Masonic clergy there, look suspicious at least. God convert him, if he needs it, from the very worst type of "society" above the abyss where reigns the Royal Arch Conspirator in the Grand Lodge below. Let all God's people pray for this wonderful man (excepting his lodge spots, if they are on him), that he may be led into all truth.

NATHAN CALLENDER.

SAVE YOUR INFLUENCE.

JONESVILLE, Mich.

In opposing secret societies I have been told, "The time will come when you will be sorry for it." I have been at work in good earnest for eighteen years and am not sorry for it yet. Also, I am told, "You will run down and become of little or no account, financially and in reputation." I am aware the hand that strikes in the dark has power to cripple our business relations and vilify our reputations with some, even while we may grow in the estimation of others. Again, it is said: "You will lose your influence." Our characters may be misrepresented, and so, where not well-known, we may be underestimated, and our influence suffer, but the fault lies at the door of our enemies, not at ours: for, really, in pursuing a right cause when we have to stem the current of public sentiment to do so, we must grow in strength and breadth of character; and this determines the measure of our worth and how much we will tip the scales if justice be done ns. In regard to the final, and even the present result, may not we say, he that will go with the multitude in the wrong to save his influence, loses it; and he that separates himself from the multitude for the sake of right or God saves his influence.

R. D. N.

SHUT AWAY FROM THE PEOPLE.

SPRING ARBOR, Mich.

It is conceded that Indiana has a fine man and an able speaker, but his opposition to secret societies prevents his access to the masses. This concession was made to me personally on the afternoon of August 20, 1886, by a prominent temperance worker and successful merchant living in Columbia City, Whitley county, Indiana. Some months ago I attended a convention held in the court house of the place, and by request delivered an address on temperance, and thus formed the acquaintance of the above gentleman who recognized me in the postoffice and asked me to his store. As was natural I inquired after the cause, and found much was being done, and that a man named Cook from Albion had been stirring up the people. I thought at once of our Anti-masonic brother, and added: "I think I know him, but I guess, like myself, he must run an independent institution, owing to his opposition to all secret orders." By that statement my friend was drawn out, and I found that he was quite well acquainted with friend Cook. It seems to me that the world and fashionable churches will stand ready to applaud to the echo opposition to all other institutions, good, bad, or indifferent, but touch this abomination that maketh desolate and they are ready to draw and quarter you.

Last Lord's day in my morning sermon at camp meeting in Hillsdale county, Mich., I was led to preach from Psalms 119: 126: "It is time, Lord, for thee to work, for they have made void thy law." All was serene while showing how national, State and municipal governments, by legalizing the liquor traffic, had made void God's law,—yea, hundreds expressed their approbation by words and smiles, and not a few by tears and shouts. So pride was handled without gloves, and covetousness and other damning sins, but when I showed how Free and Accepted Masons, with all other secret oath-bound orders, made void the law of God, then threats were heard on all sides. I paid no attention, but moved steadily forward in the path of duty. In the evening I prefaced the preaching by reading our rules, and added: "What will you do if they smoke in the circle of tents; or indulge in loud talking, and so disturb the service; or men to be mean go to the ladies' walks?" I answered, "We shall hold the neighborhood responsible for all rowdyism." After service I went to the tent to retire, feeling that perhaps the safest place was in dream-land. A good sister came in haste and said, "Bro. Mathews, there is a drunken man out here." I answered, "I don't care. I wouldn't come out if there were seventeen thousand of them." Pretty soon it was brought to me that five rowdies were going to get me off alone and pound me. O, sister, why did you tell me so. I want to go out now, but I went to bed, having felt it was God's order. The drunken man was taken off the ground by his chums, and I never heard of the company that was to thrash me, and so escaped getting whipped. Perhaps I am not good enough to be a martyr, and so God overruled the affair. The poet says:

"Still let them council take
To frustrate His decrees,
They cannot keep one blessing back
By heaven designed for me."

It looks like Calvinism, but I so believe. Glory be to God! Yours ready for work,

ED. MATHEWS.

PITH AND POINT.

THE MORAL REFORM PARTY.

I was first a Democrat. Finding that they did not entertain Democratic principles at all, I quit and went to the Republican party. They seemed to stick to their principles for a time, and now they have for the last ten years failed, and so I must stand isolated, for I could not for the life of me give a sensible reason why I should belong to either.

We, the people, need a party true to our pressing needs, built upon the heaven-born principle of equal rights to all mankind.

The use of intoxicants, sedatives, narcotics, etc., such as tobacco, poisons called medicines, and all intoxicating spirits should be abated by law. They are so many nuisances, and on this ground we have a right to have them abolished, or rather to abolish them.

All clans, rings and "fraternities" should at once cease and give up their charters and men stand alone on personal merit. It is morally wrong to claim preferment over those who do not happen to belong to "our society."—JAMES SPRINGER, Galena, Kans.

NATHAN BROWN.

Allow me to express my sincere thanks to you, as a friend of the late Dr. Nathan Brown, for your able and faithful sketch of his life and labors found in the Cynosure of Aug. 12. It seems fitting that two such names as Carpenter and Brown should appear side by side. Both have served their day and generation well, and posterity will honor their memory. Indeed, the names of a long list of worthies have from time to time adorned your pages and should have a more permanent monument. Why, dear editor, cannot these brief sketches of the world's reformers be published in book form and thus add another volume to our Anti-masonic literature. Let me early bespeak a copy for my library.—E. L. HARRIS, Delavan, Wis.

Such a book would be one of the best. The plan has been considered, but more funds seem to be needed to invest in such a publication.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XI, September 12, 1886.—The Mission of the Spirit.—John 16: 5–20.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He will guide you into all truth.—John 16:13.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Mission of the Spirit to the world. vs. 5–11. "None of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?" Christ was going home to his Father, going to be again invested with that glory which he had with him before the world was; and he had a right to expect that the disciples would rejoice with him in his joy. But they wese now, as they had been all along, incapable of understanding, or looking beyond the material present. "It is expedient for you that I go away," etc. Richer revelations of his love, deeper manifestations of his presence, and a far higher and wider knowledge of his teachings were to come through his going away. It was better for the world. His earthly mission was confined to the small area of Judea, while the Spirit's influence would extend through every nation, to Jew and Gentile, bond and free. He will reprove (or convince) the world of sin—the great and pre-eminent sin of rejecting him which includes all other sin. Anti-masonic reformers are planted on Bible ground when they say that Masonry more than anything else is hindering the coming of Christ's kingdom. For Masonry is organized unbelief. It is that open rejection of him which defiantly says, "We will not have this man to reign over us," crystalized into a system. And whenever and wherever the Spirit comes in power it will convince men of the sin of banding together in secret oath-bound organizations, the basis of whose creed is, No Christ. "He will convince the world of righteousness;" that there has been a sinless, spotless, perfect life, lived in the flesh, and this complete righteousness of Jesus is for all and every one who humbly seeks it. Here again the universal religion of Masonry stands in the way of the Spirit's work, for it tells them that they need no other righteousness than the practicing of Masonic duties to ensure their salvation. "Of judgment," etc. One great part of the Spirit's mission is to convince men that Satan's power is broken; that he is not only a defeated leader but a defeated rebel, in whose punishment all found in his ranks must share. So the Spirit gave force and power to Paul's words when he reasoned before Felix, of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come.

2. The Mission of the Spirit to the believer. vs. 12–20. The Spirit's mission to the church is that of a divine teacher. Bunyan, in his "Pilgrim's Progress", rightly styles him the Interpreter. "He will show you things to come." John was in the Spirit on the Lord's day when the Apocalypse was unrolled before him. "He shall glorify me," etc. He will throw such light on the mysteries of redemption, that Christ's whole character, his infinite condescension, his surpassing love, will stand out as it were illumined. Thus it proved. The disciples never understood Christ till he was taken from them, had no comprehension of the wonderful words he spoke till they were interpreted by the Spirit. "A little while," etc. There is a broad sense in which these words are full of comfort for every individual Christian. A little while we must walk by faith without the visible presence of Christ; and yet a little while, and we shall see him invested with all power, King of kings and Lord of lords; and at the same time our Friend, our Brother, who needs our presence, rejoices in our nearness to him, and would feel heaven incomplete if the humblest and weakest soul that relies on him could be by any mistake left out.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How was the Spirit's work wider than Christ's could be? Acts 10:1, 2, 19; 8:26–29. How did he convince men of sin? Acts 2:23, 36, 37. Of righteousness? 16:30, 31, 33; 18:24, 25. Of judgment? 24:25.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"The Comforter." No one word expresses the idea of the original. He is the Comfortor, consoler. He is also the advocate. The idea of pleading, arguing, convincing instructing, convicting, is prominent in every instance in the Gospel (F. Butler) as we see in the 8th verse.

"Of sin." (1) What it is. To convince the world of sin, to produce a living and lively conviction of it, to teach mankind what sin is; to show it to man, not merely as it flashes forth ever and anon in the overt actions of his neighbors, but as it lies smouldering inextinguishably within his own bosom; to give him a torch wherewith he may explore,—to convince a man of sin in this way, by proving to him that it lies at the bottom of all his feelings; to convince the world of sin, by showing it how sin has tainted its heart and flows through all its veins,—this is the work of the Spirit.—J. C. Hare.

"Of righteousness." Of God's righteousness, and the righteousness we ought to have, and which Christ came to implant within us. (1) Its nature. The word translated righteousness means "righteousness in general, including the whole range of that conception, without reference to any particular form of its embodiment."—Cremer's Lexicon. It includes both outward perfection of action, and perfect inward motives. (2) The need of conviction of righteousness. (a) That we may realize the absolute goodness and love of God our master, and that he must love good and hate sin with all his infinite nature, so that we may be impelled to righteousness both by fear and love. (b) We need to see the perfect standard in order to realize how far short we are, and how great our need of the renewing power of the Holy Spirit. (c) We need to be made to feel that righteousness is possible to us through Jesus, and therefore it is our duty to possess it.—P.

"Of judgment." As the world has had its own false views about sin and righteousness, so also it has had its own false standards of judgment. The Advocate convicts the world of its error in this point also. Judgment here is, on the one hand, the world's judgment or estimate or discrimination of things (as in relation to Christ, his death, his kingdom, his success, his righteousness), and on the other side God's judgment to which it is opposed.—Alford. The Spirit will convince men that the world's judgment is false, and that God will condemn all sin, and all who remain in sin, and will not seek this righteousness of which he has convinced them.

"And he will show you things to come." "Scattered traces of the fulfillment of this part of the promise are found in the Acts and the Epistles; its complete fulfillment was in the giving of the Apocalypse (see Rev. 1:1, 10; 22: 16,17)."—Alford. But this showing things to come did not cease with the early church. "He will always be showing us things that are coming; giving us an apprehension of truths that we have not yet reached, though they be truths which are 'the same yesterday, today and forever.' "—Maurice.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Vick's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;
OR
THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE'

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A.Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Taplev Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Morengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

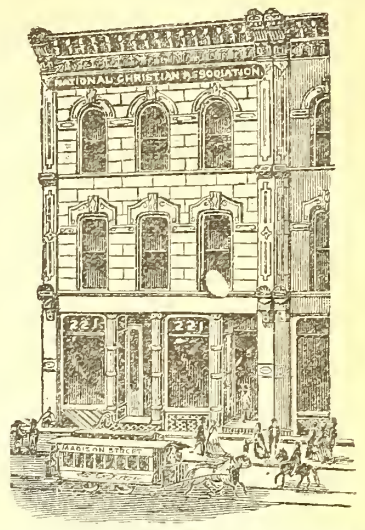
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.



The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, Claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. J A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Terrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton Treas,. H. B. Higgins Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. C. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1886

A SUGGESTION TO LOCAL W. C. T. UNIONS.—A correspondent of the Friend's Review, Philadelphia, is greatly cheered to read Miss E. E. Flagg's noble appeal to the great woman's organization against liquor to make the lodge an issue also. How shall that appeal be made effectual? We would suggest that a very sure way would be for all the local unions in town and county to pass resolutions approving of Miss Flagg's suggestion and appealing to the National W. C. T. Union which meets in October to make the lodge a subject of investigation. Let the action be reported to the Signal and to the national body.

WISCONSIN CO-WORKERS with Elder Browne are propounded a serious question in his letter elsewhere. Let them see to it that a work so favorably begun does not cease because of indifference and neglect. Times are hard, it is true, but as hard for the lodges as for you: and for this very reason you should redouble your efforts and increase your self-denials for the cause, since always during a money stress thousands of lodge members are well inclined toward giving up their orders and escape a burdensome taxation. Through the efforts of your State Agent you will ally the conscience of these men with their pocket-books and bring them out sure. Try it! With faith in the truth and prayer to the God of truth, try it.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 23, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I yesterday spoke to the Saratoga Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and after consultation with Dr. Potter of Elmwood Hall, with two city pastors, and with Mrs. W. I. Pond, the excellent W. C. T. U. president, the following notice was read for next Sabbath:

REV. J. BLANCHARD, ex-President of Wheaton College and editor of the Chicago Cynosure, Ill., will, D. V., preach a PROHIBITION SERMON, in the Lower Town Hall, on next Sabbath, Aug. 29, 4 o'clock, P. M. The intent of the sermon will be, the uniting of all prohibitionists in political action against the liquor traffic, by dropping the little secrecy of the temperance lodges, and adopting in open methods of temperance work. The sermon will be printed before delivery for distribution in the audience. All are invited!

There was a good audience present, and Mrs. Pond gave opportunity for objections, but none were made. The discourse is to be inserted in the Saratoga Eagle, which has a fair circulation.

I have conversed with some prominent prohibitionists here, and though the most active of them belong to the Good Templars and Sons of Temperance, they say they are in favor of giving up secret for open meetings.

The conviction of the Anarchists, and the sentence, seven to be hung and one to fifteen years' imprisonment, is hailed by the Saratoga papers as a glorious event, and an honor to the Chicago jury, and an omen for good to civil government. But the assembling of seven thousand Anarchists in New York city, uttering the same sentiments for which these felons are condemned to be hung, and glorying in their crimes, shows that our Republic is not done with them, and never will be until it suppresses the secret seminaries where these graduates have been taught that just law is despotism, and honestly acquired property, crime. The whole secret lodge system, being a system of demon worship, makes these men, sworn murderers by creed, as sincere as maniacs or Mormons.

A HERO GONE.

John Dougall, the founder, editor and chief owner of the New York Witness, and founder of the Montreal Daily Witness, died suddenly yet peacefully at the house of his son in Flushing, Long Island, Thursday morning, August 19. He was just seated at the breakfast table when his head was observed to fall over and he was gone! Quietly and in a moment he was with his God whom he had so long, so faithfully and so nobly served. Mr. Dougall had accomplished a great work for the church in founding a Christian daily in Montreal before he became widely known in the States. He began that paper as a weekly in 1846 and a daily in 1860. In 1871, after some effort to arouse an interest in a daily Christian press in prominent cities of the Union, he himself undertook the task which had once or twice failed in other hands. The New York Daily Witness was financially a failure and was discontinued in 1878, but the Weekly grew to an immense circulation and has accomplished incalculable good. On all Christian reforms Mr. Dougall was true to the honor of his Lord. Not what might be profitable or unprofitable was the question with him, but what was right. The voice of the New York Witness has always been lifted against the lodge system as un-Christian, unmanly and tending to destroy the churches and disintegrate society. Mr. Dougall's body was reverently carried to Montreal and laid beside that of his life companion amid the scenes of their earlier struggles and triumphs.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard returned to the Ohio work last week, and began Monday at the State Fair at Columbus. Ohio friends can address him at No. 214 W. Second Ave., in that city.

—The General Agent is at the Iowa State meeting this week. His Princeton visit had a fine effect, and if all will catch the enthusiasm of his letter elsewhere, we shall have one of the best meetings of the reform September 21st and 22nd.

—The visits of brethren Fenton of St. Paul, Dillon of Dayton, and Whitcomb of Bloomington have cheered the Cynosure office of late. The first was on his return from the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Buffalo, an interesting report of which he has prepared for the Cynosure. The lodges were nobly attacked in one paper. Bro. Dillon is returning from an important and very successful convention of United Brethren who are standing by their constitution, held last week at Coleta, Ill. He is confident of the ultimate triumph of the right in the protracted and unhappy struggle in his church.

—The Prohibition convention for Cook county, Illinois, nominated a full ticket last Friday. Among others Rev. A. J. Bailey, of Lake View, brother of E. D. Bailey of the American, was nominated for the State Legislature, and E. R. Worrell, of the N. C. A. Board, for Probate Clerk.

—Rev. M. A. Gault, the able lecturer and agent of the National Reform Association, says that his lecture on the "Dangers which Threaten our Republic" is more often called for than any other. Is there not in this fact a significant and wholesome evidence of true patriotism and allegiance to the King of kings? Pastors may not have the moral courage to speak of dangers they have observed, yet are very glad to introduce a brother who can speak for them.

—The principles of Dr. Vincent of the Chautauqua Circles, noted in Rev. M. A. Gault's letter, are a surprise and a sincere regret. Through the course of literary and scientific instruction connected with the name Chautauqua he is exerting a wide and important influence in America, which should be altogether for Christ. His endorsement of college fraternities marks a sad lack of conviction respecting the plainest duties of a Christian life.

—Those who have become accustomed to the term Jack Mason, would find in it a revived meaning to hear the Jack Mormons execrated by the patriotic citizens of Salt Lake City. One of these handy tools of the Mormon priesthood, a Gentile editor in Mormon pay, was lately sent to jail for a year for libel upon Judge Zane of the United States district court; and another got a five-year sentence for slandering Judge Powers. It is not always so handy to be a Jack.

—The Daily Saratogian, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., of the 23d ult., thus notices the remarks of the editor in the temperance meeting of the day before: "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union yesterday afternoon was addressed by Rev. Dr. Blanchard ex-President of Wheaton College, Ill. His recent extensive travels in the South had convinced him that the people there, both white and colored, would unite in the interests of temperance. He was received everywhere with kindness, and he expressed his sentiments unreservedly. Mr. Demorest also spoke, and said that the prospect for a temperance victory North and South was most encouraging."

—The editor of the Interior is seldom caught napping, but he must have been away on one of his famous vacations during the meeting of the Irish League in Chicago. He could neither have attended in person or have read the papers or he would not have written that the proceedings of the convention were "quite as decorous as those of some Presbyterian General Assemblies," and the resolutions were adopted "after a square and dignified discussion." If that is not a libel on the Presbyterians their General Assembly ought to be abolished and will be unless it radically reforms. The platform was not discussed but adopted with hurrah after a slashing battle whether it should be discussed or not.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—There is not much of local interest at this time in this city. The vacation of the President and the absence of work of the city pastors leaves little to interest the people besides the nightly parades of the Salvation Army and the quiet discussion of the impending elections in the country at large.

Washington, like other considerable and growing cities, has had to consider the problem of water supply, and it is gratifying to know that the large reservoir and extensive water works are approaching completion, and that the city's supply of water will be improved in quantity as well as quality. A year ago, through the bursting of pipes the higher parts of the city for some time were left without water except from wells. With the new reservoir all such disasters will be averted.

It will also interest the readers of the Cynosure to know that the rough stone pavement of 4½ street, on which is the building owned by the N. C. A., is being removed to be replaced with asphaltum, which I was glad to observe was taking the place of the block pavements in Chicago in those parts of the city where there is least of heavy traffic.

It is pleasant to note that the President and his wife last Sabbath attended public worship in a little log church on the banks of Lake Saranac, while squirrels ran in and out along the rafters, and that a sensible Christian minister preached to them just as he did to other sinners, without reference to their official station. It was also pleasant to read that Mrs. Cleveland could, from her retreat in the mountains, touch the little button that set in motion the machinery of the Minnesota State Fair, more than a thousand miles away.

It is not so pleasant to record the attention that was accorded to the G. A. R. on returning from their pilgrimage to the Pacific, on the obsequiousness of a Cougressional committee to a trades union that has votes to bestow on the party that bids highest for their support. Some months since the firm of Gibson Bros., publishers of this city, fell under the ban of the typographical union and a boycott was declared. A short time since a Congressional committee in ignorance of the fact, made a contract with them for a considerable job. At once a great outcry was made by the "union" and threats expressed, or implied, were made of a withholding of political support. At once the committee made haste to apologize, to withdraw their contract, and transfer it to a firm that was in subjection to the secret combinations.

Thirty years ago the first and last question that politicians asked was, how any given measure would be regarded by the slave power? Now there are two interests about equally dictatorial, and before which politicians bow with about equal submissiveness. One is the saloon interest and the other the Secret Empire. It seems to be the desire of all men who make party politics a trade to quietly submit to all such powerful combinations, and to direct public attention from the consideration of all questions that involve a conflict with great monopolies. It is painful to find that a man of the resplendent abilities of James G. Blaine is not only plotting to run again the race of two years ago, but declares that the campaign of 1888 must be fought out on the issues of 1884. Especial emphasis is put on the tariff as the great issue of the hour, instead of being the one question which both the old parties are divided. He tells us that up to 1861 we had comparative free trade, and since then we have had a protective tariff, under which we have increased greatly in wealth, especially in the manufacturing States. But he did not tell his hearers that this increase was mainly in the hands of the capitalists, and that there has also been a very large increase in poverty. The class whose living depends on daily labor has increased more than all others, and how to meet their just demands is one of the great problems of the hour. A protective tariff has taxed the great mass of the people who are consumers for the benefit of the manufacturers and capitalists, and has made the latter rich, and the laborers poor. It is a strange infatuation that leads men of fine abilities like Stephen A. Douglass, who did not care whether "slavery was voted up or down," and J. G. Blaine, who wants to "make the liquor traffic a source of perpetual revenue," utterly oblivious to questions of conscience, and keenly alive to party strife.

H. H. HINMAN.

—The Presbyterian Syrian Mission have issued a new hymn and tune book in Arabic. This is, if we mistake not, the first attempt to give to the large Oriental population speaking that language, who already have the Bible, the means of singing Christian truth.

CHINATOWN AND ITS PROBLEMS.

(Concluded.)

The religion of Chinatown is one of its most striking features. There are said to be thirteen joss houses in the quarters in San Francisco. One has been opened this season in New York at 202 Mott street. Some professors of Christianity mark with horror this establishment of heathen worship under the shadow of our churches, and pass the red paper label and narrow, rough stairway that leads up to the abode of the joss with shrinking and detestation. But to the Masonic or Odd-fellow temple next block they point with pride as an evidence of the power and wealth and popularity of great organizations of men, whose work of benevolence is sung by thousands of widows and orphans, and whose principles make them the blessed handmaids of Christianity. Until this or that order arose for man's deliverance, society was going wrong and would end in wreck.

But the worship of the joss house is not in appearance nearly so abhorrent and pagan as of the lodge, when you come to know it. The Chinese are practical atheists in large degree. They do not recognize any supreme deity, and their appeals to luck, or the good offices of their ancestors, form the greater part of their religious observances. Frequently a laundry man will have an ugly picture profusely decorated. In answer to your inquiry he says it is "the old man. He good to Chinaman." A few prayer sticks burned before this representation of ancestral divinity are the extent of his ordinary devotions. Much more simple and dignified this than the Masonic worship of Hiram Abiff!

The joss houses of San Francisco are some of them elaborate in their decorations, yet in comparison with the first-class eating houses they are cheap affairs. The house representing most money is owned by a wealthy and powerful Chinese society, the Yung Yo Company, which rents the keeping of the establishment to a Chinaman for a round sum of some $5,000 per year. Yet it is a profitable investment from his sale of prayer sticks and punk and other perquisites. A little child answers the ring of the bell that admits the stranger or the worshiper to the presence of this joss. The ugly image is placed in the back of the room. Before it is a large altar on which may be carved vases, or pennons, or incense burners, and always the recepticles for burning prayer sticks of fragrant wood. Carved lanterns hang from the ceiling and the walls are hung with mottoes. In some houses heavy and elaborately carved screens protect the image; and clusters of weapons, spears and battle axes guard it.

A young Chinaman, a worshiper at these shrines, took me to the rooms of the Chinese Freemasons. It appeared to be a poorly furnished joss house with a single image. There was not room for a large company to gather about this worshipful grand master, and it seemed more probable that this was the place of worship of the Chinese Masonic order, yet the guide said they met there at times. Up stairs, directly over this joss, was the Odd-fellows room. This was a much more elaborate affair, with fine hangings and decorations, denoting the superior importance, or wealth, or devotion of the patron society. Three images were placed side by side, one with a terribly fierce countenance; another apparently weeping, which the guide explained was to represent a young man who grieved himself to death for the loss of parents or some near friend. It was explained that the lodges did not meet often, and unless there was some excitement in the quarters. The members were notified of the meeting by pins dropped or stuck about the streets, much as the Knights of Labor are signaled by chalk marks.

I saw but one worshiper in the five or six houses visited. He remained but a moment to bow before the joss. Upon the altar were always some semi-spherical pieces of carved hard wood used for forecasting luck. Good or bad omens are determined from the falling of these blocks. The Chinese guide tells of the "preachers" whose name he mentions with little respect. They are the priests of the joss, and have a regular charge according to the length of the worshipers prayers. As if to discourage the Pharisaical temptation to long prayers, they charge nothing for the first few minutes, twenty-five cents for the next three or five minutes, fifty for the next period, and so on. The "preachers" have no assemblies to care for, except at the anniversary of some festival when the Chinese have processions and go through enough religion for a year.

Another religious performance is the oath which more nearly approaches an acknowledgement of a personal deity whose awards are to be dreaded or desired. The wrangle of the attorneys in the celebrated lodge murder case in St. Louis, and the summary decision of the judge that this is not yet a heathen nation and the oath of God must stand is a case which is well remembered. A court incident in San Francisco illustrates the Chinese value of an oath. Lee Dan was alarmed at the evidence of Low Sing and his friends under the Christian oath. He therefore brought a tub and six chickens and demanded that the witnesses should give evidence in the dread-inspiring Chinese fashion which would, he believed, curtail their lying. The judge ordered the pagan accessories to truth-telling removed.

It was not my fortune to see a funeral in Chinatown, and as the ceremonies on such an occasion exhibit in a peculiar manner the darkness of their pagan theology, I borrow an account from another correspondent: "The ordinary paraphernalia of two tin pans and an express wagon may do for an ordinary Mongolian, but the big men of the race are laid to rest in superb style. The ceremonies were conducted in front of the rooms of the Quong Duck Tong Society. A wooden stand, 10x8 feet, was built against the sidewalk, with an awning over it. The stand was covered with a stock of eatables that should console the corpse and edify his surviving friends. At one end of the stand expensive candles were burning, with Joss sticks and other propitiatory articles grouped around. A mat was spread before this extemporized shrine, whereon the friends of the lamented deceased prayed in pairs with much ceremony, spilt a cup of hot water and lighted three punks in his honor. The deceased occupied an expensive coffin, raised on frames, just south of the table. The priest was on hand in gorgeous robes, and, to prevent the ceremony from getting monotonous, he carried a pair of cymbals and a bullock's horn, which he sounded at intervals. To still further assist Pong on his way, he carried two poles, from which hung long paper streamers with Chinese characters, and these the priest waved over the corpse whenever the occasion appeared to demand it. A red cloth was draped over the coffin its full length and two bouquets of fresh flowers were placed upon it in the American fashion. After the priest had completed his prayers with all necessary ceremony, the coffin was placed in a hearse and the procession started for the cemetery at noon. The line of carriages extended for three blocks and was enlivened by five or six Chinese bands, which were placed at intervals in the cortege. The coffin was followed to the grave by five societies in a body—the Quong Duck Tong, of which the murdered man was a promirent member; the Wing Fook Tong, Dan San Tong, Chee Duck Tong, and the Fong Ying Tong. After the procession had moved away the improvised shrine was dumped into the street, expensive candles and all, and no man who feared the seven devils dare touch them. A portion of the eatables were thrown out in the same fashion, and another expensive spread followed the deceased to the cemetery. The awning and the table were knocked to pieces, but lest any devil should have found lodgment there and should make it warm for the true believer, the long-handled axes were used in the operation."

But, if John Chinaman in imitating the American lodges, makes his religion more apparent than his white "brother," in the societies peculiarily Chinese, he seems severely plain. If the lodge rooms of the Masons and Odd-fellows can be visited, though guarded by their peculiar duties, why may not the Chinese lodges which are known as "high-binders." Our Chinese guide, after some importunity, consented to lead the way down two short and narrow stairways, and from a hallway opened into a large, low room, feebly lighted and entirely bare of furniture, seats—everything but the dim light. Such silence, such absence of every living thing in the midst of the swarming life in every corner, alley, basement and loft of the Chinese quarter was astounding, and begat a natural dread, felt nowhere else in all the exploration. Did these bare, white-washed walls have ears? Were fierce eyes gleaming through the cracks? To one used to the busy scene above ground, a place so still and so deserted, seemed impossible. "They are all gone," the guide explained, with some relief, and went on to give his explanation of the high-binders, which was, that they are societies of professional thieves and assassins, shut away in their lodge rooms by day, but roaming about at night on their errands of mischief. Through the numerous doors, opening from the room and hallway, he said, they are accustomed to run to underground hiding places, or through tunnels to other buildings, if raided by the the police. The high-binders are sometimes employed by the Chinese companies to put offensive or hostile persons out of the way. Two of these paid assassins, lately arrested in San Francisco, were walking arsenals, clad in mail coats. Sometimes this desperate work is done more openly, and posters are conspicuously placed, offering a reward for the murder of some Chinaman who had violated the laws of his race. They have their own tribunals also, which like the American lodges, try and punish offenders, sometimes by fine, sometimes by death.

It is difficult to understand the reason of the very general and sometimes intense hostility toward the Chinese throughout the Pacific States, until they are seen at home in Chinatown. But their manner of life, though offensive, is not more so than that seen in the French or Spanish quarters of the older towns of Southern California, or in the back streets, peopled by foreigners, in any large Eastern city. Their religious rites and beliefs are repulsive and shocking to the pious soul, but how can they be more so than the orgies of the lodge, the superstitious worship of many colored churches of the South, or the formalities of Romanism? Were it not that they have learned the severest economy and the greatest dexterity in maintaining existence in the densely crowded regions of China from whence most of them have emigrated, so that they are dangerous competitors as wage-workers, we should hear much less objection to the Chinamen. In fact their labor has been of immense value to California, and will at some time be appreciated. The threats of a deluge of Celestial immigration is also a powerful argument with the O'Donnells of the Land Lots and the Ravlins of the Anti-Chinese and boycotting leagues. Should the migratory impulse sieze upon the countless millions of China, what would become of civilization in California? But this danger is purely imaginary. The Chinese come here for money. Their own government takes little account of their troubles while here, as they are generally from the lower classes, and so long as they can profit by coming, the inducement for immigration will remain. They are not driven from their own land by oppression as were our Southern exodites; nor impelled by some great national impulse, as were the tribes of western Asia for centuries after the Deluge. Their desire for gain can be counteracted before their presence becomes an invasion.

The treaty with China of 1881 especially provides for the limitation of the coming over of Chinese laborers, and the question turns upon the practical merits of the law restraining immigration in the view of the broad American and Christian principles which we have inherited from the fathers. Is such a restriction honorable, while upon the other side of the continent no restriction is put upon the millions of keepers and patrons of saloons; or upon the dupes of the Mormon priesthood; or upon the desperate anarchist? By no means. A law for Chinamen should be good for Irish, Germans or Italians. It is a question whether such a law should not be framed. Chicago is almost ready for it as well as San Francisco. But before this question is seriously agitated, let the laws made for the internal regulation of society in our States be firmly applied to foreigners. With these enforced many difficulties would vanish; and were the saloon and the lodge banished it would be long years before there would arise an outcry against the foreigner. Under these circumstances America would cease to be a paradise for the lawless and ignorant hordes of Europe, but would more surely be that asylum for the oppressed of all nations which the fathers intended it should be.

H. L. K.

—Dr. Corbett, a returned missionary from China, says that "the heathen never go to their temples to worship without carrying an offering of some kind as a proof of their sincerity. When they become Christians this conviction is not rooted out, but rather it is heightened in proportion as Christianity is regarded as superior to heathenism. I have seen them give to such an extent that I felt it a duty to remonstrate, and remind them that they owed duties to their homes which must not be forgotten."

—The Christian United States has been taught a lesson by Japan, in the fact that this government has interdicted the lecturing against Christianity on the part of "Yaso Taiji," or Jesus opposers, or to use the word "Taiji," which is interpreted "expel the Christians," the government believing that such preaching is damaging to the country and should not be tolerated.

—Converted heathen in several instances are forming themselves into missionary societies for the purpose of uplifting and enlightening those of their own race who still grope in darkness and heathenism. Among the Methodist Indians in the Northwest(Canada)the Indian women of a certain reserve have organized the first Woman's Missionary Society among the Indians, and have elected a president and vice-president and other officers from their number.

THE HOME.

THE BLIND SPINNER.

Like a blind spinner in the sun,
I tread my days;
I know that all the threads will run
Appointed ways;
I know each day will bring its task;
And, being blind, no more I ask.

I do not know the use or name
Of that I spin;
I only know that some one came
And laid within
My hand the thread, and said: "Since you
Are blind, but one thing you can do."

Sometimes the threads so rough and fast
And tangled fly,
I know wild storms are sweeping past
And fear that I
Shall fall, but dare not try to find
A safer place, since I am blind.

I know not why, but I am sure
That tint and place,
In some great fabric to endure
Past time and race,
My threads will have; so from the first,
Though blind, I never felt accurst.

I think, perhaps, this trust has sprung,
From one short word
Said over me when I was young—
So young, I heard
It, knowing not that God's name signed
My brow, and sealed me his, though blind.

But whether this be seal or sign
Within, without,
It matters not. The bond divine
I never doubt.
I know he set me here, and still,
And glad, and blind, I wait his will;

But listen, listen, day by day,
To hear their tread
Who bear the finished web away,
And cut the thread,
And bring God's message in the sun,
"Thou poor blind spinner, work is done."

—Helen Hunt Jackson.

CONTACT WITH CHRIST.

One of the most beautiful little episodes in the Gospel history is that which describes the poor Galilean woman who stole in through the crowd in order to touch the hem of Christ's garment. This was her last resort. Her health was gone, her money gone: and all hope of human cure seemed to have departed. We are often driven to our "wits' end" in order to drive us to the great Source of help: faith is often born, like star-light, out of utter darkness.

This Galilean woman had a very thorough confidence in Jesus: she believed that even a slight contact with the overflowing reservoir of his healing power would be enough to cure her. "If I may but touch the hem of his garment I shall be made whole." So she creeps in through the crowd, and with her eager, outstretched finger she makes the prayer of faith. No sooner does her finger touch the white fringe of his robe than Jesus turns upon her a look of love. Instead of being indignant at too great a liberty taken by one who was ceremonially unclean, he sweetly says to her, "Daughter, be of good cheer, thy faith hath made thee whole." How quick the blessing came! Her hemmorrhage ceased in an instant, and she went home healed and happy.

A single contact of the soul with Jesus has made many a man a Christian. The first honest approach to him, the first outreaching of the heart to him for pardon and a new life, the first surrender of a favorite sin to please him—these were like the touching of the woman that had the malady; they brought the blessing. Conversion is the act of turning to Jesus. As soon as the soul begins to trust him the healing comes. The very essence of conversion is the letting go of wicked thoughts and practices—yes, and the letting go of every other reliance for salvation, and the laying hold of the crucified Son of God. Faith is not a mere sound opinion. It is a transaction; it is the contact of a person with a Person—of a weak, guilty soul and an all-sufficient Saviour. Faith in Bible doctrine is as powerless to save me as the Sermon on the Mount would have been to cure that woman's hemorrhage. Her faith was in the Person, Jesus Christ, and her own personal contact with him, the Healer, brought recovery. A church service or the best of sermons, an inquiry-room, a prayer, or any other good thing, will be a delusion if it is put instead of a personal grasp on the Saviour. Faith saves, but only because true faith puts the soul into trusting contact with Christ. A touch is enough to begin with; but it must be followed by a constant clinging. There is a moment when the graft is first inserted in the cleft bough and begins to touch it, but it must abide there until there is a living union with the tree. "Except ye abide in me, ye can bring forth no fruit."—American Messenger.

CHRIST CAN NOT BE HID.

The moment that a man is saved he must seek to save another man. We are Christianized that we may Christianize. There is nothing selfish about the Christian life. If you can keep your religion to yourself, you have a religion that is not worth keeping. If nobody knows that you are a Christian, there are very grave reasons to doubt whether you are a Christian. An anti-mission church is an anti-Christian church. For such a church God has no use, the world no respect, and the devil no dread. The sooner such a church dies the better; but an honest minister standing beside the dead body at the funeral could not say, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." We read that Christ went once into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and would have no man know into what house he had entered; but it is suggestively added, "He could not be hid." Christ can be hid nowhere. He cannot be hid in the Bible. From the first majestic words of Genesis to the last sweet invitations of Revelation, Christ everywhere is seen. He cannot be hid in history. Not Gibbon or Hume, not Macaulay or Green, can write an intelligent history and leave out Christ. As well might a man attempt to write a treatise on astronomy and leave out the sun. Christ is the Sun of the moral universe. The true student of history will hear the echoes of his foot-beats all through the centuries. So Christ cannot be hidden in the heart. If the "Rose of Sharon" be in the heart, the perfume will fill all the atmosphere in which you move.—Rev. R. S. McArthur, D. D.

DID SHE LOVE HIM?

A boy fell from one of the high beams of a barn, and was carried to his mother sadly crushed and broken. A skillful surgeon was called. He came, looked the boy over, and only gave him a soothing dose.

"You are doing nothing to cure him," said the mother. "Why don't you set his bones?"

"It would be useless, madam. Your son has received fatal injury; we will not add to his sufferings by useless treatment of his fractures."

"Fatal!" cried the mother indignantly; "to what purpose then is your skill? Set every bone in his body."

The surgeon obeyed. It was before the use of anæsthetics, and when many mechanical surgical appliances now in use were unknown. The boy was tortured, but the mother looked on, aided and abetted in the torture, denied all her son's piteous pleadings, yet shed not a tear. She nursed him with almost superhuman patience and endurance, through months of misery, during which he lay bound, and often reproached her that she did not let him die out of his pain. He did not die, nor become a helpless cripple, but recovered the full use of his entire body. And that body held no common mind. He was a genius, a well-known American author, who lived seventy-eight years.

A thought awakened by these facts, however, not the man's history, is our subject.

We suffer; in our agony we wish we were dead, or had never been born. We cry to God for help, and think he hears us not because our pain is not removed. Again, we behold the suffering of those we love better than ourselves, and our heart's wail for their anguish is more piteous than for our own. We say, "How can a God of love, a heavenly Father, omnipotent, see it without interposing; nay, more, order it, and deny our pleadings?" Satan tempts us, "Can there be a God of love?" and we are in danger of saying in our heart—like the fool—"There is no God."

Is there a suggestion of help for all this in the history of those broken bones and that mother's relation to them? Has our heavenly Father taken the desperate case of our fallen, disjoined humanity in hand, because he would have life, not death, our portion? Can Omnipotence, even, interpose? That mother could have interposed to save her son from suffering, yet did not. Did she love him? Answer, every mother who has stood beside a son's cross, with the sword "through thine own soul also." Does God love though we suffer, though we cry and he is silent? Let his Word answer.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son;" "The Lord is not willing that any should perish;" "Like as a father pitieth;" "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted."

Oh, well is it for us, with our broken bones, that we have a Father whose love, tender as a mother's, is wiser for us than are our doctors, or than we for ourselves!—Christian Weekly.

THE BREAD-FRUIT TREE, A MUTINY AND A MISSION IN OCEANICA.

This fruit is one of the great gifts of God to man. The tree which bears it is found on the continent of India, and in the island of the South Seas. It grows to a middling size in Malacca, and bears a round, rough-skinned fruit, as large as a child's head. The skin is, however, thin and has a conical-shaped core, surrounded by a white, farinaceous, pith-like substance.

This inner pith, which is the eatable portion, resembles the soft part of a new role, when roasted in thick slices, and becomes an important article of food. The fruit is ripe in December, and is dressed in various ways, according to the taste or convenience of the parties using it. The Dutch cooks fry it in oil.

Besides using it as an article of food, the natives of the South Sea islands apply different parts of the bread-fruit tree to various purposes. The wood is used in boat building, and a cloth is made of the inner bark; the male catkins serve for tinder; the leaves for wrapping up food, and for wiping hands, instead of towels; and the juice for making cement for filling up the cracks of the water-vessels. There are several varieties of bread-fruit; the principal of these is one without seed.

Both the bread-fruit and the yam are great blessings to the countries in which they grow. The latter, (dioscorea sitava,) the common yam, is largely cultivated in the West Indies, where it serves for food to the negroes, who eat it instead of bread. It yields large thick tubers a foot broad, black on the outside, but, when boiled, remarkably white and mealy within, and very little inferior to the best potato.

The yam is extensively cultivated both in the East and West Indies, and is used for ship's stores, as it will keep well for several months. Some of those, most improved by cultivation, yield tubers which are frequently three feet long, and weigh thirty pounds.

All the edible species and varieties of this root are cultivated like the common potato, but they arrive much sooner at maturity, being planted in August, and fit to dig up in November.

There is a very interesting narrative connected with the bread-fruit. Upon its discovery by Captain Cook in the South Sea islands, it was represented by the British government that the introduction of it to the West Indies would be of great benefit to the inhabitants, particularly to the poor slaves, as an article of food; accordingly, in the year 1787, a vessel was fitted out in the most commodious manner for the command of Lieutenant Bligh, who had previously sailed with Captain Cook round the world.

There were besides the captain, thirty-four persons, and also two intelligent botanists, who went for the purpose of collecting specimens of various plants in the South Sea islands, and of taking care of bread-fruit cuttings during the voyage.

The Bounty sailed from Spithead on the 23d of December, and, after meeting with a severe storm, put into Teneriffe, in order to refit. From this place she sailed on the 10th of January, 1788, and struggled for nearly a month with tempestuous weather. She was then obliged to bear away for the Cape of Good Hope; but, at last, came to an anchor in Matavai Bay, in the island of Otaheite.

The natives soon came aboard, with some pigs, as presents, and some with plantain trees, as tokens of peace. Captain Bligh went on shore, and was received with joy by the poor savages, who would insist upon clothing him in the Otaheitean fashion, and showed him every remark of respect and friendship.

The Bounty staid four months at Matavai, and received on board upwards of one thousand plants. She then made sail to another island, called Annamooka, where the captain and crew carried on a brisk trade with the natives in yams, plantains, hogs, fruits and other productions. The ship now steered away, bidding an affectionate farewell to the kind and simple-hearted islanders.

All things seemed now prosperous; but, just as the captain was congratulating himself with the success of his mission, he was early one morning awakened by Fletcher and Christian, one of the mates, with three others, who tied his hands behind his back, and threatened him with instant death, if he spoke or made the least resistance. They then pulled him out of bed, forced him on deck, and placed him under a guard.

Christian, who was the leader of the mutiny, now ordered the boatswain to hoist the launch out, and Captain Bligh, with nineteen persons, were forced into it. The mutineers threw into it a few bags of bread, a joint or two of pork, a little wine, spirits, and water, and left its crew out in the open sea to shift for themselves, and get back to England as they could.

The captain first tried to land on some of the islands nearest to him, but they were inhabited by an unfriendly people; one of the men was murdered in making the attempt, and the whole crew narrowly escaped. He then bore away for Timor, a distance of twelve hundred leagues, across an ocean whose navigation was scarcely known, exposed to both the dangers of the deep and to famine, their little store only allowing them to serve out an ounce of bread, and a quarter of a quart of water a day.

But the captain and his crew passed through still greater privations. They were obliged in one storm to throw overboard all the superfluous clothes, spare sails and ropes. They encountered several tempests—sometimes the sea broke over the boat, and they were seldom dry. The allowance of food was gradually reduced, and that of rum withheld. One bird they caught, about the size of a pigeon, was divided into eighteen portions, and greedily devoured; but at last, in spite of all their misery, and after a variety of adventures and privations, almost unexampled, on the 11th of June Captain Bligh announced to his famished crew the pleasing intelligence that, by observation of longitude, he found they had passed the meridian of the eastern part of Timor. At daybreak on the following morning a cultivated coast, finely wooded, appeared before them. This was Timor, an island north of New Holland.

Thus in a voyage of forty-one days, through an almost unknown sea, with the smallest stock of provisions, did this small company run a distance of three thousand six hundred and eighteen miles without the loss of a single individual. And to what do you suppose this was owing? Why, to order being preserved among the crew, by their implicit obedience to their superior; by Christian resignation; by fortitude, and courage, and patience.

Captain Bligh soon after came to England safe and sound; a vessel was fitted out in search of the mutineers. Several were taken, brought to England and executed. From their statement it appeared that quarrels soon sprang up among them after the departure of their captain, and several violent deaths occurred, among whom was Christian, the instigator of the mutiny.

For a number of years after, nothing was heard of the remainder of the crew; but at length, two British vessels chanced to fall in with Pitcairn's Island, and were astonished to find it inhabited; and more so, to find that the inhabitants spoke the English language.

At last a fine gray-headed old man came on board and confessed himself to be one of the mutineers, by name, John Adams. His little colony consisted of forty-six persons, who had a pretty little village. They cultivated the ground, and formed it after an English fashion. They were also peaceable, loving and happy. Why was this? you will say. John Adams had found out that good government and religion were necessary: he had instructed his community in the Gospel of Jesus, and taught them obedience to a code of simple but just and efficient laws.—Lutheran Witness.

WHAT THE BIBLE IS LIKE.

1. It is like a large, beautiful tree, which bears sweet fruit for those that are hungry, and affords shelter and shade for pilgrims on their way to the kingdom of heaven.

2. It is like a cabinet of jewels and precious stones, which are not only to be looked at and admired, but used and worn.

3. It is like a telescope, which brings distant objects and far-off things of the world very near, so that we can see something of their beauty and importance.

4. It is like a treasure-house, store-house of all sorts of valuable and useful things, and which are to be had without money and without price.

5. It is like a deep, broad, calm, flowing river, the banks of which are green and flowery; where birds sing and lambs play, and dear little children are loving and happy.

My dear, dear children, because I love you, I want you to love the Bible. If you attend to it it will make you, through God's blessing, wise, rich and happy forever and ever. It is God's book. It is the best book. It is a book for children. I hope you will learn it.—Well Spring.

TEMPERANCE.

THE HADDOCK ASSASSINATION.

THE SALOONS—A COVENANT WITH DEATH—AN AGREEMENT WITH HELL!

The following resolutions presented by Geo. W. Clark and passed unanimously by a rising vote at a public out-door mass meeting held in Detroit, Aug. 22, are self-explaining:

Resolved, That this mass meeting of citizens of Detroit hereby express their horror and indignation at the cowardly and cold-blooded murder of the Rev. Geo. C. Haddock, an eloquent and faithful Methodist minister of Sioux City, Iowa, by malignant and fiendish assassins in the interest of the accursed and illegal liquor traffic; and for no other reason than because of his manly and loyal devotion to the temperance cause, and his earnest efforts to maintain the laws of the State, to preserve the peace of the community and the protection of the homes of the people against the baleful influence of the illegal and hellish saloons!

Resolved, further, That we tender our deep and heartfelt sympathy to the suddenly and cruelly bereaved widow and orphan children in this dark and sad hour of their terrible affliction, and we invoke for them the sympathies, the prayers and the contributions of the friends of the temperance cause to which this able and earnest preacher, this loyal citizen, husband and father, fell a noble martyr, and may the shedding of this martyr's blood raise such a tidal wave of just and holy indignation throughout the country, as shall sweep the deadly liquor business out of existence.

ST. JOHN IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

August 20 was a gala day at the Epping camp ground. About 3,000 people gathered to hear Gen. Gov. St. John, Hon. Joseph Wentworth, candidate for Governor, and John B. Finch. Gov. St. John's address was one of the grandest political speeches ever given in the State. The immense popular gathering, nearly twenty miles from any city, the enthusiasm, the waving of hats and handkerchiefs, the intense moral tone of the meeting, reminded one of the great popular uprising against slavery under the head of John P. Hale. The executive committee are planning for two Prohibition speeches during the campaign. Gov. St. John, in private conversation, reaffirmed his disapproval of secret lodge methods, and his entire freedom from such entanglements. S. C. KIMBALL.

PROHIBITION IN SARATOGA.

Viewed from any standpoint, the Prohibition mass meeting at the Casino Thursday was a signal and significant success. It was the largest political meeting that has been held in Saratoga Springs for ten years. In the morning Pastor Terrett presided, and he made a ringing and characteristically eloquent appeal in behalf of the cause of prohibition. Prof. Hopkins followed, making a very long and somewhat tedious and commonplace address. Like the moderate drinker, he does not seem to know when to stop. In the afternoon Mrs. Lathrop, a lady of excellent presence and robust form, blooming with health, youth and enthusiasm, made a spirited address which was certainly earnest and entertaining, if not particularly polished and argumentative. In the evening, when the capacious Casino was crowded, Dr. Herrick Johnson presided, and with commendable brevity presented an admirable array of arguments in favor of prohibition. Ex-Governor St. John made the principal address of the evening. Mr. St. John said he was not a statesman, and he made a truthful confession; and he also said he was not an idiot, which was a more obviously truthful statement. But he is one of the very best stump orators in the country. Anybody with a keen sense of humor can derive more fun by listening to one of his speeches than in attending Tony Pastor's show. St. John is not merely humorous, but argumentative and remarkably apt, making numerous sharp points which mercilessly lacerate the feelings of the old party worshipers. W. Jennings Demorest, who is a host in himself, the indefatigable Emory Potter, and the two or three others who worked hard to get up this mass meeting, are entitled to the hearty congratulations of all friends of the third party movement.—Saratoga Eagle.

The Nebraska State Prohibition Convention met at Lincoln, Aug. 19, with over four hundred delegates representing forty-five counties. After adoption of a lengthy platform which touches every phase of the liquor question, beside setting forth the views of the party on labor, pensions, Sunday observance and other questions, the following ticket was put in nomination. For Governor, H. W. Hardy, of Lancaster county; Lieutenant Governor, E. B. Graham, of Douglas; Secretary of State, E. J. O'Neill, of Pawnee; Treasurer, A. J. Leach, of Antelope; Auditor, J. E. Hopper, of Clay; Attorney General, Martin I. Brower, of Nance; Commissioner of Public Lands, L. B. Palmer, of Adams; Superintendent of Public Instruction, J. A. Smith, of Burt.

BREAD OR BEER.

The Chicago Tribune, in the course of some remarks tending to show how long the accumulated property of the country would last if all were to turn socialists and "walking delegates," estimated that the average socialist spent seventy-five cents for his liquids and twenty-five cents for his solid food. The Inter Ocean, a few days afterward, furnished the figures for Chicago. In the year 1880 the consumption of beer in this city was 650,726 barrels of thirty gallons each; in 1881, 744,566 barrels; in 1882, 872,228 barrels; in 1883, 963,652 barrels; in 1884, 1,055,732 barrels; and in 1885, 1,115,623 barrels. The Inter Ocean proceeds to analyze this last statistic:

"The amount for the fiscal year ending May 1, 1886, is 1,157,282, and the estimate for the calender year of 1886 is over 1,200,000. It may even exceed that, for 85,000 barrels were drank in May, 1885, and over 102,000 barrels consumed during the same month in 1886. Most of this beer is produced in Chicago, which consumed the entire product of its twenty-three breweries and imported 265,908 barrels last year from Milwaukee. The beer is sold to the retail dealers at $8 per barrel with 25 per cent off, the actual price being $6 per barrel. Hence, it will be seen that the wholesale cost of the beer drank in this city is $6,943,654. Some interesting figures can be obtained from the data given. The 1,157,282 barrels drank in the last fiscal year equalled 34,718,460 gallons, and about 520,776,900 glasses. At five cents a glass this would sell for $26,038,845. If Chicago contains 750,000 people, this would amount to a consumption of eight barrels or 3,600 glasses per year for each family, being 720 glasses per year for every man, woman, and child in the city. The cost of this at five cents per glass would be $34.70 for every person, or about $173.50 per year for every family. Those figures are rather too large, however, as most of the saloons do a heavy "bucket trade," supplying families with the article by the quart or gallon at five cents a pint. If these beer barrels were set side by side in a straight line they would reach over 600 miles. If piled up, end on end, they would extend 820 miles high."

It is true that the "bucket beer" business will cut down the above aggregate sum of twenty-six millions of dollars—but not largely. To this must be added the cheap whiskies in their various forms of gin, rum, ryes, etc. We have not the figures for these, but it must be remembered that the Swedes, Norwegians, Danes and Poles, as well as the Irish, are whisky-drinkers—preferring the stronger to the lighter potations, so that the aggregate drink bill cannot be put much below $300 per annum per family—$1 per day for each family As a large proportion of the families use no kind of liquors it is seen to what an enormous sum the cheap liquors—not the costly wines of the rich, amount to. Some time ago one of our friends, a mechanic in Tiffin, Ohio, objected to similar figures as being impossible, and they do appear to be impossible, but there they are, indisputable as to their aggregates, and to be explained the best way we can. The fact is that the average workingmen in Chicago are paying not less than half their earnings for liquors—as much for drink as for all other living expenses combined. We are not printing these statements as temperance statistics, but to show that the workingmen of Chicago might, in a very few years, be the richest community of mechanics and laborers in the world, if they would stop wasting their wages in drink. But they refuse to take the only honorable road to riches themselves, preferring to spend their money in intoxicants, and then listen to red-mouthed socialists who denounce those of us who kept shy of the saloons, and used our earnings to get a roof of our own over our heads. Those fellows may better understand it first than last—from the lips of kindness rather than from the black lips of the rifle, that we don't intend to divide our savings with the beer-guzzlers. The men who have led steady and temperate lives, and raised children whom they wish to educate, are generally men of clear eyes and minds, and steady nerves, brave as well as clear-headed. They do not mean to stand any fooling, either from socialists of whatever grade, or from any police authorities which may become tainted with socialism, or disposed to truckle for votes.—Interior.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Presbyterian mission schools in Syria, in common with all such schools in that country, have been closed by the Syrian authorities. Against this action, Hon. S. S. Cox, our Minister to Turkey, promptly entered a vigorous protest.

—The next Pan-Presbyterian Council is to be held in London, beginning June 26th, 1888. The American section recommends that fewer papers be read, and more time be given for discussion, in the next Council, than heretofore.

—Rev. Dr. J. B. Stratton and wife, of Natchez, Miss., whom the editor of the Cynosure visited last winter during his Southern tour, are spending the summer at Narragansett Pier, R. I.

—The colored Baptists of the Northwest have sent two missionaries to the Congo field, and are showing increased interest in that mission. They have a membership of about 930,000 in the United States, and though many are very poor, it would be worth the sacrifice required to send the Gospel to the land of their fathers, if, like the churches of Macedonia, "the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality."

—The trial of Professor Woodrow before the Presbytery of Augusta (Ga.), for teaching heretical doctrine in connection with the theory of evolution in the creation of man, has been concluded. On the final vote, thirteen members voted not guilty, and nine voted guilty on the first count of the indictment. On the other counts the majority of his votes was larger. Dr. Adams, of the prosecution, at once gave notice of an appeal to the Synod, which will meet in Sparta in October.

—The Woman's Board of Foreign Missions have recently issued a small but valuable work on Woman's Medical Work in Foreign Missions, which it desires to bring before the Christian public as fully as possible, and which deserves a wide circulation on account of the valuable information it contains. It can be had by application to the Board, 20 North Washington Square, New York.

—The Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian church has among the Indians, eight boarding and nine day schools, with a total attendance of 685. We have 1,706 communicants in twenty organized churches. Two hundred and forty Indians were added to the churches in the year.

—Miss Gordon Cumming, the intelligent and entertaining traveler, says that Christianity is fast making its way in China, and of this the Spectator says: "Well it may, for there is no state of society of which we have ever read so like that of the Roman Empire as that which prevails in China to-day. What will be the result of the introduction of an explosive and democratic force like Christianity, into an ancient but decadent civilization such as China is to-day, no one can tell. It can hardly fail to be startling."

—The British and Foreign Bible Society circulated upwards of four million copies of the Bible or parts of it last year, in 267 languages and dialects. More than a million copies of Hebrew Scriptures have been sold since the commencement of the Society, and seeing that the whole number of Jews is generally reckoned at eight millions, this is a large number. One hundred thousand Jews have accepted Christianity since the beginning of the century. The value and importance of Dr. Delitzsch's Hebrew New Testament increases year by year. A colporteur writes: "It is remarkable how many Jews buy the New Testament." The Gospel of St. Mark has lately been translated into Falasha for the Abyssinian Jews by a Jewish convert of Mr. Flad.

—A thousand years have passed since Cyril and Methodius finished the first Russian translation of the New Testament in A. D. 885. This year 55,000 more copies of the Scriptures have been sold in Russia than in any previous year.

—Only ninety-five years have passed since the first English missionary went out to carry the Gospel to the heathen, and to-day there are "Christian communities more than three million strong, led by two thousand five hundred ministers of their own."

—A full bench of judges at Concord, N. H., gave an opinion on the case of the Salvation army indicted for beating drums in the street at Somersworth, viz., that it was in violation of the statutes, and that their doing it as an act of religious worship was no defence. They must worship—so far as drum-beating is concerned—outside of a compact village.

—The agents of the Bible Society make a rather startling report from Maine. During the past year they visited 30,004 families and found that 14,653 attend no church, that 15,253 children attend no Sabbath-school, and that 1,662 Protestant families were without the Bible. In the town of Gray 264 out of 361 Protestant families were non-church-goers, and 325 children were not attending a Sunday-school.

—A new tabernacle in Auckland, capable of seating two thousand persons, has recently been dedicated for the church of which Thomas Spurgeon, son of the great Baptist preacher, is pastor.

—At Friesburg, in Baden, a foreign missionary society has been founded by one hundred of the most prominent Rationalists for the propagation of their doctrines among the high caste people of India, Japan and China.

—The minutes of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church (North), just issued, show that it numbers 6,281 churches, with 5,546 ministers, 661,809 communicants, and 743,518 Sunday-school members. During the year 51,177 persons were added on examination, and $10,592,331 were contributed, of which $7,640,855 were for congregational purposes.

—The Baptists of Great Britain and Ireland held their annual gathering at a recent date From a report of the proceedings we gather that on the 31st of December there were 3,654 churches. The reputed membership in 2,713 churches was 315,940, being an increase of 3,470 upon the registered number of last year.

—The Roman Catholic Cathedral at Tahiti has a Bible in its pulpit translated by Mr. Nott, an early English missionary, and printed by the British and Foreign Bible Society. A traveler expressed his surprise at finding it there, when a native replied that no native would enter the church if it were not there.

FREE METHODIST CONFERENCES ON THE LODGE.

OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

We should be careful in dealing with secrecy to keep the requirements of our Discipline. Members of the Grand Army of the Republic, Good Templars, Grange, and similar societies, are to be as certainly considered members of secret societies as Freemasons and Odd-fellows. All these orders are exclusive and selfish. In dealing with them we need, especially on this coast, to follow the Spirit closely, and to be filled with true wisdom.

WEST KANSAS.

Divine Providence, which makes the wrath of man praise him, is favoring the righteous war on secretism. The intrigues of communists, socialists and nihilists in Europe, the assassinations of crowned heads and high officials, and the wreck and riot of the labor factions in this country are forcing public thought upon the aims, opportunities and moral character of secretism as preaching cannot do. "As I live, saith the Lord, heaven and earth shall be full of my glory." If God chooses to overthrow giant wrongs and oppressions by the glory of national judgments, let us bow reverently and adore his wisdom who bringeth to naught the devices of the wicked. Still there is abundant work for the public teacher to do, and the utmost necessity that it be done thoroughly, by enlightening the minds of men as to the nature of the general principles of secretism and the dangerous character of particular societies. Such instruction prepares men to apprehend the hearing of public events in the administration of God's providence, and profit by their lessons. The influence of the church in its organic capacity is powerful in educating the public conscience. What it sanctions is widely held to be right; what it condemns, to be wrong. This influence against secret societies should not be weakened by any compromise of its standard of membership. Holding Freemasonry as the head and front of the secret orders, we should be posted upon the character of its oats, the nature of its symbolism, and the interpretation of its religious tenets and ceremonies. Though men come to the knowledge of truth somewhat gradually, and should be kindly encouraged in their approaches, it is important that the public standard be correctly held. In our judgment the oaths of Freemasonry are abhorrent to all natural sense of right, binding men to acts unlawful under penalties that are horrible. They are absolutely null and void, and the consciences of those who renounce them should be free from all sense of obligation to conceal the facts concerning this iniquitous institution. The Bible rule is, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." The renunciation must be hearty and complete. Our business is relying on God, walking in the Spirit and working in the Spirit, to secure the entire destruction of these enemies of man's welfare, and on their ruins build up the beneficent kingdom of Christ.

CHRISTIAN CONVENTION AT OLD ORCHARD, MAINE.

This convention began Aug. 3, conducted by Rev. A. B. Simpson, of New York. The subjects considered were Christian Holiness and Work, Divine Healing, Foreign Missions and the Lord's Coming. The speakers on the last named subject were Elder Miles Grant and Rev. A. B. Simpson, while several others referred to it, expressing their hearty belief in the "blessed hope." The prayer meetings at 6:30 A. M. were well attended and seasons of spiritual feasting. There were helpful meetings for inquirers in regard to Divine healing, and such were instructed by workers of experience and deep piety; also meetings for consecration of Christians desiring a deeper spiritual life. During these, were heart-searching, heart-yielding, and consequent blessing, "Jesus all in all" hereafter to be the motto. After a refreshing rain, the Sabbath dawned clear and bright, and near its close, in the presence of many witnesses, ten saved persons followed their Lord in baptism. Among them were sister Caverly, of Strafford, whose healing was given in this paper some years since, and Dr. Henry Noman, of Lynn, Mass., also a friend of the CHRISTIAN WITNESS. Elder H. L. Hastings gave a Bible reading on the Beatitudes, his chief point being, "Blessed" now, not shall be. Rev. Mr. Simpson answered the principal objections to Divine healing, and refuted Dr. Buckley's hostile criticisms, in a Christ-like and convincing manner. Nearly all the helpers have been healed of severe sickness and seem to be wholly consecrated to God's service in the highways and hedges as well as in the costly churches. The Holy Spirit was present to bless and save, and many will ever praise God for this meeting at Old Orchard. Another convention will be held there next year, God willing, and if the Lord opens the door again for us, we will be there too. "Bless the Lord who daily loadeth us with benefits."

EDNAH SHAW.

KANSAS CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Kansas Christian Association will hold its next annual meeting at the Rusco church, seven miles north of Vining, Washington county, commencing at 7:30 P. M., Tuesday, Sept. 7th, 1886.

The following programme of work is suggested:

I. Report from State agent of work done during the year, with the future outlook.

II. Should secret lodges be opposed, and if so on what considerations?

III. Wherein lies the secret of lodge power?

IV. Knights of Labor, how related to Freemasonry, and to society generally?

V. Secret fraternities in their relation to family, church and state.

VI. How can secret orders be most successfully opposed?

W. W. MCMILLAN, Sec'y Kansas C. A., Olathe.

THE LOCATION.—Those coming from the southeast, south, or southwest can come to Vining, seven miles south of the church, on the Republican Branch of the Kansas Pacific R. R., from Junction City or Clay Center. Those coming from the east or west, come on the Central Branch to Clifton, one mile east of Vining. There will be teams at both places waiting for those coming on the 7th. The friends of the cause are cordially invited.

R. LOGGAN.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

The Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold its meeting in Opera Hall, Princeton, Bureau county, Tuesday evening, September 21st, at 7:30 o'clock, to continue through the 22nd and 23d. Addresses are expected from Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Pres. L. N. Stratton, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, Rev. Dr. Wm. Wishart, Mrs. L. H. Plumb of Streator, Rev. C. A. Bockman of Galesburg, Samuel E Holyoke of Galesburg, and others. Discussions of such interesting topics as are at present forced upon the public mind by the hostility of secret societies to social order and the personal independence of workingmen, will be ably maintained. Princeton is a beautiful town, distinguished for its culture and widely known as the home of the late Owen Lovejoy. As a result of his influence and that of his co laborers, it occupied an enviable position in the ranks of reform during the anti-slavery struggle. Entertainment will be provided for delegates from abroad. The central location and convenience of railway connection invite a large attendance of the friends of the Association. All churches and local associations in sympathy with the object of the meeting are earnestly requested to send delegates, and let every patriotic, Christian man and woman in the State make an effort to be present or to have a representative on the floor of the convention, that our counsels and prayers may be united for the enlightening of all our people upon the nature and evil tendency of the secret orders.

J. L. BARLOW, President.

H. L. KELLOGG, Secretary.

R. R. FARE TO THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION.—The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road will return delegates who pay full fare on that line at one-third fare to the point where the ticket was purchased, provided:

1. You get a certificate from the agent where you buy your ticket, that you have paid full fare.

2. You must obtain the signature of J. P. Stoddard to your certificate at the Convention, and present it so indorsed to the agent at Princeton from whom you will get your return ticket for one-third rate.

3. To secure this reduction there must be at least twenty-five tickets taken over the C. B & Q R R.

The Illinois Central road will give the same rates returning from Mendota, where connection is made with the C. B. & Q. Certificates will be given at the convention to all paying full fare on the Central road, allowing them to buy tickets at one-third fare from Mendota to their homes.

Clergymen with permits are not included in the above arrangement.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

During the absence from Washington of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Assistant Secretary of the same office Miss Minnie S. Cook is acting as the head of the Indian Office.

—Lieutenant George M. Stoney, commanding the Alaska exploring expedition, has forwarded a report to Washington, announcing the discovery of another great river, which, it is believed, empties into the Arctic Ocean near Point Barrow.

COUNTRY.

Soon after 9 o'clock Sunday morning the whole city of Chicago was shaken by the terrific explosion of the Laflin and Rand powder magazine, located outside the city limits and some seven miles southwest from the court house. The building was struck by lightning and 50 tons of black powder and 15 of dynamite were exploded. Buildings in the vicinity were destroyed, one person killed, four mortally injured and many others seriously. The loss from broken glass and injury to walls all over the southwest part of the city will be very great.

James McMillan and ex-Congressman John Newbury each subscribed $100,000 toward the building of a free homeopathic hospital at Detroit, Mich. The hospital is designed for those too poor to pay for medical aid.

Recently, in Alaskan waters, the United States revenue steamer Corwin captured three British vessels while catching seals. There are now in charge of the Corwin four schooners and sixty prisoners, with over 2,000 seal skins.

C. C. Snyder, a wealthy merchant of Canton, Ohio, was fatally shot by a police officer, who thought he was a burglar. Mr. Snyder had been lying in wait for burglars, and fired on the officer.

Constant Benoit was torn to pieces by a hog on Dickinson's Island Home farm, near Knoxville, Tenn., Thursday. The unfortunate fellow was 27 years of age, and arrived in this country from Sweden only a few days ago.

—Mr. Blaine made another speech at South Paris, Me., Thursday evening. He said the Democrats should explain why it was that as soon as they got into power and began to agitate the tariff question, the labor disorders began.

Hog cholera is reported as frightfully prevalent in Grant and adjacent counties of Indiana. Individual losses of over one hundred head have occurred in one day. No remedy can check the disease.

The town of Bayou Sara, La., was almost destroyed by a fire of incendiary origin Friday morning. The loss will amount to over $118,000

Mrs. Kate Desmond, while riding in a street car in New York, discovered that her clothes were on fire, and before the fire could be extinguished she was fatally burned. It is supposed that a cigar had been carelessly thrown on her dress, and the fire reaching her celluloid bustle made such headway that she could not be saved.

By the overturning of a carriage at Windsor, Vt., Wednesday evening Mr. Charles C. Perkins, of Boston, was killed, and Senator Evarts and a daughter of Judge Stanley Matthews were seriously injured.

Two hundred Iowa saloon-keepers have received notices to stop retailing liquors. Wednesday forty more were warned to submit to the law. It is feared bloodshed will result from the prosecutions. The law-breakers will fight to the death, it is said, while the sheriff grimly says he will enforce the statutes.

The Rev, James C. Beecher, brother of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, committed suicide by shooting at Elmira, N. Y., Wednesday evening. He used a rifle, the muzzle of which he placed in his mouth.

Captain William Moore, his wife and five children, and Dolph Moore (brother of the captain), his wife and three children, who left Indianola, Texas, last Thursday evening in the sloop Dauntless, perished in the great storm of Friday.

Pennsylvania Prohibitionists Thursday nominated the following ticket: For Governor, Charles S Wolfe; Lieutenant-Governor, A. A. Baker; Auditor-General, Charles T. Hawley; Secretary of Internal Affairs, John N Morey; Congressman at-large, the Rev. J. M. Palmer (colored).

Editor Cutting was released from prison Monday, the Supreme Court of Chihuahua having ruled that as Medina had withdrawn his right to a civil suit for damages the proceedings were legally ended. Cutting was removed to American soil by friends, and a plot by Mexicans to secure his rearrest fell through. At El Paso, Texas, Cutting issued an address to the American people, in which he extends sincere thanks to the press and people of Texas and expresses the hope that the United States will soon invade and conquer Mexico.

At Dutch Hollow, Grant county, Wisconsin, a deposit of lead of great depth, and extending probably two miles, has been discovered. Nearly 8,000 pounds are being mined daily.

Near Galena, Ill., Monday evening, John Gear, on horseback, forded the Mississippi river, which at the point crossed is ordinarily three-quarters of a mile wide.

Hon. Joseph Cilley, who was the first man sent to the United States Senate on the anti slavery issue, is still living at his home in Nottingham, N. H. He is 96 years of age, but is mentally vigorous.

Amos Adams Lawrence, who was prominently identified with the settlement and development of Kansas into a free State, died Sunday night at his summer residence in Nahant, Mass., aged 72.

FOREIGN.

Alexander, the deposed ruler of Bulgaria has reached Lemberg, where he was welcomed by Germans and Poles. The Provisional Government, which was put in charge in Bulgaria, seeing that the populace were violently loyal to the deposed prince, resigned office and liberated the commander, who at once brought his regiment from Slivnitzna and disarmed the regiment which had assisted in deposing the prince. After this the commander placed under arrest the political leaders who had managed the coup d'etat.

The opinion is general in Berlin that Germany and Austria, by mutual agreement, sacrificed Prince Alexander of Bulgaria in order to preserve the alliance with Russia at the expense of England. Public opinion in Germany sympathizes with Prince Alexander in his misfortune.

Fifty thousand people were made homeless and many drowned by the bursting of the river bank Wednesday in Mandalay, Burmah. The whole district is flooded with from four to twenty feet of water. The damage already done amounts to $5,000,000. Many dead bodies are being washed ashore.

An attempt was made Thursday evening to replace the police in the Protestant quarters of Belfast, from which they had been withdrawn after the beginning of the riots. Fifty constables tried to patrol Shank Hill road. A mob stoned the police, and the latter, after vainly charging the mob, were forced to retreat. Several were injured. The streets were finally cleared by troops.

Thirty men who have been convicted of taking active parts in the recent riots at Belfast were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment—one of them to thirteen months. Others arrested on the same charge were committed for trial.

In the British Commons Friday night Mr. Parnell's amendment to the Queen's speech was rejected—304 to 181. Hartington, Chamberlain, and the Unionists voted with the ministry. This vote seems to indicate that the Union-Liberal party will no longer follow Gladstone.

Advices from Madagascar state that the Malagissys are negotiating with a syndicate of English bankers to raise money with which to pay off the French indemnity claim, and thus terminate the French occupation of Tamatave. The dispatches add that the Hovas are doing their best to execute the treaty with France despite French reports to the contrary.

The recall of the French Embassador at the Vatican is regarded in Paris as the first step towards the disestablishment and disendowment of the church in France, which it is thought will be the result of the Pope's refusal to recede from the position he has taken in relation to China.

NATIONAL SUICIDE,

AND

ITS PREVENTION.

BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ills.

The Medical and Surgical

SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

Emerson and Prescott

The greedy grasp of monopoly is broken. The short-sighted policy of seeking $1.00 profit from each of 1,000 readers gives place to the more liberal plan of asking a few cents profit from each of a million readers, ($1.00 multiplied by 1,000 equals $1,000, but 2 cents multiplied by 1,000,000 equals $20,000). Surely the most brilliant products of American literary genius are wanted by the millions. The expiration of copyright enables me now to publish beautiful editions of some of the most famous writings of EMERSON, IRVING, PRESCOTT, and HAWTHORNE. I here describe two volumes which I offer as representative of their authors, and as specimens of new styles in book-making recently introduced by me.

In the highest civilization the book is still the higbest delight. He who has once known its satisfactions is provided with a resource against calamity. Angels they are to us of entertainment, sympathy, and provocation, whose embalmed life is the highest feat of art.—EMERSON.

Life being very short and the quiet hours of it few, we ought to waste none of them in reading valueless books; and valuable books should, in a civilized country, be within the reach of everyone, printed in excellent form, for a just price.—JOHN RUSKIN.

Ideal EDITION is the name I have adopted for the new form and style in which I issue these and many other celebrated works. It is almost universally pronounced unique and beautiful, as neat and graceful as it is convenient, easy for the eye, perfect in form for hand-holding and equally well adapted for the library shelf. Description is inadequate. To be seen is to be appreciated.

If a book is worth reading, it is worth buying. No book is worth anything which is not worth much. We call ourselves a rich nation, and we are filthy and foolish enough to thumb each other's books out of circulating libraries!—JOHN RUSKIN.

Books that can be held in the hand and carried to the fireside, are the best, after all.—SAMUEL JOHNSON.

"Knowing that I loved my books, he furnished me.
From my own library, with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom."—SHAKESPEARE.

Nature and OTHER ADDRESSES is the volume I have chosen to represent Emerson. It is the work which most greatly contributed to his fame. It treats of: 1, NATURE; 2, COMMODITY; 3, BEAUTY, 4, LANGUAGE; 5, DISCIPLINE; 6, IDEALISM; 7, SPIRIT; 8, PROSPECTS; 9. THE METHOD OF NATURE; 10, LITERARY ETHICS. It is printed from Long Primer type, on fine heavy paper, and bound in fine cloth, beveled boards, gilt top, for the price of 40 cents; or, in half Morocco, marbled edges, 65 cents.

Prescott's MISCELLANIES best represent this author, in the estimation of many readers, and I therefore offer, in one volume, his biographical and critical essays on: 1, CHARLES BROCKDEN BROWN; 2, CERVANTES; 3, SIR WALTER SCOTT; 4, MOLIERE; 5. ITALIAN NARRATIVE POETRY. In typography and binding this volume is uniform with the "Nature, Etc.," of Emerson. Fine cloth, beveled boards, gilt top, price 40 cents; half Morocco, marbled edges, 65 cents.

Great OFFER. As the most effective means of advertising these and numerous other standard and popular works which I publish, I offer, for a short time only, sample volumes of the two books described, as follows: For 25 Cents a copy of EMERSON'S "Nature, Etc.," in cloth, as described, will be sent post-paid. For 40 Cents a copy of PRESCOTT'S "Miscellanies," in half Morocco binding, as described, will be sent post-paid. This gives you the opportunity of securing a specimen of each author, and each style of binding, at only nominal cost, and they will be sent as specified, only, at the reduced price—if wanted otherwise, full price will be charged.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, 132 pages, 4 cents; Condensed Catalogue, free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl Street, New York.

The Alden Book Co.: Clark and Adams Streets, Chicago; 420 Yonge Street, Toronto, Canada. [Mention this paper.

HOME HINTS.

THE USE OF LEMONS.

The lemon tree is a native of Asia, although it is cultivated in Italy, Portugal and in the south of France. In Europe, however, it seldom exceeds the dimensions of the smallest tree, while in its native state it grows to over sixty feet in height. Every part of this tree is valuable as medicine, though we rarely employ any but its fruit, that is, the lemon itself. And every one knows how to employ this in lemonade. To squeeze the juice into cold water—this is the shortest way, or to cut it in slices and let it soak in cold water, or to cut it in slices and then boil it: either way is good. Lemonade is one of the best and safest drinks for any person, whether in health or not. It is suitable to all stomach diseases, is excellent in sickness—in cases of jaundice, gravel, liver complaints, inflammation of the bowels and fevers. It is a specific against worms and skin complaints. The pippins, crushed, may also be mixed with water and sugar, and be used as a drink. Lemon juice is the best scorbutic remedy. It not only cures this disease but prevents it. Sailors make a daily use of it for that purpose. I advise every one to rub their gums daily with lemon juice to keep them in health. The hands and nails are also kept clean, white, soft and supple by the daily use of lemon instead of soap. It also prevents chilblains. Lemon is used in intermittent fevers, mixed with strong, hot, black coffee without sugar. Neuralgia may be cured by rubbing the part affected with a cut lemon. It is valuable to cure warts, and to destroy dandruff on the head, by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. In fact its uses are manifold, and the more we employ it, externally and internally, the better we shall find ourselves. Natural remedies are the best, and nature is our best doctor, if we would only listen to it. Decidedly rub your hands, head and gums with lemon and drink lemonade in preference to all other liquids.—Sel.

SOME WAYS TO COOK TOMATOES.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Select large tomatoes of even size and scoop out a small place in the top and fill with stuffing made as follows: Fry a small onion chopped fine in a tablespoonful of butter; when nearly done add some breadcrumbs moistened with a little milk or water, and seasoned with pepper and salt: put a little bit of butter on each and then bake. Another dressing is made as follows: Chop very fine cold meat or fowl of any kind, with a very small piece of bacon added: fry an onion chopped fine in a tablespoonful of butter, and when nearly done add the meat, some bread crumbs, pepper and salt, cook a minute, mix well; add the yolk of an egg, and fill the tomatoes: place in a baking dish; sprinkle breadcrumbs over them with some small bits of butter, and bake till quite soft.

Tomato Figs.—Take small, red tomatoes, scald and skin them quickly, breaking them as little as possible, add one-third their weight of granulated sugar, boil slowly until they are clear, take them out and spread them on plates; boil the juice till it is very thick, pour it over the tomatoes, and dry them in a warm oven. When dry, pack in layers in a clean paper box, first sprinkling sugar over the bottom of it, and also between each layer, pack tightly and cover closely, and you will have a nice confection for winter.—Aunt Em.

Scrambled Tomatoes.—Select tomatoes not over ripe, peel without scalding and cut into rather coarse bits. Add about two-thirds the quantity of breadcrumbs; have the bread stale and the crumbs not very fine. Put all into a porcelain kettle, add a bit of fresh butter and cover till the tomatoes are hot, then stir lightly every half minute till finished; it will take five to eight minutes, according to quantity. Lift from the fire as soon as done. This is a good dish easily and quickly made.

Preserved Tomatoes.—Ten pounds tomatoes, seven pounds sugar, three lemons; take ripe, firm tomatoes, remove the skins by pouring boiling water over them; strain the juice, mix with the sugar, and boil till it grows thick, skimming carefully; in the meantime boil the lemons until tender (not soft), slice, and remove the seeds, strain the sirup; when boiling hot add the tomatoes and lemons and simmer two hours; then put in bottles or cans and seal.

Tomato Soup.—To one pint of canned tomatoes or four large rawones cut up fine add one quart of boiling water and let them boil till done: then add nearly a teaspoonful of soda; when it foams up add one pint of sweet milk, pepper and butter or one cup of sweet cream instead of butter, a few crackers rolled fine, and serve.

Tomato Toast.—Rub tomatoes through the colander and cook to taste; toast three slices of bread, butter and lay upon a hot dish; just before serving add a cup of cream or milk to the tomatoes and pour over the toast.

Tomato Beef.—Cut up three pounds of beef and seven moderate sized tomatoes, one onion; stew slowly, add salt, a little clove; just before it is done put in a little butter, half a gill of catsup. This will be good heated over next day.—Tribune.

THE HISTORY of ANTI-SLAVERY
IN THE
State and Nation.
BY REV. AUSTIN WILLEY.

514 pp., 12 mo. With NINETEEN PORTRAITS.

Price, Postpaid, $2.00.

Mr. Willey gives the best history of the times just before the present generation, which is precisely the history least apt to be known. He gives us the surface of the sea under the billows which swept off three million pair of fetters from our national decks. His book shows more accurate insight into the causes which produced the rebellion, and gives more clearly the working of those causes, than any other writer. He shows more clearly the moral force of the ballot and necessity of a new party to carry a fundamental reform than any one who has treated of it. We advise every young man and every reader of the Cynosure to obtain and read that history.—Pres. J. Blanchard. Address,

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY

Gives the experience and advice of the most successful Bible students of the day. Shows how to interpret parables, prophecy and the Scriptures generally; gives the meaning of the peculiar symbols of color, size, number and substance; contains an analysis showing the character of contents of every book in the Bible, its central truths and practical lessons, the errors refuted, promises and prophecies fulfilled, its connection with other parts of the Scriptures, and many useful suggestions; intended for those who are thirsting for a deeper acquaintance with the sacred volume, and desire the plain pointed truth and in cheap form. Printed on good paper, strong cloth covers, 50 cents per copy.

TRACTS on Holiness, Tobacco, Pride, Dress, Secret Societies, Backsliding, Justification, Repentance, Dancing, Prohibition, Church Entertainments, and others. Either of these can be had at 25 cents per hundred, or an assorted package of all for 30 cents.

LEAFLETS for letters and general distribution. An assortment of pointed, short, red-hot truths on vital themes, 10 cents per packet.

MOTTO NOTE PAPER, on which is printed a variety of striking and useful mottoes. 30 cents per block of sixty sheets.

TRACT ENVELOPES, assorted packet, 10 cents. We can take American bills or postage stamps, but not silver. If bills are sent, register the letter. Address, REV. A. SIMS.
Uxbridge, Ontario.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,
The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW
Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.
Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right hook to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the hook is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 96 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago

Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 4th to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

FARM NOTES.

GREEN FEEDING.

The more a farmer wrestles with the rigors of the summer season the more he will find of the inadequacy of the pastures and the necessity of soiling crops. The succulence of the grass has gone at this time, and with the hard, dry grass, cows cannot keep up in the full flow of milk. It is a necessity of our climate that soiling crops should be grown, and it is a necessity to prevent waste, that these crops should be cut and carried to the stock. Corn is the usual crop grown for summer feeding, and when it is grown in the best manner it is an excellent food for all sorts of stock, and especially dairy cows. At first fodder corn gained a bad reputation by the mistake of sowing it broadcast, and the same blunder is made now by many farmers. This is a loss every way. It wastes the crop and spoils the quality; for broadcast corn makes a small growth, and is so shaded and crowded that it is white and tasteless and deficient in nutriment When grown in the manner usual for corn, that is, planted in rows and cultivated, it contains its full share of nutriment, and yields two or three times as much on the same ground as the broadcast sown. It should be planted in rows not less than 2½ feet apart, and 3 plants together, 1½ inches apart in the row for the small early varieties of the sweet corn, and 3 feet apart and 3 plants at 18 inches for the larger kinds of late corn. This will give 20 to 25 tons per acre for the latter and nearly as much for the former, of the very best fodder, which will be ready for use by the middle of July. This planting will produce a good many ears, which greatly add to the value of the crop, and the product of milk and cream, especially the latter. In feeding Narragansett sweet corn, from the appearance of the ears up to the time when the ears were ready for the market, the writer has found the proportion of cream to gradually increase up to 25 per cent. above the quantity given when the feeding first began, and the highest product was when the corn began to get the first reddish color of the ripe grain. Sweet corn contains a large proportion of albumen and sugar, and while it is premature to declare that albumen may be converted into fat in the cow, yet it is now thought to be highly probable, and as the claim is made that the legumin of peas is so converted, and pea meal is one of the richest butter-making foods, there seems to be little risk in claiming the same for the albuminous sweet corn.

While, however, corn, and especially sweet corn, is one of the best of fodder crops for summer use in every way, yet it is well to have others for the sake of variety, and of all others millet is the next in value to corn. Cows like variety of food as well as other animals, and in practice it is found desirable to conform to their deaire in this respect. Millet comes in about the time when the cows are satiated with corn, and it is thus a most desirable crop. There is time yet to sow it as it is ready for cutting in five or six weeks after sowing.—Times.

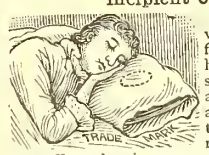
IMPORTANCE OF CLEANLINESS.

Keeping the pores of farm animals open is as essential to their thrift as bathing is to our health. The skin performs an office more essential to life and health than even digestion; and it is even more important that the horse be thoroughly groomed than that he be fed. Thorough grooming does not mean only the removal of mud and manure from the hair with the comb; it means thorough brushing and rubbing which will clean the hide, removing all obstruction from the pores. It is more necessary to groom the horse than any other farm animal because he is the last to groom himself. Cattle will groom themselves to a certain extent; yet there can be no more profitable work than brushing and rubbing them, though it is so rarely done. The hog, reputed to be the dirtiest of all farm animals, is really the most cleanly, and if allowed to do so will keep his hide clean. This he does by first putting on a coat of mud. This he scratches off and with it removes the impurities which have adhered to his hide and which the wet earth has loosened. Wallowing not only contributes to the comfort of swine, but is of the utmost importance to their health.—Agriculturist.

HARD WORKERS.

The hardest workers in this country are farmers, and especially farmers' wives. Happy is the man who has work to do—and does it—and certainly a farmer has plenty to do. What we should aim at is to make our work as efficient as possible. It has been said that a man should never do what a horse can do, and a horse should never have to do what a steam engine can do, And it is here where inventors, engineers, educators, manufacturers, and all who can aid us in doing more work with less labor find their usefulness. You will find that two of the important factors required to increase profitable production are capital and coal. The anarchists and socialists who drive capital from our industries are public enemies; the capitalists who combine to check the mining and distribution of coal, and thus enhance its price, are alike blind to their own interests and the prosperity of the country.

We want to see the steam plow at work on tens of thousands of American farms, and as soon as the miners and railroads give us cheap coal, steam plows will be rapidly introduced. Our seasons are so short that farmers almost kill themselves and their horses in trying to get their land plowed and crops planted. A steam gang plow that would take half a dozen or more furrows at once, would do the work expeditiously and well, and if the land got hard it would simply be a question of good points, and a few more pounds of coal. There are plenty of young men capable of running the engines and plows.



In fact our schools and colleges are turning out thousands of young men capable of doing any kind of work requiring brain and muscle. And in a great country like ours, there ought to be no lack of employment for them.—American Agriculturist.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TAELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street Chicago.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS OF

MORGAN MONUMENT,

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen Furnished in any quantities at

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS; —OR— The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	3
49	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

BUSINESS.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.—The hard times tell on the circulation of all papers. People become too poor to subscribe for papers, and are forced to stop them after they have taken them for years. Old friends pass away, and there is need of a constant accession of subscribers to keep a paper in a healthy condition. We must remind our friends that we depend largely on their efforts to increase our circulation. Thousands, doubtless, would be glad to take this paper if they knew about it; but who is to bring it to their notice? You can reach some of them, and they will put more confidence in your words than they would in ours, because they know you better. Can you not devote a little time to this work and report to us the result?

SPECIMEN NUMBERS.—For ten cents we will send the Christian Cynosure for five weeks to any address, thus giving them a chance to examine the paper and subscribe if they think best. Could you make better use of a dollar of the Lord's money than to send to ten of your friends five copies of the Cynosure?

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

still remains at $2 00 per year, but the N. C. A. at its annual meeting continued the offer for another year of the special rate of one dollar and fifty cents per year in advance.

One month	$ .15	One year	$1.50
Two months	.25	*Two years	3.00
Four months	.50	*Three years	4 50
Six months	.75	*Four years	5.50
Eight months	1.00	*Five years	7.50

*To any one who will renew their subscription for two years twenty cents worth of any of our publications will be sent, or thirty cents worth for three years, or forty cents worth for four years, or fifty cents worth for five years. The renewal of your subscription for several years at a time will benefit you some, but the cause more. Try it!

PLEASE BE PROMPT in paying for your papers. It costs the reform and its friends many dollars every year to send notices that subscriptions have expired, that arrears are due. Five cents is not a large sum by itself, but when it is multiplied by hundreds and thousands, the amount lost to the cause is realized to be great. Can you not inaugurate a reform in this matter, and renew a little before your subscription expires, and if in arrears pay up at once? Would it not be a good thing to do?

EACH OF OUR SUBCRIBERS who sends a new subscription, or purchases a book, or circulates tracts, or contributes to the funds for carrying on the work is a co-worker, not only with us, but we trust also with the Lord Jesus Christ. There is room for many such co-workers. Five thousand new subscribers to the Cynosure could be furnished with but a small additional cost above our present expenses, because N. C. A. work is established, the machinery is in operation, the help is employed, and hence a much greater amount of work could be done if it could be furnished. Though times are hard and business dull God has provided that they that trust in the Lord and do good shall dwell in the land and shall be fed. We hope then that this work will not be allowed to lag because of hard times, but will be carried forward with diligence and zeal.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHY.—The following account of Mr. Hesler and his work is taken from one of our Chicago exchanges. Having had over seventy five dollars worth of work done by Mr. Hesler, we are satisfied that it will pay our friends to visit his studio, No. 157 Dearborn street, when in need of a first-class artist. "In 1858, when Chicago had only a population of 90,000, Mr. Hesler took his camera, and from the top of the dome of the old court house, with all of the then young and promising Chicago in his view, obtained excellent negatives of the entire city. It is fortunate that this work of Mr. Hesler's artistic skill should have escaped the ravages of the fire. It must be a great pleasure to any old resident of Chicago to have the old Court House, which was the base of Mr. Hesler's operations, before him, just as it was nearly thirty years ago, and to look off from its dome and see all there was of the Chicago of that day—its vacant blocks, its post office, its churches, its hotels, its shipping, its residences, its warehouses, its business places, and in many instances to be able to read the signs thereon. Since then Chicago has grown from 90,000 to over 800,000 people. There is so much of history in this picture, it seems to us every old settler ought to have one. Over thirty years ago Mr. Hesler was the leading artist in his line in the city. He is thoroughly posted upon all that is new in the art, and in true artistic photography he has no superior in the city. He is one of the very few scientific photographers who do their own operating, being afraid to entrust it to a hired operator."

"A THRILLING WARNING."
THE
Man Traps of the City,
BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the purient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

GENEVA COLLEGE.
FULL COLLEGIATE COURSES in Philosophy, Science, Language, Mathematics, History, etc. Special department of POLITICAL SCIENCE. Under care of the Reformed Presbyterian church, but open to all of both sexes. Newly completed
NDOWM NT FUND OV R $100,000.
Well located, 28 miles from Pittsburgh. Fine building, heated with steam by natural gas. Facilities good. Expenses moderate.
Fall Term opens September 1, 1886.
Apply further to H. H. GEORGE, President,
BEAVER FALLS, PA.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2			76
No. 3			73½
Winter No 2			78
Corn—No. 2	40⅛	@	40½
Oats—No. 2	25½	@	27
Rye—No. 2			49
Bran per ton			9 75
Flour	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@	11 50
Mess pork per bbl			9 45
Butter, medium to best	10	@	22
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	75	@	1 50
Eggs			12
Seeds—Timothy	2 05	@	2 12
Flax			1 13
Broom corn	04	@	08½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@	14
umber—Common	11 00	@	18 00
Wool	12	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 55	@	5 20
Common to good	2 25	@	4 50
Hogs	3 75	@	5 05
Sheep	2 00	@	5 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter	87½	@	90
Spring			89
Corn	52	@	53
Oats	33	@	43
Mess Pork			10 50
Eggs			15¾
Butter	10		22
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 50	@	4 50
Hogs	2 40	@	5 65
Sheep	1 50	@	3 00

Lactated Food
The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD
FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.
It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.
No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.
In CHOLERA INFANTUM,
This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.
FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.
Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant
150 MEALS FOR $1.00.
Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.
☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting. German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies.
Catalogues Mailed Free.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Suggestive Outline
BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.
By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. R. Riggs) of
Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.
TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.
Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.
Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Mental Gymnastics;
OR
Memory Culture.
By ADAM MILLER, M. D.
A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—
THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.
The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:
The author an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.
We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—INTERIOR.
Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.
This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent post-paid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers. Address, W. F. BAKER, Wheaton, Ill.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER, Altoona, Iowa

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars, and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent. Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE
Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE
TESTED TO OVER 1600 LBS. TO SQ. INCH
Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

Baccalaureate Sermon,
BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,
Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING
ROSES
Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled.
3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.
FacSimile Series. BIBLES!
The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.
Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.
S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 51. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1886. WHOLE No. 854.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

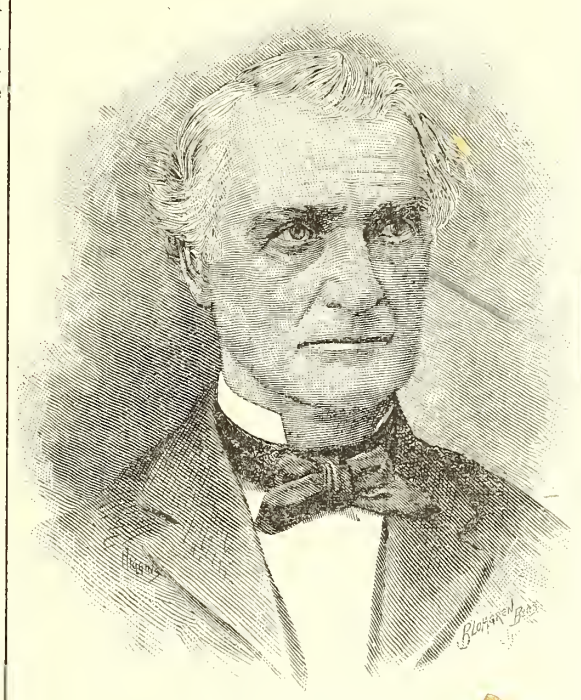
Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes: Spiritualism; Jones and Small; Saratoga balls; The Southern Fund; The Christian Conference 8,9
Editorial Correspondence 8
Labor Agitators and their Day..... 8
Satan as an Advocate of National Reform..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
A Good Man and a Just.. 1
The Scientific Allies of Religion 3
SELECTIONS:
The Hero Soul..... 3
Perpetual Conspiracies... 3
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
OBITUARY 7
SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE 11
LITERATURE..... 12
REFORM NEWS:
Redeeming the Time; From the General Agent; On the Wing from Washington to Tennessee; The Campaign Opening in Ohio; Interesting Meeting in Mississippi; Testimony for Elder Browne's Work... 4,5
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Street Meetings of San Francisco; Railway Reveries; Pith and Point..... 5,6
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
NOTICES..... 12
THE N. C. A..... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
LODGE NOTES..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
BUSINESS..... 16
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS 13



"A GOOD MAN AND A JUST."

BY REV. J. E. ROY, D. D.

I have known Philo Carpenter for thirty-four years. As a student in the New York Union Seminary I first met him in 1852 at the Albany Congregational Convention. The next summer, a graduate returning to Illinois, I was entertained by him in this city over the Sabbath, preaching for the First Church, in their little frame building, which was burned that same night. When in two years I came from Brimfield, Illinois, to be the pastor of the Plymouth Church, our acquaintance was renewed, to be matured in Christian affection during all the years since gone by.

Many years ago he gave me an account of his earlier life and of his coming to Chicago, which, written out at the time, now lies before me. He was born in Savoy, Berkshire county, Mass., February 27, 1805, and was educated in the common schools at South Adams. He was of a hardy stock. His father, Abel Carpenter, attained the age of 89, and his grandfather, Nathaniel Carpenter, resigned a captaincy in the British army at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War and joined the military service of the colonists, at the end of the war being in command at West Point. When 23 years old he went "out west" and became a clerk in the drug store of Dr. Robbins in Troy, New York. After devoting some time to the study of medicine he was given a share in the business. A friend who had ventured out west as far as Fort Dearborn came home, and with his glowing account of the prospective town, induced young Carpenter to migrate thither.

Boxing up his little stock of drugs, he and his friend went to Buffalo through the canal. There they took a steamer for Detroit. From Detroit they came on to Niles by the mail wagon which ran once a week. From that point, as the mail was shifted to the back of a pony for the last hundred miles of the great through line, he was obliged to seek some other conveyance on to Chicago. So, upon inquiry, he found a flat boat that was to float from Niles down the St. Joseph to its mouth at Lake Michigan. From that point, St. Joseph, he had expected to take the little sail vessel which was accustomed to run across the lake to Chicago. But by reason of the prevalence of the cholera in that town the men of the vessel refused to go over. An old lake captain once told me that at one time he had a great deal more business at the port of St. Joseph than at that of Fort Dearborn. But Mr. Carpenter, not daunted by the cholera report, chartered a canoe, to be towed by a couple of Indians around the head of the lake with a rope of elm bark. When they reached the Calumet one of the Indians was taken down with the cholera. Stopping off awhile the young druggist, with some medicines at hand, set him up again. They then pulled on until they came to the home of Mr. Ellis, for whom Ellis avenue is named, near the spot where is now the Douglas monument. Fearing the pestilence the Indians refused to go any farther. Then Mr. Carpenter, exhiliarated by the sight of the flag at Fort Dearborn, engaged Mr. Ellis, who proved to be another Berkshire county man, to take him on up to the town by his own rig, which proved to be a wagon and a yoke of cattle. His friend drove him to the old Sauganash hotel, a log building on the south branch, between Randolph and Lake streets, kept by Mark Beaubien. He did not find much of a town, which consisted of log cabins and the fort. He found a population of about two hundred, half of them French and Indian half breeds.

PHILO CARPENTER.

In the fort he found a few military companies, and its trench kept open for the burial of cholera-stricken soldiers. In a batch brought out for interment the young man saw one who seemed to show signs that life was not gone, and he took hold to help; and so, just as the poor fellow was about to be tumbled in, he came to life and one more man was saved for service. Every soldier was needed then, as General Scott was here directing the Black Hawk war. About that time Major Long wrote a description of Chicago as follows:

"Presenting no cheering prospects and containing but few huts, inhabited by a miserable race of men, scarcely equal to the Indians from whom they are descended; and their log or bark houses are low, filthy and disgusting, as displaying not the least trace of comfort, and as a place of business, affording no inducements to the settler."

These people were, of course, the half-breeds. One of these cabins, 16x18 feet, near where Lake and South Water streets intersect, he rented and in it opened out his little stock of medicines, dry goods and other things which came along a month after his arrival. The post-office was next door to him. Col. R. J. Hamilton held all the offices except Indian agent; and Billy Caldwell, the Indian Chief, was one of the principal men in town. Mr. Carpenter soon built a two-story frame house for his business on South Water street, between Wells and La Salle. This was the first drug store of the place. The quarter for residences, as the little cabins of the settlers might be called, was on the north side of the river. Mr. P. F. W. Peck had put up the first decent looking two-story frame in the town; and his was the next.

After he got settled, desiring to have a farm after he should retire from business, he asked Gus Herrington's father, who was a surveyor, where there was any government land. He pointed out some coming down to where Halsted street now is, and Mr. Carpenter directed him to survey out 160 acres—so he got the quarter-section bounded by Madison and Kinzie, and Halsted and a line half way between Ann and Elizabeth streets, paying ten shillings an acre, the government price. He went to Washington for his patent. There wasn't much red tape in those days, and so General Jackson himself turned in to help him. Soon after he also bought a quarter section at the same price in the Indian Reservation on the north branch. This he held onto until a few years ago and then sold it, not making a great deal out of it. As the Illinois and Michigan Canal in those times came on to be dug through its malarial regions there was a great demand for quinine, and this became a large and lucrative part of the business of the drug store. On the farm quarter section in 1842 he built his home upon the block between Washington and Randolph and Morgan and Carpenter streets, and there he lived until 1880. On that block, with his own hands, he set the trees and willow slips which now have bodies two and a half feet through. So stands the familiar old homestead still, worth now $125,000 or $150,000. His corn-field lay between his home and the river. An old settler has told me of seeing Mr. Carpenter come to the First Church from his country home in a farm wagon; and the people were accustomed to speak of him on going home from church, as going out to the Aux Plaines, so far was he from town. His quarter section he laid out in the Carpenter subdivision, one street bearing his own name, and another that of his wife, Ann. When the crash of 1837 came, in order to pay some borrowed money, he said to his creditors: "Appoint a commission, and let them select out of any of my property enough to satisfy the demand." And this land thus turned out was enough to make other people rich. In 1842 he removed his store, where he remained until he disposed of that business. For the past forty years the care of his real estate and public engrossments have engaged all his time.

Mr. Carpenter was the product of the third great era of revivals in our country. The first era was the "Great Awakening," from 1740 to 1750, under Edwards, Whitefield and the Tennents, when 50,000 souls were led to Christ. The second era was that from 1797 to 1805, when there were general revivals under Griffin, Nettleton and others in 150 New England towns. The third era was that of 1830–'35, when at the meeting of the General Association of Connecticut in Old Saybrook, it was discovered that one hundred of their pastors had been kept away by the prevalence of revivals at home; and when, in New York, under Mr. Finney and others, the work was deep and extensive. Now it seems that God had been so timing the affairs of our country that these eras of revival matched with eras of migration, and this in order that the new settlements should be founded under Christianizing influences. So the first era of revival matched with that of the migration that set up into the northern portions of New England. The second era was fitted to the migration that followed the Revolutionary war over into eastern New York. And the third era of revival came along with that of migration which flooded western New York and the older States of the interior. Multitudes of those who went forth during each of these eras to form new communities had been recently converted. They took along with them the family altar and the germ of the church and the school. Many of them were young married people, and so the first generation in the wilderness were born to an inheritance of the faith. Going forth from those seasons of spiritual exaltation, they loved revivals, they knew how to promote them, and delighted to do so. At the time of the last named era there came up at the East an intense desire to know what to do to save the rising West from Romanism and barbarism. The answer was, send out your Christian families, set up there the Christian institutions. It was out of this third era of spiritual ferment that Mr. Carpenter came.

That was a period which made prominent the demands of personal duty upon Christians; it magnified the spirit of reform, out of which the anti-slavery and the temperance causes gained a mighty impulse: it was also a time for pushing forward the great national benevolent societies. Mr. Carpeuter had been converted under Dr. Beman, of Troy, a foremost revival and reformatory preacher. Mr. Carpenter also came from the heat of excitement in York State, growing out of the abduction and drowning of William Morgan. Here is the key to his subsequent reformatory and philanthropic career. So it was only the natural thing that upon his arriving in Chicago, as he told me, he should fall at once into Christian work for the new community. On the very night of his arrival he fell into the first prayer meeting of Chicago, a Methodist brother and an officer joining him. On the next Sunday he started the first Sunday-school of the place, which afterward became associated with the First Presbyterian Church, and still survives as the Bible school of that noble church. For a time he carried the Sunday-school library to the place of worship tied up in a handkerchief. Seeing the desolation wrought by intemperance, he drew up the first total abstinence pledge and circulated it for signers. During that first winter religious service was held without a minister by the reading of sermons, and the young druggist from Troy was the reader. The next season, 1833, Rev. Jeremiah Porter was transferred from Fort Brady on the Sault St. Mary to Fort Dearborn, by the American Home Missionary Society. When he proposed to organize a Presbyterian church, Father Wright said, why not make it a Congregational church, as all the proposed members were from New England? The young minister replied that at Andover they were so advised as to the West, and that the "plan of union" was working thus. Of course Mr. Carpenter was one of the first movers for the church. And so the Puritan drift for twenty years was turned into another system which thereby gained the prestige of wealth and social position, and the First, Second and Third Presbyterian Churches came along very largely with Congregational members, brains, money and influence.

Mr. Carpenter's public spirit was naturally laid hold of by the city in behalf of its public schools; and so for many years he served on the school board, being a part of the time its vice-president, and not taking the place of president simply because he shrank from the responsibility. The school building named for him reveals his relation to that public interest. His presence in that board was an assurance that there would be a vigilant eye always resting upon its procedure. This was the only political office that Mr. Carpenter had ever held; and he never had but one law suit, and that was not instituted by him.

In his philanthropy he was a man of courage. This was noted in his pushing on to Chicago during the cholera period, and in his interest in those who were suffering from that plague. When the next cholera season came, in the year 1854, when panic-stricken people forsook their nearest kin and fled, and when young Dr. Wentworth, brother of John Wentworth, fell by this disease, and also Dr. Brainard, our friend Mr. Carpenter and his pastor, Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker, were like ministering angels at that trying time, waiting on the sick and closing the eyes of the dying—in some cases when wife and children had fled. Mr. B. F. Worrell, then the foreman in the printing office of Dr. Walker's Herald of the Prairies, now a minister at Olathe, Kansas, was also another who assisted in this mission of mercy. On the lake shore a cholera camp was established and Mr. Carpenter was among the very few, as Dr. Walker testifies, who ventured there to minister to the stricken people. Those who remember these days speak of Mr. Carpenter's moral heroism with warmth. His calmness and courage sometimes seemed to overcome in others the fear of death. And Mrs. Carpenter was a fit companion for her noble husband in deeds of mercy. Dr. B. says she always dressed plainly, and in like manner clad her children, often going about among the poor and the sick with her basket full of delicacies and necessaries. She never sought to do this Christ-like work by others, but distributed her gifts and words of sympathy herself.

Mr. Carpenter has been known as a life-long Abolitionist. He was one of the original Liberty party men, and a staunch supporter of Zebina Eastman's Western Citizen. He was well known on the "underground railroad," as this was a point where fugitives were transferred to lake vessels for a sail to Canada. These fugitives were often kept in his own house. When at one time by our copperhead legislature the colored scholars were required to be separated from the white in the public schools, two or three had been allowed to remain in the High School of Chicago. When its anniversary came the colored young lady of the graduating class was not seen upon the stage. Mr. Carpenter was presiding. He allowed John Wentworth to arise and call the young woman, if she were in the audience, to come forward to the platform. She did so, and Mr. Carpenter gave her the diploma to which she was entitled, amidst a shower of applause. As the anti-slavery cause was waxing warm, among other public meetings, was one at the old frame court house on Clark street, where is now that majestic pile. On account of the crowd tents were put up about the building, and the Abolition enthusiasm ran high. Mr. Carpenter was always active in these meetings and assisted in carrying them on.

The First Congregational church took its rise from this anti-slavery ferment, and Mr. Carpenter was the leading man in the movement. Some of the anti-slavery people in the New School Presbyterian churches were anxious to have their General Assembly and other ecclesiastical bodies take a stand in opposition to slavery. Mr. Carpenter was a delegate to the famous Cincinnati convention held in April, 1850, when the following resolution was adopted:

"That the friends of pure Christianity ought to separate themselves from all slave-holding churches, ecclesiastical bodies and missionary organizations that are not fully divorced from the sin of slave-holding; and we who may still be in connection with such bodies pledge ourselves that we will, by the aid of Divine grace, conform our action in accordance with this resolution and come out from among them, unless such bodies shall speedily separate themselves from all support of, or fellowship with slave-holding."

The General Assembly, which met in Detroit the next month, in its action on the slave question did not satisfy Deacon Carpenter and the great majority of the members of the Third Presbyterian Church. Accordingly forty-two of the sixty-eight resident members of the church, at a meeting held Feb. 3, 1851, imitated the Presbytery of Rochester, New York, and voted that until the policy of the Assembly should be distinctly changed they would not send delegates to Presbytery, Synod or Assembly, and thus free themselves from all responsibility in the matter. This was of course un-Presbyterian and irregular according to the standards. As Dr. Goodwin says, "These men followed conscience, not 'the book;' and being most of them old-time Congregationalists, they did as their fathers were wont to do. They set the local church above every other ecclesiastical organization, and refused to be forced into complicity with sin." The Presbytery of Chicago, New School, then came together, pronounced this action contumacious, and required the church to rescind its vote. The church refused to obey the mandate. Whereupon the Presbytery, also forgetting "the book," even by an act of despotic power, without charges or trial of the church as a body, and without directing the session to try the obnoxious voters individually, summarily declared these persons cut off from the church by their own action, and directed the unexscinded elders of the session to erase their names from the church roll. The exscinded forty-two do not seem to have been greatly taken by surprise; for when, during the session of the Presbytery which was held in the Third church, the refusal of the church to rescind its obnoxious vote was announced, and the Moderator, Dr. R. W. Patterson, declared Mr. Philo Carpenter no longer a member of that body as an elder, Mr. Carpenter arose and quietly gave notice that regular religious services would be held on the following Sabbath in the lecture room of the church at the usual hour! That lecture room Mr. Carpenter had built at his own expense, and so it was held as private property by agreement until purchased by the church. These services were to be held with preaching supply as it could be obtained; and at other times sermons were read from Drs. Dwight and Payson; and in a short time by an imposing council the First Congregational Church was organized. Dr. Walker says that Mr. Carpenter had also largely built the frame church edifice of the Third Church. It stood on Union street, just below Mr. Carpenter's cornfield.

The Chicago Seminary from the start has been under the foster care of Mr. Carpenter. He was chairman of the first conference in regard to the founding of it. He was one of the directors and a member of the Executive Committee for many years until by increasing infirmity he felt constrained to resign. He gave the lots for the buildiugs and the means for Carpenter Hall. In all he had contributed before his death to this institution fifty thousand dollars or more. And now his will provides that the Seminary shall be his residuary legatee, which will probably receive from fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars more. At the dedication of the Carpenter chapel within the Carpenter Hall, that benefactor was present, haviug come from a bed of infirmity to give the benediction of his presence and of his smiling face. By the side of him stood the marble bust of Colonel Hammond, who in life had stood not long before by his side at the dedication of the Hammond Library adjoining, which the donor had erected at a cost of $35,000. That chapel service was the last occasion of Mr. Carpenter's appearing in the Seminary he loved so much.

It would be but natural that Mr. Carpenter coming out of the Anti-masonic turmoil in York State, and being so imbued with the reformatory spirit of that third revival era, should address himself to the reform represented by the National Christian Association, and for this same purpose he was prominent in the measures that led to its organization. By his consecration of substance to this cause he has proven the sincerity of his convictions. The stone front building at 221 West Madison street was given by him to the Association at a valuation of $20,000. For the support of the Cynosure and for the carrying on of the operations of the Association he has contributed many other thousand dollars. And this together with $7,500 given to Wheaton College, as he considered it on the score of Anti-masonry, and with some other such gifts he reckoned that he had paid as much as $50,000 toward this reform. I have another evidence of the depth of his devotion to this cause. Before he had donated the building he proposed to me to put $100,000 into my hands to be handled by myself exclusively for the promotion of Anti-masonry. I could not see my way clear to leave my life-work of home missions.

Notwithstanding that Mr. Carpenter had been a life-long reformer, he has yet kept himself always in fairness and sweetness of spirit as regards those whom he has antagonized. I never heard him say a harsh word about the members of the Chicago Presbytery who excommunicated him. Nor have I ever known of his manifesting harshness as to those whom he has opposed in his anti-slavery and Anti-masonic career. He has always been ready to discriminate between good men in bad institutions, and the bad institutions themselves. In this respect he was a man of wonderful equipoise. He was royally loyal to the Master and to his truth, and to his own convictions of what that truth was. He was at the last a beautiful specimen of a man of well-rounded Christian character, of sweet and saintly spirit.

The wife of his early youth was taken from him, leaving no issue. By the wife of his mature life he had seven children. She had preceded him to the heavenly land by twenty years, and five of his children had also gone beyond. His two surviving daughters are the wives of Mr. W. W. Cheney of this city and of Rev. E. H. Hildreth of Santa Barbara, California. These daughters he has made the executrixes of his estate. One fourth of his real estate he devotes to benevolence: $20,000 to relatives and personal friends, $30,000 to benevolent societies, and the residuary, as already suggested, will go to the Chicago Theological Seminary. Nor in his last testament did he forget the cause represented by this paper. To his daughters he leaves $4,000 to be used at their discretion and $2,000 to the writer of this article to be used by his judgment. As the will names this trustee as a resident of Atlanta, Ga., where for seven years he had lived as Field Superintendent of the work of the American Missionary Association among the colored people; and as Mr. Carpenter had been accustomed to send him valuable invoices of books and tracts upon this subject, it is inferred by myself and by those who have been made the legal administrators of the estate that the purpose of the benefactor was that this last amount should be used for promoting the reform among the Negroes of the South. Mr. Carpenter while living had also deeded to the American Board, the American Home Missionary Society and the American Missionary Association, each, a three story, stone-front building in Ann street. These now become available, and it is hoped that by the next spring they can be sold and they will each realize seven or eight thousand dollars to the respective societies.

It must have been a great delight to our friend at the close of his days that he had had such a time to live in,that his business career had measured the period of the development of this marvelous city,that he had been permitted to help to inaugurate and carry forward such glorious reforms as these to which he had been devoted, and that by the favor of God he had been permitted to have a hand in the wondrous development of our country in these exigent times. Of him it can well be said as of David the son of Jesse: "And he died in a good old age, full of days, riches and honor."

Chicago.

THE SCIENTIFIC ALLIES OF RELIGION.

BY WM. FENTON.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science, the thirty-fifth annual meeting of which has just been held at Buffalo, N. Y., was founded by men whose names have become household words in science: Professor Henry, of the Smithsonian Institute; James Hall, New York State Paleontologist; Edward Hitchcock, the geologist; Asa Gray, the botanist; Louis Agassiz, the naturalist and Alexander D. Bache and Benjamin Pierce, each in turn Superintendent of the United States Coast Survey, were among its founders. Of those named Dr. Hall is the only one now living. Annual meetings are held and a different locality is chosen for them each year.

At these meetings papers on various scientific topics are read and discussed. The Association is divided into sections so that papers and discussions relating to the exact sciences are separated from those relating to the natural sciences. These papers and discussions are often of great interest to all lovers of science whether it be purely for the sake of science or mere utilitarian purposes. Perhaps it is safe to say that the profoundest thinkers among the scientific men of the country are to be found in this Association. Two years ago the British Association for the Advancement of Science crossed the Atlantic and held its annual meeting in Montreal. They invited the American Association to join them in that meeting and become associate members with them. The invitation was accepted and the meeting was of more than usual interest. The British have also shared their scientific honors with their scientific brethren of the United States, as in the case of the Rumford medal, which was upon one occasion awarded to Professor Henry Rowland of the Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore. Many of the members of both societies are devout Christians and at each meeting a prayer and conference meeting is held on the Lord's day. On Sabbath (August 22), in Buffalo, the hall in which the annual prayer meeting was held was crowded, and the testimonies of the Christian experience of men devoted to science were deep and heartfelt.

While the exact sciences never seem to conflict with the Bible, the hypothetical sciences which from year to year shift and change their hypotheses may do so. But the profounder members of the Association easily expose the fallacies of the vague theories and vainer speculations of a shallow few who undertake to prate about evolutionary theories to evade the solemn realties of the Bible. The hope was expressed in the prayer meeting at Buffalo that the time would come when every session of the meetings would be opened with prayer.

The places for the next annual meeting talked of are New York city, Worcester, Mass., and Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. The selection of the place is left with the Standing Committee. The total number of members is 1956, the number in attendance at Buffalo was 442, and the number of papers read 264.

As an indication of the attitude of the leading minds of the Association towards certain men who would, if they could, reason the God of the Bible out of the universe, I would like to quote the closing words of ex-President Gray's address delivered before the Association at Dubuque in 1872. They were as follows:

An able and philosophical writer, Miss Frances Power Cobbe, bas recently and truthfully said (in an article entitled "Darwinism in Morals", in Theological Review, April, 1871.):

"It is a singular fact, tbat when we can find out bow anytbing is done, our first conclusion seems to be tbat God did not do it. No matter how wonderful, how beautiful, bow intimately complex and delicate has been tbe machinery which has worked perhaps for centuries, perhaps for millions of ages, to bring about some beneficent result, if we can but catch a glimpse of the wheels its divine character disappears."

I agree with the writer that tbis first conclusion is premature and unworthy—I will add, deplorable. Througb what faults or infirmities of dogmatism on the one hand, and scepticism on the other, it came to be so thought, we need not here consider. Let us hope, and I confidently expect,tbat it is not to last; that tbe religious faith which survived witbout a shock the notion of tbe fixity of the earth itself may equally outlast tbe notion of the absolute fixity of the species which inhabit it; that in the future even more than in tbe past, faith is an order, which is the basis of science, will not—as it cannot reasonably—be dissevered from its faith in an Ordainer, which is the basis of religion.

We may indeed be glad of Dr.Gray's words; but the humblest Christian has an easier,more direcct and far more satisfactory way of settling the question of creation,and that backed byhistorical evidence unimpeached and unimpeachable, it is expressed by the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews thus: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." Heb. 11:3.

That faith does not rest in historical evidence but it is the gift of God and quite equal, in point of satisfaction, to pure and exact science; and many whose names are most illustrious in science have found and prized that faith as far beyond all scientific attainments as their imagination could reach.

Sir William Thompson,in his address as ex-President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, at its meeting in Edinburgh, in 1871, says: "Science is bound, by the everlasting law of honor, to face fearlessly every problem which can fairly be presented to it. If a probable solution consistent with the ordinary course of nature, can be found, we must not invoke an abnormal act of creative power. * * * But overpoweringly strong proofs of intelligent and benevolent design lie all around us;and if ever perplexities,whether metaphysical or scientific, turn us away from them for a time they come back upon us with irresistible force,showing to us through nature the influence of a free-will, and teaching us that all living beings depend on one ever-acting Creator and Ruler."

Sir William Thompson is one of the greatest scientific men of this age. Much might be quoted from both sides of the Atlantic showing that true science has nothing against, while it has much in harmony with, Him who is "infinite,eternal and unchangeable in his being, wisdom, holiness, justice, goodness and truth," the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

St. Paul.

THE HERO SOUL.

Forgive me, if from present things I turn
To speak what in my heart will beat and burn,
And bang my wreath on this world-honored urn.
Nature, they say, doth dote,
And cannot make a man
Save on some worn-out plan,
Repeating us by rote:
For him her Old World moulds aside she threw,
And, choosing sweet clay from the breast
Of the unexhausted West,
With stuff untainted shaped a hero new,
Wise, steadfast in the strength of God, and true.
How beautiful to see
Once more a shepherd of mankind indeed,
Who loved his charge, but never loved to lead;
One,whose meek flock the people joyed to be,
Not lured by any cheat of birth,
But by his clear-grained human worth,
And brave old wisdom of sincerity!
They knew that outward grace is dust;
They could not choose but trust
In that sure-footed mind's unfaltering skill
And supple tempered will
That bent like perfect steel to spring again and thrust.
His was no lonely mountain-peak of mind,
Thrusting to thin air over cloudy bars,
A sea mark now, now lost in vapors blind;
Broad prairie rather, genial, level-lined,
Fruitful and friendly for all human kind,
Yet also nigh to heaven and loved of loftiest stars.

—James Russel Lowell.

PERPETUAL CONSPIRACIES.

[From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.]

That is a serious as well as a strange finding of the Grand Jury at Seattle, Washington Territory, which tells of a secret organization of Socialists that is alleged to have fomented the raid against the Chinese on the Pacific coast, and to have also been active in stirring up labor organizations to contentions and strikes. While the account is probably exaggerated, it is said to rest on documentary evidence, and is not wholly improbable, since a very small organization, operating secretly, can produce large results when it is content to stay in the background and use convenient tools and dupes, whether anti-Chinese, Knights, or any other kind. The mischief such men may do is not measured by their insignificant numbers. Grand Jury at Chicago finds that the Anarchists in that city do not exceed one hundred in number, and speak of their followers as "ignorant men, who implicitly follow the guidance of their leaders," as though the dupes were of little importance. But if the history of any riotous demonstration, doing great damage to persons and property, is examined, it will be found that of the many thousand gathered in a mob only a few hundred have any definite purpose in view, and only a score perhaps are bent on murder or destruction. The menace to society exists in the villainous leaders, it is true, but is not confined to them, and there should not be too lenient a discrimination made between those who lead in anarchical projects and those who, by secret obligations, bind themselves to blindly obey the orders of such men.

It is important to notice that the socialistic society described above, though of itself small, is aiming secretly to put itself in possession of other secret societies and wield them for its own purposes. This at once reveals the danger to which every secret order is itself subject, however innocent its own purposes may be. A few men, if they can capture the offices of a secret lodge, have control of the whole body, because every member is sworn to obey the chief. One of the most diabolical chapters in the history of the late rebellion is that relating to one Thompson, who came North as the agent of the rebel cabinet to cripple the Lincoln administration.

One of the first things he did was to put himself in possession of a professedly loyal secret society and make it the tool for executing his plans. There were probably thousands of innocent men in that order who could have sworn solemnly that the society was perfectly loyal and would have repelled indignantly the charge that it was wielded in the interest of the rebellion. Another case in point is that of the Invincibles of Ireland, which was simply a small body of sworn cut-throats whose business it was to hold possession of another secret society and wield it for their wicked and murderous purposes. By this means they made it at once a shield and an ally in their crimes. Notwithstanding the presence of thousands of otherwise innocent men in the Masonic lodge it is well understood that a ring within a ring runs the order, and the order in turn runs such innocent societies as the Good Templars, Red Men, and nearly or quite all the so-called secret beneficiary societies.

It is important to notice in the second place that a small centralized society can do great damage. Put a half dozen men into a congregation who have a perfect understanding of each other and whose collusion is not known to the others, and the half dozen will carry out their own plans in spite of all the others. Exhibitions of this fact can be seen in all the caucuses of the country. Whenever these collusions or conspiracies are exposed so the people know who are in it and what they intend, they are defeated, but so long as they can keep their conspiracy out of sight they can succeed. Secret societies are such conspiraces perpetuated. They form the inner circle of public gatherings, and by methods in which the members are thoroughly schooled, they largely control all public affairs.

The danger arising from such conspiracies is not imaginary but real. If the truth were known we are suffering from nothing so much as from this evil. And the worst of all is that good men who have gone into the various secret lodges are being used for ends of which they little dream. Too honest to be themselves mean they assert with great assurance that their associates are innocent. They are the tools of unscrupulous men without knowing it. The danger from this source is great enough to warrant the State in prohibiting by law the existence of all secret societies.

An address by U. S. Attorney, William H. Dickson, at Salt Lake City, before the Grand Army of the Republic excursionists, ought to be spread broadcast over the country. As specimen facts, Mr. Dickson gives the following: "I can point you to a place in Utah called a home where a man dwells with three sisters, and calls each sister his wife, is rearing children by each of the three, and all dwell under the same roof, called by the sacred name of home. I can point you to another place, almost within a stone's throw of this building, where a man is dwelling under the same roof with a mother, a daughter, and a grand-daughter, and calling each by the sacred name of wife, and has begotten children by each of them." As specimens of the perjury which Mormonism authorizes and commits, Mr. Dickson mentions the case of a woman who declared on oath that her daughter, living in her home, was married and was a mother, but that she did not know who was her daughter's husband. Such perjuries the church defends and praises.—The Independent.

—The triennial synod of the Moravians was brought to a close on July 21st. It appears from the report read that there were 56 ministers, 5,682 attendants, 5,256 communicants; and that the Sunday-schools had 599 teachers, with 4,135 scholars. The revision of the liturgy was concluded, and it will be published shortly. One deacon and three presbyters were set apart by ordination. The synodical meetings were held at Fullneck, and the presiding bishop was the Rev. W. Taylor of London.

REFORM NEWS.

"REDEEMING THE TIME."

To the Friends in Illinois.

DEAR BRETHREN:—In the death of Deacon Philo Carpenter every good cause in our State loses a true friend, and now that his labors have ceased and he has entered into rest, how can his place be filled and the work kept steadily advancing? His example gives the answer to this inquiry.

He was first and above all a Christian. He was "established in the faith, knowing in whom he believed." He was uncompromising on moral issues, but gentle and winsome in his methods, securing the good will of many who differed with him in his radical views of practical reforms. He was "diligent in business," devoting his energies to the furtherance of whatever cause he espoused. He was liberal in his support of whatever measures he advocated, enforcing his words by giving as the Lord had prospered him. His liberality was guided by a wise discretion which makes it pre-eminently true that the good which he did lives after him. His example, and munificent gifts in aid of educational, mission, and church work, and the cause of needy reforms, will ever remain a monumental testimony to the goodness of his heart, the sincerity of his life and his zeal for the truth.

He was a leading spirit among a few equally zealous reformers who called and conducted the first Christian convention in Illinois, to devise ways and means by which to "expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption." From this initial meeting in Aurora in the fall of 1867, to the close of his life, a period of nearly nineteen years, he never swerved from his purpose or ceased to testify against a system which he clearly saw was anti-Christian in character, debasing in its tendency, and false in its pretensions to benevolence or good-will to men. He used his personal influence with leading business men, with pastors and educators to induce them to investigate the secret lodge system, but he was especially earnest in his endeavors to have the students of Union Park Theological Seminary thoroughly indoctrinated upon this subject so vital to their success in winning souls for Christ. His large contributions to the funds of that institution gave to him a certain degree of responsibility for the thoroughness of its teaching, and his wish was that his funds should represent his principles on the lodge and all other living questions of reform. Previous to 1876 his contributions directly to aid in starting the Christian Cynosure and other features of the Anti-masonic work had been liberal, and aggregate a handsome sum, but as he expressed it, "I desire to aid the National Christian Association by furnishing suitable head-quarters and accommodations for the transaction of its business, and I desire also to furnish an inducement to others to aid said Association." In furtherance of this purpose he put the Association in possession of its fine three-story and basement building on the 1st day of April, 1875, and in the month of April, 1878, he conveyed the said property to the said Association for the purpose above mentioned, since which it has been the home and head-quarters of the anti-lodge reform. In his "last will and testament" he gave another testimony to the abiding interest he felt in the cause, by placing in the hands of his two surviving children and Dr. Joseph E. Roy, a member of the N. C. A. Board of directors, the further sum of $5,000, to be expended in prosecuting the cause to which he had been so long and faithfully devoted. Having executed his trust "he rests from his labors, and his works do follow him."

Not every one has the ability with which this good man was endowed, and comparatively few have an amount of means equal to those intrusted to his care, but every one has means and gifts which, if consecrated to a holy cause, will augment the sum of righteousness in the world, and hasten the coming of that kingdom for which we are commanded to both pray and labor. As one after another the veteran heroes are gathered to their rest, each remaining warrior in the contest should accept it not only as a warning to "be also ready," but as a call to rally anew to the conflict, and in the name and for the sake of Christ urge on the work towards its completion.

How many of the friends will gather at Princeton on the 21st of September to reorganize for the year's campaign in Illinois? An interesting programme has been arranged, a commodious hall secured, and good speakers engaged. The harvest is passed, and the busy season of corn gathering will still be in the future. The social and labor elements are disturbed by strikes, anarchist outrages and other developments of the secret lodge system. The public mind is aroused and attention directed to the secret system, and the people are more ready to listen than ever before. What is needed is:

Consecration to Christ.

Conviction.

Devotion and, if need be, sacrifice.

Courage to stand for God and the right.

A large, earnest and prayerful gathering at Princeton from all parts of the State.

The means necessary to honestly meet the requirements of the work so as to put men into the field who will push on the cause during the year.

Brother, sister, what can you do? What will you do? You can consecrate yourself anew to Christ. If you have not deep convictions of the evils of the secret lodge system, you can pray for the enlightenment of the Holy Ghost, and when your eyes are opened conviction is sure to follow. You can sacrifice if need be, and do it cheerfully for Christ's sake. And if you are in health and so disposed, you can probably attend the convention at Princeton, and give at least the "widow's mite" during the year to help on the work. WILL YOU DO IT?

J. P. STODDARD.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

THE IOWA STATE MEETING.

BIRMINGHAM, Iowa, Sept. 3rd.

This is the third day of the Iowa State convention, and so far the whole body has been in the unity of the Spirit and the bond of peace. There have been differences of opinion and freedom of speech among the brethren, but no disposition to block the wheels, or dictate or dominate has intruded itself upon the gathering. It is an old-time convention, and when we reached home last evening at a quarter before eleven o'clock Dr. J. N. Norris remarked, "It seems to me that this is the best convention I have ever attended." I believe many if not all will endorse this sentiment.

The convention adjourned at 11:45 A. M. yesterday to give such as desired an opportunity to attend a meeting of the American party which had been called by the State Executive Committee to meet in another building at 2 o'clock P. M. I attended this meeting and witnessed with much satisfaction its proceedings. Its business was party politics, pure and simple, and there was no confusion, though some differences of opinion as to the best course to pursue. After a canvass of the whole question it was resolved to put a ticket into the field, and nominations were made for all the offices to be filled at the coming election, of men who were known to be uncompromising and entirely loyal to the American party. The political meeting, having completed its work, adjourned subject to the call of the Executive Committee.

The State convention assembled as per adjournment at 7:30 in the evening in the United Presbyterian church.

CLARINDA, Iowa, Sept. 4th.—I am waiting here for the stage to College Springs, where I hope to meet Father Leuty, Bro. Adams and others and spend Sabbath.

The third day of the convention was an exceedingly busy one and ended in the best of feeling. Three delegates were appointed to the congress of churches at Chicago and one to the anniversary in Tennessee. All purpose to attend. Bro. Hawley's report was quite satisfactory and the friends were very greatly encouraged. His methods and plans of work commend themselves to the substantial men in Iowa, and they have come forward nobly to his financial support. They esteem their agent highly "for his work's sake" and feel confident as they know what is being done and for what they are paying their money. Too much cannot be said in honor of the worthy citizens of Birmingham for their efforts in behalf of the convention. Transportation was promptly furnished by day or night to the railroad, and there was positively no limit to their hospitality. The convention closed as it began, with a full house and a deep religious interest pervading the whole. The closing address was assigned to me, and I spoke on the theme, "Should the secret lodge system receive government sanction and its members be eligible to civil offices." This gave me an opportunity to speak of Anarchists, Knights of Labor and to use the Grand Lodge report of Iowa to advantage. All gave good attention and seemed interested. Dr. J. N. Norris and Rev. Geo. Warrington were each unwell, but both stood by the convention, attending nearly every meeting and seemed much improved in health and spirits at the close. Bro. W. seemed particularly happy, remarking just before we parted, "I have never before seen the work in such good shape in Iowa, or the outlook so encouraging."

While providing for other expenses the brethren did not overlook the railroad fare of their speakers, and I am confident the N. C. A. Board will appreciate their thoughtfulness in returning the amount of the General Agent's car fare to the Treasury.

This convention was the result atttained by much prayer and effort. It is a fitting beginning in the series for the year, and I sincerely hope other States will emulate the example of Iowa and that each will be an advance on those preceding it. What are you saying and doing in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and so on? ONWARD is the watchword: victory the goal.

J. P. STODDARD.

ON THE WING.

FROM WASHINGTON TO TENNESSEE.

LIMESTONE, Tenn., Sept. 2, 1886.

Last Sabbath, the 29th, was spent with loved ones in Washington, D. C. In the Bible class in the First Presbyterian church our teacher told us that many societies professed to teach a faith in God which did not include a faith in Christ his Son, and thus they came infinitely short of being Christian; and that as no man could come to the Father except through Christ the Way, so all prayers that were not offered in his name were not only vain, but most offensive to God. Though the Freemasons were not specifically mentioned, all understood that they were referred to and condemned. Surely the leaven of truth is working.

In the afternoon I rode in the Gospel wagon, a four-horse omnibus containing about twenty-five persons and a cabinet organ. We visited the wharves, Washington Circle and Market Space, at each of which points we found large congregations who listened with most respectful attention to brief and pointed remarks by several speakers, and at each place a number raised their hands to ask the prayers of Christians. At Washington Circle the assembly was so large that one voice could not reach all of them. The admonition to go to the churches that were nearest their own homes resulted in a largely increased attendance on that evening. Surely the problem "How to reach the masses," is being solved by carrying the Gospel to them. In the evening the over-crowded meeting at the mission rooms was one of great interest. Nor does this movement fail to influence Christians in favor of the anti-secrecy reform. One of the board of directors who has heretofore been a Mason has recently withdrawn from the order because he could not keep a good conscience, and another, a Knight Templar, has declared the whole system a wicked fraud.

On Wednesday, September 1st, I left for Jonesboro, East Tennessee, by the way of the Shenandoah Valley. This beautiful region, skirted by mountains on either hand, has enjoyed a season of unusual fruitfulness, and is surpassingly beautifnl. One can hardly believe that but a few years ago the tramp of contending armies made it desolate and almost uninhabitable. Not a vestige of the war now mars its beauty. Corn fields and orchards alternate with pastures and fallow ground that awaits the sower.

From the Shenandoah we passed over into the valley of the James and skirted along its banks, going within a few miles of the Natural Bridge. At 3:30 A. M. our train, which was an hour behind time, reached the quaint old town of Jonesboro, the county-seat of Washington county, and the oldest town in the State, where more than sixty years ago the anti-slavery agitation was begun and among its early settlers there was a most elevated tone of Christian sentiment. Washington College, near here, is the oldest literary institution in the State, and has educated some of the best men that have adorned our land.

Seventy years ago that good man, Silas Feemster, walked across the mountains from South Carolina and here completed his college course. Two of his sons, Robert and Paul, are now able ministers in Kansas; one, Calvin, fought a good fight and went home to his reward, and all the surviving members of the family are faithful supporters of the N. C. A. and it work.

But alas! This little city is not an exception to similar towns. The excellent pastor of the Presbyterian church, Rev. Mr. Duncan, tells me that almost every white man in the place is connected with some secret order, and though he is in sympathy with our reform, he sees little hope of getting a hearing. Rev. J. M. Hall, pastor of the Congregational church (colored), has invited me to address his people on the lodge system on next Sabbath, and tells me that Prof. Spence of Fisk University, on a recent visit, bore a faithful testimony against the orders.

At 10 A. M. I came down to Limestone, where I met Rev. R. Owens, pastor of the United Brethren church, who invites me to address his people on Monday evening, the 6th. I am stopping with our tried and valiant friend, Mr. W. C. Kuzel, who, with his excellent wife, gives to all true reformers a cordial greeting and a hospitable home.

H. H. HINMAN.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENING IN OHIO.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF LODGE INITIATION.

GREENFIELD, O., Sept, 3rd, '86

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I find the work here starts a little slow, but prospects are very encouraging. Last Sabbath I attended the High Street Congregational church at Columbus, Rev. C. W. Hiatt, pastor. Rev. Gilmore, of Nashville, Tenn., prefaced the sermon of the morning with an appeal for help in his Southern work. Among the evils mentioned against which they had to contend was the evil of secretism. "Why!" said he, "right here in Columbus, this Sabbath morning, I saw a secret society out parading your streets with a brass band."

In the evening Rev. A. M. Milligan of Allegheny, Pa., formerly a student at Wheaton, occupied Rev. Mr. Hiatt's pulpit. Friends will be glad to know that he is well and prospering. I had the honor of being the first caller on Rev. Mr. Hiatt and wife at their new home. They are nicely situated and have the best wishes of many warm friends.

I did not attempt to do much for our cause at the State Fair. People were more interested in horse races and fat hogs. I left Columbus at 8:10 this morning. Being compelled to wait two hours at Washington C. H. before taking train for this point, I proceeded to find out what secret societies were doing for the people there. I had not gone far when I met a healthy-looking colored man who gave his name as Dud Coe. I enquired if he had any fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness? He replied that he did not "take much stock in them societies." Said he, "The colored Odd-fellows killed a friend of mine initiating him over here at London the other night."

The facts as he gave them were these: Mr. John Viney, a healthy, strong colored man, went to London, Ohio, one evening about the first of August last to be initiated into the Odd-fellows' lodge. He was examined by a physician and pronounced sound in body and a proper subject for their ceremonies. He was brought home by the Odd-fellows later very badly injured. He never spoke aloud again, and shortly after died, leaving a wife and children in a destitute condition. Mr. Coe also said that an intimate friend of his was with Mr. Viney after his fatal injury, and that he whispered to him that the Odd-fellows let him fall five or six feet. I find upon farther inquiry that Mr. Coe's statement is correct. I hope to work in this town and know more about this case.

Mr. Coe says they have a colored church with a preacher who will leave a protracted meeting to attend the lodge. There is a mortgage on the church of $150.00. A colored barber who was a member of this church was solicited to give toward raising the mortgage. He very grudingly gave ten cents but went to the lodge and paid fifty cents. In the depot I hung up my charts, and interested the passengers who were waiting with the "sublime mysteries." As a result a man wanted some of our books and I received his order.

I arrived here at 1:30 and proceeded to the home of Bro. J. P. McWilliams. He received me cordially, hitched up his horse and has been with me the rest of the afternoon calling on friends. We have arranged a meeting in the school house near by for to-morrow evening. Other meetings are planned.

The people here seem to be honest, industrious and consequently thrifty. I never saw a better prospect for corn. I expect to spend at least a week in this vicinity. Rev. Warren Taylor, well known to our workers, lives near by. I hope to see him to-morrow. I found one man this afternoon who wanted the Cynosure; there are a number who will take it in a day or so I am quite sure. The promise is, "Ask and ye shall receive." We have asked, and we don't expect anything else but to receive.

W. B. STODDARD.

INTERESTING MEETING IN MISSISSIPPI.

COLUMBUS, Miss.

The convention of the Associated Churches of Christ met at Simon's chapel, Lowndes county, Mississippi, July 31, 1886. This convention is a body composed of delegates from different denominations, the object of whose organization is to oppose organized secretism, and whatever else obstructs the kingdom of Christ. Sixteen churches have passed resolutions to disfellowship the members of secret orders after due labor with them, and have united in this convention. The meeting at Simon's chapel was one of great enjoyment and encouragement. At each meeting there is a discussion of the best means of opposing Freemasonry and kindred societies.

By request Rev. E. Tapley preached a sermon on secret orders. This was followed by a very spirited and edifying discussion of the same. In one address reference was made to the blessing of God which had rested on the meetings and work of the convention, and the Bible was pointed out as our guide book which will continually say to us, "This is the way, walk ye in it," and warn us against every possible evil.

Another address began with an earnest effort to make plain the way of salvation, and set forth the ungodly walk of church members as one of the great hindrances to the conversion of sinners. A comparison was made between the divinely organized church of God and the man-invented secret institutions, and the antagonism between them, the latter receiving the funds which should support the ministry, and the labor which should uphold the church.

Another member spoke in a very forcible and pointed manner of benefit received from an address by the State president of the W. C. T. U. of Mississippi, proving that it is in our power to live lives of holiness and give up the use of intoxicants. The speaker had banished ardent spirits, and was rejoicing in the Christian life, and contrasted it with the former life of hypocrisy in the church.

Bro. A. M. Pollard made a very appropriate and striking appeal on the necessity of earnest, united effort against secret orders and all sin, and in working for the church and cause of Christ.

Rev. E. Tapley related his experience in Masonry. He had been deceived and had taken three degrees. He found that it hindered the enforcement of the laws of the church and country, and was the cause of great sin.

Another speaker told his experience in joining another secret order, the "Friends of Charity," by which he lost his money and gained no good, but found it to be a fraud. Rev. E. Nichols, in an excellent address, told his experience in joining the Odd-fellows, where he found disappointment and no profit. He gave faithful warning against secret lodges, and exalted the church of Christ.

In the discussion mention was made of the great prevalence of secret societies among the colored people, and the injury they had been to them; also the necessity of enlightening their minds on this subject and warning them against connection with secret orders, which, as one remarked, will always bring disappointment and loss.

The following resolution was adopted by the convention:

Resolved, that we heartily approve of the action of the Baptist church in Memphis, Tenn., of which Rev. R. N. Countee is pastor, in purifying the church from adhering members of secret orders, and we bid them God speed in thus setting forth so good an example to other churches

This convention has had several lecturers in the field who have by the sale of literature, lectures, and the distribution of tracts, done much toward enlightening the minds of the people concerning the dangers of secretism. Some funds have been raised for the prosecution of this work, but there are more willing laborers than means. Will every Christian reader pray for the spread and success of the reform work in this wide field.

M. A. F. TAPLEY.

A TESTIMONY FOR ELDER BROWNE'S WORK.

FRIENDSWOOD, Wis., Aug. 26, 1886.

Elder J. F. Browne came amongst the Friends at this place manifesting the spirit of the Master, in his every effort to declare the whole counsel of God, and renouncing the "hidden things of darkness," and showing forth with such fairness and clearness the exceeding sinfulness of the principles and workings of secrecy, that men who were in favor of many of the different orders were compelled to acknowledge his efforts as right and proper, and that he is presenting the subject to the minds of the public from the proper standpoint.

May the blessings of the Lord attend his every effort, is the earnest prayer of all the lovers of the cause of Christ in this community.

S. D. HORINE.

There is a first-cause, and the search for it is not difficult. In one sphere, J. Russell Lowell finds this illustration: "Behind the snowy loaf is the mill-wheel; behind the mill is the wheat-field; on the wheat-field rests the sun-light; above the sun is God."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE STREET MEETINGS OF SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I want to ask your readers to think upon the following subject: The Constitution of the United States says, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for redress of grievances."

It is a fact that there are no cases on record where the so-called sanctity of the Masons, Odd-fellows, or such organizations has been invaded in the United States. But let us see what Masons are doing in our country. Last May, here in San Francisco, the police received orders from the Masons to arrest men holding public meetings. They arrested eight men, putting them into the lockup, tried them by false uttering, and a packed jury, convicted them and put them in the county jail for 100 days. There these six or eight men have to stand in a cell 6x9 feet, naked, so they can keep the vermin off with which these cells are lined. We go in every week to carry something for them to eat. The ventilation they have is a hole three inches in diameter; the smell that comes out of the cell is very bad.

These men had not broken any law of our country, but were holding the meetings according to the law of the land. They were telling the people how Masonry holds every office in the State and city and controls all the work, giving all the jobs to men that are organized under their control. These men they cannot organize, so as to control their votes and make them do their dirty work. This is why they put them in jail. When their time is out they will turn them out to become tramps. Masons boycott every man they cannot control. "And that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." Rev. 13:17. No man can buy goods and sell them, unless he can show a card, or is known to be friendly to secret societies.

There have been many times during the past ten years that Anti-mason meetings have been raided and broken up. The workingmen's meetings have been interfered with and broken up without the authority of law. My meeting was pounced upon without the slightest provocation, and broken up; but I gave them no chance to arrest any man, for I took the meeting to a hall and then they did all they could to keep the people away. There have been times when those assailed by the police have fought back, so to speak, in defense of their rights, and some of the raiders have been laid out.

I have preached the Gospel for twenty-five years, and understand common law, and I am of the opinion that a man has a right to defend his life, family, and property against all invasions; and to peaceably assemble and freely speak are said to be the inalienable rights of all men; it strikes me the proper thing to do when these are assailed is to defend them, but to use the most peaceable means.

Freemasons control and manage the International, Socialist, and Greenback parties, and all the others of the kind in this State. Masonry has instituted a system under which public office may be bought and sold, and has established a market value for the votes of the ignorant. This is the way the people are defeated; they have only themselves to thank. While the people are asleep the enemy is busy.

In all this we see no cause for despondency; quite the reverse. We do not believe God made this country for Freemasons to rule it very long. The ground is now clear for us to see what is in the way, and we think it will take something more than homeopathic doses of reform. We are getting all our enemies in front. The struggle of the future is between Anti-mason and Freemason; and upon one side or the other the people will range themselves.

So far as the immediate questions of the day are concerned, a settlement cannot be long delayed; it will probably come much sooner than is generally imagined. But there are social questions which will have to be dealt with in the near future, by the side of which such mere political issues will sink into insignificance. We do not believe in the capacity of any middle-class secret society government to deal with these questions, and a failure on their part means a reversal or overthrowing of this triumph of Masonry, and a victory for us.

N. KEYSER.

RAILWAY REVERIES.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—When I took the train in your city for this point, I thought how much the trip resembled the Christian's course through life. As it may be of interest to some of your readers to know my thoughts at this time, I will endeavor to recall them, trusting they may be a help to some in their journey heavenward.

After securing my ticket and convincing the man at the iron gate of my right to a seat in the car, I gave myself into the custody of the railroad company.

It was night, and darkness reigned without. As the train left the station I could see by the faint light that shown from the car windows that there were many tracks on either side leading in different directions. By the creaking of the wheels as we turned sharp curves I knew our track was by no means straight. At times we turned slowly to the right and then to the left, carefully avoiding the many impediments in our way. Perhaps a mill was in front of us or a brewery, constantly sending up its heaven-defying smoke. Occasionally a man, with lantern in hand, stood guard as we passed. By the steady, strong puff of the engine we knew it had undertaken no easy task. In imagination I saw the engineer, his hand firm on the throttle valve, his eye keenly watching the track before him. Well he knew his responsibility. In his care were intrusted hundreds of precious lives.

Our speed increased as obstacles grew less. Yet there was no excitement among the passengers, for we had full confidence in the engineer. We could not see him, but we trusted him. We believed he had been over the track before, and understanding his business would conduct us safely to our destination. We knew there were many tracks on every side running in as many different directions, and yet we were not afraid of losing our way. We had our tickets, were on the right train, and had full confidence in the engineer. We sped on and on, faster and faster, leaving the crowded city with its thousand hindrances behind; we were now out on God's green earth, where the air was pure and the rippling waters flowed unrestrained, save by the channels they had wrought. The conductor came through to see that none were on the train but those who had paid the price. Without all was dark. The only safety was in staying in the car where all was light. Had some of the passengers concluded that they could not trust the engineer longer and stepped from the car into the darkness,—as "Bob" Ingersoll and his followers have stepped off into they know not what, (see Ingersoll's oration at his brother's grave)—they would soon have found that their lack of brains would cause them to lose what they had. Even "Bob" has sense enough to trust the man that runs the train on which he rides. Why not trust the God that runs the universe? We all thought best to stay on board, and did not get off to examine the track, or the cars in which we rode. It made little difference whether they were white or black, as long as they carried us safely.

As our train was a through train, we made very few stops. We rode through the darkness. The dawn came at last that ushered in the golden day. Now we could see clearly the course we had taken was right. We had more confidence in our engineer than ever. He had cared for us in darkness, would he not care for us now?

I need not compare this trip to the Christian life. All will at once recognize the similarity. Every young Christian knows there are many obstacles in his course to be avoided. Many tracks lead in different directions, all starting near the right track, but diverging as they advanced. What a terrible smash-up there would have been had we attempted to go on all the tracks to see what was the best. We chose our track, car, and engineer, and they carried us safely through. W. B. STODDARD.

PITH AND POINT.

MR. CARPENTER'S RAILWAY WORK.

I met Mr. Philo Carpenter several years since in Kentucky, while coming through from New Orleans. He first informed me of your publications. My grandfather presided over the first Anti-masonic meeting in Vermont, where the accursed organization was before broken up. My father reared his sons in the Anti-masonic faith. Masonry has again become a compact and dangerous society in Vermont, and wields a terrible influence for evil here, breaking up families and conveying the property into the hands of members of the organizations with such boldness, and hardly a semblance of law. One often hears the wish expressed, "they must be put down again," and, "I wish the dangerous organization was rooted out from among us."—SOLON BURROUGHS, Vergennes, Vt.

CLOSE UP THE RANKS.

Your paper hardly goes deep enough into this evil. How many Anti-masonic lawyers can you count in your list? How many Freemason judges have been proven disqualified and dismissed? How many cases of Anti-masons vs Freemasons in courts of law in the United States have gained their suits? How many Freemasons vs Anti-masons have gained unjust decisions in their favor? Until you begin to show that you have law and can use it, you will make no headway. It is only trifling with this monster evil until you do something in this line. I shall look for such substantial items of progress in the war and less idle talk. There are Anti-masons enough if duly organized to make their power felt. Loose sand and rubbish lying around will never build a house. You must close in your ranks and sustain your own men. Why not organize with ten-fold more vigor to defend, encourage, and aid one another in the good work of withstanding and opposing? At present any man who is enlightened by your paper, and takes a stand against the lodge is a marked man—an object of persecution—none to help. All ask, "Where is his God?"—JAMES DONALDSON, Galt, Ont.

THE OLD BAPTISTS.

Having been a subscriber and reader of the Cynosure from its infancy, and esteeming it as one of our best papers, I was sorry to see a statement in your issue of August 5th concerning the Old Baptists, that they were opposed to education, missions, etc. I have been acquainted with them for many years and do not know of any such. They are opposed to educating a man and sending him out as a preacher; but after God has called a man or woman to preach his Gospel, they do not think he can have too much instruction. As to missions, they believe in that work as our Saviour has commanded (Matt. 10: 9, 10), and practice it accordingly. Their acts of benevolence are great, as many an aged brother and sister and destitute family could tell.—ALFRED CONLEY, Polo, Mo.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XII, September 19, 1886.—Jesus Interceding—John 17: 1-3, 11-21.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He ever liveth to make intercession for them.—Heb. 7: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The first part of Christ's petition. vs. 1–8. Christ in the first of his prayer had evidently before him the scenes of Gethsemane and the crucifixion; and by the expression, "Glorify thy Son," we must understand what is understood by it in other places:—his restoration to that original glory which he had with the Father as the Uncreated Word. Note the reason given: "That thy Son also may glorify thee." There is no selfishness in the petition. Still his Father's glory is the first, the supreme object of desire. He had finished his work on the earth; he had manifested his Father to that chosen few, selected out of the world to be the bearer of the Gospel message unto all nations; he had given unto them that truth which he had himself received from the Eternal Truth, and he longed to enter on his work in heaven as Intercessor. In this wonderful prayer he seems to anticipate the work; to be almost already entered upon it, so full is it of divine tenderness, and spiritual mysteries.

2. The second part of Christ's petition. vs. 9–26. Much the longest part of this prayer is taken up in pleading for his disciples, praying that they may be kept in the dark hours of temptation and trial that were coming upon them. Two points are very significant. (1) He prays that they may be kept united. The divisions among Christians, the bitter theological controversies, the strife among rival denominations, is the greatest hindrance in the way of aggressive work for God. It keeps the body of believers weak where they should be strong, jealous of each other when they should be full of loving emulation, and engaged in useless word-battles when they need to concentrate all their forces against prevailing iniquity. The ground of Christian unity is oneness with Christ. When all believers pray from the heart, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," the walls of sectarianism which now divide them must crumble. (2) He prays that they may be kept through the truth. God's Word understood and obeyed is Christianity's great conserving force; but it must be the whole truth, not mixed up with human deceptions, or with a portion of it suppressed on grounds of "expediency." It must be the truth as Jesus taught it without fear or evasion, though he knew every word was watched by unscrupulous enemies. Its teachers must have the spirit of Paul in his last words at Ephesus, "I have not shunned to declare unto you the whole counsel of God." Pastors, who through fear of causing division are silent on the lodge question, or any other popular evil, have no real comprehension of true Christian unity. Error always divides; the truth unites. The Prohibition and Anti-masonic reforms are advancing Christ's kingdom as much by developing a spirit of oneness among true believers, as by what they accomplish in the mere putting down of evil. "That the world may know that thou hast sent me," etc. As Christ manifested the Father to the world, so we are to manifest Christ. We are to be the world's Bible, showing on our hearts one divine handwriting, a living witness to Christ's mission, and the Father's love which sent him to die for sinners.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What do divisions among Christians show? 1 Cor. 13: 3. In what does Christian perfection consist? Col. 3: 14.

From U. P. Bible Teacher.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. Do not many overlook the intercessory part of the Redeemer's work? Yet what part is made more prominent in the events of these closing hours?

2. All petitions should aim at one glorious end, that the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, should be glorified.

3. All our petitions should be based on God's eternal covenant, and Christ's perfect work.

4. The closer our acquaintance with God, the richer is our measure of spiritual life.

5. Christ prayed that his disciples be kept in the world, because they had a work to do. We are kept here for some purpose. Are we fulfilling that purpose?

6. Can it be said of us, "They are not of the world?" Are we pursuing worldly ends? Are we employing worldly means and methods? Are we willing to be regarded as peculiar, "not of the world?" Let us be candid.

7. When we handle God's Word, is not our Intercessor pleading, "Sanctify them through thy truth?"

8. Are we seeking the unity of the Spirit in the body of Christ? As the rays of the sun depart from it they diverge one from another. So the farther we get from the Sun of Righteousness the wider the distances between us and our brethren. And the converse is true in all particulars.

9. What more glorious purposes could Christ have revealed than he does in this prayer? Are we not all like Bunyan's man with the muck-rake, gathering up straws and dust, with our eyes on the ground, ignorant of the golden crown which hangs over our heads?

"These words spake Jesus" (v. 1). And what precious words they are. Five brief chapters, but there is more in them than in all the books that ever were written, or speeches that ever were made outside of God's revelation. Now to prove or disprove this, just begin with the twelfth chapter of John, and note the important truths up to the close of the sixteenth chapter. And then they are lessons directly from the lips of Jesus, and from his heart, too, where every word is charged with love. I do not know, I suppose the words of Paul and the rest are just as much God's Word as the word of Jesus—nevertheless there are no words on record that are so precious to me as these last words of our most blessed Jesus. Dear Lord, help us to feed on these words.

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (v. 3). To know, that is to have life. The more one knows, the larger and broader his life. Life is more to the man of education than to the utterly ignorant. Eternal life is in knowing God. The more we know of God the more full and complete our spiritual life. And when, at last, we know even as also we are known, i. e., when the perfection of this knowledge ceases—when we enter heaven—as Paul has it, then will come the perfection of spiritual life. Jesus said, I came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. Now we understand him. Life is in knowing God. Jesus came to reveal him—to reveal him more and more clearly, and so life becomes more abundant; and when at last we stand in the presence of God, we shall know fully, and have the fullness of life—eternal life. The experience of every growing Christian confirms this fact, that life is in knowing God, and more life is in knowing him more and more.

"And none of them is lost but the son of perdition" (v. 12). Awful, isn't it, that title, "son of perdition"? But that is just what the wretch was. "Poor fellow," you say. Why so? Why "poor fellow"? Jesus calls him by a very different name, and that, too, in the most solemn and holy hour of his life; and while Judas was still living, and before he had fully consummated his devilish purpose to betray his Lord. Judas was at that hour preparing to lead out the mob against Jesus. He was consulting with the highest church dignitaries as to the final movements in that diabolical plot. Why call Judas "poor fellow," as so many persist in doing? It is a kind of sentimentalism that is doing a world of harm to-day. This cuddling and pitying of the worst of criminals is a crime itself. Pity! yes, we ought to cultivate it, and cherish it, and extend it to all, but it is not genuine pity that manifests itself in the maudlin sentiment that gives mild names to crime, or decks the villains cell with beautiful bouquets, accompanied by sentimental effusions.

"As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world" (v. 18). Ah, if Jesus had failed as wofully in his commission as we have in ours, what would have become of the world? How poorly we reflect Jesus in our lives—and yet that is what we are here for: "Epistles read and known of all men;" what reproach we have brought on our Master. Now, let us try to bear in mind this fact that Jesus has sent us, even as the Father sent him; how much depends on how we conduct ourselves. Watch and pray.

OBITUARY.

Died at Albion, Iowa, August 13, 1886, B. W. OBLINGER, aged 70 years. He was a devout Christian; had many friends; was out-spoken against secret societies, and a constant reader of the Cynosure. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss. His illness was brief—of three days only. A. C. M.

ELDER JOHN TOMLINE WALSH of Kinston, N. C., died at his home, August 6, 1886. The minister who officiated at his funeral writes thus of his death to the Christian Standard:

"Since the paralytic stroke which prostrated him in January, 1884, his mental vigor has been greatly impaired, and his physical frame enfeebled, intensified by a severe attack of acute bronchitis in February, 1885, from which he never fully recovered, but labored to some extent in the counties of Hyde and Pamlico, and preached at a few other points afterwards, not, however, with usual vigor. Several weeks ago his prostrated system developed dropsy, which, in conjunction with other diseases, entailed great suffering and exhaustion before he was relieved by death. He was born in Hanover county, Virginia, on February 15, 1816, and would have been 71 years old on his next birthday.

"Having been prominent in North Carolina as a preacher, publisher and writer for over thirty years, he was extensively and favorably known as a man of ability and learning, a bold and masterly defender of 'the faith once delivered to the saints' and justly accorded the front rank as a debater and logician."

Elder Walsh was an earnest writer against the heathenism of the secret lodges, and for a time conducted the Watch-tower at Newbern, N. C., in which he manfully assailed the orders as anti-Christian, and destructive of the republican principles of our government.

ESSENTIAL TO CLERGYMEN.—"The Ante-Nicene Fathers." Ante-Nicene Library. Translations of the writings of Fathers, down to A. D. 325. Edited by Rev. A. Roberts, D. D., and J. Donaldson, LL. D. 8vo, 24 volumes, Price, each volume, $3.00. Expressage or postage prepaid.

Important notice: January 1, 1887, the present price of the "Ante-Nicene Fathers" will be advanced to $3.50 per volume.

"These writers have always been highly esteemed by later Christians for valid reasons. They represent the simple and pure Christianity that preceded the rise of the Greek and Roman hierarchies in their fuller development. They afford the documents that constitute the earliest historical evidences of the New Testament and the Christianity which it teaches. They represent the doctrines, usages, and spirit of the church at the period nearest the times of its original founders—Christ and the apostles. They shed light on many portions of Holy Scripture, and are appealed to in this connection even by those who affect to regard most highly their testimony."—Interior

The Christian Literature Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:—Address W. M. Perkins, Agent, 1024 Harrison street, Chicago.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A.Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that athelsm and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

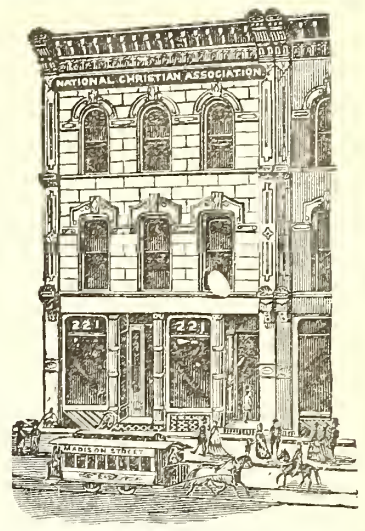
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.



The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one sueh funds shall be sent.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Flshel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. J A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Terrence, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W. P. Clark, Mansfield; Agent, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Graftno. Treas,. H. B. Higgins Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1886

SPIRITUALISM still flourishes in Saratoga and the East, and though there is a mere chaos of doctrines and ideas, there are leading characteristics which belong to all. They compliment Christ as a medium and reformer, but make him a liar by flat contradiction when he says he has "all power in heaven and in earth." They scoff at the miracles recorded in the Scriptures, and boast and believe in miracles wrought by traveling mediums and lecturers. They seize upon and advocate all reforms neglected by the churches—not to help the reforms, but to hurt the churches. They all co-operate with the devil in denying that there is any such creature as himself. They love and fraternize with anarchists who deny all government, God's government included; and with agnostics who not only disbelieve their spirits, but everything else. They do not worship God as Christ commanded, but spirits whose worship is forbidden. They have no standard of law or morals but what their own brain furnishes. They can accept every book but the Bible, and every prophet but Christ. Him they hate; in short they are demoniacs, sincere as Socialists, Mormons, or maniacs.

A public hotel ball was recently given in Saratoga, the first two names on the list published in advance being the Episcopal rector and his wife. As he is a successor of the apostles in line direct, and in charge with the share of covenant mercy which falls to Saratoga, such dancing may perhaps do, but for ordinary people the path to heaven does not lie through the ball room, and dancing Christians are not ordinarily praying Christians, especially where young men and girls, who are strangers, clasp hands and whirl through the figure.

JONES AND SMALL have been attracting crowds to Round Lake, the latter preaching to the M. E. church in Saratoga, Aug. 29. At the Lake Mr. Jones is reported to have said: "I am going to give the old parties one more trial, and if the saloons don't go, the old parties must." At Silver Lake, Wyoming county, the speaking was third party, out and out. As a denomination the Methodists are "wise in their generation," and at every one of the assemblies, now so much in fashion, where Methodists control, the Prohibition party is a love-feated, and voting against the saloon preached as a Christian duty. This is not only a blow but a pressage of speedy triumph. The other day the Prohibitionists met in Saratoga to nominate assembly men and delegates to the Congressional nominating meeting at Schenectady. Americans should attend all such meetings and vote for anti-lodge Prohibitionists. Our platform includes theirs, and the leading active Prohibitionists in Saratoga, so far as heard from, are all in favor of giving up secrecy and following the Saviour's example.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 30, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We leave here going east tomorrow morning. Yesterday (Sabbath) I spoke for the Women's Christian Temperance Union, to about twice their usual weekly audience, though the heat was extreme, sultry and suffocating. A sudden squall of thunder and wind nearly broke up the meeting, though no shower fell. But I had my remarks printed for distribution, and twelve to twenty grasped my hand and gave me their fervent benediction at the close; and even very many who were fleeing to escape the storm stopped to catch the printed discourses on the way out. Among those who gave me their hand was a Boston editor, who gave me his card and said: "When you get to Boston call on me." I have seen and conversed with the leading Prohibitionists here, and have not found one but wishes the secret lodges to abjure their secret ritual, that we may all push the prohibition cause in open meetings on the plan of Christ. In short, things are very encouraging.

Mr. Carpenter's will was read to me here to-day by Rev. Mr. Jones, father-in-law of the Home Missionary Secretary, Mr. Barrows. His leaving six thousand dollars to oppose secret societies, and only two thousand to the A. M. A., and one thousand to the American Home Missionary Society, produces a profound impression on thinking Christian men. Mr. Carpenter has thousands of representatives among giving men.

I have requested Secretary Barrows to select anti-secret literature from our list, and send to the small army of good men, ministers, aided by that society in our frontier States and Territories. We were both in haste, and the Secretary invited me to call at his office in New York, and meantime he would consult his associates. The wise and firm stand taken by Dr. Roy and the American Missionary Association is exerting a powerful influence against the dark and disorganizing false worships.

The Saratoga Eagle inserts my discourse in this week's edition and sends it widely in this part of New York. The edition gave a handsome complimentary notice of myself, as did also the Daily Saratoga Journal, which increased the audience.

To-morrow we hope to attend a Prohibition Congressional nominating convention in Schenectady, on our way east, and shall try and lay the argument for united action of Prohibitionists before the members.

SARATOGA AND ITS WATERS.

This watering place excels all others in the number of its fountains; their beauty and health-giving qualities of its waters, its scenery, its clear, sweet air and blue, distant mountains—all which make up an unequalled whole. I have drunk from other springs and spring waters, but their offensive smell and taste, if not entirely insipid and inodorous, make a remedy nearly as bad as the disease. But these springs rush up out of the earth, sparkling as they rise, and their taste becomes so agreeable that more well people drink them for pleasure than sick ones for health. This is my fourth sojourn at Saratoga, and each seems better than the last. If the Spaniard had found these springs instead of the alligator lakes of Florida and the lower Mississippi he might have been pardoned for boasting that he had discovered the elixir of perpetual health.

I have stopped in different houses at these springs, and I do not hesitate to recommend all who know me to stop at Elmwood Hall, midway between the Congress and High Rock. Dr. Potter has been Mrs. Blanchard's and my landlord this last time, and mine once before. The guests are of all kindreds and races, yet regular morning worship in the parlors seems to make them one family; and good provisions, good cookery, and friendly intercourse, good sense and good management make Elmwood Hall a most desirable temporary home. Write to Dr. Emory Potter, Elmwood Hall, Saratoga, N. Y.

PROHIBITION CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Aug. 31.—This 20th Congressional district of New York has an ill name, as the most purchasable district in the State. This Prohibition convention opened with sixty to seventy delegates from five Assembly districts. But above a hundred good men and eight or ten women were in before the close.

The meeting was opened by singing "All hail the power of Jesus name" and a most earnest and excellent prayer. We met in the Good Templar's Hall, but there was but one red collar in sight, and that the owner tucked away on a window stool. Indeed, I should not have known but I was in an American Prohibition meeting. The men were just like our men, and their ideas like ours. A young brother asked that his Good Templar's lodge might be recognized in the resolution which complimented the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The resolution was re-committed and reported again, but the name "Good Templars" or any other secret lodge or division was not in it. So no secret society was alluded to by the convention, save in the vote of thanks for the hall. The speakers shunned to mention the secret orders, as did the resolutions with rare and trifling exceptions. Mr. Finch was to speak here in Union Hall, but failed to appear. Young Mr. Wheeler, editor of the Voice, spoke sensibly and well, as did Rev. Mr. Rose of Troy and others; but if secret societies had had small-pox they could not have been more sedulously shunned.

At the request of the chairman, Mr. Weed, a very able presiding officer, I was introduced to the convention to lead in prayer at the afternoon opening; and the chairman of the committee on resolutions, whose name I did not get, rejoiced that the Prohibition platform recognized God. If things move on at this rate and in this direction the year 1888 will witness an American Prohibition party, the secret lodges given up, and such a band of Christian men united in one solid phalanx against the liquor curse and atheism, as neither this nor any other nation on the globe has ever seen.

The progress of the Prohibition cause, as shown by the statements of Mr. Weed, transcends all previous history of reforms, and the fall of the saloon and the lodge will recapture and restore more lost means and human faculties, than the fall of slavery has done.

After the business of the convention was over, I asked and obtained leave to mention the rise of the American party fourteen years ago, its article on prohibition and its vote for St. John two years ago; and I gave notice of my speech at Saratoga last Sabbath, and fifty or sixty copies of the Saratoga Eagle containing it were taken as the meeting dispersed. If we are enabled, by the blessing of God, to secure a truly national congress of Christians in Chicago, and another national convention in the South in the winter, I feel assured the Prohibitionists of the United States will become one. J. B.

THE LABOR AGITATORS AND THEIR DAY.

An hundred thousand workingmen in all the large cities of the North laid down their tools and tramped the streets instead last Monday. The first Monday of September has been chosen by the leaders of the secret labor organizations for a "Labor Day" so-called. If its celebration in Chicago represents fairly the country at large, a word of remonstrance and advice is due to the workingmen of America from such friends as have had better opportunity to study the effect of social movements upon the character and happiness of the masses. Every careful observer on Monday must have noted:

1. That it was not a day of rest or recreation for the participants. Standing about for hours and tramping through hot streets, dancing, beer-drinking, and listening to the harangues of fifth-rate politicians, whose most philanthropic ambition is to capture the votes of workingmen, neither recuperates a weary body, or informs the drowsy understanding.

2. That while the ordinary business of the city went on, the loss to production, and of course to the workingman, was immense. The man who paraded had to pay for the time and transportation of his family or friends to see the sight, and business was blockaded for hours along the streets traversed, except the saloons.

3. It was unprofitable as a day of instruction from speakers in whom political ambition is the ruling motive. The saloonist, Lawler, who poses in Congress as a workingman's friend, and others of like repute, are not likely to be wise counsellors on such an occasion.

4. It was a time of momentary triumph in the display of unity among laborers in support of an unreasoning war against capital. The gratification of personal vanity in a display of badges and cambric sashes, or the boast of numbers, will not heal the wounds made by the oppression and petty tyranny of employers.

It was the agitator's day, not the laborer's. The saloon-keeper, the street politician, and the lodge organizer whose hands are guiltless of grime and blisters and dirt—these are the men who profit most by such demonstrations. The means they are taking for their boasted improvement of the laborer's condition are misleading and wrong; and cannot abide before the growth of intelligence and the convictions of an enlightened conscience among the people. In England such methods are being abandoned.. The trade-unionists there numbered 1,300,000 in 1872; last year they could barely muster a half million. Trades unionism is an "aristocracy of labor," as oppressive upon outsiders as the miserly capitalist. It cannot endure the tests of political agitation and popular inquiry. The labor questions must more and more find answer in legislation, and that to be permanent must be founded on the eternal principles of equity revealed by God in his Word and the conscience of men.

Let, then, the workingmen leave to the agitators their day, and demand of the government their own—the Sabbath day of rest and that of instruction, which will permanently profit their condition, enrich their understanding, comfort them in time of certain trial, and cheer them in hope of the future. If workingmen cannot secure their own day from abuses and secure it to themselves and their households, what guarantee have we that they will wisely use other public trusts.

SATAN AS AN ADVOCATE OF NATIONAL REFORM.

The order of the American Union is a politico-religions secret society—a sort of revised edition of the Know Nothings. Its professed purpose and oath-bound obligation is to keep separate church and state; to oppose the Roman Catholic church; to prevent Catholics from holding office or appointment under the Government; and to withhold subsidies from sectarian institutions. In 1881, at a meeting of its central body called the "Senate" there was organized a controlling or superior order—a hub within a complex wheel—called the National Body, membership therein requiring an oath to protect each other in every particular; to acknowledge Jehovah as God, Jesus Christ as Saviour, and the Bible as the Word of God and foundation of government; and also binding them to have God, Jesus Christ, and the Old and New Testaments recognized in the Constitution of the United States, thus creating a Protestant theocracy, disfranchising every unbeliever of these dogmas, according to evangelical interpretation —all this contrary to their initiatory obligations.

When Satan had failed in his efforts to destroy Paul or to essentially disparage his character and mission, he put it into the heart of a poor girl to follow him and his companions and cry, "These men are the servants of the Most High God which show us the way of salvation." It has been ever thus. What the devil cannot destroy he strives to manage and make contemptible.

A no more thoroughly Satanic plan could be devised for the destruction of the great movement which has for its object a national recognition of God and of Christ, than that of committing it to a secret society. National reform neither seeks nor recognizes any such method for its promotion. To such a spirit and purpose we may well apply the words of Paul, "I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ, come out."

THE SOUTHERN FUND.—Don't forget it. The earthquakes and commotions of last week admonish us to make no delay, for the judgments of God will not forever slumber. Fifty-two visits of the Cynosure in a year, on some colored pastor's table, may, by God's blessing, be the means of saving thousands from the secret follies and swindles of the lodge. Send something from the Lord's tenth for this object.

THE PRESENT NUMBER of the Cynosure will be sent to many non-subscribers on account of the sketch of Mr. Carpenter, and to extend the notice of the Illinois State convention among the churches of the State. Of all such we ask a careful reading of the paper, with the hope that it will lead to a further inquiry into the work and object of the National Christian Association. It is always a pleasure to answer such inquiries so far as possible, and give light upon every question, if possible, upon the secret lodge system. Copies of this number can be obtained on application to the publisher.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE of all denominations, on which many hopes are centering and for which many prayers arise, has not yet reached that point of preparation which allows us to speak of time or programme. This we can say in answer to a number of inquiries, that a committee of able men were appointed at the second meeting of a conference of persons interested in the movement. At that meeting there were some twenty-five or thirty present representing some eleven denominations, some of whom were ladies, a number were pastors of churches in the city or suburbs, and six were editors representing the Interior, the Christian Worker, the Bible Banner, the Free Methodist and the Cynosure. Dr. W. T. Meloy was chairman and Rev. Joseph Travis, secretary. After an earnest and very important consultation a committee of seven was appointed, with Dr. Gray of the Interior as chairman, to draw up a call and arrange a programme. The Cynosure did not print the full proceedings of the meeting because so requested, but the correspondent of the American had more liberty, and the readers of our Washington paper had more knowledge of the matter than those of the Cynosure. That committee had two meetings before several of the members left for their vacations. A call was drawn up, and the first steps have been taken toward a strong programme. The call is yet not circulated, it being thought best to be sure of a considerable co-operation before taking a step so definite. The absent members of the committee will soon return, and we hope before long to report substantial progress in the preparation for this important meeting.

—Secretary Stoddard is attending the Kansas State meeting this week, and expects to remain in that State several days addressing the people and awakening them to realize the dangers of the lodge.

—Bro. Hinman left Washington last Wednesday and begins work in the South at Jonesboro, Tennessee. His early purpose was to go through the Carolinas, and so on to New Orleans; but railway arrangements caused a change in plan.

—Elder J. F. Browne lectured fourteen times and preached eleven sermons in Wisconsin during the month of August. He was at Big Creek Wesleyan church, Juneau county, last week assisting in an interesting revival work. Monday of this week he was to be at Baraboo to fill appointments, and from there he goes to Hortonville in Outagamie county by way of Portage, Rio, Fond du Lac and Oshkosh, looking after the prospects of the State convention.

—Our first report from Birmingham, Iowa, tells of a powerful meeting which must sensibly effect the religious interests of the State for the year to come. Bro. Hawley feels that he has a united, intelligent and sympathizing constituency, upon whose support he may confidently rely; and the two reform papers, the Birmingham Free Press and the Crank of College Springs, will feel a new life and zeal in the holy war. Secretary Stoddard spent the Sabbath at the latter place, speaking several times.

—Bro. Hawley in Iowa has raised and pledged $600 for the State work and will soon have $200 more, which is his mark for the expenses of the year. While thus strengthening the sinews of his war, he is getting the whole plan of the campaign before him so that when he will begin soon, his work will be laid out for weeks or months in advance, and such crowded houses as greeted the speakers at the State convention will welcome him in many places.

—The excellent portrait of Mr. Carpenter which we are happy to present to the Cynosure readers is the work of a young Chicago artist, Gustave Higgins, whose success in portraiture is due to a fine natural talent, improved by several years' study in the Royal Academy of Sweden. Among other specimens of his work have been the portraits of John G. Fee, C. C. Foote, George W. Clark, Samuel Plumb, Samuel D. Greene, Benjamin Rush, and Nathan Brown.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Pres. and Mrs. J. Blanchard stop at New Market, N. H., on their way to Boston, and spend a few days with Elder S. C. Kimball of the Christian Witness.

—Rev. George Warrington, pastor at Birmingham, Iowa, and editor of the Free Press, and his daughter, Mary, have recently both been severe sufferers from malarial fever.

—Rev. J. M. Hervey of the United Presbyterian church, Los Angeles, Cal., prepares the Sabbath-school lesson notes for the primary classes for the U. P. Bible Teacher.

—Hon. Frederick Douglass is to visit Boston shortly before his departure to Europe, Sept. 15, and the colored people there are preparing for him a grand complimentary reception and banquet.

—Rev. E. O. Tade, who hopes to establish a mission church in San Francisco which shall steadfastly maintain Christian reforms, was a seminary mate for two years with Rev. Edward Hildreth of Santa Barbara, Cal., former treasurer of the N. C. A.

—Rev. Wm. Johnston, D. D., of College Springs, Iowa, is being named by some of the papers of his vicinity as a good man to nominate on the Prohibitionists ticket for Congress. He is just as good on the American ticket. Let us have a few such men in Washington.

—Rev. Dr. E. P. Goodwin, pastor of the First Congregational church of this city, his son, and F. G. Ensign, Superintendent of the American Sunday-school Union, have returned from Estes Park, Colorado, where they have been for several weeks in search of rest and health. Dr. Goodwin is soon to preach a memorial sermon on the life and death of Mr. Carpenter.

—Rev. J. C. McFeeters of Parnassus, Pa., pastor of the Reformed Presbyterian church of that place, and a contributor for the Cynosure, the Christian Statesman and the Christian Nation, has been given a six weeks' vacation by his people, and passed through Chicago on his way to Pike's Peak last week, giving us a most agreeable call. He will spend much of the time with friends near Colorado Springs.

—Bro. Countee and family of Memphis are recovering from an attack of malarial fever. He reports another Baptist pastor who has just renounced the lodge with great joy at his deliverance through Christ. He publicly proclaimed his new position on the last Sabbath in August. It cheers us also to know that this brother has found the pole star light of the Cynosure leading aright amid the fogs of lodgery, and is rejoicing to follow.

—The visit of Rev. M. A. Gault last Saturday on his way home from a series of meetings in Wisconsin, brightened the whole day. Bro. Gault's efforts to make more close the union of the work of National Reform with our own is wise and shall have our co-operation. He regretted that he could not have attended the Iowa and Illinois State meetings, and it is worth heeding that he says our workers do not early enough nor sufficiently advertise their State conventions.

—The death of Rev. Joseph T. Cooper, D. D., one of the most widely known and highly esteemed ministers of the United Presbyterian church, occurred at Cleveland, Sabbath evening, August 22nd. Dr. Cooper was editor of the church magazine for some twenty-eight years. He was pastor in Philadelphia for nearly one third of a century, and professor in Allegheny Seminary since 1871. He published also some years before the war a volume of lectures on Odd-fellowship in which the unchristian character of that order is very ably shown. Dr. Cooper was active in the organization of the National Christian Association, and its work has always had his sympathy and co-operation so far as possible in connection with his many duties.

—The Cynosure has always contended that among the supporters of the reform it represents were to be found some of the best people in the world, and it is always a pleasure to learn how they surpass ordinary men in that broad development of Christian character which takes in the whole of the Ten Commandments. Probably another so unique and affectionate an example of filial devotion cannot be found as this which we now relate of a life-long Anti-mason. Some fourteen years ago there died an old lady in Wayne, Ill., some thirty-four miles from Chicago, who had been a cripple from her 68th year till her death at 82. She was a devoted Christian, and many now living testify of her zeal for Christ. She always wished to be with the people of God on the Lord's day, but could not go so far on her crutches, and found it difficult getting in and out of her son's carriage. She therefore adopted a more primitive conveyance—a wheelbarrow, on which she could sit, one side being removed, without trouble; so for fourteen years, losing hardly four Sabbaths in each fifty-two, was this aged disciple wheeled to church by the strong arm of her devoted son, through snow-drifts and dust and mud. So pleasing an illustration of the Fifth Commandment, so Christ-like in its humility, we have seldom known, and wish to commend it to all the young reformers who read the Cynosure and love to honor father and mother. This son was at the time a civil officer, and is now a respected physician, Dr. E. C. Guild, of Bartlett, Ill.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

—School year began this week, and most of our public schools and institutions for higher education are again crowded with the most interesting part of the American nation. Parents who have selected prayerfully the seminary or the college for their children may now follow them with confidence in their prayers; if they did not they may have occasion to repent of their carelessness.

—Among the institutions remembered by Mr. Carpenter in his will were Oberlin, Berea, Camp Nelson Academy, Ripon, Iowa College, Chicago Theological Seminary and the New West Educational Commission. He gave during his life to Wheaton $7,500.

Rev. Edward D. Eaton, late of Oak Park, has accepted the Presidency of Beloit College, and will enter upon the active duties of that position September 1.

Rev. Dr. Cummings, President of the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. (Methodist), recently made the somewhat remarkable statement that in our denominational colleges the number of students in proportion to church membership is as follows: Congregational, 1 to 413; Presbyterian, 1 to 600; Baptist, 1 to 900; Methodist 1 to 1,000.

Bloomingdale Academy, says the Christian Worker, has won a name and character amongst Friends' schools equaled by very few institutions of its kind. For twenty-five years, B. C. Hobbs, known as one of the first educators of his time, was at its head. Since his retirement other good teachers have been in charge, and it is now especially blessed in having Hiram Hadley as principal.

The whole number of teachers in the public schools of the States and Territories is 307,804. Of these, 198,000, or nearly two-thirds, are women. In the schools classed as secondary, ranking as academies, there are 3,312 male, and 4,011 female teachers. In the 286 female colleges, there are 617 male, and 1,963 female teachers. The special aptitude of women for teaching is urged as a strong argument in favor of higher education for them.—Union Signal.

THE HOME.

EVERY DAY WORK.

Great deeds are trumpeted: loud bells are rung,
And men turn round to see.
The high peaks echo to the pæans sung
O'er some great victory.
And yet great deeds are few. The mightiest men
Find opportunities but now and then.

Shall one sit idle through long days of peace,
Waiting for walls to scale?
Or lie in port until some "Golden Fleece"
Lures him to face the gale:
There's work enough: why idly then delay?
His work counts most who labors every day.

A torrent sweeps adown the mountain's brow,
With foam and dash and roar—
Anon its strength is spent, where is it now?
Its one short day is o'er.
But the clear stream that through the meadows flows
All the long summer on its mission goes.

Better the steady flow; the torrent's dash
Soon leaves its rent track dry.
The light we love is not a lightning flash
From out a midnight sky.
But the sweet sunshine, whose unfailing ray,
From its calm throne of blue, lights every day.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of one unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells,
The Book of Life the shining record tells. —Sel.

GOD AND SATAN.

I have a neighbor who tries to puzzle everybody with this question, "If God is good and loves us, and wants us to be happy, as Christians assert, why did he make a devil to tempt us to sin?"

This man came to me the other day, and I promptly met his question with another, "Did God make a devil?"

"Of course he did," was the reply, "for God made everything. To suppose that the devil made himself is absurd, and to claim that he is uncreated and existed from eternity would give us two rival gods. If there is one God, omniscient, omnipresent, and almighty, as you folks say, and there is a devil who goes about like a roaring lion, God must have made him."

"Well, let us see. Here is an apple that is rotten to the core. Does God make rotten apples?"

"No, he makes ripe apples, and we ought to eat them when they are ripe. If we keep them until they rot, that is our fault. But what have rotten apples to do with the devil?"

"Perhaps more than you think. We may call the devil a rotten angel. God made him holy and good. But being a free agent, he sinned and fell, and so made himself a devil. Let me ask you another question. Does God make whisky?"

"No, I suppose not. He makes grain, and men turn it into whisky."

"Yes, the wheat, rye and corn that are created for food are rotted, spoiled for all useful purposes, and then distilled into poison. This man does, and then calls whisky 'a good creature of God.' But is it so?"

"No, but God knew when he made the grain grow that it could be turned into whisky. Why did he put into it the elements for making poison?"

"We will come to that by and by. You were on the train the other day when the locomotive exploded, I believe?"

"Yes."

"Well, when you stood viewing the wreck, the boiler all torn to pieces, the fragments of the engine thrown all about, did you read the letters on that piece of brass that used to be on the side of the locomotive, 'Baldwin Works, Philadelphia?' It was lying in a conspicuous place among the broken wheels and levers."

"Yes, I remember seeing it."

"Did you say when you saw it: 'Now I know who made this wreck; it was that locomotive company in Philadelphia. They had no business to send out a locomotive that could be blown up. They got up the machine, and they are responsible for all the consequences?"

"Do you think that I am a fool? Baldwin & Co. make first rate engines. Thousands from their shops are running on the railroads of the world. They are perfectly safe when properly used. But the Baldwins or anybody else can't make an engine that can't be abused. The engineer in this case let the water get too low in his boiler. It was his fault, and not the fault of the maker. The very fact that an engine is a machine of such tremendous power makes it dangerous if it is not managed just right."

"Well, don't you see that God's relation to Satan is like that of the Baldwins to an exploded engine. The only difference is that in the case of the devil he was both locomotive and engineer. He put on the steam of pride until he threw himself from the track. And now he dashes to and fro, an archangel ruined, a guilty, wretched being—though still so mighty that he is called 'the prince of the power of the air.' And, as misery loves company, he tempted other angels, and now tempts men to share in his sin and sorrow. That is the way it came to pass that there is a devil in the universe, and that he is the tempter of the human race."

"But couldn't God have made men and angels so that they would not have been able to sin?"

"Of course he could. He made the stars that way. They are kept by attraction in their orbits, and cannot wander. But what is their obedience worth? It is like that of a clock which you wind up, and it has to run and mark the time for you. It is a machine, and must do what it was made to. God had machines enough, he wanted free agents; and when he made free agents, they could choose evil instead of good; they could disobey instead of obeying. However innocent and upright at their creation, it was possible for them to fall. That possibility was inseparable from their freedom. Do you wonder that God wanted men and angels as well as stars? You have a child; when Kitty comes to you with her kiss and says: 'Papa, I love you,' you are happy. But why? Is it because of the kiss and the words? Suppose a machine was made to look just like your child; that you could wind it up so that it would kiss you and say: 'I love you,' would that satisfy you? In some respects the machine would be better than the child. It would always kiss you when you wanted it to, while the child sometimes wilful and perverse. But you would rather have the child with its possibilities of disobedience than the machine, though it is sure to obey. You want love that is free and not compulsory; and and that is what God wants. He made Satan as he made Gabriel, but Satan used his freedom to rebel against his Maker. For this rebellion he only is responsible, as the engineer and not the locomotive builder was responsible for that wreck last week. So the answer to your question is, God made an angel free, holy, happy, and he made himself a devil." —The Interior.

THE NOBLEMAN'S GREATEST COMPLIMENT.

One wet, foggy, muddy day a little girl was standing on one side of a street in London, waiting for an opportunity to cross over. Those who have seen London streets on such a day, with their wet and mud, and have watched the rush of cabs, hansoms, omnibuses and carriages, will not wonder that a little girl should be afraid to try to make her way through such a Babel as that. So she walked up and down, and looked into the faces of those who passed by. Some looked careless, some harsh, some were in haste; and she did not find the one she sought until at length an aged man, rather tall and spare, and of grave yet kindly aspect, came walking down the street. Looking in his face, she seemed to see in him the one for whom she had been waiting, and she went up to him and whispered timidly:

"Please, sir, will you help me over?"

The old man saw the little girl safely across the street; and when he afterward told the story, he said: "That little girl's trust was the greatest compliment I ever had in my life."

That man was Lord Shaftsbury. He received honors at the hands of a mighty nation; he was complimented with the freedom of the greatest city on the globe; he received the honors conferred by royalty; but the greatest compliment he ever had in his life was when that little unknown girl singled him out in the jostling crowd of a London street, and dared to trust him, stranger though he was, to protect and assist her.

Men carry something of their character written in their faces. Day by day the acts of life chisel their impress on the human countenance; and the record there kept reveals the character of the man, and the history of his life and deeds. If worldliness, and selfishness, and sin, are written there, the keen eyes of childhood will not fail to find the record; while if there beams in that countenance the grace and peace of Christ, and the gentleness and kindness of the Lord, even the children will be attracted by such a face, and be led to trust in one who himself has trusted in God.

Happy are they who know the rich peace of Christ; and happy are they out of whose countenances shines that wondrous and celestial brightness; who have been illumined from on high; and who are themselves lights in the world, a city that is set on a hill, that cannot be hid.

Would a little girl pick you out in a crowd, as one to whom she could apply for help?—The Christian.

THE BEES.

(From the German of Weisse.)

Watch the bees, my children all,
Busy artisans so small,
With what ceaseless labor they
Seek for honey day by day.
They their life's work n'er abate,
Busy, happy, early late.

Should I idly live? Oh, nay!
But more busily than they
Since my God has given me
Understanding. Henceforth be
Happiest hours of my life
Those with useful actions rife.

Not for selfish ease was given
Precious time by God in heaven.
From his hand on me doth fall
Life and skill and knowledge, all
Must be wisely used. At last
Comes reward when life is past.

—Miss C. L. Brine.

INDUSTRY'S REWARD.

Some weeks ago in Phidelphia, Pa., the semi-centennial anniversary of the entrance of Mr. Edward C. Knight into business was celebrated. Mr. Knight began his business career on a salary of two dollars per week, and saved something every week, and while still a very young man opened a grocery store with a capital of two hundred dollars saved from his earnings. Two things, certainly, Mr. Knight did as a boy. He kept his eyes open, and learned everything he possibly could about the business; he did not waste any money. It is not at all probable that he bought cigarettes, or owned innumerable neckties or wore large brass rings or pins, or drank many glasses of soda water.

Another thing. It is not at all likely that he got to the office five to fifteen minutes late three mornings in the week, or just got inside the door every morning at the last possible minute. He was there on time, and had risen early enough in the morning to reach business neatly and carefully dressed, and ready to commence his duties at once.

It is not at all likely that he watched the face of the clock the last half-hour of the day, doing the work that came to him in a half-hearted spirit, or as a boy of eighteen, a stock clerk, did to the writer during the last week. The large store where he is employed closes at 6 P. M. A customer hurried in to purchase goods to match some purchased a week before. The stock clerk was asked by the salesman for the goods, and answered in the most nonchalant manner, "All gone." "What! why there was a roll of it yesterday." "All sold." But the salesman hurried along the line of goods three or four times, saying, in a puzzled tone, "It's very strange." The stock clerk said nothing, but stood frowning at the clock. "Why, yes, of course, here it is," and the salesman tumbled a large roll to the floor. A flush of shame passed over the stock clerk's face and he turned his back. He knew he had stolen nearly fifteen minutes of his employer's time, and wasted that much of the customer's, rather than disturb the stock, which was in good order. That young man will be a clerk all his life. He does not attend to business in a business-like spirit.

Another thing. Mr. Knight never reasoned in this way: "I'm not going to kill myself. He only pays me two dollars a week. I am not going to kill myself for that. If he wants me to work harder, just let him pay me more money." Foolish boy! Do you suppose that a boy who does two dollars' worth of work is going to be paid three dollars for doing it! No! When you want three dollars a week, do five dollars' worth of work. Remember that your employer expects to make a profit on your labor. He buys your time, and every minute of the working hours belongs to him.

Another thing. When Mr. Knight was a boy, he must have watched the business methods about him and received many valuable hints that enabled him to transact his own business intelligently. If boys would only remember that their entrance into business is an entrance into a new school, they would learn very much more than they do.

Mr. Knight says: "I cautioned my clerks to give good weight, and I always represented goods as they were. Honor is indispensable in mercantile life. * * * In fifty years I have signed every note sent out by this house." Honesty and devotion to business—two indispensable foundation stones to a successful business life.

To-day Mr. Knight is rated among the millionaires of Philadelphia. Remember, he began as a poor boy on a salary of two dollars per week—Sel.

BLIND HENRY FAWCETT.

Henry Fawcett started as a boy with the ambition to enter the House of Commons. This aspiration he regarded as an inspiration from God, for he looked upon the position as a trust. He coveted it not to gratify any ambition for distinction and power, but that he might serve his country by removing from millions of his countrymen the degradation of ignorance. One day, after he had graduated from the University, Fawcett and his father went out shooting. The son was in advance, some thirty yards, when a covey of partridges rose between him and his father, who fired at a bird which was in line with his son. The bird was shattered by the charge, but two pellets passed through the tinted spectacles of the son, one through each glass, entered the eyes, and embedded themselves behind them. In an instant Henry Fawcett was blind for life.

His first thought was, not that that he should be forever excluded from the House of Commons, but that he should never again see the lovely view which he had just been admiring. The father was broken-hearted, for the son was the pride of his heart, and he had made the youth's ambition his own.

The son, however, was not crushed by the terrible calamity. Though cast into utter darkness at the morning of his life, young Fawcett looked the calamity steadily in the face. He resigned himself to the inevitable, but he determined that the calamity should not make him abandon any duty he could perform, nor persuade him to give up the ambition of his life. From that moment his blindness lost half its terrors. It remained an impediment, but never became an obstruction. The man was crippled, but though he limped, he kept step with the most stalwart.

As a fellow of the University he resided at Cambridge, and was elected its professor of Political Economy. His verbal memory was weak, and he seldom trusted himself to make a quotation, but facts and figures were grasped by him with such precision as to fit him for his professional work. He became an authority in what Carlyle calls the "Dismal Science," and a popular lecturer with the under-graduates.

Seven years after the accident, the blind, poor, unknown young man sat in the House of Commons as a member for Brighton. Fifteen years of distinguished service as a liberal member, wherein he displayed remarkable ability as a debater, caused Mr. Gladstone to appoint him Postmaster-General. Immediately he broke away from the traditions of officialism, by making it apparent that the nation did not exist to maintain the Postmaster-General, but that his office was created, and that he was put in it to serve the nation.

Prime ministers had regarded the postoffice as a source of revenue. Mr. Fawcett insisted that this large arm of the Government should do better work than increase the revenue; it should diffuse knowledge, expand trade, increase prosperity, encourage family correspondence, and facilitate thrift.

During the four years and a half that this blind man ran the great engine, he made it deliver parcels, receive the savings of the poor, insure the lives, and pay them annuities. He lowered the charges on telegrams—the telegraph being a Government monopoly in Great Britain—and greatly increased the use of postal orders.

He died in office, and the "common people," imitating the Queen and Mr. Gladstone, sent to Mrs. Fawcett written expressions of their great loss.

This is an age of biographies, but we know none more stimulating than the "Life of Henry Fawcett," by Leslie Stephen. If any boy is depressed by the fact that he is poor, unknown and without friends, let him read this narrative of one who, though weighted with blindness at the outset, made for himself a noble, because beneficent, career.—Youth's Companion.

TEMPERANCE.

THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

The Annual Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of the Nation will be held in Minneapolis, Minn., beginning on Friday, October 22, and continuing through the following Tuesday—five days in all. It will be preceded by public meetings on Sabbath, October 17, to be addressed by our chief speakers. The basis of membership as set forth in the constitution is as follows:

"The annual meeting shall be composed of the executive committee, State corresponding and recording secretaries and treasurers, the National superintendents of departments, the editor and publisher of our official organ, and chairmen of standing committees, National organizers, one delegate at large from each auxiliary State union, and one delegate for every five hundred paying members of auxiliary State unions. Territories and the District of Columbia to be represented on the same basis."

The local committee on entertainment is already at work with such energy and skill as predicts preparations of unexcelled excellence for the transportation and entertainment of delegates, and the convenience and attractiveness of the auditorium. Mrs. N. H. Winchell, No. 10 State street, is chairman of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union committee at Minneapolis, and Miss A. M. Henderson, 112 North Seventh street, Minneapolis, is superintendent of railroad rates. Mrs. H. A. Hobart, President of W. C. T. U. of Minnesota, assures of a hearty welcome from every White Ribboner of Minneapolis. While only members of the convention can be entertained, we hope that a large number of our friends may note the dates herein given, and decide to visit the beautiful "land of the sky tinted waters" at the time indicated. One of the most delightful characteristics of the Philadelphia convention was the unprecedentedly large number of visitors, and we hope for a repetition of that feature at Minneapolis; also that the visiting delegates will invite husbands and sons to accompany them, the convention being in many ways its own best witness, and its effect encouraging and educational. We also believe the presence and sympathy of our brothers will greatly cheer the hearts of all White Ribbon women. Let us come in the unity of the Spirit and the bond of peace.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, Pres.
MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Rec. Sec.

BARN BURNERS.

Hon. J. A. Harvey of Des Moines was the victim of the barn burners of the saloon, last week. The Methodist pastor at Solon suffered likewise and the barn of a prohibitionist at Augus, making three fires kindled by the saloon in a week. That is a good way to make sentiment, burn barns and blow up houses, and when that don't do, get up a mob; if that fails, kill the fanatic who dared oppose the saloon and ten more will rise up to take his place. There is nothing like it. The pro-slavery man tried that game way back in the forties. It will save many a prohibition rally if you do that. Actions are louder than words, especially those of the saloon which culminate in arson and murder.—Iowa Prohibitionist.

PROHIBITION FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT.

Let any man who scoffs at prohibition and its material good, go about Des Moines to-day—even this early day—and locate the former sites of saloons, sites then occupied by old shanties and rented by saloon-keepers who employed no clerks and no help, and who robbed laboring men and their families daily of their earnings, and then compare the same properties, their value to the city and to society with the large brick blocks erected on them in the last two seasons or since the prohibitory law went into effect, and inspect the business now being carried on on the same sites, the character of the business, the amount of capital invested to carry it on, adding so largely to the taxable wealth of the city, and the value of better paid employment, and then let him answer the question himself, which is best for the city, these brick blocks, and the new stores, and the large employment given by the new stores, or the old rotten shanties and the saloons in them that used to be?

Who in Des Moines would swap back to-day and give the fine new blocks on Walnut street alone, and the fine business now occupying them, mostly new ones to the city, to have back the license law and the shanties and saloons that went with them.

Saying nothing of the vast moral good prohibition has accomplished in Des Moines, of the men it has made sober, of the money it has saved to the families of drinking men, of the good the money thus saved has done to children by way of educating them and making them more comfortable, of the number of men it has restored to ways of industry and usefulness, or the men it has saved from crime, of the boys it has prevented from learning to drink, the material wrought before it has hardly started, is enough to commend it to the approval of all right-thinking people.—Iowa State Register.

ZEPF'S SALOON.—Upon the recommendation of State's Attorney Grinnell, the Chicago City Collector has issued a saloon license to Charles Zepf, the proprietor of Zepf's Hall, on West Lake street, corner of Des Plaines. Zepf's saloon on the first floor and hall in the third was a notorious place of resort for the anarchists during May last, as was Greif's Hall and saloon farther east on the same street.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE.—We believe the election of Glick to have been a great help to prohibition in this State. Up to that time we had "St. John tea," "seafoam," etc., in all the courts, and the effort to enforce prohibition was a howling farce in the hands of the Republican district judges of this State. Glick appointed as district judge John Martin, a Democrat who immediately took prohibition in hand. He asked a certain witness who had been fooling all a forenoon away in evading answers, if he knew the difference between beer and whisky. He said he did. "Now, sir," said Judge Martin, "I want you to tell the jury if it was whisky or beer you drank. And I want a straight answer. If you don't answer me as I indicate, I will fine and imprison you for contempt. Now sir, what was it you drank?"

"It was beer, sir," said the witness, and prohibition was won in the courts of this State.—Burlingame (Kans.) Independent.

No one can follow the current of discussion on the saloon question, or consider the attitudes of the churches toward it, or compute the number of total abstainers, or observe how rapidly the army of prohibitionists is growing without coming quickly to the conclusion that our nation has become already a formidable foe of the saloon. All the churches, without exception, have raised their voices against intemperance. The pulpit and the religious press thunder against it, a large part of the secular press denounce it, and even politicians are getting courage to attack it. Legislators seem to be among the last to take position against it. They yield to the demands of the temperance sentiment only on compulsion. It is only as they are threatened with defeat and political ostracism that they consent to pass laws affecting the interest of the saloons. The people are becoming terribly in earnest in this matter, and politicians and legislators who stand in the way of local option and prohibition will shortly be swept into political oblivion, if they refuse to see the portents of the coming storm. It is to be one of the glories of this nation to free itself from the devil of the saloon, and every citizen should feel it to be a privilege as well as a duty to help to inaugurate this second Declaration of Independence.—Independent.

It is said that the saloon kept by the United States at the Soldiers' Home, Dayton, Ohio, sells more than twenty barrels of beer a day. A thrifty sort of government we are living under now. These old veterans have a few pennies, and the government gathers them in—for beer. And we are told that it makes a handsome profit on the beer. It does not sell the amber beverage at cost; not exactly. It has an eye to business, and will make enough on beer, so it is alleged, to pay hospital expenses and clothe the veterans, and perhaps something more. Business is business, even in a charitable institution maintained by the United States. Gambrinus seems to be advancing toward coronation.—Western Christian Advocate.

One of the largest saloons in Raleigh, N. C., has been turned into a shoe manufactory, which establishment, it is stated, will give employment to as many men as all the saloons in the city. Another saloonist has converted his liquor business into a furniture factory. At Winston, N. C., it is declared that, since the saloons have been prohibited, the workmen are becoming prosperous and happy, their weekly earnings greatly increasing. Thus "prohibition prohibits" on the one hand and blesses on the other.

Harris Gunter, a well-known citizen of Montgomery, Ala., having been on a drunken spree, entered police headquarters in that city early Tuesday morning, attired only in his night clothes, and shot dead officer Montgomery. Gunter intended to kill Captain Martin, who had arrested him a few hours previously.

The City Council of Oakland, Cal., has passed an ordinance making the smoking of cigarettes, in any railway car or public square or street, by any minor under 16 years of age a misdemeanor.

The laws of Natal, South Africa, make the selling or giving of intoxicants to a native a punishable crime. The effect of such legislation has been so strikingly beneficial that many neighboring colonies have enacted laws to the same effect.

LITERATURE.

BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL MISCELLANIES.—By William H. Prescott. Pp., 284. Price, 65 cents. John B. Alden, publisher.

For readers who have not the leisure to read his valuable historical works, the "Miscellanies" of this brilliant American author have a peculiar attraction. The collection has been long published, but never in so popular a style as this volume, where cheapness and elegance are combined. The publisher calls it the "Ideal" edition. It is certainly handsome, durable and convenient, and will help greatly to popularize the works of one of our best authors.

MAGAZINES.

Two full-page portraits of Liszt, the great German pianist, lately deceased, appear in the Century for September. The balloon experiences of two venturesome citizens of Connecticut are given in two papers. Alfred E. Moore, the seronsut of the party, describes in a humorous vein his sensations and mishaps in mid air under the title, "Amateur Ballooning." His companion, John G. Doughty, recounts "The Balloon Experiences of a Timid Photographer." The papers are illustrated with the fruits of the latter's art, curious photographs of the earth, and of cloud effects from altitudes of a mile and and more, being here given in fac-simile reproductions. So far as known these are the first photographs taken in America from a balloon. Two illustrated articles of artistic and scientific interest are the late Minister to Persia, S. G. W. Benjamin's paper called, "A Glance at the Arts of Persia," and Mrs. Emily Nunn Whitman's account of "The Zoological Station at Naples." The war series is introduced by General Alfred Pleasonton's "Successes and Failures of Chancellorsville." General Howard writes of "Jackson's Attack upon the Eleventh Corps" in the same battle. Colonel Huntington W. Jackson describes "Sedgwick's Assault at Fredericksburg," with the effort of relieving the pressure upon Hooker, and Samuel P. Bates, the Union Commander's literary executor, gives Hooker's version of the campaign in the article "Chancellorsville Revisited by Hooker." Editorials in "Topics of the Time" discuss "Legislative Inefficiency," "Marriage, Divorce, and the Mormon Problem," and a plea for the good of the many. "The Forgotten Millions," against the rights of an individual.

In the Brooklyn Magazine an interesting glimpse is given of the poet John G. Saxe as he is in old age, confined to his room, forgotten by the world and almost alone. "Summer Days in Japan," "Beauty in Literature," by Mary E. Cardwill, "Reminiscences of Holland House," by Henry C. Wilson, are other articles of interest. Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's second letter from England describes "In and about London." There are some twenty or thirty more articles and poems given besides Beecher's sermons in England and Dr. Talmage's out of town sermons.

A paper on English Art and Artists, by Clara Erskine Clement, opens the September St. Nicholas and closes the series which has been the means of introducing so many beautiful pictures and entertaining anecdotes to the readers of the magazine. It is illustrated by the frontispiece and by pictures by Sir John Reynolds, Thomas Gainsborough, and others. In this installment of Horace E. Scudder's serial, George Wasnington once more retires to private life; and Henry Eckford explains some curious relations between letters and numbers in "Wonders of the Alphabet."

A report is circulated that Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland is soon to arrive in Chicago to take personal charge of Literary Life. Mr. Elder, publisher of that magazine, says she will have a private office, expressly fitted up for her in handsome style.

Vick's Magazine gives its patrons a good number with its "Pleasant Gossip" on flowers and fruits, "Foreign Notes" and correspondence department, which opens with a prize essay on asparagus.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Michigan Holiness Association holds its fall convention at Dutton, in Kent county, beginning on the 14th inst. Dutton is ten miles east of Grand Rapids.

—A young missionary from the West, a delegate to the American Home Mission Society, writing to his wife from Saratoga, reports that among the fashionable crowd he saw one young lady "whose costume was worth just one meeting-house, twenty-three Sabbath-school libraries and forty cottage organs!"

—The English Presbyterian mission has accepted the offer of Mr. Morton to open a new mission district in China, of which he will bear the entire cost for three years, including the sending out and the support of four missionaries. He also offers to build a hospital at Taiwanfoo.

—For six years after the missionaries entered Kioto, Japan, they could find no place in which to preach the Word of God except their own houses. Last year at the tenth anniversary of Kioto Training School the governor of the city, the governor of an adjoining province, and other officials sat upon the platform, interested spectators.

—Mr. Carpenter left the following sums to several societies for the promulgation of the Gospel: Chicago City Missionary Society, $2,000; American Congregational Union, $2,000; Illinois Home Missionary Society, $1,000; American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, $2,000; American Missionary Association, American Home Missionary Society, American Sunday-School Union and American and Foreign Christian Union $1,000 each.

—The Presbyterian Theological Seminary in this city opened Friday. The inaugural address was made in the chapel of the Seminary by Professor E. L. Curtis. The faculty this year will be the same as that last: Rev. LeRoy J. Halsey, D. D., LL D., Professor Emeritus of Church Government and the Sacrament; Rev. Thomas H. Skinner, D. D., Cyrus H. McCormick, Professor of Didactic and Polemic Theology; Rev. W. G. Craig, D. D., Professor of Biblical and Ecclesiastical History; Rev. D. C. Marquis, D. D., Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis; Rev. Herrick Johnson, D.D., Professor of Sacred Rhetoric and Pastoral Theology; Rev. E. L. Curtis, A. B., Associate Professor of Old Testament Literature and Exegesis; E. B. Warman, Instructor of Elocution. It is expected that about 125 students will attend the institution.

—The closing session of the German Evangelical Synod was held Thursday morning. The Board of Education was authorized to take steps toward enlarging the libraries of the various educational institutions. New rules and regulations were also adopted for the better government of the theological seminaries at Eden, Mo., and Elmhurst, Ill., and the Board af Education was empowered to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Professor C. Kursman, of the Eden Seminary. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President of the General Synod, Rev. J. Zimmerman, Burlington, Iowa, re-elected; Vice-President, Rev. J. Greunert, Wabash, Ind.; Secretary, Rev. C. Schild, Buffalo, re-elected; Treasurer, Rev. P. H. Goehl, St. Charles, Mo.

—E. H. Tamplin reports from Plano, Tex., in the Guide to Holiness, as a result of three weeks' services 90 conversions, among them some very wicked men.

—The revival interest in Bridgeton, Me., continues with unabated interest. On a late Sabbath forty-one children, who gave themselves to Christ, were enrolled in a class.

—Since the Moody and Sankey revival in London, many of the street organ grinders play and sing only religious tunes and hymns.

—A Methodist missionary in India reports the baptism of 453 persons within a fortnight, among the Thurus, an aboriginal tribe of the Gonds.

—Details of a remarkable religious movement in Central Africa are reported to the State Department by the United States Consul at Sierra Leone. An army composed of over 100,000 Mohammedan youth, and divided into three divisions, is operating throughout an extensive territory, under the command of a native named Samudu, who claims that he has been called of God to suppress paganism and open the roads to the coast. Though the movement is spreading the Mohmmedan faith in Africa, it is important in that it opens up to commerce a large and populous territory.

—Hohannes Karagozian, an Armenian, has lately returned to Turkey. He goes to labor under the auspices of the Foreign Society of the Disciple churches. His field of labor is in Cilicia, near Tarsus, the birthplace of the Apostle Paul.

—The Rev. W. Swanson, of the English Presbyterian Mission in China, in a recent speech in London, said that twenty-five years ago, when he went to China, there were only five small churches at the treaty ports. Now, in going from Canton to Shanghai and traveling twenty or twenty-five miles a day, he could sleep every night, with one or two exceptions, in a village having a Christian church.

—The Wesleyans of Great Britain report a net increase of 779 members during the past year. A discussion on the present state of Methodism in England brought out the fact that conversions were numerous, but the difficulty was that the church could not keep its members. The startling record was made that in the last year 27,135 persons "ceased to be members." The Wesleyans are facing the painful fact, and mean to change it if they can.

—The tradespeople of the city of Catania, Italy, have come to an agreement to close their premises on Sundays, except those dealing with the necessaries of life.

—According to the estimate of the Dean of Westminster, one-fifth of the whole population of England and Wales are in Sunday-schools—that is, there are 600,000 teachers and 5,200,000 scholars.

—A Methodist Fisherman's Mission has been incorporated in Cornwall, England. The boats carrying the flag of the mission will not fish on Sunday, and their crews will engage in mission work among their fellow-fishermen.

—The Russian bishops in Siberia have held a conference at Irkutsk, to consult upon energetic measures for the conversion of the heathen. They were of one mind that the greatest necessity was for a larger number of better qualified missionaries, that the new converts should be more carefully looked after, and that the spread of the Raskolniks would have to be opposed by hard work. They were also agreed that nothing hindered the people of the missions so much as the Russian officers, who allow themselves to be bribed by the heathen priests, and embezzle the funds which the Government appropriate in aid of the new converts.

—On the first week in July the mission ship Harmony set out for London on its twenty-sixth annual voyage to Labrador, laden with gifts for the Moravian missionaries and the native Christians.

—There is but one Protestant religious publication in New Mexico—a well conducted monthly Methodist paper of sixteen pages, half in English and half in Spanish, which has reached ten numbers.

—When the late W. S. Clark, formerly president of the Agricultural College at Amherst, went to Sappora, Japan, in 1876, he insisted that he could not teach morality except on a Christian basis. Prayers and Bible study were conducted in connection with his scientific lectures, and after a time a covenant of believers in Jesus was signed by thirty students, and a church was the result, which has been very prosperous, and entirely independent, ecclesiastically and financially.

—The Baptist Missionary Herald for June says: "It is just eighty-five years since the Directors of the Honorable the East India Company placed on solemn record, in a formal memorial to the British Parliament, 'their decided conviction,' after 'consideration and examination,' that 'the sending of Christian missionaries into our Eastern possessions is the maddest, most extravagant, most expensive, most unwarrantable project that was ever proposed by a lunatic enthusiast.' Only a few months ago the present Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, Sir Rivers Thompson, said: 'In my judgment, Christian missionaries have done more real and lasting good to the people of India than all other agencies combined. They have been the salt of the country and the true saviours of the empire.'"

NOTICES.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

The Michigan Christian Association will hold its semi-annual convention at South Locke, Ingham county, Michigan, commencing Tuesday evening, October 12, 1886, at 7 o'clock, in the Wesleyan church.

Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, and J. P. Stoddard, of Chicago, are expecting to be present. Let everybody keep this notice in mind, and prepare to attend. Trains will be met all day Tuesday. Parties wishing to be met later must write. Coming from the west, leave train at Williamston; from the east, leave train at Webberville. Conveyances in readiness at each place. Entertainment free.

H. A. DAY, Sec'y.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

The Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold its meeting in Opera Hall, Princeton, Bureau county, Tuesday evening, September 21st, at 7:30 o'clock, to continue through the 22nd and 23d. Addresses are expected from Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, Rev. Dr. Wm. Wishart, Rev. C. A. Bockman of Galesburg, Samuel E Holyoke of Galesburg, and others. Discussions of such interesting topics as are at present forced upon the public mind by the hostility of secret societies to social order and the personal independence of workingmen, will be ably maintained. Princeton is a beautiful town, distinguished for its culture and widely known as the home of the late Owen Lovejoy. As a result of his influence and that of his co laborers, it occupied an enviable position in the ranks of reform during the anti-slavery struggle. Entertainment will be provided for delegates from abroad. The central location and convenience of railway connection invite a large attendance of the friends of the Association. All churches and local associations in sympathy with the object of the meeting are earnestly requested to send delegates, and let every patriotic, Christian man and woman in the State make an effort to be present or to have a representative on the floor of the convention, that our counsels and prayers may be united for the enlightening of all our people upon the nature and evil tendency of the secret orders.

J. L. BARLOW, President.

H. L. KELLOGG, Secretary.

R. R. FARE TO THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION.—The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road will return delegates who pay full fare on that line at one-third fare to the point where the ticket was purchased, provided:

1. You get a certificate from the agent where you buy your ticket, that you have paid full fare.

2. You must obtain the signature of J. P. Stoddard to your certificate at the Convention, and present it so indorsed to the agent at Princeton from whom you will get your return ticket for one-third rate.

3. To secure this reduction there must be at least twenty-five tickets taken over the C. B. & Q. R. R.

The Illinois Central road will give the same rates returning from Mendota, where connection is made with the C. B. & Q. Certificates will be given at the convention to all paying full fare on the Central road, allowing them to buy tickets at one-third fare from Mendota to their homes.

Clergymen with permits are not included in the above arrangement.

LODGE NOTES.

The number of lodges in Germany is 372, with 43,306 members.

The Masonic bodies in Naples have formed themselves into a powerful committee to consider the best means to further cremation.

According to the Chaine d' Union, the Grand Orient of France has under its obedience 313 lodges, 35 chapters, 13 councils, in all 361, being a gain of 9 during the year.

It has been discovered that there are in Englewood, near this city, three Know-Nothing lodges of the principles of years ago: In Englewood proper there are two lodges, and in Normal Park one, the total membership being about three hundred. The residents and politicians living north of Fifty-fifth street are disturbed and incensed over the matter, and one noted politician has offered $100 for the names of the members of the organization.

The A. O. U. W. adopted a new Ritual at its recent Supreme Lodge session.

A movement is on foot to consolidate the Patriarchal Circle with the Order of Heptasophs, or Seven Wise Men.

Che Lueng was buried lately in New York City with the full honors of the Chinese Lodge. He is said to have been the first Chinese Mason who ever died in that city.

The Odd-fellows lodges in Germany and Switzerland do not attend the funeral of a deceased brother in regalia, fearing from public prejudice that it would injure them in their business.

The 13th anniversary of the founding of the K. of H. was fittingly celebrated at its birth-place, Louisville, Ky., on June 30. The attendance was large, there being 51 lodges, or about 4,000 Knights in line.

The Chicago Inter Ocean states: The Improved Order of Red Men had its origin in Philadelphia in the Revolutionary war. In 1813 it was reorganized under the above name at Fort Mifflin, when Philadelphia was menaced by the British. Its object is the relief of its members under all circumstances where aid is required. No oaths are administered, and the work of the lodge only is secret. Its written and unwritten work is based upon the signs and symbols of the Indian in his savage state.

Concerning the new Patriarchs Militant degree of Odd-fellowship, the New Age says: "The degree is based upon the principle of universal justice. The degree is intended to be purely military and for purposes of display. The unit of the organization of the degree is the canton, consisting of at least fifteen members. Four cantons constitute a battalion; a regiment consists of three battalions; three regiments a brigade; three brigades a division; the army embraces the entire rank and file. The Grand Sire of the Order is the ex-officio Commander-in-Chief. When the membership of a canton reaches 102 the body is termed a grand canton."

The Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., holds its next session in Boston, Mass., commencing Monday, Sept. 20. This is planned to be one of the greatest gatherings of Odd-fellows ever held. No pains or expense are being spared to make this meeting the grandest affair ever known to any fraternity, they having already raised over $100,000 with which to entertain their guests. The Patriarchs Militant, the military branch of the order, will for the first time participate, and it is expected that tens of thousands will be in line of parade. Cantons from all parts of the country have entered for the competitive drill, at which time large and magnificent prizes will be awarded to the amount of over $5,000.

Because of the refusal of seventy-five local assemblies of the Knights of Labor at New York to contribute toward the Home Club's building fund, they were suspended by Master Workman Maguire. Many more assemblies will be suspended. Are capitalists more unreasoning despots than the lodge?

One of the features of the meeting of Good Templars in Richmond, Va., last May was a congratulatory telegram from Frances E. Willard on behalf of the National W. C. T. U.

The progress of the Good Templars throughout the world, as given at the Richmond meeting, is thus noted: Number of members 274,719, a loss of nearly 6,000 since last report; number of lodges 6,336: number of juvenile Templars 34,207, and of Templars Bands of Hope, 17,030. John B. Finch was re-elected "Right Worthy Grand Templar," etc., and Uriah Copp, who holds some lodge office in Illinois, was continued as Treasurer.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 27 to Sept. 4 inclusive:

H Preston, Rev G Priest, I Meeker, H Hodges, W D Lowrey, W McCracken, W W Bradford, H W Fowler, R W Chapman, J T Williams, J H Leiper, H D Whitcomb, S E Miller, C C Mathews, J P Rogers, L M Rhodes, Rev H R McKae, V Geil, J C McFeeter, Rev C C Felts, R C Wylie, J Cardwell, C Fisher, J R Denison, L A Livingood. J Kirkpatrick, Miss C Wiggins, Rev E Beck.

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

This is the fund from which the colored ministers of the South have received the Cynosure. It seems very desirable to continue this fund, and hence the special appeal in the Cynosure of Aug. 12th.

The following named persons have contributed to this fund this year, 1886, and such names will be added from week to week as donate to it in the future:

Jno Dorcas, J F Icke, Mrs A E Tyler, H Holbrook, Wm Mathews, O Hansen, Mrs S B Skeel, Mrs A F Rider, F W Capwell, A Hamilton, Mrs C H Richardson, N Martin, R Johnson, J Aylsworth, Mrs T S Couch, I Bancroft, S A Pratt, J Rutley, A Hamilton, H A Fischer, Mrs N E Kellogg, Mrs A B Kellogg, T Kingsnarth, M Phillips; Susannah G Reed 60 cts.; Lemuel Lester, $10.00; W O Percival, $2.00, Prof E Whipple and A G Laird, each, $1.50; Prof H A Fischer, $4;L Woodruff, $5.

Not reported before: L M Sampson, $1.80; H Wykhuysen, $5.00; P Bacon, 60 cents; H Preston, $5 00; Rev J P Rogers, 50 cts.: J Brandt, 30 cts.; J A Austin, $1.00: Mrs S H Nutting, $1.50; D Hyde, $1.00; Mrs M W Bingham, $5.00; L E Lincoln, $1.20.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS
OF
MORGAN MONUMENT,
20 Cents each.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

D. NEEDHAM'S SONS
116 and 118 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
Red Clover Blossoms
and Fluid and Solid Extracts of the Blossoms. BEST BLOOD PURIFIER known. Cures Cancer, Catarrh, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Whooping Cough, Constipation, Piles, etc. Send for circular. Mention the "Cynosure."

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.

Twelve instructors. More than two hundred students. Conservatory of music. The best advantages for drawing and painting. German and French by natural method. College courses revised and strengthened. No tobacco, liquor, or secret societies. Catalogues Mailed Free.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Suggestive Outline
BIBLE STUDIES
AND
BIBLE READINGS.
By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,
Author (with S. R. Riggs) of
Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL
With Eighteen Military Diagrams
As Adopted and Promulgated by the
SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE
OF THE
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,
At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.
WITH THE UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,
ALSO AN
Historical Sketch and Introduction
By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.
25 cents each.
For Sale by the National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.
BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.
PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ALDEN'S CYCLOPEDIA
OF Universal Literature

The following are some of the authors whose Biographies, with illustrative specimens of their writings, are included in the pages of VOLUME IV., ready Sept. 1.

Cable, George W.	Campan, Madame.	Carlyle, Jane Welsh.	Chambers, R. and W.
Cædmon.	Campbell, Alexander.	Carlyle, Thomas.	Chauning, Wm. Ellery.
Cæsar.	Campbell, Helen S.	Carnegie, Andrew.	Chapin, Edwin H.
Calderon.	Campbell, Lord John.	Cary, Alice.	Chateaubriand.
Calhoun, John C.	Campbell, Thomas.	Cary, Phœbe.	Chatterton, Thomas.
Callimachus.	Canning, George.	Castellar, Emilio.	Chaucer, Geoffrey.
Callistratus.	Capel, Monsignor.	Catlin, George.	Cheever, Geo. B.
Calveriey, Charles S.	Carey, Henry C.	Catullus.	Cherbuliez, Victor.
Calvert, George Henry.	Carey, Matthew.	Caxton, William.	Chesebro, Caroline.
Calvin, John.	Carlen, Emilia Flygare.	Cervantes.	Chesterfield, Earl of.
Camden, William.	Carletou, Will.	Chadbourne, Paul A.	Child, Lydia Maria.
Camerou, Veruon Lovett.	Carleton, William.	Chadwick, John W.	Choate, Rufus.
Camoens, Luis de.	Carlisle, Earl of	Chalmers, Thomas.	Chrysostom.

ALDEN'S CYCLOPEDIA of UNIVERSAL LITERATURE is publishing in parts of 160 pages each, paper covers (exchangeable for bound vols)., and in vols. of about 500 pages, bound in fine cloth, gilt tops. It will be completed, probably, in about 15 vols. Price, per Part, 15 cts.; per Vol., 60 cts., post-paid. Parts I. to XII., and Vols. I. to IV. now ready.

Great Offer. Confident that the attractions and merits of the work are its best possible commendation I will, for 35 cents, send a sample volume, post-paid, on condition that within three days after receipt you will either remit the remainder of the price, or return the book, in which case your money will be refunded.

Strong Words of Praise.

"The crowning work of this publisher's extensive list. It is the scheme of the projector to present in a convenient form and at a moderate cost, a complete survey of the written literature of all ages and all peoples. It is gotten up in a style that would make it suitable to the handsomest of libraries, while in price no one need say he cannot afford to buy it. It is one of the most remarkable schemes in the annals of publishing, and I am sure men of moderate means in the reading world will not be slow to appreciate it."—The Keynote, Philadelphia.

"In these volumes we have one of the best, and certainly the cheapest, work of the kind we have ever seen. It contains biographical notices, criticisms, and specimens of the writings of every eminent author, who has by his writings made a distinctive mark in the history of human culture and progress. In the case of foreign authors, the translations which have best caught the spirit of the original have been chosen. The literature of our day holds a very prominent place. So far as it has gone the collection is very full and complete, the two first volumes containing notices of about one hundred and eighty authors, with nearly as many specimens of their works. The book is in a convenient form, printed in large, clear, readable type, neatly bound."—The Week, Toronto.

"A work which bids fair to be of essential service to the scholar and professional man."—Southern Churchman, Richmond, Va.

"The work deserves generous patronage both for its literary and biogaphical value and the low price at which such substantial volumes are furnished."—Gospel Banner, Augusta, Me.

"This is an admirable project, and the lovers of good literature will thank Mr. Alden for giving them so excellent a cyclopedia of all that is good in the whole range of literature."—Christian World, Dayton, Ohio.

"The excellence of the work, as promised in the first volume, is fully carried out."—Oregonian, Portland, Oregon.

"This is an invaluable series of books, cheap in price, but not in make-up and appearance."—Christian Advocate, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"It is an admirable plan to enable any one to obtain, within a moderate course of reading, a general acquaintance with the best literature of the world."—Lutheran Observer, Phila.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Choice Books, 132 pages, 4 cents; Condensed Catalogue, free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Address,

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York.

The Alden Book Co.: Clark and Adams Sts., Chicago; 420 Yonge St., Toronto.

HOME HINTS.

Five little children, while playing about their homes at Twenty-eighth and Farrell streets, in Chicago, strayed away and entered a vacant lot where they picked and ate of a weed called stramonium, which resembles a prickly burr or thistle. A few moments later all of the little ones were lying upon the ground apparently lifeless, their faces the color of ashes. The parents of the babies were notified and the little sufferers were removed to their homes. Drs. Richardson and Steurnagle were hastly summoned, and by the use of the stomach pump and emetics resuscitated all of the children but one, whose case is pronounced hopeless. The parents of the child are almost heart-broken over the sad occurrence.

To remove unpleasant odors burnt coffee is the best disinfectant, and it is very agreeable. For water closets, night chairs, chloride of lime and even common lime should be used. This is effectual in cleansing utensils from bad odors. Or charcoal powder and camphor dissolved; the articles well rinsed with the composition.

To remove dandruff in the head, wash with a lotion prepared with two drachms borax dissolved in a pint of camphor water. Use once or twice a week.

Apples and potatoes should never be kept in the same cellar, or, if this is unavoidable, the potatoes should be kept in the warmest part of the cellar, and the barrels of apples, well headed up, near the windows, where, on days when the air outside is only a few degrees above freezing, they can be treated to a cool breeze from the open windows, while at the same time the atmosphere in the part of the cellar where the potatoes are kept does not fall below forty degrees.

An excellent plan to preserve knives from rust, when not in use, is to rub them over with some tallow, or any perfectly pure fat, mixed with powdered black lead. If the knives are required to be packed away for any length of time, they should be wrapped in paraffin paper, which can easily be made by melting a paraffin candle into a liquid state, and then just drawing some tissue paper through it, and letting it dry. When a piece of this prepared paper has been closely folded round each knife, it should be held to the fire and just sufficiently softened to make it adhere. By this means an air and waterproof case is formed, and the knives will remain secure from damp for any length of time.

A SCIENTIST ON CHILDREN'S DRESSES.

Richard A. Proctor is welcomed as a scientific protester against the wicked way of dressing children. Here are his own words: "In their case, as in the case of grown folks, the sense of heat gives the best information as to what is really desirable in the way of clothing. But grown people are apt to forget the experiences of their childhood, and to decide what is best for children from their own ideas as to what ought to be best. A child complains of cold or heat sooner than a grown person; but much less attention is paid to the complaints of children on such matters than to our own slightest suggestions of personal discomfort. And children are much less carefully guarded against heat or cold than grown people guard themselves. The idea seems to be that children can stand any changes of temperature; though, oddly enough, children's own idea (which is really not far from the truth) that they can stand anything in the way of rich and indigestible eating, is not much considered by older persons. Now when a child shows by its words or actions that it suffers sooner from changes of temperature than grown people do, it in reality expresses its sense of an important truth. A child cools or warms more quickly than a man, for precisely the same reason that a small cinder cools more quickly than a large one or that a small fire burns more quickly than a large furnace." Our author proceeds to demonstrate this by comparing the size and surface of the child and man. He further adds: "Yet we are too apt to clothe children with a total disregard to the circumstances that they require to be protected much more carefully than their elders against rapid changes of temperature. Apart from all questions of propriety, a man would not care even on a fairly warm spring day to go about with his arms and legs bare for any length of time; for he would feel uncomfortably cool: children suffer twice as much on such a day from undue exposure to the air: yet many foolish folk think nothing of exposing the delicate limbs of children to the cold winter without protection. They imagine that the numbness and insensibility which really indicate the mischievous effects of the cold and may permanently affect the child's constitution, are signs of hardening; and because only the hardier survive this cruel treatment they imagine that those hardy survivors owe the strength which enabled them to survive, to the harsh exposures by which that strength was dangerously taxed and perhaps in measure sapped." If parents and those who have the care of children would only heed these friendly admonitions, a stronger generation would be produced. The little people have inviolable rights which must not be infringed as they often are.—Midland.

THE HISTORY of ANTI-SLAVERY
IN THE
State and Nation.
BY REV. AUSTIN WILLEY.

514 pp, 12 mo. With NINETEEN PORTRAITS.

Price, Postpaid, $2.00.

Mr. Willey gives the best history of the times just before the present generation, which is precisely the history least apt to be known. He gives us the surface of the sea under the billows which swept off three million pair of fetters from our national decks. His book shows more accurate insight into the causes which produced the rebellion, and gives more clearly the working of those causes, than any other writer. He shows more clearly the moral force of the ballot and necessity of a new party to carry a fundamental reform than any one who has treated of it. We advise every young man and every reader of the Cynosure to obtain and read that history.—Pres. J. Blanchard. Address,

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY

Gives the experience and advice of the most successful Bible students of the day. Shows how to interpret parables, prophecy and the Scriptures generally; gives the meaning of the peculiar symbols of color, size, number and substance; contains an analysis showing the character of contents of every book in the Bible, its central truths and practical lessons, the errors refuted, promises and prophecies fulfilled, its connection with other parts of the Scriptures, and many useful suggestions; intended for those who are thirsting for a deeper acquaintance with the sacred volume, and desire the plain pointed truth and in cheap form. Printed on good paper, strong cloth covers, 50 cents per copy.

TRACTS on Holiness, Tobacco, Pride, Dress, Secret Societies, Backsliding, Justification, Repentance, Dancing, Prohibition, Church Entertainments, and others. Either of these can be had at 25 cents per hundred, or an assorted package of all for 30 cents.

LEAFLETS for letters and general distribution. An assortment of pointed, short, red-hot truths on vital themes, 10 cents per packet.

MOTTO NOTE PAPER, on which is printed a variety of striking and useful mottoes. 30 cents per block of sixty sheets.

TRACT ENVELOPES, assorted packet, 10 cents. We can take American bills or postage stamps, but not silver. If bills are sent, register the letter. Address, REV. A. SIMS.
Uxbridge, Ontario.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform
Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,
The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.
Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

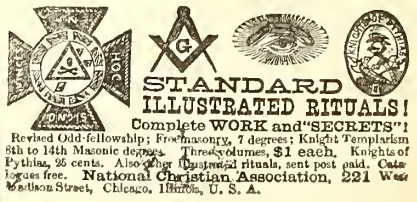
Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.



Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

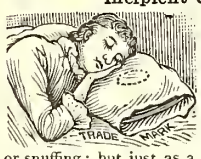
FARM NOTES.

GOOD SEED-CORN.

It is a poor plan to take seed-corn from the bin, or even save it at husking time. It ought to be selected just when the kernels are hardening, about the first of September. Then, in passing through the field, one can see where two ears are set upon one stalk, which should be of medium hight, leafy and erect, with ears well covered with husks, and well tipped out. Such ears, upon such stalks, particularly the best ears on two eared stalks, should have a string tied around them so that at husking they will be thrown out unhusked. This is no uncommon practice among corn growers who take pride in their own seed-corn. When it comes to husking there ought to be four times as many ears thrown out as will be sufficient for seed, and they will probably be a fine looking lot, with few exceptions. If the variety is a favorite, or a really good one, there will very likely be a sale for these ears at a good price for seed, after the best shaped ones have been taken for home use. Which are the best? First: The medium sized ones, because the large ones are monstrosities in a small way, and not so likely to reproduce themselves as to produce a diversity of ears, some large and some small. Second: The even-rowed ones, because irregularities in the rows indicate an unfixed type, and a tendency to depart from the type. An eight-rowed corn should always be eight-rowed, and eight-rowed throughout the ear; so with the ten, the twelve, sixteen or twenty-rowed ears. Ten at the but, and eight at the tip, shows a wrong tendency, as already said, in matter of type; besides, it shows an inclination to form big buts. Third: The buts must be small, easy to break off from the stem and husks, yet not weak and flabby, for those are as hard to break off as a leather thong. I have been into fields of corn to husk and had my hands blistered in a short time on account of the size and toughness of the buts of the ears, while in other corn-fields the work of husking was a real pleasure, at least for a short time. Fourth: The cob must be small, straight and stiff. The size of the cob is easily known by the length of the kernel. When well-ripened corn dries on the ear, the cob shrinks more than the grain. Hence it holds the kernels firmly set, and the whole ear feels as stiff as an oak pin.—American Agriculturist.

Without good seed-corn a good stand cannot be obtained. Replanting, though done ever so carefully, amounts to but little; therefore the importance of perfect seed. Fall is the best time to select seed-corn. It should be dried at once. If thoroughly dried, little danger need be feared from freezing during winter. Many think that drying with smoke is beneficial, the smoke being distasteful to insects, etc., which often injure the seed after planting. It will be found preferable to select the ears before cutting up. Should this not be done, the next best time is when husking. The poorest time of all is in the spring, just before planting.—Sel.

MOULTING HENS.



Every hen that begins to moult in August should be saved as one of the winter layers. It takes three months for a hen to moult, and a little calculation shows that if a hen begins to moult in August she will have finished by November, and be ready for winter work. If they do not begin to moult until September or October they will not don their new plumage until winter sets in, and as the process of moulting is very trying to a hen, she comes out of the ordeal in a debilitated condition, and does not begin to lay until spring, as all her energies must be reserved for passing safely through the winter. For that reason we wish to suggest to our readers not to kill off or sell the hens because they stop laying this month, and begin to shed their feathers, as in this way they will simply deprive themselves of their best hens for winter. During the moulting season the hens require some care from the poultry-man. They should have a tonic as an invigorator, and nothing is better for this purpose than the Douglass mixture, composed of two gallons of water, one pound copperas, and a gill of sulphuric acid, adding a teaspoonful to each quart of the drinking water. The food should be salted so as to season it, and in dry weather a teaspoonful of sulphur may be added to the soft food for twenty hens. Do not feed much corn, but give oats and wheat in preference, with meat three times a week, and a liberal allowance of grass. The hens must have a dry poultry house, as dampness is very injurious to them when they are moulting.—Ex.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS; — OR — The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

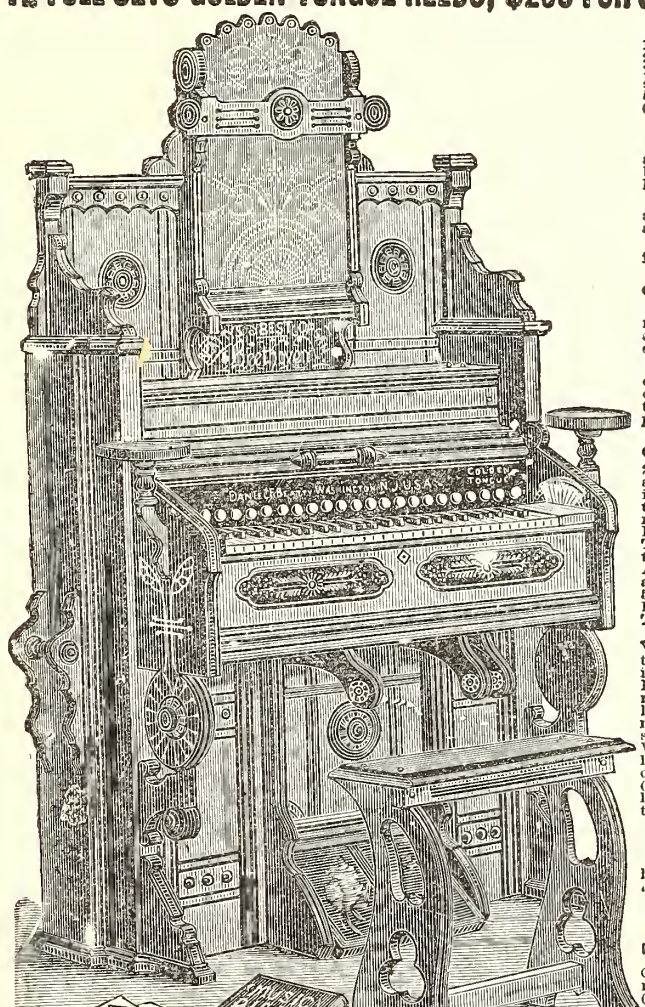
"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.



A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

PARLOR ORGANS { ONE YEAR'S TEST TRIAL. Money Refunded, with interest at six per cent., if not just as represented. Organ shipped same day order is received. } ONLY $88.00

It is by far the sweetest toned and most powerful Organ yet made. The case is manufactured from the choicest of seasoned and kiln-dried Black Walnut, built neat, so as not to absorb dirt or dust. It is manufactured on a new and scientific plan, so as to render sound of reeds PIPE-LIKE in tone. The Pipe Tube Cells enable this Organ to imitate a Church Pipe Organ that would cost from $500 to $1,000. The Scotch BAGPIPE, ALPINE HORN, CHIME OF SWISS BELLS, EUROPEAN FLAGEOLET, ORCHESTRA, BRASS BAND, OLE BULL VIOLIN, MUSIC BOX, the HUMAN VOICE, ANGELIC HARP, NIGHT HORN, CATHEDRAL PIPE ORGAN, are all exactly imitated in "Beatty's Best." Only $88; providing order is given and remittance made within 25 days after date of this newspaper. If ordered within 13 days, $80.00, or if order is given and remittance is made within 9 days, only $75.00 cash will buy this magnificent $200.00 Parlor Organ, including a very handsome Bench (or stool), Book and Music. The reason why this limited time price is given is to induce you to order as early as possible, thus introducing this sweet-toned instrument immediately. ☞ IF YOU CANNOT BUY NOW, WRITE, GIVING YOUR REASONS WHY, AS I WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU ANYWAY.

12 FULL SETS GOLDEN TONGUE REEDS, $200 FOR ONLY $88.00. 29-Stops. Warranted 6 Years.

"BEATTY'S BEST" BEETHOVEN PARLOR ORGANS, latest style, No. 20,000. Height, 72 inches; length, 46 inches; depth, 24 inches; Upright Pianoforte Style Case

TWELVE FULL SETS GOLDEN TONGUE REEDS, as follows:

1st Set—Charming SAXAPHONE Reeds.
2d Set—Impressive FRENCH HORN Reeds.
3d Set—Entrancing PICCOLO Reeds.
4th Set—Symphonic VIOLINA Reeds.
5th Set—Powerful SUB-BASS Reeds.
6th Set—Sweet VOIX CELESTE Reeds.
7th Set—Rich and Mellow CELLO Reeds.
8th Set—Pleasing DULCIANA Reeds.
9th Set—Noble DIAPASON Reeds.
10th Set—Brilliant CLARIONET Reeds.
11th Set—ANGELIC HARP Reeds.
12th Set—Weird NIGHT HORN Reeds.

READ THE DESCRIPTION OF STOP WORK. 29 IN ALL.

1—CLARIONET.—A set of reeds that exactly imitates the musical instrument that bears its name. It is one of the most beautiful sets of reeds used in "BEATTY'S BEST"

2—VOIX CELESTE.—The sweet, pure, and exalted tones produced from this Stop are beyond description.

3—CELLO.—A rich and melodious tone is produced.

4—FRENCH HORN.—Imitates a full ORCHESTRA and BRASS BAND.

5—PICCOLO.—Variety of music which makes the Piccolo the most difficult and expensive Stop to build. Producing an effect similar to a MILITARY BAND.

6—SAXAPHONE.—The beautiful effect of this Stop is "Beatty's Favorite." This set of reeds is so pleasing that many have written to me saying: "It alone is worth the price of the Organ."

7—DIAPASON.—Draws a full set of Golden Tongue Reeds.

8—POWERFUL BOX SUB-BASS.—New and original. Its THUNDERING TONES are without a parallel. Imitating exactly the PEDAL BASS of the famous Freiberg (Germany) Pipe Organ.

9—DULCIANA.—A full set of Paris Reeds is drawn by this Stop.

10—VOX JUBILANTE.—When used in conjunction with Stops Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 peals forth most delightful music.

11. VOX HUMANA. Tremulant, which, by the aid of a FAN WHEEL, imitates the HUMAN VOICE.

12—OCTAVE COUPLER.—Doubles the power of the Organ. Couples all octaves. Oratorio effects produced.

13—Melodia. 14. Clarabella. 15. Bourdon. 16. Viol Di Gamba. 17. Viola Dolce. 18. Grand Expressione. 19. Harp Æolian. 20. Echo. 21. Violina. 22. Orchestral Forte. 23. Grand Organ Stop. 24. Right Knee Stop. 25. Automatic Valve Stop. 26. Mezzo Knee Stop. 27. Maestoso. 28. Percussion, open patented Combination Swell.

29. AEROSTATIC EXPRESSION Compass or Regulator, showing at a glance the amount of pressure upon the instrument; same as a compass to the ship so is this new improvement to the Organ. The last seventeen [17] Stops are operated in direct conjunction with above twelve [12], bringing forth, at command of the performer, most charming music, with beautiful orchestral effect, from a mere whisper to a grand burst of harmony. Its MELODIOUS TONES, while using the full Organ must be heard to be appreciated. To which is added the RIGHT and LEFT Grand Organ Knee Swells, so as to enable the performer to throw on or off full power without removing hands from keyboard. Also a Third Knee Swell (patented) gives the Organ a resonant tone not obtained in any other make. Lamp Stands, Pocket for Music, Treble (3) Upright Bellows, Steel Springs, 6-Octave Keyboard, BEATTY'S PATENT STOP ACTION and SOUNDING BOARDS. Regular Catalogue Price, without Bench, (or Stool), Book and Music, ONLY $200.00. This Organ is worth, to any lover of sweet music, several times its price. $200.00.

If you ever intend to buy an Organ you should order this instead of some other make. Why? Because this instrument contains all the music to be found in an ordinary Organ that is sold at retail for $200.00. Besides, it has many varieties of sweet combinations and imitations of several musical and pipe instruments only to be obtained in "BEATTY'S BEST." Now ready for 1884. It is fully secured by United States patents. Why, then, not order the best? If you are not entirely satisfied after one year's use you are at perfect liberty to return the Organ, and I hereby positively agree to promptly refund you your money, with interest at 6 per cent. If you don't want to buy just now, why not come and see me, anyway? Look at the Organ, hear it played, and see for yourself. YOU ARE WELCOME. FREE COACH meets you at train. Don't fail to visit my factory, as it is by far the Largest Organ Works in Existence. ☞ Shipments of Beatty's Organs during the past three months were as follows: September, 1,600; October, 1,800; November, (2 Holidays), 1,600. TOTAL, 5,000. This is as many Organs shipped as any two of the largest Organ Builders in America combined, and it is beyond a doubt positive proof that the public are buying Beatty's Organs in preference to other makes.

$125.00 PROFIT, if Ordered within Nine Days.

In order to enable me to introduce this Organ at once, I beg to make the following liberal Limited Time Reduction:

"BEATTY'S BEST" PARLOR ORGANS, PRICE $200
45 Per Cent (Agents' Discount)..... $90
20 Per Cent. (General Ageucy)..... 22
112

☞ If ordered within 25 Days only..... $88
If ordered within 13 days, only..... 80
Or, If ordered within 9 days, only $75 buys this Magnificent Parlor Organ, including a handsome Bench (or Stool), Book and Music.

☞ You will observe in making you the above offer I have sacrified the discount usually allowed to Traveling and General Agencies, and have allowed a special limited reduction that must come out of my pocket (manufacturer's profit) to you if ordered within 13 or 9 days. I have made this special reduction so as to induce you to order immediately, thus introducing this Magnificent New $200 Parlor Organ in your vicinity at once. Remember if ordered within 9 days after date of this Newspaper, only $75; within 13 days, $80; within 25 days, $88. After that date the price will positively be $200 in a vicinity after first Organ has been introduced. Cut this advertisement out, as it will not appear again. To secure this great offer remit at once by Post Office Money Order, Bank Draft, Registered Letter, or by Express prepaid, or if convenient, call and select the instrument yourself. If you don't want an Organ, order as an investment anyway, thus realizing $125 profit, if ordered within 9 days. Bear in mind only one will be sold in any one vicinity, at above limited time price. You can readily dispose of this Organ at $200 cash, and make a handsome profit. I am sure that there must be some one in your vicinity who wants an Organ.

☞ Shipped without delay for BIRTHDAY, HOLIDAY, (WOODEN, TIN, SILVER, GOLDEN), or WEDDING PRESENTS. This Organ will positively be boxed and shipped the same day the order is received for those who order and state in their letter that the Organ is intended for any of the above Presents. Order immediately, and if I fail to ship Organ same day order is received, I hereby bind myself to forfeit to you $500.00 in Greenbacks. It positively will be shipped same day order is received. ORDER NOW.

Address or call upon the Manufacturer, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Nearly the entire business portion of South Royalton, Vt., and a number of dwellings were destroyed Tuesday night by a most destructive fire. The loss will amount to $160,000, if not more.

Special telegrams from all parts of Minnesota and Dakota show there was a quite general frost Monday night of last week and the night before. Garden truck and late corn were damaged to some extent, but not very extensively. The grain is out of danger. Reports from parts of Illinois, Indiana and other States show that some damage was done to garden crops and grain.

A terrible explosion occurred in the Fair Lawn colliery, near Scranton, Penn., which resulted in the death of five men.

George Kratel, a butcher living near Cleveland, Ohio, attempted to take an apple from the throat of a cow and was bitten for his pains. Last week he died from the effects of the bite, blood poisoning having set in directly after he was hurt.

Near Summer Hill, Penn., Monday, Watson Ashe, H. George, and Joseph Horner were killed by a train. They stepped from one track to escape an approaching train and failed to see another engine, which mowed them down.

The Revs. F. C. and J. A. Weckel, Evangelical Lutheran clergymen, received probably fatal injuries by being run down by a train near Erie, Penn., Thursday.

Earthquake shocks were experienced at Grass Valley and Mercea, Cal., and at Reno, Nev., Thursday night.

The Queen of England Friday sent a dispatch to President Cleveland expressing sympathy with the sufferers by the earthquakes.

Parrotsville, Cockrell county, Tenn., is terribly afflicted by a disease for which the physicians can find no name nor remedy. Twenty seven deaths have occurred within three days.

Seven men were burned to death in a shanty near Sonoestown, Penn., about midnight Thursday. They were Hungarians and railroad employes.

At New Philadelphia, Ohio, the Oddfellows dropped a candidate when half initiated Tuesday night. The earthquake was of more importance to all concerned. He should now drop the lodge.

The proposed Anti-Monopoly-Labor-Greenback National Convention was in session last week at the English Hotel, Indianapolis, in a back room. Not over twenty-five people were reported present, and no likelihood of there being any commotion.

The earthquake shock of Tuesday evening last extended over more territory than any one previously reported in the United States. Little damage was done, but the shock was felt in the East, South and West as far as the Mississippi river and the lakes. The center of greatest disturbance was about Charlestown, the first shock being most severe, followed by others during the same night. A large proportion of the buildings were either demolished, or so injured as to be untenable. The killed and injured were many, but definite figures have not been given. Early reports put the former at from 30 to 60. Another severe shock was felt at Charlestown at 11:01 Friday night, demolishing two buildings and causing the wildest consternation. Three additional deaths were reported, and the names of the dozen persons seriously wounded are given. Again Sunday night another dreaded shock came running in from the sea, renewing the wild scenes of consternation in the doomed city which seems tottering on its foundations. The earthquake at Summerville, S. C., caused fissures in the earth, from which a fluid of sulphurous smell exudes. Not a half dozen houses in the place are habitable, and the terror stricken people are leaving for other points.

FOREIGN.

Owing to reports that Russia intends to establish a protectorate over Corea, Chinese war ships have been dispatched to Corean waters, and Chinese soldiers have entered Seoul in disguise. Rioting is in progress in the latter city.

At a meeting of Gladstonian members of Parliament at London, Tuesday, an aggressive policy in favor of home rule was decided upon.

In the House of Commons, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated that during the riots in Belfast one head constable had been killed, five officers and six members of the constabulary had been seriously wounded, and that altogether 322 policemen had been more or less injured in the various encounters with the rioters.

The Mexican Foreign Minister has caused to be issued throughout Mexico a circular bearing on the arrests of foreigners, giving instructions to officials as to the mode of procedure, and warning its judiciary to comply strictly with the provisions of the law.

Rumors prevail at Paris that Premier Freycinet will remove from his cabinet General Boulanger and two other radicals.

Two amendments to the Queen's speech, condemning the annexation of Burmah, were defeated Monday night in the British Commons.

The cholera has broken out in Torre de l'Annunzista, an Italian city of 15,000 inhabitants. The deaths Thursday in the infected districts of Italy numbered forty-one.

The area of the earthquake disturbance in Greece, August 28, was very wide. At least six towns were entirely destroyed and a score of others partially destroyed. On the main land much damage was done, but there was little loss of life. On the islands it is estimated that 600 persons were killed and 1,000 seriously injured. The actual shocks average twelve seconds in duration. People everywhere are camping out in the fields. The Greek Cabinet is sitting at Athens almost continuously, considering relief measures.

BUSINESS.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.—The hard times tell on the circulation of all papers. People become too poor to subscribe for papers, and are forced to stop them after they have taken them for years. Old friends pass away, and there is need of a constant accession of subscribers to keep a paper in a healthy condition. We must remind our friends that we depend largely on their efforts to increase our circulation. Thousands, doubtless, would be glad to take this paper if they knew about it; but who is to bring it to their notice? You can reach some of them, and they will put more confidence in your words than they would in ours, because they know you better. Can you not devote a little time to this work and report to us the result?

SPECIMEN NUMBERS.—For ten cents we will send the Christian Cynosure for five weeks to any address, thus giving them a chance to examine the paper and subscribe if they think best. Could you make better use of a dollar of the Lord's money than to send to ten of your friends five copies of the Cynosure?

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

still remains at $2.00 per year, but the N. C. A. at its annual meeting continued the offer for another year of the special rate of one dollar and fifty cents per year in advance.

One month	$ .15	One year	$1 50
Two months	.25	*Two years	3.00
Four months	.50	*Three years	4 50
Six months	.75	*Four years	6.00
Eight months	1.00	*Five years	7.50

*To any one who will renew their subscription for two years twenty cents worth of any of our publications will be sent, or forty cents worth for three years, or sixty cents worth for four years, or eighty cents worth for five years. The renewal of your subscription for several years at a time will benefit you some, but the cause more. Try it!

PLEASE BE PROMPT in paying for your papers. It costs the reform and its friends many dollars every year to send notices that subscriptions have expired, that arrears are due. Five cents is not a large sum by itself, but when it is multiplied by hundreds and thousands, the amount lost to the cause is realized to be great. Can you not inaugurate a reform in this matter, and renew a little before your subscription expires, and if in arrears pay up at once? Would it not be a good thing to do?

EACH OF OUR SUBCRIBERS who sends a new subscription, or purchases a book, or circulates tracts, or contributes to the funds for carrying on the work is a co-worker, not only with us, but we trust also with the Lord Jesus Christ. There is room for many such co-workers. Five thousand new subscribers to the Cynosure could be furnished with but a small additional cost above our present expenses, because N. C. A. work is established, the machinery is in operation, the help is employed, and hence a much greater amount of work could be done if it could be furnished. Though times are hard and business dull God has provided that they that trust in the Lord and do good shall dwell in the land and shall be fed. We hope then that this work will not be allowed to lag because of hard times, but will be carried forward with diligence and zeal.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD

FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS FOR $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossine. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

Mental Gymnastics;

OR

Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject.—INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FOR SALE. A large two-story frame house at Wheaton, one block from College. Ten rooms elegantly papered and painted. Stone foundation and good large cellar. Corner lot 66x132, or larger if desired. Price, $1,750. Terms to suit. Nicely located for any one wishing to take boarders or roomers. Address, W. F. BAKER, Wheaton, Ill.

WANTED—LADY Active and intelligent, to represent in her own locality an old firm. References required. Permanent position and good salary. GAY & BROS., 14 Barclay St., N.Y.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

AGENTS Wanted! Rider's Improved Pillow Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is, anyhow.

E. W. RIDER, RACINE, WIS.

SHORTHAND Writing thoroughly taught by mail or personally. Situations procured all pupils when competent Send for circular. W. C. CHAFFEE, Oswego, N. Y.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mf'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

GRATEFUL--COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœpathic Chemists, London, Eng.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled, 3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVIII., No. 52. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1886. WHOLE No. 855.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
Irish Brotherhoods and Home Rule..... 8
The Anti-saloon Republicans..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Secret Society Fruit..... 1
The Cart Rope... 2
On Dress Reform..... 2
SELECTIONS:
Who is Responsible for the Anarchists?..... 2
Carlyle's Prophecy concerning America..... 3
SamJones to theKnights of Labor..... 3
Press Comment 4
THE SECRET EMPIRE:
Chinese Freemasonry.... 3
More Lodge Work in Memphis..... 9
Prohibition Unshackled by Lodgery..... 9
REFORM NEWS:
From the General Agent; Cordial Greeting in Tennessee; Ohio Odd-fellows may Rise for an Explanation; The Iowa State Meeting..... 4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
The National Committee of the American Party; ASouthern Letter; Lodge Victories; Pith and Point 5,6
BIBLE LESSON..... 6
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE N. C. A... 7
AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
LITERATURE..... 12
RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
BUSINESS..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
HOME HINTS..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS 13

The Board of Trustees of Chicago University met early last week and decided to give up the hopeless struggle for the preservation of their building and property. Stephen A. Douglas, before his death in 1861, had given a valuable tract of land and a considerable sum for the founding of the institution. In the progrees of years the University accumulated a heavy debt, which has grown by interest to the vast sum of $300,000. This debt is held by the Mutual Life Insurance Company of Maine which has for several years been endeavoring to secure a settlement. The Board on its part has tried to meet the liberal offers for settlement, but in vain. The resolution, therefore, to suspend the educational work of the institution, was unanimously passed. It is believed that under a new and entirely undenominational management the institution can either be revived or another established. But the old building is likely to fall into the hands of the Catholics as Archbishop Feehan has his eye upon it for a school of priests.

An attempt was made lately to organize the cooks, servants and waiters of Philadelphia into a lodge of Knights of Labor. Part of the work was entrusted to a Roman Catholic, the librarian of another lodge of the same order. In his speech he referred to the recent decision of the Catholic hierarchy against the order, and said that while he was and always had been a good member of that church, he was "not afraid of the Holy Father at Rome," and considered it his duty to keep wife and children alive first. A tall woman objected to such remarks and walked out, saying she would not stay and be insulted. Part of the crowd followed as a flock does the bell-wether. Knights of Labor began to protest and curse the speaker, and the meeting broke up in a general scold, in which the unfortunate Catholic who dared to brave the Pope was not a little abused. Thanks to Cardinal Tascherau.

While in connection with the general government the increase of expenditure for armies and material of war has been successfully opposed in some of the States these expenses are considerable and constantly increasing. Doubtless the influence of the various lodges which maintain a military degree, as the Knight Templar Freemasons, the Patriarchs Militant of the Odd-fellows, the Patriarchal Circle, the Uniform Rank of Knights of Pythias, the military degree of the United Workmen, and the anarchist Lehr and Wehr Verein,——these lodges with their military organization and drill, arms and regalia have greatly fostered the military spirit and excited emulation in the State militia. In one instance, at least, the lodge has secured a position on the militia force. The cost of the militia in New York has for years been great, out of all proportion with the benefit to the public as police force. In Illinois the same evil is growing. Connecticut pays yearly $100,000 for her militia, while the inclination of the young men for army habits and army vices is indicated in some of the ironical signs mounted on their tents, which read: "Four Drunkards," "Sucker's Home," "Widows' Home," "Dead Beats," "Drunkard's Resort," "Inebriate Asylum—Keep Out," "Home of the Soiled Doves," "Bummer's Home," "Out on a Drunk."

The dispatches from China give accounts of the massacre of Roman Catholics in several provinces in the southern and western parts of the empire. In Sechuen the outbreak is attributed to the imprudence of missionaries. There are few if any Protestants in that province, but the Catholics must be numerous, and the well-known character of many of the Jesuit missionaries and their frequent intermeddling with affairs outside their mission may account for the uprising. The aggravations of the French in the Tonquin affair have not been without their effect in the southern part of China. There are occasional reports also which make it evident that there is in other parts of the empire a reflex of our own bad conduct in allowing the Chinese mobs and boycotting in the West. The Chinese government will hardly pay any attention to our indignities shown to the peasant class, but those who return and their friends show at times a keen resentment, which may visit our Protestent missionaries at an unexpected moment with an unhappy revenge.

The Pennsylvania Prohibition convention which nominated Hon. Charles S. Wolfe for governor was not so emphatic in its religious sentiment as have been some of the similar conventions in other States. Its platform, however, closes with an acknowledgment of thanks to God for his divine aid and implores its continuance; one plank of the platform demands a national divorce law drawn in conformity to the law of God on the subject, and the Sabbath day and its all-important national privileges and obligations is thus remembered: "That we believe in the Christian Sabbath as an indispensable safeguard of our cherished institutions, justified as well by nature and reason as by religious precept. We demand the strict enforcements of all laws against its violation, and hold in abhorrence as inimical to the best interests of the people the so-called 'Continental Sunday;' that all corporations, public and private enterprises, and chief among them the drink traffic, engaged in secularizing the day, are violators of wholesome laws, and robbers of both health and rest from their dependent employes." Of the 565 members of the State convention adopting this platform 371 were farmers, mechanics and laborers, 139 ministers of the Gospel and 55 lawyers. This is a happy reversal of the figures of ordinary party meetings, which show the lawyers to be in the majority, the farmers few, and the ministers none. It is a prophecy of a better future for our Republic when the lawyers and Freemasons shall neither make all our laws nor fill all our offices. What better representation of the people can workingmen ask for than this at Harrisburg? And what better can they do politically than to join with an Americanized Prohibition party, which smites the two pillars of distress and iniquity, Liquor and Lodge.

Russia is again victor, and the Bulgarians have lost their Prince. Alexander formally abdicated last Wednesday, his manifesto stating that the Czar had given assurances that the "independence, liberty and rights of our country should remain intact." His fall was assured the week before when Bismarck sent him word that he had better leave. He is now in Darmstadt, and will ultimately find a home in England, whose ruling family as well as the government strongly sympathize with his misfortune. The intrigues of Russia have at last made the Berlin treaty almost nugatory, and it would no doubt have been better if the great congress had never met to give an opportunity for the brilliant but ill-advised diplomacy of Beaconsfield. Now that all is over men are free to point out the mistakes of Prince Alexander. He should not have returned at the call of the people, some say, but have left Russia to make the best of her muddle of a revolution with no one to back it. He should never, say others, have written his abject letter to the Czar, and given that autocrat and despot occasion for his brutal reply. He should stand by his people and fight to the bitter end, is the counsel of many. But let Bulgaria and the world be thankful that he is willing to sacrifice personal ambition and the affection of the people for his person rather than plunge Europe into war. It is truly exasperating that a people struggling for independence should be so hedged about, but the fact that Bulgaria did not win her self-government by her own arms nor choose her prince at the first are circumstances that must not be forgotten.

SECRET SOCIETY FRUIT.

BY CAPTAIN ALBERT D. WOOD.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—For many years it seemed to me that your society was seriously mistaken in opposing the secret temperance orders as well as the thousand old and new patents in secrecy and peacock titles. Believing that most of the new fraternal societies were the dupes of self-glorifiers and salary-seekers, it appeared to me that many good men were in the older orders for the good they hoped to do.

The impression is strong with me still, that the Lord called up the successive temperance societies, including the Sons and Good Templars, to do a work which the churches neglected or refused to do. But their mission from above ends when they become fossilized or corrupt, and refuse to obey the daily command of the Master to "Go forward." He that called and used them, has a better to replace them when their usefulness has ended.

Years ago I tartly criticized the anti-lodge utterances of your society, directed against temperance lodges, and was thankful for the privilege of being one of those who helped to build up the I. O. G. T. of California to be the strongest, most active and enterprising, and most financially able jurisdiction of the world, as it was a few years ago. But during the last four years my stock of information as to the possible effects of secret societies has grown amazingly. Quite a number of the inner and hidden degrees have been conferred upon me, without any action on my part, and I know not where it is going to stop; how much of a load there is to come.

It has been shown to me that a Good Templar, without ever rendering any beneficial service to the cause, beyond that of a well-paid book-keeper, and with no moral or mental qualities beyond those which distinguished Tweed and Tammany bosses, gifted in the game of swap and trade,—may combine and organize a following of the baser class of five secret societies, and mass them in his own service in any of those societies, when a chance occurs of seizing upon a salaried office, or getting to be the Supreme Mikado or Hoodoo with a contingent fund to be pulled.

Of course such an adventurer finds his easiest conquests in a temperance society, whose members are mostly honest, simple people, easily imposed upon by crafty smoothies, and very apt to be beguiled and captured on the wrong side. And among them, too, as elsewhere, are some who will take the wicked side from choice.

With such people and with a judicious use of the well-drilled "band of brothers" imported from the other sublime and mystic orders, such a man can secure absolute, irresponsible dominion over a State temperance order. He can use all its funds as he chooses; he can fill every elective office and every committee with his obedient, willing vassals of the smallest brain and lowest social standing, who will endorse everything he says and does, and stand by each other, through thick and thin, till the rotten ship goes down.

WHEATON COLLEGE LIBRARY
Wheaton, Illinois

Such a boss can drive out of the order most of its talent, worth, and respectability; can persecute, defame, and wear out virtuous, useful Christian men and women workers; destroy five-sixths of the temperance press of the State, and utterly pervert the uses and purposes of a great society. He can appoint and hire and direct what lecturers he chooses, even noted tobacco soaks and men of smirched morals, and send them forth loaded up to defame honest people and preach the entire sainthood of their boss, the apostate Hebrew, who sacrifices himself in the cause for the pittance of $3,000 a year and perquisites out of the Lord's treasury, contributed to promote the interests of temperance.

He can falsify the records, and prostitute them to purposes of wicked slander; disobey the commands and rulings of the Grand Lodge; run his lecturers in such a manner that one of his principal aids denounced it one year in open Grand Lodge as "a fraud," and the next year as "a system of unmitigated scoundrelism." He can do all this and be whitewashed and endorsed by the Grand Lodge, and finally lustily applauded by his long and carefully-drilled force of claquers.

He can have laid on the table instantly, any motion of inquiry or amendment, and have its mover tried for slander, and, if he says so, expelled. This is not strange when in all elections about 120 bogus, unrepresentative votes are cast by officers elected by him, and deputies appointed by him and his agents.

By means of his sweet fraternal relations with members of all these orders in the press, pulpit, etc., he can publish the most fulsome adulations of himself, written by himself, and can close the principal papers against any correction or denial of the grossest falsehoods. Not only in his own State, but in other distant States, as far away as Canada, he can slander and defame honest people in a secret society temperance paper and close it against reply.

And thus a Grand Lodge of a secret order, once principally composed of earnest, zealous and Christian temperance workers, may become so pruned and grafted with base material, that charges of malice and falsehood may be set up by him against worthy and unimpeachable men—charges which those who made them and all who heard them knew to be false and utterly wicked—charges formulated by a committee of hireling railroad Republican politicians, headed by an arch infidel scoffer who, although a Good Templar, was then, and is now, owner of a large vineyard of wine grapes that are made into wine or brandy, or both. This man has been the guardian of the Rpublican interests and the interests of the boss in the Grand Lodge for years, and with his oily tongue and hypocritical professions can help any measure, however bad, through the Grand Lodge.

Under such management and with a packed body pledged to obey orders, the boss could have any charges made and sustained, even had they been for horse-stealing or forgery. And the proceedings of that Grand Lodge and its journal were made to serve almost the sole purpose of carrying a villainous and baseless slander against honest and active unpaid advocates of temperance who, from their youth up, had never once been untrue to the cause or the workers. And to spread the slander 1,000 extra copies were printed to carry the news "to the ministers, etc. of the State."

A man so capable at electioneering and ring manipulation, though bare of other talent, can be immensely useful to the Supreme Head of this sacred secret order. His influence can capture the latter and induce him to capture an appeal made to the Supreme Lodge, and to decide it himself, which he had no right to do, and could only do under law manufactured for the purpose on the spot. Also to get the monstrous injustice and falsehood gerrymandered through that body, and the journals of its proceedings used to scatter over the temperance world a most shameful slander, raised by a crowd of infidel politicians in Good Templar guise, and manipulated from first to last by a party whose deeds are so justly anathematized throughout the State that the order has in three years gone down, it is believed, to about half its former numbers, although efforts are being made to conceal its losses. And the climax of this unholy conspiracy appears in a late decision of an appeal which declares that the 120 official and unrepresentative votes cast by the appointed deputies of the ring boss all these years, are illegal and void.

Now, if all this is the result of the workings of secret societies, you have been right in denouncing them, and I have been wofully mistaken in trying to sustain one of them, and to purify it of the rotten, unprincipled and infidel usurpers, who have wrought its ruin.

Los Angeles, Cal.

THE CART-ROPE.

BY PETER PLOWSHARE.

In Isaiah 5th chapter and 18th verse we read: "Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin, as it were, with a cart-rope." Here we have a very good Scriptural quotation, pointing directly at the practices of Freemasonry, which has in one of its obligations this binding link: "I will obey all regular signs and summonses given, handed, sent or thrown to me by the hand of a brother Fellow Craft Mason, or from the body of a just and lawfully constituted lodge of such, provided that it be within the length of my cable-tow."

When we look at the obligations of Masonry, and know the nature of men, we readily understand how God can have occasion to send woe upon those who become the ready victims of these oaths. Even if the majority were good men who became Masons, if these men recognized the obligations taken as being binding upon them, they must perform wrong acts at times in defense of the evil deeds of their brothers in the lodge, who would certainly be found astray occasionally. These obligations, too, in their very wording, pre-suppose evil on the part of those who bind themselves with the terrible oaths included. It is expected that evil will follow the obligations, and to protect the evil-doer from justice these promises are made that each will defend the others.

Now, to prove that these obligations do positively open the way for bold and open-handed iniquity, we have only to look at history. Notice the court-trials where a party arraigned was a Mason, and Masons constitute the majority of the jury. Go into the domain of politics and see that Masonic oaths cover up the evils of office-holders. Even the church is far from being free from the diabolical influence of lodge-oaths. There is to be read in the history of the church in the years just past (and passing) instances of men having been driven from usefulness, and from their church homes for opposing the "works of darkness," and others who were guilty of unchristian conduct placed in places of pay and honor in the church. Is not this enough for God to pronounce woe upon?

The "woe" of prophecy will come. "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted SHALL BE ROOTED UP," said our blessed Lord, (Matt. 15: 13), and be assured that God never did "evil that good might come;" hence, never instituted the accursed system of secretism which is endeavoring to swallow church and nation; that a little benevolent (?) work might be done to those who paid well for it. (See Matt. 5:46.)

The land is being aroused, both in the church and out, and while the lodge is swelling its ranks, it is being done with that kind of material which will build a very poor institution to endure the pressure of good society made against the system of darkness. Secretism will soon fall of its own weight. Good men are coming out, while the bad ones are entering, and thousands of the noble young men of America will never enter the secret folds of darkness.

ON DRESS REFORM.

BY REV. LEVI KELLY.

The dress question must not be left out while we make war on other popular sins. It requires but little courage now to fight intemperance in drink, but who is willing among the many watchmen on Zion's walls to sound the alarm on this evil. The preacher who attempts to fight this goddess of fashion will arouse an opposition that will buzz like a hornet's nest around his ears.

I will call the attention of the reader to a few texts written by the greatest of saints and apostles of our Lord. If we will not hear them, pray who would we hear? It seems that my heart cannot contain the grief I feel when I see daily the Word of God disregarded even by those whom we love and cherish. It alarms me, yea, it staggers me, to hear them say, "Oh, I can afford it;" or, "God does not care what I wear." Let us not talk thus; God does care. He wants us to be humble. Men judge of us as they see us. We cannot be guiltless and disobey God. We must not take the standard of fashion as of God. If we measure ourselves by others we will soon do as they do. Bible religion is opposed to the god of this world. It cannot condescend to seek worldly polish instead of meekness of heart and life.

You will certainly not be offended if I give you what the Bible says; and now, my dear reader, do not pass it by lightly, especially if you are found condemned. Lay it to heart and conform to it on the spot.

1 Tim. 2: 9: "In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold or pearls or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works."

1 Peter 3: 3: "Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold or putting on of apparel; but that hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

But how many are there in the churches, women in particular, who apologize over and over again for breaking these apostolic injunctions! How much better it would be to comply instead! You may find it, Christian sister, a very heavy cross to do so, but pray what are we called to do? Yea, you will find many of your own sex which will mock you for being peculiar. "Fear none of these things."

We would not have much reason of complaining if the very sanctuary were not invaded by this dictatorial goddess. We confess before God that we are deeply mortified at seeing the finest and most costly display in the house of God on the Christian Sabbath. Yea, it has come to pass that the poor working men and women must dress fashionably to be respected, as if moral worth could be woven in the warp and woof of woolen or silk. In order to do this the laborer is taxed beyond endurance. Often the store bills must be unpaid in order to get certain articles for display at church.

I am convinced that many a man is a drunkard to-day, because his wife clamors for articles of dress which he is not able to get. When he comes home his peace is disturbed because certain outfits are demanded. Rather than to be at home under the lash he goes to the saloons.

To my mind it is clear that domestic troubles fill the groggeries. Much of this comes in the way we indicated. Why cannot the W. C. T. U. hit a plan that will rescue from the slavery of fashion the women who are cursed with this very expensive luxury?

You can trace much of the social evil to this source. Women who do not earn enough often put themselves under a more deplorable curse to procure money in order to display before the public. Prostitution will never be less as long as fashion dictates what women must wear, and business men compel them to work for much less than can sustain them respectably.

A few years since I heard a very firm temperance lecture by a woman whose husband was a drunkard, and separated from her because he found it out of his power to support his family, and no wonder! She was dressed in satin and gold in a very foolish way. He was intemperate in drink; but she was intemperate in dress, as much so as he was in drink. Pride is as clearly condemned in God's Word as drunkenness. The money spent for personal display would infuse life into every reform if put to such purposes. It is a sad and calamitous state of things that so many preachers fear to lay hold on this soul and body destroying evil. The corsets are sending as many to destruction as drink, says a distinguished Presbyterian divine of New York city.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE ANARCHISTS?

The recent trials of anarchists in Milwaukee and in Chicago, and of boycotters in New York, have revealed the existence in our midst of a large body of unnaturalized foreigners, who labor not to build up but to destroy the Republic. The undesirable Poles whom Bismarck is expelling from Posen, because they are incapable of being Germanized, are coming here it appears, and are justifying Bismarck's policy by demonstrating that they are also incapable of being Americanized. Bohemians and Hungarians whom Austria has for generations oppressed and taxed within an inch of their lives, and who have been reduced to a state of brutality inconceivable to those who have not seen them, are flocking in great numbers to our shores, not for the purpose of "benefiting by our free institutions," or "sharing the blessings of liberty," as we fondly imagined, but rather in order to avail themselves of the supposed laxity of our laws to prey upon an ill-protected society. I remember some years ago, having a long conversation on an emigrant train with a German shoemaker, who stated this in so many words. The smallness of our army and navy, he said, and the weakness of our whole repressive machinery (which he was kind enough to regard as a great virtue in our institutions), removed all obstacles to the carrying out of the will of the people. And the will of the people, he was credibly informed, "was to make hash of the capitalists," to do away with all government, and to give to each man an equal share in the fruits of the earth and an equal title to happiness.

That the enormous, oppressive military system in Europe has bred sentiments of this kind in the breasts of a vast number of people, recent events in Germany, France and Belgium have sufficiently demonstrated; and as the inconveniences and dangers of their propaganda at home increase, the apostles of anarchy naturally turn their attention to this country as a more congenial field for their labors. Thus, we, who have reduced our own army even below our actual necessities, reap the fruits of European repression and tyranny. In a sense Bismarck legislates for us, too; and his huge Krupp guns reverberate on our side of the ocean. Austria's neglect to educate, but unfailing regularity in overtaxing, her Bohemian and Hungarian subjects, causes bloodshed and destruction of property in Pennsylvania, Illinois and Wisconsin, and England's heartless policy toward Ireland is the indirect cause of municipal corruption in New York, Cincinnati and Chicago. Thus it is seen that the civilized world is a great and complex organism, every part of which suffers more or less acutely from the presence of disease in every other part.

I have, of recent years, endeavored on a necessarily restricted scale, to ascertain the effect of American life upon the various immigrated nationalities; and I have incidentally obtained some curious information. The most important item, for my present purpose, is the fact that the emigration agents are responsible for more anarchists than the editors of the Freiheit and the Arbeiter-Zeitung. At least thirty recent immigrants, out of thrice the number interrogated, have told me variations of the same tale of disappointment and despair, all due to the misrepresentations of unscrupulous agents for railroad and steamboat companies. I have myself repeatedly witnessed the sensation which the arrival of these plausible Munchausens created in the quiet rural communities of Norway, Sweden and Germany. Crowds of credulous and simple-minded people stand spell-bound, listening to their daring fictions, and not only the discontented and unsuccessful, but many who make a fair living where they are, pull up stakes, sooner or later, and cross the Atlantic. Arriving as they do with exaggerated expectations, they make the most disheartening experiences, and end by cursing, not their own credulity, but the land which they hold responsible for their misfortunes. It takes very little to persuade them that everything is wrong here, and they readily lend ear to wild vaporings of so-called labor reformers who attribute their ill-luck, not to any fault of their own, but to the inquity of capitalists and the perverse organization of society.

It is time that the fiction were exploded that America offers a comfortable living to every man who is willing to work. Whether she does or not depends largely upon the quality of the man, and the quality of work. Skilled labor is, as a rule, better paid here than it is in Europe, but with unskilled labor the market is glutted; the supply exceeds the demand. The man who arrives here with two empty hands and no particular previous training is, therefore, by no means sure of ameliorating his condition, even if he be never so willing to apply his crude muscle to any job that may offer itself. Wherever he turns, he will find that a union of some sort monopolizes the market; and if he underbids the union, or ventures to work outside of it, he is denominated "a scab," and risks serious injury to life and limb. Even if he join the union, he does not thereby make sure of a chance to earn a living. He may be ordered on strike before he has laid by a dollar, in order to avenge, not his own, but somebody's else grievance; or he may be commanded to commit illegal acts which will sooner or later land him in jail. In fact, his path is so beset with dangers and difficulties that it finally becomes a sort of relief to him to give up the game, to curse the society which, after having held out inducements to allure him away from his old home, has, as far as he can learn, no place for him outside of the penitentiary. Let him, after a series of such experiences, come in contact with Most, Citizen, Schwab, or their disciples, and it is not wonderful that he listens to them. The frantic talk, which to prosperous people appears so ridiculous, seems not at all ridiculous to him. Society had assumed so hostile an attitude toward him that he obeys but a natural impulse in returning the hostility with interest.

It will thus be seen that it is not alone the idle and vicious immigrant who is in danger of becoming an anarchist. Hunger is a great revolutionist, and hunger does not, in the present state of the labor market, necessarily imply unwillingness to work. The friends of Most who were arrested and sentenced with him for inciting to bloodshed, were hard-working Germans, fathers of families (one having eleven or twelve children), who did not practice in private life the predatory doctrines which in public they recommended. Their theoretical ferocity (which they would undoubtedly have translated into practice, if it could have been done with impunity), was apparently induced by disappointments and privations. And thousands, like them, are converted to the same detestable doctrines, not, as the newspapers seem to think, by innate depravity, but by the discrepancy between what they expected and what they have achieved—by their inability to cope with the hard conditions of life which the immigrant laborer in this country has to encounter.—Hjalmar H. Boyesen, in the Congregationalist.

CARLYLE'S PROPHECY CONCERNING AMERICA.

Sure enough, America is a great, and in many respects, a blessed and hopeful phenomenon. Sure enough, these hardy millions of Anglo Saxon men prove themselves worthy of their genealogy; and, with the ax and plow and hammer, if not yet with any much finer kind of implements, are triumphantly clearing out wide spaces, seedfields for the sustenance and refuge of mankind, arenas for the future history of the world; doing, in their day and generation, a cheering thing under the sun; but as to a model republic, or a model anything, the wise among themselves know too well that there is nothing to be said. . . .

Cease to brag to me of America and its model institutions and constitutions. To men in their sleep there is nothing granted in this world; nothing, or as good as nothing, to men that sit idly caucusing and ballot-boxing on the graves of their heroic ancestors, saying "It is well; it is well!" Corn and bacon are granted; not a very sublime boon, on such conditions; a boon, moreover, which on such conditions cannot last. No; America, too, will have to strain its energies in quite other fashion than this, to crack its sinews, and all but break its heart, as the rest of us have had to do, in thousand-fold wrestle with the pythons and mud-demons before it can become a habitation for the gods.

America's battle is yet to fight, and we, sorrowful, though nothing doubting, will wish her strength for it. New spiritual pythons, plenty of them, enormous megatherions, as ugly as were ever born of mud, loom huge and hideous out of the twilight future on America; and she will have her own agony and her own victory, but on other terms than she is yet quite aware of. Hitherto she but plows and hammers, in a very successful manner; hitherto, in spite of her "roast goose with apple-sauce," she is not much. "Roast goose and apple-sauce for the poorest workingman;" well, surely, that is something, thanks to your respect for the street constable and to your continents of fertile waste land; but that, even if it could continue, is by no means enough; that is not even an installment toward what will be required of you. My friend, brag not yet of our American cousins! Their quantity of cotton, dollars, industry and resources I believe to be almost unspeakable, but I can by no means worship the like of these.—Latter-Day Pamphlet, 1850.

SAM JONES TO THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Now, understand me. This morning Dr. Brooks had something to say about the labor question. I want to say to you right along here: Here's this labor question in a nutshell. If you will give me the money that the Knights of Labor spend for whisky, I will feed their families the year round. You say, what do you mean? When I was in Baltimore preaching a few weeks ago, the laboring men, 18,000 strong, Knights of Labor, marched through the streets of Baltimore in solid phalanx. Some of these poor fellows I really felt sorry for. They had their toes out of their shoes; they had on coats with their elbows out. Some of them didn't have cap nor hat. They were marching along, 18,000 strong, and I said, "Who are those fellows on horseback marshaling those laboring men?" They said, "Every man on those horses is a liquor dealer or a bar-keeper." I saw the poor laboring men, some bare-footed, walking along, and the liquor dealers on horseback marshaling the whole crowd. Then I said: "If you are going to be marshaled by these liquor men, I wouldn't wipe my feet on you. I wouldn't. Here you have got communism, and you have got anarchism enough to burn it up. And I want to tell you, you can't run communism without mean liquor behind it. You can't do it. Look here. In Ft. Worth, Texas, when that riot broke out down there among those laboring men, the mayor of that town—the most sensible man in the whole strike—issued his proclamation closing up every bar-room in the town. They shut up those bar-rooms, and in twenty-four hours all the riot was over and everything got perfectly quiet. Did you notice that?—Sel.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

CHINESE FREEMASONRY.

THE ORDER OF CHEE KUNG TONG.

The Alta California of San Francisco publishes the following account of Chinese Masonry. The narrator begins by explaining that the Chinese order is a different thing from the Apple-Tree Tavern lodge with its admixture of Hebrew history, Egyptian mystery and Chaldean paganism and cruelty, and continues:

"You must disabuse your mind on that score, if such is your opinion. To be sure it is a society for mutual benefit and protection, but its original and present purpose as well, is entirely revolutionary. The birth of the order occurred soon after the Mongolians invaded China and established the present Ming dynasty, which is nearly four hundred years old. The society was composed of the old Chinese nobles and their followers who were opposed to the new Emperor. Their numbers were naturally small at first, but the years added to their strength. Each member educated his children to a belief in the doctrines of the order, until now their numbers include nearly one-third of the entire population of the Empire. There are also about thirty thousand in the United States. The influence of the society is naturally very great. From its inception, four centuries ago, the society has instigated innumerable rebellions, and all the members naturally imbibed a strong martial spirit. As a consequence the order has developed many famous soldiers, and among them the great General Loy Yee, who at the age of eighty years was the Commander-in-Chief of all the forces of the Empire. His appointment to this position was, of course, a measure adopted by the Emperor to conciliate the society to which he belonged. Many of China's foreign ministers also owe their positions to this policy. Being statesmen of great ability they naturally become a power to be feared by the government, and are accordingly appointed as ambassadors to some foreign court in order to get them out of the way. Chin Lin Pan, the first Minister to the United States, was one of these, and if the truth were known, I would not be surprised if every minister since was a Chinese Mason, or a member of the Chee Kung Tong, as the society is called. You will gain some idea of the strength of this organization when I inform you that the great Tai Ping rebellion of '57 was brought about by its leaders and fought by its soldiers. The famous armies known as the Black Flags and Yellow Flags, which performed such bloody work in Tonquin during the recent war with France, were also composed entirely of the members of the Chee Kung Tong and led by its officers. The headquarters of the order are in the district of Quong Ton, or Canton, as it is known to us. The queue worn today by the Chinese people is a symbol of their bondage to the Mongolian Emperor, and is a constant reminder to them of their subjection.

"The rites of the society? Yes, I know something of them, though there are so many and in such infinite variety that my knowledge of them is necessarily limited. There are thirty-three oaths to be taken, and regular cast-iron ones, too, before an applicant can become a fully constituted member of the society. He can, however, withdraw before taking the last oath, provided he promises eternal secrecy about what he had previously seen and heard of the ritual. If this agreement should be violated, or a member of the order should in any way disgrace himself in the eyes of his brothers, punishment, swift and terrible, is meted out to him. In China it is death, but in this country that is impossible, though they go through all the formula of an execution without the final culmination. The accused is always allowed a trial, but is seldom acquitted. The wise men and patriarchs of the order assemble together upon that occasion in some one of their joss-houses, and there the accused and accusers are brought before them. The latter step forward first, and prostrating themselves upon the floor at the feet of the oldest of the wise men, they present their charges. The accused then prostrates himself and places the foot of the wise men upon his neck as a sign of submission. After this he tells his version of the story, still flat upon his stomach on the floor. When this is over the head man announces his decision in a long and impressive speech, which is interrupted at the end of every sentence by the others prostrating themselves and uttering words of assent. The judge next claps his hands and in comes the executioner with a long sword and a wooden bowl, the latter being for the purpose of catching the blood that is not spilled. Going up to the condemned man, who is still lying face downward upon the floor, the executioner raises him to his knees and bares his neck for the fatal blow. Three times the sword is raised and brought down with terrific force until within half an inch of the kneeling man's neck, where it stops. This concludes the ceremony, but the victim's punishment is not yet over, if he happens to be so fortunate as to live in this country. Great placards announcing his disgrace are posted on all the dead walls throughout the Chinese quarter, and as soon as the news becomes known the guilty man is completely ostracised by his old associates, and in fact by all the society. He can get no work from his own people, and if he goes into business for himself he will get no customers. His lot then is hard, indeed, and according to our views his punishment is greater than his crime. Of the three who have been so served in the United States one committed suicide, another is insane and the third is a fugitive murderer, who took to a life of crime after his disgrace, and went from bad to worse. Where he is now no one knows.

PRESS COMMENT.

"The Union State Grand Tabernacle of the Imperial Order of Galilean Fishermen." This latter, it appears, is a society of negroes in Norfolk, Va. We are inclined to endorse the remark of a contemporary, to the effect that it is impossible to believe that people with such a noisy name could catch any fish.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

Frederick Douglas is said to be worth $300,000, and in many of our cities there are colored men who were once slaves, but now own handsome properties and do a large business. It cannot be said, of course, that the negro population of the country is making rapid progress; it has, indeed, taken as a whole, hardly made a good mental beginning. Unfortunately, too, the man who does best is usually treated with suspicion, his advancement being called "pride," which makes him feel "above the niggers."—United Presbyterian.

Herrick Johnson, D. D., of Chicago, has been "supplying" in New York this summer. He is a strong man and a popular preacher. Large audiences have assembled to hear him. No man has spoken more emphatic words against the play-house, the ball-room, and the rum-den than this man; yet, as a preacher, he is popular. The fact is not in entire harmony with a theory entertained by some excellent persons; but the theory may be wrong. A man's popularity is not necessarily in the proportion in which he hesitates to rebuke the sins of his time and locality. The really popular preacher is the person with convictions, deep, strong and clear, and who has the courage to speak vigorously against what he believes to be wrong and in favor of what he believes to be right, always, of course, in the spirit of sympathetic affection for the evil doer.—New York Letter to the Christian Standard.

The number of oath bound societies which have sprung up in the United States within the past twenty years is enormous. At first it was among German-Americans principally that these societies were most prevalent, but of late years the mania has spread. It is no uncommon thing to find a man who belongs to eight or ten secret societies at once; in such cases Freemasonry nearly always being one, and the leading one of the many obligations which the man has assumed. As a rule, the organizers of these secret societies and their chief men are usually Freemasons. Most of these societies pretend with more or less sincerity to aim at the cultivation of all the virtues, but all of them, or nearly all, agree in the choice of "benevolence" as the bull's-eye of their moral target.—Catholic Review.

The same roof [Ludlow street jail] covers a man named Christian Bachman, poor, old, blind, deaf, disabled and helpless, without a dollar or a friend in the world. The circumstances which brought him here may well have shaken his faith in human brotherhood and made more bittter to his taste his daily bread. For years he was a member of a so-called benevolent society, and regularly paid his dues. At length sickness came, and as was his right, he asked the society for assistance. We have not room for all the details, but lawsuits followed and a judgment of $240, for expenses and attorney's fees, was given against Bachman. Truly, "the destruction of the poor is their poverty." He had no money, and in default thereof, was thrown into the Ludlow jail thirteen months ago. Practically he is imprisoned for life, for the law says he must stay there until he has paid the debt, and so far as his ability to do this is concerned, the $240 might as well be $240,000,000.—The Laws of Life.

"Remember Haddock!" That is the battle-cry. The saloon conspiracy has fired upon Fort Sumter and so has fired the national heart. It has declared war as really as did the anarchists of the other conspiracy. We accept the challenge. I well remember when I was a little boy hearing Owen Lovejoy, in the old Rock River Association as it was meeting in my father's house in 1841, describe the assassination of his brother, Elijah P. Lovejoy, at Alton, and tell of his lifting his hand to heaven in an oath of enmity to slavery as long as he should live, while that brother in his arms was dying. When some years later I visited at Lawrence, Kans., the new-made grave of my youngest brother who had given his life to the Free-State cause, remembering that story of Lovejoy, I knelt upon that fresh earth and renewed my vow of devotion to the cause of the slave. The picture of Haddock I have cut out to carry in my memorandum. Multitudes of temperance men have done the same in idea. The spirit that murdered Haddock is in the saloon system. It threatens to do the same thing to other such men. Mr. B. M. Davenport, chairman of the Cook County Prohibition Committee, received last week an anonymous letter purporting to come from certain saloon keepers of our city, wherein his life is threatened unless he resigns his place on the committee and ceases his efforts in the cause of prohibition, and the case of Haddock is held up in warning.—Dr. Roy, in Advance.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 7, 1886.

A thirteen-mile stage ride from Clarinda landed me at College Springs, Iowa, at 6 o'clock, P. M., the 4th inst. At 8 I spoke in the Congregationalist church. The audience was good, respectful and attentive. Bro. Avery's and Bro. Hemmingway's congregations united in Sabbath morning services, and there was a general union meeting at the United Presbyterian church in the evening. By request of the pastor, Rev. Wm. Johnson, a free-will offering was taken for the anti-secrecy work, and one hundred dollars was subsequently added, fifty for the N. C. A. and fifty to the editor and publisher of the American to use in extending the circulation of his paper.

Frequent inquiries were made after Bro. Phillips and family by numerous friends who esteem the senior members of that domestic firm very highly "for their work's sake."

College Springs is a center of intellectual Christian and reformatory influence, having facilities and the courage to use them in promoting righteousness. The fight against lodge and liquor has been successful hitherto, and while a beautiful, well-equipped college structure and five commodious houses of worship grace the summit and scatter light from their hill tops, not a temple to Bacchus or Baal disgraces the town or degrades its inhabitants.

I left the town last evening at 6:30 with many and only pleasant memories. Reaching Shambaugh at about 8 o'clock I was shown to a room in the only hotel in the place. It is seldom that I indulge in criticisms on any habitation that offers shelter, but it is due to others who may be passing that way that I give a word of caution. On the wall of the apartment was a picture representing George Washington standing between "Jachin and Boaz" in full regalia and decorated with Masonic symbols. After attention to correspondence I laid me down but not to sleep. A full battalion of the "Grand Army," intent on spoils, issued from their "secret lodge" and made such a furious assault that in less than twenty minutes I was compelled to leave the field, wounded, defeated and completely demoralized. I took refuge for a time in the one only chair at hand, and sometimes threw my weary body upon the floor and resting my aching head upon my valise contemplated the grandeur of Masonry and the luxury of being the guest of a landlord who bleeds his patrons at every pore, and advertises his own shame by parading the "Father of his country" in the symbols of pagan despotism. I shall not soon forget the night at Shambaugh.

Moral: When you come to a hotel and find pictures defaming the honored dead, and publishing lies to the living, hung upon the wall, stop if you must, but prepare for an encounter with the "Grand Army" of bugs and fleas.

Going back to more congenial themes, I cannot speak of all deserving honorable record whom I met at the Springs, but must content myself with brief mention of one who accounts himself "the least in the kingdom of Heaven."

It was my happy fortune to meet Father Leuty once more this side heaven, hale and hearty at four score and two years of age. His home, within and without, is one of the neatest and most rest-inviting in the town. When inclined he "dresses the garden" with his own hands, and for his labor has hitherto received full returns; but most of his waking hours are passed in Scripture and Christian reading and prayer, in which he shares the companionship of his wife. Sister Leuty is redeeming her vows with a devotion most gratifying to witness, especially between those who are united after passing the allotted age of mortality. Father Leuty has not denied the faith, but is to-day as true and as hopeful as was Father Lumry, Adam Crooks and Dr. Bingham, whose memoirs are precious and whose examples are a priceless legacy to others walking in the narrow way they trod, but coming later to the gate and the glory beyond. It is no ordinary experience such sages recount when nearing the crown, and it is fitting to set up a pillar at Mizpeh when permitted an interview with them. It is an inspiration to new devotion. Father Leuty and his companion both say they are satisfied with the disposition he has made of his earthly estate, and his former neighbors at Ligonier may safely spare themselves further anxiety about his temporalities. It has been my privilege to pay him fifty dollars per month since September, 1881, and I trust this happy privilege may be continued for many years to come, which, with other payment of a like sum by the Wesleyan Publishing Concern, will, I have little doubt, keep the poverty and despair from the door of the happy and contented home.

GREENLEAF, KANS., Sept. 8.—After a five hours' hitch at St. Joseph, and another delay at Atchison, I could get no further than this place last night.

Greenleaf is a neat, enterprising town with a population of 700. The buildings are new, the hotel accommodations good. We pass here through one of the grandest farming countries I ever saw, and evidences of thrift are on every hand. Herds of cattle are immense and corn-fields boundless; crops have been slightly injured by drouth, but are said to be above medium. The soil is rich and land sells at from $30 to $50 per acre. I notice in every village evidences of enterprise, morality and religion; commodious churches, neatly painted, school-houses with blinds and shaded play grounds, hotels with inviting porches, banks, stores and shops in every variety, and the tracks lined with elevators and cribs filled with harvests from the fertile fields around. I hear some profanity about the depots, but have not seen a drunken man, or one who seemed to be under the influence of liquor since I crossed the Missouri river. There is a marked change since my first visit to Kansas, and if, as some would have us believe, "Prohibition don't prohibit," it does keep the "demon" down and out of sight.

So far I have met with no opportunity to gather information or discuss the lodge question, and have seen but one man wearing the symbol of the beast since leaving Atchison. He was evidently a drummer, and smoked and swore so profusely that I did not feel inclined to approach him during his brief stay. He had learned the "Royal Art" of swearing, beside other "Masonic virtues."

J. P. STODDARD.

CORDIAL GREETING IN TENNESSEE.

TALFORD'S STATION, Tenn., Sept. 7, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On Friday the 3rd inst. I visited Tusculum College near Greenville, and was most hospitably entertained by Pres. J. Moore. They have erected a fine new building at a cost of some $15,000, which will soon be ready for occupancy. The fall term opens with a good number of students and the prospect of growth and usefulness is better than it has been for years. Pres. Moore assured me of his sympathy in our reform work. He said that some of the trustees of the college were Masons, and that some of the faculty did not think it best to have a lecture in the college chapel; but that he would endeavor to get me a hearing in the Oakland Presbyterian church of which he had been formerly a pastor, and where the students could attend. He reads the Cynosure with great interest.

On Saturday I rode on horseback to Washington College. This is the oldest institution for higher education west of the Blue Ridge. It was chartered in 1779, and has graduated some distinguished men. It is now under the care of Pres. J. W. C. Willoughby, and seems to have entered on a new era of prosperity. Pres. Willoughby expressed his sympathy in our work and expects to get a hearing for me this week. A leading member of the Presbyterian church in connection with the college told me that he was a member of the same Masonic lodge to which Andrew Johnson belonged, but that he had not been in a lodge for twenty years, and would be glad to hear Freemasonry discussed.

On Saturday evening I went to Jonesboro and stayed at the Washington House. Here I formed the acquaintance of Rev. Dr. Parsons, a Presbyterian minister who has long been connected with the cause of education in the South. He assured me of his sympathy in opposition to secret societies.

Sabbath morning I went to the Southern Presbyterian church and listened to an excellent sermon from the Moderator of their General Assembly. It was on bearing one another's burdens,and was thoroughly practical. At 3:30 P. M. I spoke to the Congretion of Rev. J. M. Hall, pastor of the Congregational church in this place. My text was Eph. 5:11, and I endeavored to show that all secret societies were "works of darkness." The attendance was fair and the attention excellent. The able pastor added some earnest remarks. This church embraces the most intelligent and best of the colored people of Jonesboro. They are mainly in sympathy with us. In the evening I preached to a crowded congregation in the A. M. E. church. It was a quarterly meeting occasion, and the presiding elder was present. He is a Mason and wears a conspicuous badge. The preacher in charge is an Odd-fellow. I had an attentive hearing and distributed some tracts. Next morning I was waited on by the pastor, who had never before heard that there was any evil in secret societies. I had a long talk with him and gave him books and papers. He promised to read and consider it.

On Sunday night I was kindly entertained by Bro. T. P. Britten of the U. B. church, who is loyal to Christian principles. A short ride on the cars brought me to this station, and a walk of over two miles took me to Liberty Chapel, a U. B. church, where I met a good congregation who came early and listened attentively. I distributed a large number of tracts which were gratefully received. I was most kindly entertained, and felt that in union of heart we were indeed brethren. I go to-day to Livingstone. Yours in Christ. H. H. HINMAN.

OHIO ODD-FELLOWS MAY RISE FOR AN EXPLANATION.

LEESBURG, Ohio, Sept. 10, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—According to appointment I spoke in the United Presbyterian church, Greenfield, on Monday and Tuesday evenings. The audiences were both good. A number of ladies were present, some of whom told me with tears in their eyes how they had been tried by their husbands belonging to the lodge. Several friends added their names to the Cynosure list. The secretists were stirred. They made no public demonstration, but I was told they were privately exclaiming, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Father Taylor, living at South Salem, was away when I called, but returning on Tuesday evening, by considerable effort he succeeded in finding me at Greenfield. He is in usual health, and hopes to attend the convention of Christians opposed to the lodge to be held in Chicago. I am indebted to many friends here for personal kindnesses.

Wednesday evening I spoke in the Friends church near South Martinsburg, and last evening in the M. E. church in the same place. The meeting of last evening was the most interesting of any I have attended for some time. The attendance was very good for this time of the year. The I. O. O. F. were well represented. I had been told before meeting that I should not have everything my own way, but would be answered, and was glad, and told them we would have a sort of a Methodist class meeting after I had concluded, in which each could give their experience with the lodge. I set forth as clearly as I could the anti-Christian character of the lodge, and when an opportunity was given, Mr. Hadley arose, took the platform and spoke substantially as follows: "I feel the solemnity of this occasion; you all know me, I have been an Odd-fellow for many years; I have heard something here to-night which I had not heard before. Our teachings are not strictly Christianity, but it leads men to Christianity. We have the sick to care for and the dead to bury." After he had gone on a while in this way his brother took the floor and told the audience I had been throwing a mist over their eyes. First, he said he arose to answer my arguments, then he said I had made no arguments. Two young men afterward spoke in my favor with much enthusiasm. An old gentlemen by the name of Levi Ellis arose and said if he were going to travel to Europe he would not want to be an Odd-fellow, as the former speakers had spoken of lodge help when traveling.

I suggested to Mr. Hadley that we might meet the next night and discuss whether Odd-fellowship was a charitable institution or not. He said he was not posted, but if I would give him time to post he would meet me. I agreed to this. Then he said he would not meet me, but he would get some one else who was a better speaker. I agreed to this, and we shall see whether he keeps his word or not. I was notified before leaving the house that Mrs. M. J. Binigar would like to see me in the morning. I called at her home after breakfast and she gave me the following facts which I wrote down in the presence of Mr. Wm. Haptonstall:

"My husband was at one time an Odd-fellow. He built the hall, made the coffin and helped start the order here. My husband intended the lower part for a store room, but as our circumstances were limited we moved in. [Mrs. B. is now living under the I. O. O. F. hall.] The I. O. O. F. got me to sign a deed granting them the use of the hall for 99 years, promising me a nice dress if I would so do. They gave me a 7-cent calico dress which faded out the first washing. The deed stated that if the hall was used for any other than Odd-fellow meetings it should revert to our hands. We found some time after I signed the deed that it had been changed so it could be rented for other meetings. The I. O. O. F. have since rented it to the Good Templars and the Grange and kept the rents. My husband thought there would be no use of suing them because he was poor, and they would get their own jury, so we let it go. At one time when my husband was very sick they did not come near him for a month; then they came two at a time and slept in their chairs, and I got up all through the night and gave him medicine. When he died I was reduced to very destitute circumstances, but the lodge did not give me a cent; but when I asked them to pay part of the rent on the building they refused to do so. My neighbors learning of my destitute condition gave me about $30 worth of provisions. When my children were small they were kept awake nights by their continual racket, rappings, etc. "Oh!" said the poor woman with tears in her eyes, "you don't know how I wish I could have gotten up in your meeting last night and told these things. They never have given me anything except when they had their lodge suppers; they got me to stew their oysters and gave me a dollar a time for doing the same."

And this, Mr. Hadley, is the I. O. O. F.'s charity in South Martinsburg. Shame on such an institution! Why do you treat the man who helped you to your hall, to your coffin, and to prepare for your skeleton-show in this manner? See an order that boasts of its charity oppressing the widow and defenceless, even of its own membership!

W. B. STODDARD.

THE IOWA STATE MEETING.

The meeting opened on Tuesday evening with a large and enthusiastic crowd. The Wesleyan and Free Methodist churches were well represented by delegates. The Rev. Isaac Bancroft, Clay county, Congregationalist, was also present. Page county sent as delegate, H. W. Johnson, of the Western Crank.

Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton College, presented a powerful and cogent argument against the whole lodge system, setting forth the reasons for excluding it from the church as a system of false worship. Incidents were given from the speaker's own experience showing the dangerous character of the institution.

Wednesday morning was devoted to the business of the Association.

On Wednesday evening a most excellent address was made by the Rev. C. E. Harroun, Jr., showing that no work could be successful against the orders that did not aim at the entire Christianizing of the man.

The session was made interesting also from the address and testimony of two seceding Masons, the Rev. E. Y. Carl and the Rev. W. B. Golden.

On Thursday morning the Rev. W. B. Golden delivered a very interesting address on the need of using love and kindness in reaching men. The audience was especially charmed with the brother's fine singing, and many turned out to the meetings to hear him present the Gospel in that method.

Thursday afternoon the Rev. Mr. Hunt of Fayette county, notwithstanding his illness, made an excellent address and was followed by the Rev. C. F. Hawley, the State lecturer.

The entire evening was given on Thursday to the Rev. J. P. Stoddard to show the workings of the orders in undermining government and our republican institutions. Though it was the third evening yet the people kept up their interest to the end. For months these topics will be discussed in the homes and in public places, the doubtful will be strengthened and all will receive renewed courage.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Rev. George Warrington, President; Rev. C. E. Harroun, Jr., Vice-President; Rev. C. D. Trumbull, Cor. Secretary; H. W. Johnston, Recording Secretary; James Harvey, Treasurer.

The thanks of the convention were returned to the people of Birmingham for the entertainment provided. Mr. J. A. Laird was thanked for his past services as Treasurer of the Association.

The Rev. C. F. Hawley was chosen a State lecturer for the coming year.

The constitution was changed by appointing the time of the annual meeting on the third Tuesday of October instead of the last Tuesday of August.

Invitations were extended to the Association to meet the next year at College Springs, Delta, and West Union. College Springs was chosen as the place of meeting, and Mr. H. W. Johnston was appointed a committee to secure reduced rates of fare for the delegates.

The work is started on a good basis for another year, as a partial canvass of the State has secured $600 in subscription for State work. If this subscription can be made $1,000, the work can be pushed more vigorously than ever before. Will not those who have not yet subscribed send word to the Treasurer, James Harvey, what they will do for the cause for the coming year?—Birmingham Free Press.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN PARTY.—WHAT IS THEIR DUTY?

As I see my name in the list, I am anxious to know and do my duty. Would it not be best to define the duty of the committee of the States in the Christian Cynosure and the American? What is expected of us, and when are we to commence work?

Can not the American and the Prohibition parties agree to be one body in reform work? Is there not wisdom enough in these reform parties to accomplish a consolidation so much to be desired? Will not the Prohibition party unite with us in nominees for the offices embraced in our elections, not obnoxious to the Americans? I am too much an American, and though not all I desire to be, too much a Christian to cast a vote, knowing it, for a lodge-bound soul. I never could do this, not even for union and partial triumph. Triumph embracing such inconsistencies would be to me substantial defeat. I am bound by the right of an American citizen and by the grace of God to vote a clean ticket, if I make it myself and vote it alone—or I'll wait and cast my next ballot in heaven. "All hail the power of Jesus's name." Amen. A clean ticket with me means candidates clear of and against all intoxicants and the lodge, and a clean mouth.

The old cry is renewed, "no politics in the pulpit, in religion," etc. So be it; but let us have some, nay, rather,the religion in our politics or have no politics. Satan always did and always will go for fractional currency–"shin plasters." The old rascal! He would cut souls into pieces—quarter them as the butcher his beef and then cut them into small fragments and give God the tongue only. Indeed we have a religion of tongues in these days of apostasy. Judas-like, the "hail-master", kissing type of religion, pickled and petrified in profane oaths, fiendish libations of Knights Templar, steeped in intoxicants and tobacco packed to order in barrels, demijohns, goblets, smoke-pipes, ad infinitum, ad nauseum.

How many parts can a moral being, a soul, go into? How many distinct and antagonizing interests can the same soul confess, and keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace? Hear the answer; "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." If we divide up with the adversary will God take a share? All for God or nothing. When I go to vote I go whole—body, soul, spirit, will, judgment, conscience, veneration, affections and devotion to principles founded in God and Bible Christianity—away from all party, as such, political or religious, state or church and consecrated on the altar of reform.

NATHAN CALLENDER.

A SOUTHERN LETTER.

479 GRAVIER ST., NEW ORLEANS.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I am truly thankful for your valuable paper. I have never as yet read one Christian paper so valuable as the Christian Cynosure and the Memphis Living Way. You both speak out the truth plainly without fear of the Satanic host. Continue ye in the truth and in the fear of our Lord Jesus, and fear not what man can, or will attempt to do to you.

I am here in this great city of 225,000 souls, apparently alone, almost ready sometimes to say as did poor Elijah: Lord, they have thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets, and I, even I only am left, and they seek my life. But when I turn to the Lord's word and read: "All men who will live godly shall suffer persecution." "In the world ye shall have tribulation." These words revive my spirit. There are seven thousand men in Israel who have not bowed the knee to Baal. Every week the Cynosure and Living Way bring me new names of those opposing Masonry. It makes me rejoice.

It is sad to say some of our leading colored churches here encourage lodgery. Some of our most intelligent colored ministers, as Rev. A. S. Jackson, have left the lodge. I remember when I took the degree of Sir Knight in the Pride of Louisiana Lodge. I was sworn to forever protect their work from public exposure, even at the peril of my life. I am here despised, rebuked and rejected by many, but thank God for that. I spoke in the St. Mark's (4th) Baptist church, 18 Magnolia street, of which I am a member, not long ago, from 2nd Cor. 6. Some applauded, some groaned and some murmured, while I endeavored to picture the evils of worldly societies. The following Thursday night I spoke at another—St. Mark's Baptist church on Sixth street. Some of the congregation got so impatient that they got up, growled out insults and left the church. If we could get some of our intelligent ministers to take a bold and decided stand against secretism here, as brethren Brinkley and Countee, they could do much good with God's help. The Odd-fellows, Masons, and Knights of Pythias say I violated my obligation and lied to God, but I tell them I violated my obligation to Satan for I joined them in ignorance and thought I was doing something grand. F. I. DAVIDSON.

LODGE VICTORIES.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.

"The Union Victorious" is the heading of an item in the Daily News. It should have been "Tyranny Victorious," and the victims were three workmen in the brick yard of Spendbrechen & Son, on Elston avenue in this city. The union men demanded the discharge of the three free men and it was obeyed after "a parley, with the understanding" as it reads, "That they would be taken back if they joined the Union."

Strange times we live in. Our country is rapidly changing its character as free, and will soon at this rate be as despotic and oppressive over personal freedom as Russia or Turkey. What matter whether our people suffer tyranny under one acknowledged sovereign for the whole nation, or under some sovereign grand commander who wields his scepter independently of our civil government? Shall our so-called free citizens passively connive at such doings as the above until all personal independence is swallowed up by the secret tyrannical so-called unionists." A charming name is unionist, but, alas! "how sadly misapplied as the tool of oppression! It is estimated that some 800,000 men are thus enrolled (or oath-bound?) When is it best to wake up and repress this evil? Must we wait further developments of anarchy and crime, or devise some remedy without delay?

Our fears prompt our warnings. Our war might have been avoided if the voice of the Abolitionists had been heeded, and the bloodshed and loss would have been escaped. Let us listen in time to these imported indications of the coming storm; trim the sails of our good ship "The Union" and demand the surrender of all such pirates as hoist her flag along with their own blood red one. The "American party" is loyal to "the Union," but down with all panderers to and allies of the foe. On our banner behold inscribed: "The Union," "Prohibition" and "True Liberty," and "Down with Lodgery and oppression of every kind."

Birds of a feather flock together. Lodgery is a common bond of brotherhood, although it may generally condemn actual crime when found out, but what do our newspapers say to such trifling affairs as the rights of only three men whose interest may be sacrificed and whose families may suffer unless they join a body of men whose principles they may condemn. T. H.

PITH AND POINT.

"THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST."

At the suggestion of Bro. Blanchard in that Baccalaureate address, I sent 50 cents to Bro. D. S. Kinney of the Wesleyan Publishing House, Syracuse, N. Y., and received Rev. Richard Harton's book, "The Image of the Beast a secret Empire; or Freemasonry a subject of Prophecy." I now recommend this grand book to all lovers of truth, whether anti or pro secretists. Read every page carefully. Then draw your conclusions—C. E. WALKER, U. B. Preacher, Twin Brooks, Dak.

WHAT IT COSTS TO SAVE A CONFERENCE.

I very much regret to part from so near and dear a friend [the Cynosure]. But financial embarrassment brought on by my repeated thrusts to the very heart of Masonry, compels me to say, "Stop my paper." I thank you and the kind friends who have furnished me the paper from my heart, and pray that the richest of God's blessings may rest on the donors. Could we have a hundred yearly subscribers in this association we would have a complete revolution.—W. H. SMITH, Gibbs Cross Roads, Tenn.

Such an appeal ought to bring $150 into the fund for the Cynosure to Southern ministers within a week. Will Bro. Smith send the names and addresses of the pastors in his association?

MORE FROM THE SOUTH.

Rev. J. B. Roberts, a good brother, is just elated with the Cynosure and is rejoicing greatly in his freedom from the lodge.—R. N. COUNTEE, Memphis.

I send you $1.00 for my food for the next year. It has been this year, night and day, and I don't think my mind can do without its sustenance.—ELIAS BECK, Canton Bend, Ala.

ELDER BROWNE'S WORK.

Bro. J. F. Browne is still holding the fort here for God and truth. I have heard Bro. Browne lecture and preach more than any other man in this part of Wisconsin, and can truly say to the glory of God that he is doing a great work for the cause of reform, truly a man of God and wholly given to the work of the Lord. The secret clans are terribly stirred in Juneau and Sauk counties. For the past week he has been preaching in the Wesleyan church on Big Creek. The church has been revived, backsliders have returned, and we trust some souls saved. Bro. Browne should have a better support. He should have the co-operation of every loyal citizen. The Lord help the people to take sides now and forever.—J. W. DELAP, Lavalle, Wis.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XIII.—September 26, 1886.—Review.

From Peloubet's Notes.

SUBJECT:—The Development of the Redeemer's kingdom.

1. Further light on the nature and work of the Redeemer. Lessons 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10. The Redeemer is seen in these lessons to be the Light, the Life, the Good Shepherd, the True Vine, one with the Father, rejoicing in the humblest service, yet honored, triumphant and glorified.

2. The principles of his kingdom. Lessons 2, 7, 9, 10, 12. The kingdom is about to come, and therefore Jesus trains his disciples in the principles of the kingdom, in humility, in love one to another, especially the great, new commandment, in Christ as the door and the way and the truth and the life, in the duty of abiding in him and bearing fruit, in the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, in the privilege of sanctification, and the need of eternal life.

3. The ordinances of the kingdom. Baptism, which had long before been instituted, and now the Lord's supper, which is ever after to be kept in remembrance of him. Two of the simplest possible ordinances, that every one, even a child can understand, yet full of the largest and deepest meanings. They cannot be slighted with impunity.

4. Its promises and helps. Lessons 4, 9, 10, 11, 12. The promise of eternal life, of a home in heaven, where he has gone to prepare a place for them, of the power to do greater works than he had done, that he would answer prayer, and send the Comforter who would abide with them, lead them into all truth, and give success to their preaching by convicting and convincing the world. They were to be kept from the evil, sanctified, and at last be glorified with him.

LESSONS AND GOLDEN TEXTS FOR 1887.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

First Quarter.

Lesson 1. Jan 2.—The Beginning. Gen. 1:26–31, and 2:1–3. In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. Gen. 1:1.

2. Jan. 9.—Sin and Death. Gen. 3:1–6, and 17–19. By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin. Rom. 5:12.

3. Jan. 16.—Cain and Abel. Gen. 4:3–16. Am I my brother's keeper? Gen. 4:9.

4. Jan. 23.—Noah and the Ark. Gen. 6:9–22. Noah did according unto all that the Lord commanded him. Gen. 7:5.

5. Jan. 30.—The Call of Abram. Gen. 12 1–9. I will bless thee and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing. Gen. 12 2.

6. Feb. 6.—Lot's Choice. Gen. 13 1–13, Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness. Matt. 6 33.

7. Feb. 13.—God's Covenant with Abram. Gen. 15 5–18. Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward. Gen. 15 1.

8. Feb. 20.—Abraham Pleading for Sodom. Gen. 18 23–33. In wrath remember mercy. Hab. 3 2.

9. Feb. 27.—Destruction of Sodom. Gen. 19 15–26. Escape for thy life. Gen. 19 17.

10 March 6.—Abraham Offering Isaac. Gen. 22 1–14. God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering. Gen. 22 8.

11. March 13.—Jacob at Bethel. Gen. 28 10–22. Surely the Lord is in this place. Gen. 28 16.

12. March 20.—Jacob's New Name. Gen. 32 9–12, and 24–30. And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me. Gen. 32 26.

13 March 27.—Review: Temperance Lesson, Gen. 9 18–27; Missionary Lesson, Gen. 18 17–26.

Second Quarter.

Lesson 1. April 3.—Joseph Sold into Egypt. Gen. 37 23 36. But the Lord was with Joseph, and showed him mercy. Gen. 39 21.

2. April 10.—Joseph Exalted. Gen. 41 38–48. Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass. Ps. 37 5.

3. April 17.—Joseph makes Himself Known. Gen. 45 1–15. Overcome evil with good. Rom. 12 21.

4. April 24.—Joseph and his Father. Gen. 47 1–12. Honor thy father and thy mother, which is the first commandment with promise. Eph. 6 2.

5. May 1.—Israel in Egypt. Exod. 1 6–14. He increased his people greatly; and made them stronger than their enemies. Ps 105 24.

6. May 8.—The Child Moses. Exod. 2 1–10. The Lord is thy keeper. Ps. 121 5.

7. May 15.—The Call of Moses. Exod. 3 1–12. I will be thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say. Exod. 4 12.

8. May 22.—The Passover. Exod. 12 1–14. Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us. 1 Cor. 5 7.

9. May 29.—The Red Sea. Exod. 14 19–31. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers they shall not overflow thee. Isa. 43 2.

10. June 5.—The Manna. Exod. 16 4–12. Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life. John 6 35.

11. June 12.—The Commandments. Exod. 20 1–11. Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. Matt. 22 37.

12. June 19.—The Commandments.—Exod. 20 12–21. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Matt. 22 39.

13. June 26.—Review: Temperance Lesson, Lev. 10 1–11; Missionary Lesson, Exod. 35 20–29.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MATTHEW.

Third Quarter.

Lesson 1, July 3.—The Infant Jesus. Matt. 2 1–12. Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. Matt. 1 21.

2. July 10.—The Flight into Egypt. Matt. 2 13–23. He delivered me, because he delighted in me. Ps. 18 19.

3. July 17.—John the Baptist. Matt. 3 1–12. Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance. Matt. 3 8.

4. July 24.—The Baptism of Jesus. Matt. 3 13–17. This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. Matt. 3 17.

5. July 31.—The Temptation of Jesus. Matt, 4 1–11. He is able to succor them that are tempted. Heb. 2 18.

6. Aug. 7.—Jesus in Galilee. Matt. 4 17–25. The people which sat in darkness saw great light. Matt. 4 16.

7. Aug. 14.—The Beatitudes. Matt. 5 1–16. Grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. John 1 17.

8. Aug. 21.—Jesus and the Law. Matt. 5 17–26. Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy but to fulfill. Matt. 5 17.

9 Aug. 28.—Piety without Display. Matt. 6 1-15. Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. 1 Sam. 16 7.

10. Sept 4.—Trust in our Heavenly Father. Matt. 6 24–34. Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you. 1 Peter 5 7.

11. Sept. 11—Golden Precepts. Matt. 7 1–12. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them. Matt. 7 12.

12. Sept 18.—Solemn Warnings. Matt. 7 13–29. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Matt. 7 19.

13. Sept. 25.—Review: Temperance Lesson, Rom. 13 8–14; Missionary Lesson, Matt. 4 12–16.

Fourth Quarter.

Lesson 1. Oct. 2.—The Centurion's Faith. Matt. 8 5–13. I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. Matthew 8 10.

2. Oct. 9.—The Tempest Stilled. Matthew 8 18–27. Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Matthew 8 26.

3. Oct. 16.—Power to Forgive Sins. Matthew 9 1–8. The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins. Matthew 9 6.

4. Oct. 23.—Three Miracles. Matthew 9 18–31. According to your faith be it unto you. Matthew 9 29.

5. Oct. 30.—The Harvest and the Laborers. Matthew 9 35–38, and 10 1–8. Freely ye have received, freely give. Matthew 10 8.

6. Nov. 6.—Confessing Christ. Matthew 10 32–42. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. Matthew 10 32.

7. Nov. 13.—Christ's Witness to John. Matthew 11 2–15. He was a burning and a shining light. John 5 35.

8. Nov. 20.—Judgment and Mercy. Matthew 11 20-30. Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Matthew 11 28

9. Nov. 27.—Jesus and the Sabbath. Matt. 12 1–14. It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days. Matthew 12 12.

10. Dec. 4.—Parable of the Sower. Matthew 13 1–9. The seed is the word of God. Luke 8 11.

11. Dec. 11.—Parable of the Tares. Matthew 13 24–30. The harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. Matthew 13 39.

12. Dec. 18.—Other Parables. Matthew 13 31–33, and 44–52. So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just. Matt. 13 49.

13. December 25.—Review: or lesson selected by the school.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Missouri, Eld. Rufus Smith, Maryville.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, Steuben Co, N. Y
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

OUR CLUB LIST.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!

Families are making up their lists of periodicals for the coming year. Friends can order their denominational papers through us and save money.

We still send an extra copy of the Christian Cynosure to those getting up a club of ten at $1.50.

We give below a list of papers which we offer with the Christian Cynosure at reduced rates:

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2 50
The American (Washington)	2 50
Western Rural	3 00
The Missionary Review	3 00
Christian Herald N. Y	2 75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2 50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3 90
New York Witness	2 50
Union Signal	3 00
Christian Statesman (Phila.)	3 50
The Interior	3 85
The Independent	4 25
The S. S. Times	3 50
Gospel in all Lands	3 50
The Nation	4 50
New York Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Tribune, Weekly	2 50
Chicago Inter Ocean, Weekly	2 50
Harper's Magazine	4 75
North American Review	5 75
The Century	5 25
Scientific American	4 25
Buds and Blossoms	2 10
Pansy	2 35
Viek's Magazine	2 50
American Agriculturist	2 60

If any complaints arise in regard to any periodical ordered, write direct to the publisher or to us if more convenient and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in this list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberliu, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. A. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE'

F. W. Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; G. W. Needels, Missouri; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia (Ex. Com.) James Kennedy, California; Robert Hardie, Dakota; J. F. Galloway, Florida; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Israel Hess, Indiana; J. N. Norris, Iowa; H. Curtis, Kansas S A. Pratt, Massachusetts; H. A. Day, Michigan; E. Tapley Mississippi; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; A. M, Paull, Rhode Island; J. W. Moss, West Virginia; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep coneern the corrupt and unsettled condition of Amerieau politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevaleuce of caste and clannishness by whieh our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass politieal ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independenee, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, aud not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scoteh and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscienee by human laws and penalties as eateulated to make hypoerites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the samc time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lyneh power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while w consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peaee and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peaee whieh we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only eehoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as eontaining a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by whieh we intend to be governed in easting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of seience and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxieating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreeiated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforeement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general publie.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Artieles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, aud the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differeuces should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sacred currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduec tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, aud that the Republican party is eensurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferenccs.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be exeepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeek and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

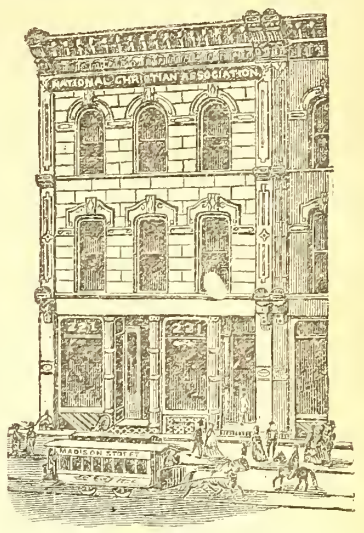
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.



The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—H. H. George, D. D., Geneva College, Pa.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y. AND TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton. Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, J. E. Roy, E. R. Worrell, H. A. Fischer, W. R. Hench.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give aud bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George, H L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. L. Barlow, Wheaton; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., J. W. Dill, Mediapolis; Cor Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas. J A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillan, Olathe; Treas., J. A. Torrenee, N. Cedar.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamston; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Rev. R. M. Smith, Pagetown; Rec. Sec., Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield; Cor. Sec., Rev. A. M. Campbell, Cedarville; Treas., W P. Clark, Mansfield; Ageut, W. B. Stoddard, Columbus.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1886.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW MARKET, N. H., Sept. 6, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We left Worcester, purposing to return there to the State convention of Prohibitionists which meets on Wednesday in Mr. Washburne's great hall. At Boston the Republican papers were rejoicing over the issue of a call for a "Non-Partisan" Temperance Convention, to meet also in Worcester soon. The call is signed by Mrs. Livermore and by our own good Mr. Samuel A. Pratt. We suppose this second non-partisan convention is to head off the new third party by recommending the Prohibitionists who belong to the two old parties to stay and work for temperance in those parties. But the Republican press, passim, insists that the Democratic party is the Prohibition or third party; and that it is getting up the Prohibition party to draw in the temperance men and so defeat the Republicans. With what face then can this Worcester non-partisan convention advise temperance Democrats to stay in and work with that corrupt Democratic party which goes for whisky, and is hypocritically encouraging a party of temperance for the sole purpose of beating the Republicans? But if the non-partisans do not mean that it is right for temperance Democrats to stay in and vote with the Democracy, then this Worcester convention is a Republican party under the mask of non-partisanism, which would be bald hypocrisy and pretence, and will not succeed.

THE CHICAGO CONGRESS.

Rev. Increase N. Tarbox, D. D., favors this convention. He writes:

"The general condition of the country, brought about largely through secret organizations, is, itself, enough to show the necessity of such a meeting, and such a movement as that contemplated."

Dr. A. A. Miner of Boston writes to the editor of the Interior, who is chairman of the committee: "I think favorably of the matter, and might attend if it were held early in November."

Dr. Tarbox is second to no New England divine, known and beloved by the older, orthodox and more stable members of the New England churches. Dr. Miner has the reputation of an honest, eloquent leader of the serious wing of the Universalists. He is chairman of the building committee of a great art building which is being put up by the State of Massachusetts. A while since the workmen on this building took advantage of the general brawl of the Knights of Labor and struck. Dr. Miner told the master builder to let the work stand. He did so. They advertised for new workmen, who came, and the building went quietly on.

The letters of these gentlemen are in my possession as open letters. I wish to show them to others in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania on my way home. The committee can rely on Dr. Miner to speak if they invite him.

NEW MARKET, NEW HAMPSHIRE.

This town is situated eighteen or twenty miles due west from the sea port Portsmouth, on a little narrow bay which winds back among the hills, sometimes shrinking to eight or ten rods in width. A swim in the sea-salt water where the tide current was rushing up stream through its narrow winding way up to the town, where coal ships come from the Pennsylvania mines to unload their burdens, was a pleasant experience of this visit. The farms here are rocks and intervales alternating. Apple and pear trees are indigenous, and plant and cultivate themselves. This is a fruit year, and the country seems a paradise of trees; and the bracing sea air, the waving green of the young forest trees which spread their boughs out over "the grey old rocks" seem like young children tugging their grey-headed grand parents.

Elder Kimball of Dartmouth was a young and faithful pastor of Free Baptist churches, useful and beloved. The lodge, which follows the factories as sharks follow ships, drove him from their pulpits back to this romantic farm. Here he took his stand with his back to the rocks; took up the Christian Witness which was started by Mr. Edgar Wylie, and faced the Masons and their jacks as Fitz James faced the clansmen of Roderick Dhu, and said to them by his actions, if not in words:

> "Come one, come all! This rock shall fly
> From its firm base as soon as I:
> Living or dying, ye shall know
> A stag at bay's a dangerous foe."

And like the tide on this coast the current is already changing and coming in. Already Masons and Oddfellows are at a discount in churches where nothing is said against the lodges, and a great revival at Manchester, a manufacturing town near here, is sweeping the lodges as the tide sweeps back herds of swine which have ventured out too far for clams. They put their noses down to the marsh, ascertain that the tide indeed is coming, and then, scampering, squealing, grunting, and when overtaken, swimming, they make rapidly as they may for solid ground. So may it be with the herds who are exploring the moral marshes and miasmatic swamps of the country to get their living by under-ground methods, over unknown depths, instead of seeking their bread above ground by open and honorable means.

To-night we go to Manchester, and to-morrow to Andover, Boston and Worcester, where our readers shall (D. V.) hear from us. J. B.

IRISH BROTHERHOODS AND HOME RULE.

T. P. Gill, a member of the British Parliament, signs his name to a special cable dispatch in the Daily News of this city not long since in which the probability of a serious investigation for Parnell and the Irish leaders may soon be begun in Parliament. The dispatch states that a member of that body intends to move that proceedings be made against William Ridgeway, a well-known publisher of Piccadilly, London, on account of a pamphlet published by him, and which, it is alleged, contains libelous charges against members of Parliament. This pamphlet purports to give an authentic and detailed account of a conspiracy for the independence of Ireland and breaking up of the British union, made between certain members of Parliament, whose names are not given in the document, and two secret organizations, known as Fenians and the Irish Republican Brotherhood. Some idea may be had of the nature of the charges made in the pamphlet, and of the line of inquiry which will be taken should a judicial inquest be made of the matter, from the following extracts:

"J. J. O'Kelly, whom I well remember swearing in as captain, Martin Joseph Nolan, W. O'Brien, Mr. Flynn, Mr. Kenny, Mr. Sheehy, T. P. Gill, Mr. Harris, Dr. Fox, F. X. O'Brien, T. P. O'Conner, T. Healy, Justin Huntly McCarthy, and the two Redmonds, all members of Parliament, in addition to the oaths to be faithful, and their true allegiance to Queen Victoria, have taken this oath in the presence of Almighty God:

"'I solemnly swear allegiance to the Irish republic now virtually established, and to take up arms when called upon to defend its independence and integrity. I also swear to yield implicit obedience to the commands of my superior officer.'"

The pamphlet further charges those members of the House of Commons with being sworn enemies of England. It also says:

"Since 1880 Parnell has been forced deeper and deeper into the labyrinths, and is to-day connected through his agents, as I will show, with every stratum of the organization."

It further states that Michael Davitt, once a member of the Supreme Council of the Irish Republican Brotherhood, was expelled from that position for several good reasons. It also charges James O'Kelly with membership in the Militant Council of the brotherhood, organized to carry on offensive operations against the British Government, and with giving El Mahdi, in Egypt, information and active support against the British invader. It also charges Mr. Parnell with giving guaranties to the brotherhood to carry on the constitutional agitation under which Fenianism could be revived, the land question to be made a motive power, and a certain number of Parliamentary seats to be allotted to Fenians. The pamphlet further charges Mr. Parnell with using the Fenian brotherhood to get money, influence and agents; also with taking money in lumps, which money was used for rebellion and revolution. It also charges that while Frank Byrne managed the Irish vote in England in the interest of Mr. Parnell, Bryne's wife carried over knives, bought by Kelly in Birmingham, to commit the Phœnix park murders, and escaped being placed on the witness stand by leaving Dublin while her sister took her place in the house, and who, being a confidant of the now well-remembered Informer Carey, swore she was not Mrs. Byrne. The pamphlet also charges that orders admitting strangers to the gallery of the House of Commons were given by the Irish members twice to Daly, who had come to London from Paris for the purpose of throwing bombs into the House of Commons. It further charges T. P. O'Connor, M. P., with receiving in the lobby and entertaining Carey, who was then being scoured for by detectives in connection with the dynamite outrages in London.

If this matter ever comes before the House of Commons, Ridgeway can probably be compelled, under penalty of imprisonment, to give his authority for the statements of the pamphlet; and the gravity of the charges and the high standing of the members implicated make it improbable that action will be refused. There may be, however, some reasons why the Tory party in power may prefer not to enter upon such an inquiry until they are more sure of the stability of their government, or until it shall aid them in the overthrow of the opposition. Until then Salisbury and Churchill are shrewd enough not to meddle with the secret plottings of lodgery.

THE ANTI-SALOON REPUBLICANS.

A national convention to represent the temperance wing of the Republican party meets in this city Thursday, the 16th inst. The movement for this meeting has justly been regarded as a sign of the times in the political world. Probably Mr. Blaine had it in view when he indicates in his Maine speeches that the Republican party as a national organization will take no step to alienate the saloon. Does Mr. Blaine intend to give the convention this week his nod of authority, and put them on their guard to take no step of alienation from the party? If they obey they make themselves the laughing stock of men, and literally the "song of the drunkard."

George William Curtis, commenting on the anti-saloon State convention in Binghampton, New York, in Harper's Weekly, says that Republicans who believe in the temperance question to be the most important public issue must be prepared, "like the Conscience and Free Soil Whigs of forty years ago, to form new party connections," and he argues that the movers of the convention this week will no longer support the Republican party if it refuses to break with the saloon.

The Illinois convention representing this movement met in this city on the 2nd inst. and was attended by some prominent and excellent men, as S. A. Kean, J. V. Farwell, C. H. Case, George M. Clark, W. B. Brayton, P. S. Henson, R. M. Hatfield, A. L. Coe, and E. R. Cragin.

They appointed delegates to the meeting this week and resolved

That saloon domination in the Republican party must cease if the party is to go forward to permanent victory and conquest.

That the Republican party should henceforth take a positive and open attitude of hostility to the organized power of the liquor-selling interest, and that it should be uncompromisingly committed to the policy of opposition.

The speeches which emphasized the resolutions were strong and indicate that this movement is the last appeal from a large, intelligent and conscientious part of the Republican party. If that party will not take hold against the saloon they will feel compelled, as Dr. Henson said of himself, to join the third party.

Some of the gentlemen named above have, like some who profess Anti masonry and yet condemn only the active opposers of the lodge, been severe to bitterness against Prohibitionists. This is especially true of Mr. J. V. Farwell, who has, in the Advance and Inter-Ocean, almost vilified third party men. He will, we fear, find that he must take a long walk back, to get into the path of consistency and conscience from which the heat of partisanship has led him astray.

—Bro. Hinman was at Milligan College, Cave Springs, Tennessee, last Sabbath. He was expecting to address the students of the institution before leaving. He finds so many openings in East Tennessee that he hesitates about going further to awaken interest in the proposed national convention.

—Secretary Stoddard wrote Friday from Rusco, Kansas, that the State convention just closed had a good local attendance, but not many came in from abroad. He was to speak at the same place that evening, at Washington, Kans., Saturday and Monday, and then turns back eastward.

—The Ohio agent sends ten new subscribers this week, and Bro. Loggan, of Kansas, six. The former had appointments in East Monroe Saturday and Monday evenings. Wednesday evening of this week he speaks in the Friends church near Leesburg, and Friday and Saturday at Samantha in Highland county.

—The Colorado Prohibitionists have shown the party in that State to be of the "proper stuff" in nominating Rev. T. E. Bliss, D. D., of Denver, for Secretary of State. Their convention met in the city hall, Denver, with 242 delegates present and nominated a full ticket.

—The meeting of the American party in Birmingham, Iowa, on the 18th inst., was presided over by Dr. J. N. Norris. The following nominations were made for the State ticket: Secretary of State, Isaac T. Gibson, of Henry county. Treasurer, James Mickelwaite, of Mills county. Auditor, John Palmer. Attorney General, Jacob W. Rodgers, of Fayette county.

—Dr. E. P. Goodwin preached a memorial sermon last Sabbath morning in the First Congregational Church in respect to Mr. Carpenter, and followed it in the evening on the many admirable lessons for the young men of to-day from his life. The First Church started from the excommunication of Mr. Carpenter and other members of the Third Presbyterian church because of their Abolition sentiments. It was called at first "Carpenter's Nigger church." This was thirty-five years ago. Dr. Goodwin gave full honor to Mr. Carpenter's work in opposing secret organizations, speaking of his personal efforts and large gifts to the National Association.

—TheMassachusetts Prohibition convention which met in Worcester last week Wednesday is reported in the Evening Gazette of that city on the same day. Pres. J. Blanchard was among those from abroad who were officially welcomed to a seat on the platform. Mr. Charles B. Knight, of Worcester, was a prominent member of the convention and a vice-president. Drs. A. J. Gordon and A. A. Miner, of Boston, were also made vice-presidents. The convention was a remarkable gathering in contrast with some held of late years in the same hall by the old parties. The delegates numbered 823 members. Thomas J. Taunton was nominated for governor; and the platform, while powerfully arraigning the liquor traffic, begins with a humble acknowledgment of the sovereignty of God.

—There is a sad corroboration of Bro. Fenton's letter on Attorney Black, the chief adviser for the Anarchists in their late trial in this city, in the remarks of the Evangelist Kirkland of the Adelphi mission in his paper, the Mission Worker: "Among the many sad things, to us, connected with this trial has been the fall from grace of the leading attorney for the defense. Until he made his address on behalf of these Anarchists we had every reason to believe that he was a loyal and devoted Christian, but his comparison of these braggart assassins to the meek and lowly Jesus has earned for him the contempt of every Christian in the world. The doctrines of his clients are as different in essence from those of Christ and his Apostles as the counterfeit is from the genuine coin. There is a difference wide as heaven is from hell between 'the love of Christ constraining us' to give up our property for the benefit of suffering humanity, and the use of dynamite, the revolver and dirk to accomplish that object. But we are living in 'the last days' and must expect such counterfeits to appear. It is to be hoped that poor Fielden will be profited in these, his last days, by what he heard in the Adelphi Mission when he attended our meetings for the purpose of breaking them up."

MORE LODGE WORK IN MEMPHIS.

THE LIVING WAY OFFICE GUTTED.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Early this morning, Thursday, September 9th, I was aroused from sleep by some one knocking at my door, exclaiming, "Bro. Countee, the Living Way office has been broken open, and the presses and type all destroyed." I hastily donned my apparel, and in five minutes I was there, and lo! I found four cases of type, and eight galleys of matter, set for to-day's issue of our paper, all emptied into the street; the press dismantled, belts taken out and several parts of the cylinder press thrown away, thereby damaging us to the amount of $150. There are several things very peculiar about this outrage, perpetrated, of course, by the vandals of the secret lodge system. Our office is situated on a popular street and only seventy-five feet from a large electric light, and near a corner which is more or less under police surveillance. These vandals of the lodge went into our office, lit a lamp, took the monkey wrench, unscrewed the bolts from the press, threw them away, and carried the cases and galleys out one by one under a blaze of electricity as bright as day,—and yet no one saw it! Strange, very strange! Yet we survive. One brother from Augusta, Ark., called to see us this morning, and, in the midst of our wreck, said, "The Living Way has broken up all of the societies in our country. Don't let it stop." We are by no means discouraged. God helping us, we mean to go forward. This is another self-evident truth of the glories of the "ancient institution" whose terminus is the grand lodge above (below). The Living Way will come out as usual, but until we can replenish our stock of type we will have to use some plate matter for which we have to beg the indulgence of our readers. And we now offer to all who will aid us by subscribing for the Living Way, between now and November 1st, the low rate of $1.25 for one year. Pray for us. We are yours in the midst of the fray for God and the right, cost what it may.

R. N. COUNTEE.

PROHIBITION UNSHACKLED BY LODGERY.

A PLEA FOR A UNION OF REFORM PARTIES, FROM THE DISCOURSE BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD IN SARATOGA, N. Y., AUGUST 29, 1886.

And that man perished not alone in his iniquity.—Joshua 22, 20.

More than two-thirds of the Old Testament and a large share of the the New are political writings; and the direst denunciations and most fearful executions in both are for political crimes. Korah and his troop were engulfed by an earthquake; Nadab and Abihu fell dead with their censors in their hands. Three thousand corpses fell about "the calf which Aaron had made;" and Achan, with his sons, daughters, oxen, asses, sheep, tent, treasures–all that he had–was stoned, burned and buried by his countrymen in "the valley of trouble" in the Arabian desert. What crimes had these persons committed to justify such a chapter of horrors? The answer is contained in just two words—RELIGIOUS INVENTIONS! These overturn society and sink States. The Supreme God, Maker of Heaven and Earth, had given them a beneficent religion as the basis of their civil polity, which Christ condensed into the love of God and our neighbor; and said that all the rest of the Bible hung on these two. To guard and give effect to these two all-comprehending precepts, he gave them a holy marriage, uniting two persons—a man and a woman—and a "just and equal"state, requiring men to do as they would be done by. And he promised them a heaven beyond this life which was simply a holy family enlarged; where God is father, Christ the elder brother, and angels ministering spirits. And the crime and sin of all ages, tribes and nations, has been and now is, to adulterate, mix, add to, confound and invent substitutes for this simple and glorious religion of Christ, so as to leave men without any fixed standard of law and morals.

The offence of Achan and the others mentioned was two-fold; crime, and sin—political and religious—and the Achans of humanity have been ever since, and now are, following in their footsteps. Doubtless the garment which Achan took was well made, the shekels good silver and the wedge good gold. But the trouble was they were "Babylonish," and Babylon then was, as mystic Babylon still is, the seat of the world's idolatry; and date juice and other strong drinks then were, as alcohol, opium, tobacco and what not now are, the stimulants and accompaniments of idolatry—subsidiary and subordinate to it.

In an age of temperance societies, Joseph Smith and Mr. T. V. Powderly preach temperance. They relied, and can rely, to subjugate men, on a sworn system of secrecy and despotism, enforced by solemn oaths, initiations and rites. But drunkenness ever follows idolatry. When I was in Utah, there was plenty of beer in Salt Lake, and two Mormons were murdered by poisoned whisky on Bear river. And my neighbors in Chicago who are socialists, on one Sabbath marched to the place of speaking with military music and such mottoes as: "Bread or Blood. Our Children are Starving at Home!" and spent hundreds of dollars for beer that day after they got on the lake shore. All those socialists and anarchists pay dues to secret societies. The lodge and liquor are thus twins–Siamese twins.

Why is it that men in liquor are often garrulously religious? Liquor and false religion always and easily blend. The Greek fraternities in Yale College commonly take the candidates to their secret initiations through the brandy shop. Drunkenness and idolatry alike incapacitate the man for morals or religion by leaving no substantial ideas in his head. One hundred years ago leading New England clergy were splitting the hairs of doctrine, while New England rum and cider-brandy were taking their people to hell in numbers, some ministers included. And when men have broken away from the Bible and sound sense into mesmerism or the worship of familiar spirits, leaving not two substantial ideas in their minds, they always appear raised and eloquent like men in drink, merry as Aaron's calf worshipers and sincere as maniacs, Mormons or socialists.

This, then, was the crime of Achan and his compeers. They were putting God's children on the road to Satan's worship, which was fatal for time and eternity. And this afterwards happened. In the days of Jeremiah, the infiltrations of the surrounding religions of that day had run that wonderful nation down so that they knew not by what to swear a witness, or how to try a murderer or imprison a thief. "Woe to the drunkards of Ephraim," was really a woe against that whole nation, for they sold girls for wine, (Joel, 3:3,) and put bottles to their neighbor's mouths to make them drunken also. (Hab. 2:15.) And the stupid priest and turbaned Turk, the cringing native, the pilgrim beggar and the wandering Arab now starve on a land once flowing with milk and honey. Step by step, side by side, came national idolatry and national ruin till, blinded by their lodge-traditions and frivolous side-worships, they crucified the son of God without knowing what they did. Their union of twelve tribes or states has become a page in history and their name of Jew the by-word of the nations.

But if Americans choose to amuse themselves with a multitude of lodges, large and little, with secret insurance companies with no members but "of good moral character" and "opened and closed with prayer;" if they choose to fill their consciences and court houses with secret oaths and get happy in night assemblies before strange altars, with "grand high priests" and devil worships, (for all are devil worships which omit Christ,) pray whose business is it but his own?

The answer is contained in the text: "That man perished not alone in his iniquity." When nations go down all suffer, the good and the bad together. We, our children, and children's children must live, suffer or enjoy with these lodge-worshipers in these United States and stand or fall with the children of our neighbors, and just so truly as we know that, in the words of Lincoln, "No nation can endure part slave and part free," just so truly we know that no nation can permanently endure with conflicting oaths in its court house.

When the secret lodge system first set foot on the soil of the United States (1733) it was regarded by the wisest and best men with detestation and dread as hostile to civil liberty and the Christian religion. Dr. Hopkins of Newport, Rhode Island, speaks of the lodge building rising in view from his study window, as belonging to "the kingdom of Satan," and Dr. Williston of East Haven, Ct., said, "A Freemason is hand in hand with the devil." And Dr. Richard Storrs of Braintree, Mass., said to the speaker that such was the common sentiment of the New England ministry in his early youth, which was the purest period of our Republic. And older citizens of New York well remember when the secret lodge was regarded with such dread and abhorrence that the lodges in the non-slave holding States generally gave up their charters or suspended their existence. Since the fall of slavery, the discussion of the secret orders has been renewed. Eighteen years ago (1868) a large convention of Christians, representing thirteen denominations, met in Pittsburgh and formed a national association which has been growing steadily ever since. And four years later (1872) a party was formed in Oberlin, Ohio, to resist the secret orders by votes. They named themselves "The American Party," their principles being the same as the founders of the Republic. At the last general election in 1884, the American party, its own candidate having withdawn, almost unanimously voted with the Prohibition party, and all would have done so but for the complicity of some of the members of the latter with secret lodges.

United States Senator Colquitt of Georgia, now speaking for prohibition in this State, asked us last week at the Silver Lake Assembly: "Why do you not continue to vote with the Prohibitionists?

The answer to Senator Colquitt is already given: We cannot conscientiously do so. Where wisdom, decency or benevolence or just and unavoidable war requires concealment, we do not object to it, but we regard secret orders as vicious in principle, and always and necessarily corrupt in practice. No matter how worthy their professed objects or how trifling the matters concealed, or the amount of secrecy; an organization requiring an oath or pledge of secrecy of its candidates before they are informed what they are to conceal, is thereby different from and opposed to a Republican State and a Church of Christ. In the words of the younger Seward, who was wounded when Lincoln was slain: "A secret political society is hostile to every American principle." And for a secret society in a country like ours, where all men are voters and women becoming so, to profess to be non political is to insult reason and deny fact. To form a society to influence the drinking habits, money interests or the social or general welfare of the whole people, and pledge the members of that society to conceal its proceedings, is withholding from our neighbors what they have a right to know. And to pledge husbands to life-long concealment from their wives, children from their parents, office-holders from their constituents, friends from friends in the community and brethren from brethren in the church, is to declare war on society and commence the siege. And as Jesus Christ "in secret said nothing" (John 18 20,) and required his disciples to do as he did, every secret order is organized war on the Son of God and the Saviour of mankind. And in the words of a speaker in the Pittsburgh Prohibition convention which nominated St. John, "No man who is under special secret obligations to a part of the people is fit to rule the whole," and Mr. John B. Finch and Mr. J. N. Stearns are under such special secret obligations.

But why, then, did you vote for St. John, who was the candidate of the party of Finch and Stearns?

Because we were prohibitionists before the Prohibition party was formed; because we approved of its objects; because our candidate asked leave to withdraw, and Gov. St. John assured us he stood "on every plank of our platform," two articles of which were these:

> We hold that the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks is the true policy on the temperance question. And,
>
> We hold that the charters granted to secret lodges by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn.

We therefore gave St. John an estimated vote of about one-third of all he received in November, 1884.

"Well, why not obey Senator Colquitt's advice, and continue to vote with the Prohibition party; selecting such candidates only as agree with you?"

We answer:

First. Because reason and self respect forbid it. A party, part secret and part open, is "part iron and part clay." To meet and consult as do the Women's "Unions" and "Temperance Alliances," in open conventions, knowing that part of those open conventions will retire behind tyled doors and consult secretly, is neither wisdom nor prudence.

Second. All Masonic Prohibitionists have sworn in secret to stand by their brother Masons, many of whom are distillers, brewers and saloonists; and they will keep their secret oaths or not. If they keep them, they will betray the prohibition cause. If they break their secret oaths, while professing to hold them, then they betray their brother Masons and are unfit associates for honest men. We fear they will do as they have sworn and betray the temperance cause.

"Well, why not you go your own way and let the Prohibitionsts go theirs?"

We answer: This is what we propose to do, unless we can unite on Christian, equal terms. But there are a thousand reasons why the Prohibition party and the

[Continued on 12th page.]

THE HOME.

TIRED.

O! all thy promises, O Christ,
This sometimes seems the best—
"Come to me, ye that labor,
And I will give you rest."
We are so tired, we cannot care
For even our things. We creep,
Like weary children, near to thee,
And only pray to sleep.

We have been strong to dare and do;
We have gone forth to fight;
With fierce ones led to victory,
Have striven for the right.
We were not called us we have gone,
With joyful steps and free:
But now can worn out hearts and hands
Avail to fight for thee!

We have gone forth to work among
Thy busy servants, Lord;
Oh, pleasant were the merry songs
We sang with sweet accord!
But night comes after the long day,
And we, ah! are oppressed,
Come to thee, Master, in the dark
And ask for leave to rest.

Oh, Jesus, thou wast weary, too,
And thou wilt understand
Why the untold tasks are put
From our tho nerveless hand.
We thank thee for thy patient love
That gives to us its best:
We turn from all the world beside,
And come to thee for rest.

—Marianne Farningham.

A NEW ENGLAND SABBATH.

There are still villages among the hills in New England—we cannot call them remote hills, because the locomotive darts up every valley and fills the woods upon the highest hillside with the shrill, eager cry of hurrying life and bustling human society; but even where the steam-scream is heard softened and far away there are yet villages nestling in the hills in which also the old New England Sabbath lingers and nestles. The village street, broad and arched with thick-foliaged sugar maples, is always still. In the warm silence of a summer noon, as you sit reading upon the piazza or in the shade of a tree, the only moving object in the street is a load of hay slowly passing under the maples, drawn by oxen, or a group of loiterers in front of the village store pitching quoits. The creak of the wagon, the ring of the quoits, or the laugh and exclamation of players, are the only sounds, except, indeed, the musical clangor of the blacksmith's anvil, as his quick hammer molds the sparkling horseshoe or beats out the bar.

These are drowsy summer sounds that only emphasize the stillness of the week-day. But the stillness of Sunday is startling. A faint tinkle of cows in the early morning filing to the pasture, and the warning shout of the bare-footed boy who drives them, are the only sounds that break the Sabbath silence, except, again, the chirp and song of birds in the trees, which are no respecters of days, and which sing as lustily, even in the deacon's maples, on "Sabbath morning" as in the tavern ash on the Fourth of July. The cows pass, and all is still. The street is deserted, save at intervals a solitary figure upon some small errand. The sun lies hot upon the pastures and hillsides. There is no mail Sunday, no newspaper, no barber to visit. Now and then men in their daily dress are seen at the barn door or in their shed or yard doing their chores. They are bringing wood, milking, feeding the cattle, but all is spectral. There is no sound. Even the wind in summer fears to be a Sabbath-breaker. It is an enchanted realm. Have the Blue Laws such vitality? Are we still held by that grim spell?

It is 9 o'clock, and the meeting-house bell, with a bold voice of authority, as if it had the sole right to disturb the silence and to speak out, warns the village and the outlying farms that it is the Sabbath, and everybody must prepare to come to meeting; and little children hear the bell with awe as if it were a living voice, and sacred as a part of the Sabbath, and to be heeded under unknown penalties. Obey thy father and mother; thou shalt not lie; thou shalt not steal; thou shalt go to meeting—seem to them all commandments of the First Table. The sound of the bell lingers in their ears and heart as a "thus saith the Lord." And lo! at the second bell, the men, who have changed the daily dress and put on their Sabbath clothes, issue from the houses on the village street with their wives and children, and through the street, closely following each other, and pounding along in a cloud of dust comes the long line of wagons from the farms. The sun beats down remorselessly, and the man in heavy woolens, such as he wears in the sleigh in January, sits between two women in their Sabbath garments, and the horses trot with a Sabbath jog, and all turn up to the stone platform by the meeting-house, upon which the women alight, and the man drives the horse under the shed, and then chats soberly with the others at the door.

But the minister passes in, not clad in gown, and bands, and cocked hat, as in the older day, but in plain black clothes. The chatting loiterers follow him in. The bell which has gathered the village into the sacred fold rests from its labors. There is no one in the street. There is no sound. But after a few moments the music of "Old Hundred" pours out of the open doors and windows of the meeting-house, sung by a well-balanced and well-trained choir. It is the opening hymn, and it has a full, vigorous, triumphant sound. Once more, "thus saith the Lord." There is another interval of silence, but at a little distance you can hear the voice of reading and prayer. Hark! another hymn. It is "Federal Street," or "Coronation," or "Dundee," but whatever it is, it is a strain from other years; and voices and faces and scenes and days that are no more, all blend in the familiar music, and a Sabbath benediction rests upon the listener's soul.

A long silence follows, broken by fragmentary sounds of energetic speech. Is the preacher emphasizing and elucidating the five points? Is he denouncing and alarming that tough regiment in woolen, or winning the wandering and doubting mind? Is his sermon an official and perfunctory discourse by which the little children are soothed to sleep, and in which the elders like unqualified damnation and the hottest fire, as a toper likes "power" in his dram? Or is his pure and manly life and conversation his true preaching, and the Sabbath sermon only a statement of the principles of such holy living, and a revival of the colors in the immortal portrait of the holy life of the Gospel.

Before we can answer there is a burst of singing, then two strokes of the bell to announce that "meeting is out," then an issue of the congregation, a procession homeward, a driving away of wagons, and soon, once more, the silent, solitary street. In the afternoon there is the Sabbath-school, and the good pastor preaches at one of the school-houses in the farther part of the town. But it is always the Sabbath, in every sight and sound, until the sun has set, and then from the neighboring house upon the hill above the village street comes a clear, resonant soprano voice singing hymns and prolonging the solemn spell of the holy day. The tithing men are gone, and the deacons do not sit severe and conspicuous in the meeting-house, and the minister has not the air of a lord spiritual of the village, and the genius of modern times and the spirit of the age are entertained with full consciousness of what they are. But it is still the sober and restrained and decorous New England Sabbath which recurs every seventh day, and the honest, industrious, intelligent, self-respecting, plain-living village recalls remotely the day of the severer dispensation, and illustrates the noble manhood that the severe dispensation fostered.—George William Curtis in Harper's Magazine for September.

THE JEW'S PREPARATION FOR THE SABBATH.

The closing hours of Friday afternoon are the best of the week for studying the Jews of Jerusalem. The dragoman who conducted me to their quarter bore the patriarchal name of "Isaac." His story was an interesting one. His parents and his grand parents, at the time of his birth, were living at Salonica. The family without an exception were true Israelites. Through the efforts of a missionary the grandfather was converted to Christianity. In due time every member of the family followed his example, until eventually the entire twenty-eight became communicants of the Protestant church.

It was nearly five of an April afternoon when we came to the Jews' "wailing place." All told, perhaps sixty Jews were imitating the example of their brethren in Jerome's day (400 A. D.), when Roman soldiers allowed them to weep beside Jerusalem's ruins. These were now pressing the stones of the Herodian wall of the Temple enclosure with their foreheads, reading their Hebrew prayer-books and weeping over the fall of their beautiful house. I asked an aged woman so bent and feeble with the infirmities of years that she could scarcely drag herself to the spot, what words she was reciting from her Psalter. She pointed out the sentences: "O Lord, the heathen are come into thine inheritance;" "The enemy hath persecuted my soul;" "He hath smitten my life down to the ground;" "My heart within me is desolate;" "I remember the days of old."

Not far from this Polish woman was a young girl who, though the tears stood in her eyes, still seemed desirous of catching our attention. She was glad to announce that her home had been in Brooklyn, and further inquiry revealed the fact that her parents, a few years since, had brought their whole household to live and die near the sepulchres of their ancestors. The world seemed very narrow as among this gathering of Spanish, Russian and German Jews, with all sorts of red fezes and fur-trimmed velvet caps and long side-curls, there was one who could talk of "Fulton Ferry" and "the Heights" as glibly and as intelligently as the travelers who had been priding themselves on their long distance from home. We felt, however, a more personal interest in the pathetic scene, as an American joined in the lamentation: "We sit alone and weep: because of our greatness that is departed: because of the Temple which is destroyed, we sit alone and weep."

From the wailing place it is only a few steps to the Synagogues. They are all alike in having great domes for roofs, as though to form a contrast to the minarets of the Moslem and the towers of the Christian. That of the native Syrians showed the lattice-covered gallery where the women may sit, seeing the men but unseen by them, as in the House of Commons. The synagogue of the Spaniards was noticeable for a raised circular platform in the center where there are the "chief seats" and the depositories of the sacred writings. The synagogue of the Pharisee proved the most interesting. The people who were fast collecting to read their prayers as the sun went down and their Sabbath began, were very soiled Russians. A basin for washing at the entrance, was a hint that their snuffy hands refused to accept. Each had a small desk on which he placed his prayer book. The Rabbi began the service by reading a few words. Immediately all responded by praying aloud, and for half an hour they swayed their bodies backward and forward, until the very air seemed charged with the Hebrew rhythm.

A hurried departure soon brought us to the private house of a Jew. He was to show us how "the blessing of the Sabbath" takes place. The room in which his family lived, by day and by night, was very small, a divan at one end ten feet long and six deep being the sleeping place for six persons. Just as the sun disappeared below the horizon, the head of the house, holding a glass of wine in his hand while all stood, read in Hebrew the commandment to "Remember the Sabbath." The family repeated it after him. Then all united in petitions for help to keep it. These being finished the father touched the glass of wine to his own lips, passed it to his aged mother who followed his example, who in turn passed it to the wife. When she had tasted, she caused her two children to drink and rubbed the wine upon the lips of her infant child, and thus the Sabbath was "blessed."

As the husband had been paid liberally for allowing us to witness this ceremony, his love of money was aroused. He intimated that he wished us to go upon the flat house-top with him. Once there he took us as far away as possible from the observation of his wife and mother, who he said were very devout, and showing his phylacteries wished us to purchase them. They were of black leather, two inches square, with the proper straps for binding seven times about the arm and wrist. There was also one for the forehead. In them were concealed the four customary Scripture quotations, written on parchment. The bargain was secretly made, lest the pious women should interfere with such a sacrilegious sale to Gentiles, but not until he had taught the method of binding them on the left arm, so that the straps should three times make the Hebrew symbol of the Almighty and should bring the phylactery, when the arm was bent close to the heart. This Jew lacked the conscientiousness of another of his brethren who, as a worker in olive wood, never puts a cross on any article of his manufacture, whatever the sum of money may be that is offered him.

Seen in their most interesting features the Jews of Jerusalem are in many respects a disappointment. Col. Wilson, the resident American Consul, speaking of their poverty said that $40,000 a month is distributed among them as a charity. They have come to Jerusalem as religious patriots, to pray near the ruins of the Temple and keep guard over the memories of the past. Their superior piety, they claim, demands the pecuniary recognition of their brethren in Europe and America. And so this large sum is a contribution every month to the general poverty of Jerusalem.—Rev. J. G. K. McClure, in New York Observer.

BABY HAS GONE TO SCHOOL.

The baby has gone to school, ah, me!
What will the mother do,
With never a call to button or pin,
Or tie a little shoe?
How can she keep herself busy all day,
With the little "hindering thing" away?

Another basket to fill with lunch,
Another "good-by" to say,
And the mother stands at the door to see
Her baby march away;
And turns with a sigh that is half relief,
And half a something akin to grief.

She thinks of a possible future morn,
When the children, one by one,
Will go from their homes out into the world,
To battle with life alone,
And not even the baby be left to cheer
The desolate home of that future year.

She picks up garments here and there,
Thrown down in careless haste;
And tries to think how it would seem
If nothing were displaced;
If the house were always as still as this,
How could she bear the loneliness?

—Selected.

HOW THE BRIDGE WAS CROSSED.

"Mother," said a little girl, "what did David mean when he said, 'Preserve me, O God, for in thee do I put my trust?'"

"Do you remember," said her mother, "the little girl we saw walking with her father in the woods yesterday?"

"Oh, yes, mother. Wasn't she beautiful?"

"She was a gentle, loving little thing, and her father was very kind to her. Do you remember what she said when they came to the narrow bridge over the brook?"

"I don't like to think about that bridge, mother; it makes me giddy. Don't you think it is very dangerous, just those two loose planks laid across and no railing? If she had stepped a little on either side she would have fallen into the water."

"Do you remember what she said?" repeated the mother.

"Yes, mamma; she stopped a minute as if afraid to go over, and then looked up into her father's face and asked him to take hold of her hand, and said, 'You will take hold of me, dear father; I don't feel afraid when you have hold of my hand.' And her father looked so lovingly upon her and took tight hold of her hand, as if she were very precious to him."

"Well, my child," said the mother, "I think David felt just like that little girl when he wrote these words you have asked me about."

"Was David going over a bridge, mother?"

"Not such a bridge as the one we saw in the woods; but he had come to some difficult place in his life—there was some trouble before him that made him afraid, and he looked up to God just as that little girl looked up to her father, and said, 'Preserve me, O God, for in thee do I put my trust.' It is just as if he had said, 'Please take care of me, my kind, heavenly Father; I do not feel afraid when thou art with me and taking hold of my hand.'"—S. S. Visitor.

TRAINING THE EYES.

The following story from the Penn Monthly is related of Agassiz, and it is sufficiently characteristic of this remarkably accurate observer to have the merit of probability. We are told that once upon a time the professor had occasion to select an assistant from one of his classes. There were a number of candidates for the post of honor, and finding himself in a quandary as to which one he would choose, the happy thought occurred to him of subjecting three of the more promising students in turn to the simple test of describing the view from his laboratory window, which overlooked the side yard of the college. One said that he saw merely a board fence and a brick pavement; another added a stream of soapy water; a third detected the color of the paint on the fence, noted a green mould or fungus on the bricks, and evidences of "bluing" in the water, besides other details. It is needless to tell which candidate was awarded the coveted position.

Houdin, the celebrated prestidigitateur, attributed his success in his profession mainly to his quickness of perception, which he tells us in his entertaining autobiography, he acquired by educating his eyes to detect a large number of objects at a single glance. His simple plan was to select a shop window full of a miscellaneous assortment of articles, and walk rapidly past it a number of times every day, writing down each object which impressed itself on his mind. In this way he was able, after a time, to detect instantaneously all of the articles in the window, even though they might be numbered by scores.—Scientific American.

ANCIENT WRITING MATERIALS.

Very likely when the Prophet Ezekiel was commanded to write about the City of Jerusalem, he would have been glad if he could have stepped into a stationer's and bought a few quires of letter paper to write on. But he had no such advantage; he was compelled to write his account on smooth tiles, and we find fragments of these to this day. The heaps of broken pots and crockery of all sorts, which are so abundant in all Eastern towns, prove that bits of smooth stone or tiles were constantly used for this purpose. The Island of Elephantine, on the Nile, is said to have furnished more than a hundred specimens. One of these is a soldier's leave of absence, scribbled on a fragment of an old vase. How little those scribes and accountants imagined the interest with which their descendants would one day treasure their rough notes! Still quainter were the writing materials of the ancient Arabs, who, before the time of Mohammed, used to carve their annals on the shoulder-blades of sheep. The "sheep-bone chronicles" were strung together, and thus preserved. After awhile sheep's bones were replaced by sheep's skin, and the manufacture of parchment was brought to such perfection as to place it among the refinements of art. We hear of vellums that were tinted yellow, others white. Others were dyed of a rich purple; and the writing thereon was in golden ink, with gold borders and many colored decorations. These precious manuscripts were anointed with the oil of cedar to preserve them from moths. We hear of one such in which the name of Mohammed is adorned with garlands of tulips and carnations painted in vivid colors. Still more precious was the silky paper of the Persians, powdered with gold and silver dust, whereon were painted rare illuminations; while the book was perfumed with attar of roses or essence of sandal-wood. Of the demand for writing materials, one may form some faint notion from the vast manuscript libraries of which records have been preserved, as having been collected by the Caliphs both of the East and West, the former in Bagdad, the latter in Andalusia, where there were eighty great public libraries, besides that vast one at Cordova. We also hear of private libraries, such as that of a physician who declined an invitation from the Sultan of Bokhara because the carriage of his books would have required four hundred camels.—Sel.

TEMPERANCE.

A STRONG PLEA FOR OPEN WORK.

Now the Prohibition party is particularly hot in its denunciation of the old parties for saying in their platforms what they do not mean—for playing double and concealing their intentions—for making false promises. And perhaps the conduct of the old politicians in this respect deserves a condemnation far more scathing than it ever received.

But while our whole party professes to be thoroughly open and honest and truthful, we find our California section of it like some others, afraid in convention to say what it means to do. Afraid to put on paper what it thinks or intends to do about a Sabbath law and honest suffrage, for fear we will lose votes. The Censor is ashamed of such a policy.

If we intend to adopt in our system the Ten Commandments and the whole law of Moses, the bilking of our intention to do so in the platform would be a fraud and a cowardice. Let us take an honest position on Prohibition, on suffrage, on the Sabbath rest, promise to do justice in government savings banks for the people, railroad and telegraph management, in the question of labor, immigration, land monopoly, etc., and be as individuals and as a party, thoroughly open, honest, truthful and manly, as if we stood in the visible presence of God; and then let our party go down to the deepest oblivion if truth and honesty and nobility will carry it there—rather—a thousand times rather, than to gain a victory at the polls this year, by opening the door to the first suspicion of duplicity and trickery.

The party and its cause will be vastly stronger every time it loses a member who counsels playing the old party tricks and concealing our intentions. If we are going to favor anything let us say so; nothing will lose us so many votes as the loss of respect and confidence in our candor and honesty and firmness in the right.—Censor, Los Angeles, Cal.

SALOONS READY FOR WAR.

At the late nominating convention of the Prohibitionists in this city, the following letter received by the Chairman, B. M. Davenport, through the mail was read and received with many expressions of indignation:

CHICAGO, Aug. 24, 1886—B. M. Davenport, Chairman Cook County Prohibition Committee: Sir: You prohibition cranks have broken up our business in Kansas, Iowa, Maine, Rhode, Island, Georgia, and other parts of the country, and you are now working like mad devils to drive us out of business in Illinois. Perhaps you think you'll some time close up the saloons in Chicago. We want to tell you before that is done every damned prohibition fanatic will die as Haddock did. We will kill every preacher, burn every church, massacre every member of every temperance society, and all the praying women before we will surrender our liberty or give up our lawful business. If we pay our license to help support the schools, the city authorities are bound to protect us. If they don't do it we will protect ourselves, if it takes a cruel war to do it. We wan't to tell you that unless you resign your position on the County Prohibition Committee and quit organizing prohibition clubs in Chicago, you have not got many more days to live. We must make an example of somebody here in Chicago to let the cranks know that we mean business. We have you marked for our first victim. If you don't want to be sent after Haddock let up on the temperance business at once and attend to your hotel. In earnest, SALOON-KEEPERS.

DRINK AND DEATH.

Last Monday afternoon Henry J. Christoph, one of the best known Germans in Chicago and the head of a private bank doing the largest business of any like house in the city, committed suicide by shooting. He was only 37 years old, and came to Chicago in 1868. He was always, say the press reports, a drinking man, but until a few years ago he was a very moderate drinker. Then he acquired a strong passion for whisky and brandy, which soon became his favorite stimulant, and he learned to drink it to excess. Last March he resolved to quit the habit forever, as he came to realize that he was drinking more than a business man should drink. He went to Hot Springs, where he was accompanied by his wife and two children, and he remained there nearly a month. When he returned to Chicago to resume the management of his bank he had succeeded in breaking off his drinking habits almost entirely. Within a month or two, however, he began drinking again with renewed vigor, and he was frequently under the influence of liquor during his business hours. At such times he was quarrelsome even toward his wife and children, and it is said that he treated them harshly on more than one occasion. Christoph's bank was patronized by all the brewers of Chicago, and his self-destruction is a terrible lesson to all these manufacturers of drink.

Mary Clement Leavitt, the missionary of the World's W. C. T. U., has been speaking to large audiences in Japan. Mr. Ishimots, who acted as an interpreter for the Rev. Joseph Cook when he visited that country, has acted as interpreter for Mrs. Leavitt. He is a teacher in the Union College, a cultured gentleman, and greatly aids Mrs. Leavitt in her work of promoting temperance among that people.

Milwaukee last year produced 1,066,030 barrels of beer, or 86,290 barrels more than the year before. The Milwaukee Prohibitionist says, "There is in this city one saloon for twenty-six voters, and as half the people do not drink, every thirteen drunkards must support one saloon. How many women support the thirteen drunkards who support each saloon?"

Before the ports of Japan were opened to the Christian nations of the world there were only eleven intoxicating drinks known in the country; now there are more than 200, and many horrible vices peculiar to highly cultivated nations are becoming common in Japan. This is one of the ways in which we show the besotted heathen what utterly inferior beings they are.

The most enthusiastically received speaker at Chautauqua this year was Miss Frances E. Willard, who gave her latest lecture on Social Purity to an audience of 4,000 people. Miss Willard will be the guest of the Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Cook while in Ticonderoga, N. Y., where she is to speak at the National Gospel temperance camp-meeting.

[Continued from 9th page.]

American party should act together; some of which are these:

First. We have headquarters; large buildings, paid for, in Chicago and in Washington, D. C., and we wish the Prohibition party and cause should have the benefit of them, and of our papers published in them and throughout the country.

Second. The great mass of the Prohibitionists are heart and soul with us and we with them.

The venerable Dr. John Marsh, Secretary of the National Society before Mr. Stearns, abhorred and resisted secret temperance lodges. The Apostle of Temperance, Dr. Charles Jewett, went into the Good Templar's lodges, but came out, and in his book, "Forty Year's Fight with the Drink Demon," gives a strong condemnation of secret temperance lodges, running through several pages. John B Gough, like Dr. Jewett, was initiated, but declared his disgust with the regalia, etc., as only Mr. Gough could do it. Henry Wilson, Vice-President of the United States, joined the Good Templars, but at the first meeting after he had joined, moved to publish their ritual. Mary B. Willard said: "When my husband joined the Masonic lodge, I thought I should die." Mary Allen West, editor of the Union Signal, detests secret societies. Every upright, conscientious temperance man, but especially women, will accord with these sentiments of the great temperance leaders. We therefore wish the two to be one, and cast a vote in 1888 which will settle the question forever, that the lodge and saloon must go.

LITERATURE.

NATURE AND OTHER ADDRESSES.—By Ralph Waldo Emerson. Pp., 186. Price, cloth, 40 cents. John B. Alden, New York.

It is from forty to fifty years ago that the great American transcendental philosopher began to attract attention and gather disciples by the publication of the essays and orations contained in this neat and handy little volume. Since then various editions have been given to American readers, but we doubt if any so cheap and convenient as the present. So long as the reading people of America are divided in their estimate of Emerson his writings will be sought for; and among them these earlier essays will be read with greatest pleasure. They were prepared before he had become more mature and abstruse in his philosophy, and his followers about Boston began to diefy him as a second Christ. Of his intuitional and subtle style of thought a Scotch critic has observed, it "charms, animates, and vividly excites the mental faculty of his reader, but it does not satisfy or settle any question conclusively. Hence his speculations on religion, philosophy, literature and life, though stimulating to the young are coldly regarded by men of mature and sage understanding."

The Herald of Health is one of our best publications of moderate price intended to promote a higher type of mental, moral and physical manhood. The September number opens with an article by Prof. Richard Proctor, the scientist, on the "Influence of the Mind on the Body." "Temperance Physiology," "Bondage to Corsets," "Egypt as a Health Resort" follow. A letter from Red Cloud, the aged chief of the Sioux Nation, reveals in the breast of this Indian a noble spirit of wise affection for his people, which might well be emulated by the men chosen to legislate and execute the laws of the white race.

The Library Magazine contains the following strong table of contents: "Genius and Precocity;" "Home Rule for Ireland;" "British Rule in India;" "State Purchase of Railways;" "A Pilgrimage to Sinai;" "Wordsworth;" "Our Railroad Methods;" "Is the House of Lords worth Preserving."

The head of a sheik is a well drawn and characteristic portrait forming the frontispiece of the volume of the English Illustrated Magazine which is completed with the September number. "Dogs of the Chase," "Fashions in Hair," "A September Day in the Valley of the Arno" are illustrated articles in the same number. American readers will be particularly interested in the description of a dynamite factory—a place generally avoided by journalists.

Rev. James Johnston contributes a lengthy and valuable article to the Missionary Review, "A Century of Protestant Missions," in which he earnestly argues for a great increase in the gifts of the church for the spread of the Gospel, since the world spends vast sums on its indulgences and folly. In the review of independent foreign missions the work of the Faith Missions beginning in Oberlin are reported, also the Liberian mission sustained by the Quaker philanthropist, Edward S. Morris, of Philadelphia, and the work of Robert L Harris, of Robert Shemeld in Natal, also of W. W. Kelley further north at Innambane.

Probably the largest literary prize ever offered is one of $1,000,000 to be given in 1925 by the Russian National Academy for the best work on the life and reign of Alexander I. In 1825, shortly after the death of Alexander I, the sum of 50,000 roubles was offered by one of his favorite ministers to be given as a prize a century after his death, and it is this sum at compound interest which will amount in 1925 to $1,000,000.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The new Free Methodist church at Prospect Park near Wheaton, Ill., built under the charge of Rev. A. W. Parry, was dedicated last Sabbath.

—Rev. Charles S. Uzzell, who founded the People's Tabernacle at Denver, now carried on by his brother Thomas, has rented the premises at 38 and 40 South Halsted street, in this city, for the beginning of a similar work here. The enterprise was formally inaugurated last Saturday evening. Drs. Goodwin and Burns and others interested in Chicago mission work were present.

—The general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church will begin its sessions in this city Oct. 6, in Central Music Hall. This is the first time this council of the Episcopal church has come so far west as Chicago. Among the delegates are Hon. George F. Edmunds, of Vermont; Hon. Angus Cameron, of Wisconsin; Hon. C. Delano, of Ohio; Hon. Hamilton Fish, of New York; R. C. Winthrop, of Massachusetts, and J. C. Bancroft Davis, of Maryland. The representation will include sixty-five dioceses, with five missionary jurisdictions.

—Rev. D. Simon of Prospect, Ohio, gave a Harvest address at Green Lake Park, near Delaware, Ohio, on the 2nd inst. The occasion was a kind of thanksgiving festival, held by the Evangelical Lutheran church of Delaware, of which Rev. E. Pfeiffer is pastor.

—The Rev. F. D. Gamewell, of the Chungking, West China Methodist Mission, writing of the recent riot in that place, says complaint was made that the mission was building on a place belonging to a dragon, who was exceedingly angered thereby. So the people rose and put down the mission churches and drove out the missionaries to appease the dragon, who must be akin to the one mentioned in Rev. 20: 2.

—Rev. R. T. Cross, in addition to his work in the West Denver Congregational church, has been acting superintendent of home missions for Colorado and Eastern Wyoming for nearly two years. He resigns this superintendency to take effect in September. The West Denver church still feels the good effects of its midsummer revival work.

—The Illinois Wesleyan Conference meets in Wheaton this week, beginning Wednesday. Bro. I. R. B. Arnold hopes to have one evening before the body to illustrate the modern phases of Baal worship.

—Rev. R. Stuart, of the United Presbyterian Mission in India, has been for some time sick with typhoid fever, but is recovering.

—Rev. W. P. McNary of the Midland, who has removed from St. Louis to Tarkis, Missouri, to take care of the college church of that place, preached the sermon before the College Springs Presbytery of the United Presbyterian church.

—The Rev. Richard Conradi, a missionary of the Seventh-Day Adventists in Russia, has been imprisoned at Bemperople, on the charge of spreading heresy, and has, it is said, been subjected to great indignities and cruelties.

—The recent action of the Waldensians in refusing to give up their name and adopt that of "Evangelical Church of Italy" will probably postpone for many years, if not defeat entirely, the proposed union of the Waldensian and the Free Church of Italy.

—Every week-day about 100,000 copies of the Bible, either in its entirety or in portions, are sent forth from the British and Foreign Society, and since its foundation it has issued translations in two hundred and fifty languages. During its last year of work, 3,118,304 Bibles, or portions, were issued.

—The International Sunday-school Executive committee, at its meeting in Chautauqua last week, fixed upon Chicago as the place, and June 1 to 3, 1887, as the time for holding the next international triennial Sunday-school convention.

—The work which Rev. P. A. Seguin, the ex-Roman Catholic priest, has undertaken in this city, has proved to be so successful that he is going to open another evangelical mission at 1838 South Clark street, where Gospel preaching is very much needed. He is planning also to open other missions soon in the city. His Sabbath-school for Chinamen, French and English has proved to be very successful. Despite the priestly oppositions and the negligence of policemen, who dare not protect him for fear of losing the respect and votes of the Romanists, the meetings are so well attended at 135 West Van Buren street that it has been necessary to enlarge the hall. Such efforts deserve the prayer and aid of Christians.

—Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday on the 21st ult., and his fortieth anniversary as pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims will be celebrated in November.

—The British Bible Society proposes to withdraw from Denmark, as it has already withdrawn from Sweden. In the latter country the withdrawal has had the effect of increasing the activity of the home society in a wonderful degree, and the same effect is hoped for in the case of Denmark.

—The report of the Baptist Missionary Union reveals remarkable activity and growing power on the part of the denomination. In the past seven years the receipts of the Union have been $2,282,883, an increase of sixty-six per cent over the receipts of the previous seven years. The number of missionaries has increased from 281 to 669. Over seven hundred churches have been organized, and four hundred and sixty-seven church edifices have been built. It is now claimed that five-sixths of the Baptists in the world are in the United States.

—Among the most interesting of missionary premises anywhere, is the Moffatt Institute at Keomman in South Africa. The mission station rises like an oasis amid a desert of mirage-producing sands. There are its fruit-trees, its pools of water, its growing corn, its village and its mission premises. The resident missionary is a son-in-law of the famous Robert Moffatt. Moffatt drained and cultivated this spot. His hands planted the healthy and varied fruit-trees that flourish there. Quinces, grapes, apples, pears, peaches of unsurpassed quality now abound. Thus Moffatt turned his gardener's experience of early days to account. The mission buildings are of stone, and occupy the four sides of a square. The institute, in which ten youths are being educated for evangelistic work, is on the west side. North and south are the houses of the missionaries. On the east side is the home for the pupils. The chapel, ninety feet by twenty-five, is across the valley. There is a printing department at present issuing in the Batlaping dialect the Revised Version of the New Testament. The work is done by natives who, as skilled artisans, can take their place beside the printers of any other community. The whole premises cost about sixty thousand dollars. Four medical missionaries are now laboring in Antananarivo, Madagascar, two of them in connection with the Norwegian Missionary Society, and two with the Friends Foreign Association and the London Missionary Society conjointly.—Independent.

NOTICES.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

The Michigan Christian Association will hold its semi-annual convention at South Locke, Ingham county, Michigan, commencing Tuesday evening, October 12, 1886, at 7 o'clock, in the Wesleyan church.

Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, and J. P. Stoddard, of Chicago, are expecting to be present. Let everybody keep this notice in mind, and prepare to attend. Trains will be met all day Tuesday. Parties wishing to be met later must write. Coming from the west, leave train at Williamston; from the east, leave train at Webberville. Conveyances in readiness at each place. Entertainment free. H. A. DAY, Sec'y.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

The Illinois Christian Association opposed to secret societies will hold its meeting in Opera Hall, Princeton, Bureau county, Tuesday evening, September 21st, at 7:30 o'clock, to continue through the 22nd and 23d. Addresses are expected from Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, Rev. Dr. Wm. Wishart, Rev. C. A. Bockman of Galesburg, Samuel E Holyoke of Galesburg, and others. Discussions of such interesting topics as are at present forced upon the public mind by the hostility of secret societies to social order and the personal independence of workingmen, will be ably maintained. Princeton is a beautiful town, distinguished for its culture and widely known as the home of the late Owen Lovejoy. As a result of his influence and that of his co laborers, it occupied an enviable position in the ranks of reform during the anti-slavery struggle. Entertainment will be provided for delegates from abroad. The central location and convenience of railway connection invite a large attendance of the friends of the Association. All churches and local associations in sympathy with the object of the meeting are earnestly requested to send delegates, and let every patriotic, Christian man and woman in the State make an effort to be present or to have a representative on the floor of the convention, that our counsels and prayers may be united for the enlightening of all our people upon the nature and evil tendency of the secret orders.

J. L. BARLOW, President.

H. L. KELLOGG, Secretary.

R. R. FARE TO THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION.—The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road will return delegates who pay full fare on that line at one-third fare to the point where the ticket was purchased, provided:

1. You get a certificate from the agent where you buy your ticket, that you have paid full fare.

2. You must obtain the signature of J. P. Stoddard to your certificate at the Convention, and present it so indorsed to the agent at Princeton from whom you will get your return ticket for one-third rate.

3. To secure this reduction there must be at least twenty-five tickets taken over the C. B. & Q. R. R.

The Illinois Central road will give the same rates returning from Mendota, where connection is made with the C. B. & Q. Certificates will be given at the convention to all paying full fare on the Central road, allowing them to buy tickets at one-third fare from Mendota to their homes.

Clergymen with permits are not included in the above arrangement.

SOUTHERN MINISTERS' FUND.

This is the fund from which the colored ministers of the South have received the Cynosure. It seems very desirable to continue this fund, and hence the special appeal in the Cynosure of Aug. 12th.

The following named persons have contributed to this fund this year, 1886, and such names will be added from week to week as donate to it in the future:

Jno Dorcas, J F Icke, Mrs A E Tyler, H Holbrook, Wm Mathews, O Hansen, Mrs S B Skeel, Mrs A F Rider, F W Capwell, A Hamilton, Mrs C H Richardson, N Martin, R Johnson, J Aylsworth, Mrs T S Couch, I Bancroft, S A Pratt, J Rutley, A Hamilton, H A Fischer, Mrs N E Kellogg, Mrs A B Kellogg, T Kingsnarth, M Phillips, Susannah G Reed, Lemuel Lester, W O Percival, Prof E Whipple, A G Laird, Prof H A Fischer, L Woodruff, L M Sampson, H Wykhuysen, P Bacon, H Preston, Rev J P Rogers, J Brandt, J A Austin, Mrs S H Nutting, D Hyde, Mrs M W Bingham, L E Lincoln.

Not reported before: Rev. Wm. Leuty, $50.00; J. Rutty, $10.00.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 6 to Sept. 11 inclusive:

A Lent, H Hull, H Ware, S H Spencer, J Springer, H B Wolcott, B Loveless, J Mulholland, Rev E Hildreth, P Reams, G Hiner, Rev W I Wilson, S A Bailey, Dr Guild, G S Robinson, S E Clark, K A Orvis, G Eley, I W Clark, B Williams, J K Glassford, W Northrop, G Keppel, A R Martin, J M Axley.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	75	@	75½
No. 3	68	@	69
Winter No 2			76¼
Corn—No. 2			39½
Oats—No. 2			25
Rye—No. 2			49
Bran per ton			9 50
Flour	2 00	@	5 00
Hay—Timothy	7 50	@	11 50
Mess pork per bbl			9 45
Butter, medium to best	10	@	24
Cheese	03	@	08
Beans	75	@	1 50
Eggs			13
Seeds—Timothy	2 05	@	2 12
Flax			1 13
Broom corn	03	@	06½
Potatoes	40	@	70
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@	14
umber—Common	11 00	@	18 00
Wool	12	@	28
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 50	@	5 40
Common to good	2 25	@	4 30
Hogs	3 25	@	5 22
Sheep	1 50	@	4 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 20	@	5 50
Wheat—Winter	82	@	92
Spring	86½	@	87
Corn	49	@	52
Oats	33	@	34
Mess Pork			10 50
Eggs			15¾
Butter	10		23
Wool	13		37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 50	@	4 60
Hogs	2 75	@	4 70
Sheep	1 50	@	3 00

Mental Gymnastics; OR Memory Culture.

By ADAM MILLER, M. D.

A practical and easy system by which any person, old or young, can train themselves to memorize anything they choose—

THE CLERGY, Their Sermons;
THE STUDENT, His Lessons;
THE BUSINESS MAN, Items of Business.

The author of this work was put to the severest public test, a few days ago, by reporters of all the leading Chicago daily papers. The commendatory notices which appeared the following day showed how well he stood the test:

The author, an old man, claims to have a memory more to be trusted by training under this system than even while he was young.—CHICAGO INTER-OCEAN.

We cordially commend it to all persons of failing memory as the best book obtainable on that subject. —INTERIOR.

Most ingenious; enables any one, who familiarizes himself with the system, to carry an immense mass of digested information, ready for production on demand. By experiment we have tested the author's mnemonic resources, and been moved by them to wonder.—ADVANCE.

This work, with written instructions by the author, will be sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price, $1.00. Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES.

Containing some Sixty PROHIBITION, besides many Patriotic, Social, Devotional and Miscellaneous Songs. The whole comprising over

TWO HUNDRED

CHOICE and SPIRIT-STIRRING SONGS, ODES, HYMNS, ETC., ETC.,

By the well-known

Geo. W. Clark.

—)o(—

The collection is Dedicated to HUMANITY to TEMPERANCE, PROHIBITION, and to HAPPY HOMES, against the CRIME and MISERY-BREEDING SALOONS.

SINGLE COPY 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street Chicago.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

CONQUEST OF MEXICO

Prescott's HISTORY of the CONQUEST of MEXICO. With a Preliminary View of the Ancient Mexican Civilization, and the Life of the Conqueror, Hernando Cortés. Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo. Price, $2.25. Popular Edition, two volumes in one, without illustrations, $1.25. Now ready.

Copyright. The expiration of copyright enables me now to present this great work to American readers at a popular price, yet in form worthy of the author, and worthy of the finest library. Its mechanical qualities are fairly equal to those of my best edition of "Guizot's History of France."

Whipple, the noted essayist and critic, says: "A history possessing the unity, variety, and interest of a magnificent poem. It deals with a series of facts and exhibits a gallery of characters, which to have invented would place its creator by the side of Homer; and which to realize and represent in the mode Mr. Prescott has done, required a rare degree of historical imagination."

Beyond ALL PRAISE. "This announcement is all that is needed. The work itself long ago passed beyond all praise. The thousands of people who were unable to secure it at former prices will be glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of doing so at a reduced rate."—Interior, Chicago, Ill.

"The work itself occupies too high a place among historical writings to need commendation."—The Mail, Toronto, Ontario.

Timely. "The enterprising Mr. Alden has chosen a most timely occasion for the reissue of this valuable work, and its excellent and convenient library form, its cheapness, and the widespread interest in Mexican matters that exists at present, will doubtless combine to give it an appreciative reception."—The Week, Toronto, Ontario.

"The volume before us is a very creditable piece of work mechanically, and puts Prescott's charming histories within the reach of the average pocket book."—Evangelist, St. Louis, Mo.

Fascinating. "This history has a fascinating interest, and is so well known as to need no praise."—Christian Secretary. Hartford, Conn.

"Especially interesting at this time. Is published in two handsome volumes, and like all Mr. Alden's publications is sold at an astonishingly low price."—Advertiser, Detroit, Mich.

A Noble Work; judiciously planned and admirably executed; rich with the spoils of learning easily and gracefully worn; imbued everywhere with a conscientious love of the truth, and controlled by that unerring good sense without which genius leads astray with its false lights, and learning encumbers with its heavy panoply. It will win the literary voluptuary to its pages by the attractiveness of its subject and the flowing ease of its style; and the historical student will do honor to the extent and variety of the research which it displays. . . It will take its place among those enduring productions of the human mind which age cannot stale and custom cannot wither.—G.S. HILLARD.

FERDINAND AND ISABELLA. HISTORY of the REIGN of Ferdinand and Isabella, the Catholic. By WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT. Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo, including portraits and other illustrations. Fine heavy paper, fine cloth, gilt tops. Price, $2.25. Popular Edition, from the same plates, but without illustrations, the two volumes in one. Price, $1.25. Now ready.

"Prescott had the genius to invest the dry facts of history with the charms of fiction; and yet he never sacrifices truth to the graces of style."—WESTLAKE.

"It is one of the most pleasing as well as most valuable contributions that have been made to modern history; it is the only one that gives us a faithful and sufficient picture of a period so momentous as the latter half of the fifteenth century."—London Athenæum.

"One of the finest histories of modern times, written by an author of rare felicity of diction, fervor of imagination, accuracy of statement, and exquisite beauty of style. Every one who reads at all should read Prescott."—Presbyterian, Philadelphia, Pa.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of Choice Books, 132 pages, 4 cents; Condensed Catalogue, free. The best literature of the world at the lowest prices ever known. Address,

JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York.

The Alden Book Co., Clark and Adams Sts., Chicago; 420 Yonge St., Toronto.

FARM NOTES.

NEATNESS ABOUT THE HOUSE.

Every farmer, and in fact, every person owning a yard, ought to take pride in keeping it neat and clean. Neat, well-kept yards attract the passer-by, and often add a money value to the place. We have an instance of this kind in mind, now. A man came into a certain neighborhood, recently, to buy a farm. He found two that were for sale. One was as good as the other, as regards location, soil, buildings, etc., but one had a neat yard about the house, and the other had a slovenly one, and though he could have bought the one with the slovenly yard for less money than he had to give for the other, he chose the one that cost most, simply because it looked best.

Have a well-made fence about the yard, and keep it in repair. Have a strong gate, and never let it get off its hinges. Keep the shrubs and trees trimmed up well, and never let litter of any sort accumulate. Have a big box, or hogshead, in the back yard, into which cans, old boots shoes, and the thousand and one things which accumulate about the house can be thrown from time to time. When the box or hogshead is full, burn or bury the rubbish. This refers not to the front yard only; let neatness prevail all about the place. It gives an air of thrift and prosperity, and always impresses a beholder favorably. It pays in more ways than one to have neat surroundings.—American Agriculturist.

GARDEN NOTES.

It is now about fifteen years since I adopted the rule of always plowing my garden in the fall, and it has done much to give me an early and easily worked garden. Probably on a light, sandy soil fall plowing would not be so beneficial, but for all soils inclined to be heavy, and that if plowed in spring are cloddy, I recommend it. To do the most good, however, it must be done right, and the right way is to plow in narrow lands, from twelve to sixteen feet wide, back-furrowing, so as to make them high in the center, and then with a shovel clean out all the loose soil from the dead furrows, and throw up to the middle; then open a furrow so as to carry off all the water from the garden, and not allow it to stand in the dead furrows to saturate the soil. One who has never tried this plan will be surprised to see how soon the garden will dry off in the spring, and how fine and mellow a little working will make it.—Vick's Magazine.

E. P. Roe keeps Catawba, Isabella, Diana and Iona grapes by picking them in a clear day, using grape scissors, so as not to handle much, removing all imperfect berries, and placing in clean, dry, earthen jars, in layers a bunch deep, and fill the jar in this way. Place a double sheet of paper over the top layer and put on the lid. Strong unbleached muslin is pasted entirely over the lid or cover of the jar, completely covering the opening, so that no air may enter. When this covering has fully dried and hardened the jars are buried on a dry knoll sufficiently deep to be beyond the action of the frost, a stake being placed over each jar to locate it accurately.

An exchange says: A friend tells of the remarkable success he has in the use of decayed wood as a fertilizer for his fruit trees. He has fine, thrifty trees and plenty of good, sound fruit since he adopted the common sense plan of fertilizing his orchard with decaying logs and stumps.

C. H. Johnson tells the Fruit Grower that by going carefully over his grounds several times each season and burning all plants showing raspberry rust he has succeeded to such an extent that no more than half a dozen cases of the disease appeared last year in the whole of his three acres devoted to this fruit, while another at some distance "lost almost his entire stock without knowing the cause."

Dr. Hexamer says that some years ago, when he had more apples than he could store, he hired a cellar of a neighbor and put in it several hundred barrels. When he came to take them out he found water in the cellar three or four feet deep, and concluded they were a dead loss till he examined them. Some weeks afterward he found them in excellent condition—better than those which the water had not reached. The result was ascribed to the low temperature and exclusion of air, to which we would add a uniform degree of cold, and freedom from the fluctuations caused by air currents. We suppose the water was near or at the freezing point. An objection to this mode of keeping apples is the difficulty of putting it in practice to any extent.

The Medical and Surgical
SANITARIUM

LARGEST SANITARIUM IN THE WORLD.

This institution, one of the buildings of which is shown in the cut, stands without a rival in the perfection and completeness of its appointments.

The following are a few of the special methods employed: Turkish, Russian, Roman, Thermo-Electric, Electro-vapor, Electro-hydric, Electro-chemical, Hot-air, Vapor, and every form of water bath; electricity in every form; Swedish movements—manual and mechanical—Massage, Pneumatic treatment, Vacuum treatment, sun baths. All other remedial agents of known curative value employed.

An artificial climate, possessing the advantages of perfectly pure air and an equable temperature, is produced for the benefit of those invalids who annually visit the South and other warm climates. Porches enclosed in glass afford fine opportunity for promenading without exposure, and a fine gymnasium offers every facility for thorough and systematic physical training.

Pure water, good ventilation, steam heating, perfect sewerage. Special departments for the Eye, Ear, Throat, Lungs, etc. For circulars with particulars, address SANITARIUM, Battle Creek, Mich.

NATIONAL SUICIDE,
AND
ITS PREVENTION.
BY OSCAR F. LUMRY, PH. D.

Prof. Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side.

—Cynosure.

Dr. Lumry is a man of ideas and never fails to make his readers understand just what they are. Every sentiment he writes has such an air of honesty that it will in a measure disarm those who read to criticise. It is a good book to set people to thinking, whether they believe his theories or not. The book is well worth a careful reading and study.—Inter Ocean.

On all the points named they differ radically from those which prevail in the organization of society. Either they are true or false. It is a curious fact that all of them have been stigmatized as crazy, and yet nearly all of them have been for some years steadily gaining the adherence of men of intellectual ability.—Times.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, $1.00, Paper bound, 75 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

THE HISTORY of ANTI-SLAVERY
IN THE
State and Nation.
BY REV. AUSTIN WILLEY.

514 pp., 12 mo. With NINETEEN PORTRAITS.

Price, Postpaid, $2.00.

Mr. Willey gives the best history of the times just before the present generation, which is precisely the history least apt to be known. He gives us the surface of the sea under the billows which swept off three million pair of fetters from our national decks. His book shows more accurate insight into the causes which produced the rebellion, and gives more clearly the working of those causes, than any other writer. He shows more clearly the moral force of the ballot and necessity of a new party to carry a fundamental reform than any one who has treated of it. We advise every young man and every reader of the Cynosure to obtain and read that history.—Pres. J. Blanchard. Address,

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Berea College History

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this

HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY,

of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.
BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.
Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;
Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!
Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Odd-fellowship; Freemasonry, 7 degrees; Knight Templarism 8th to 14th Masonic degrees. Three volumes, $1 each. Knights of Pythias, 25 cents. Also other illustrated rituals, sent post paid. Catalogues free. National Christian Association, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

HOME HINTS.

HEADACHE IN CHILDREN ATTENDING SCHOOL.

As a rule any child attending school and complaining occasionally of headache, is at once sent by the conscientious physician to an oculist to determine the condition of the eyes. In the January meeting of the St. Petersburg (Russia) Medical society, Prof. Bystrow, of St. Petersburg, mentioned a number of observations which he had made in a girl's normal school, and on several other children attending private schools. In the normal school were 375 girls, and of these 27 per cent suffered with headache. Of 7,478 girls and boys attending school and observed during a period of five years, 868, i. e., 11.6 per cent, were found to be affected with headache. The older the children the more frequent and violent the pain in the head, so that of the children between 14 and 18 years old, from 28 to 40 per cent were found to complain of headache. B. explains this occurrence by mental overstrain, to which the children in modern schools are exposed, for he met with this ailment not only in children visiting public schools, but also in those who, surrounded by the most favorable hygienic conditions, received private instruction at their homes.

B., for this reason, expresses the view that in every school board a physician should be a member to give his advice as an expert. His remarks gave rise to an animated discussion. Prof. Polotebnau thought that the miserable hygienic conditions, as they now exist in schools, were mainly responsible for many a disturbance of the health of the children attending these schools; while Dr. Akulow believed that in most cases anomalies of refraction were the primary cause for the headache.

The hygienic conditions in our public schools are doubtless far superior to those of Russia, but in the practice of the writer of these lines many cases in the children attending the public schools and suffering with headache showed no abatement of the pain whatever after the children had been supplied by an expert with the proper glasses, while diminished studies and greatly increased out-door exercise had the desired effect. We believe that in our schools the memory of the children is taxed too early and too persistently.—Medical and Surgical Reporter.

DUTIES TO SERVANTS.—However the mistress of the house may regard her duties to those employed by her, she cannot very well put out of sight the fact that if her servants read anything worth reading, it must be provided by her. For this reason I advocate having two or three shelves in the dining room. On these should be placed not only the cook-book and the literature of the kitchen, but some other good books and papers. Let it be understood that these may be taken and be read at any time. It is just possible that some of these, like the Bibles in the cars, may not be used, but it is not probable. If anyone fears that a taste for reading will interfere with a legitimate performance of duties, I would like to cite to her the case of a woman whom I know who reads Carlyle and quotes Burns, and is also an accomplished cook, and one of the most conscientious diggers-out-of-corners ever employed as a maid-of-all-work. A judicious selection of cook-books is an actual inspiration to a girl, and a perusal of them will lead to that intelligent interest in work which makes it pleasurable.—Evening Post.

MOSQUITOES, RATS AND MICE.—If mosquitoes or other blood-suckers infest our sleeping-rooms at night, we uncork a bottle of old pennyroyal, and these animals leave in great haste, nor will they return so long as the air in the room is loaded with the fumes of that aromatic herb. If rats enter the cellar, a little powdered potash, thrown in their holes or mixed with meal and scattered in their runways, never fails to drive them away. Cayenne pepper will keep the buttery and store-room from ants and cockroaches. If a mouse makes an entrance into any part of your dwellings, saturate a rag in cayenne, in solution, and stuff it into the hole, which can then be repaired with either wood or mortar. No rat or mouse will eat the rag for the purpose of opening communication with a depot of supplies.—Sel.

If you wish to pour boiling hot liquid into a glass jar or tumbler it can be safely done by putting a spoon in the dish before you pour.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, Room 12, Cor. State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
MAIN OFFICE: 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY

Gives the experience and advice of the most successful Bible students of the day. Shows how to interpret parables, prophecy and the Scriptures generally; gives the meaning of the peculiar symbols of color, size, number and substance; contains an analysis showing the character of contents of every book in the Bible, its central truths and practical lessons, the errors refuted, promises and prophecies fulfilled, its connection with other parts of the Scriptures, and many useful suggestions; intended for those who are thirsting for a deeper acquaintance with the sacred volume, and desire the plain pointed truth and in cheap form. Printed on good paper, strong cloth covers, 50 cents per copy.

TRACTS on Holiness, Tobacco, Pride, Dress, Secret Societies, Backsliding, Justification, Repentance, Dancing, Prohibition, Church Entertainments, and others. Either of these can be had at 25 cents per hundred, or an assorted package of all for 30 cents.

LEAFLETS for letters and general distribution. An assortment of pointed, short, red-hot truths on vital themes, 10 cents per packet.

MOTTO NOTE PAPER, on which is printed a variety of striking and useful mottoes. 30 cents per block of sixty sheets.

TRACT ENVELOPES, assorted packet, 10 cents. We can take American bills or postage stamps, but not silver. If bills are sent, register the letter. Address, REV. A. SIMS. Uxbridge, Ontario.

"A THRILLING WARNING."

THE

Man Traps of the City,

BY THOS. E. GREEN.

Mothers—place this book in the hands of your sons. It treats of

The Tiger and His Den.
Cups of Flame.
The Scarlet Sin.
Embezzlement.
The Devil's Printing Press.
Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

A book that is sensational, not from excited rhetoric or florid figures of speech, but from the facts that flow like melted lava from the pen of the writer. It is a book of timely warnings, where sin and crime are shorn of their mask, robbed of the glamour with which they have been surrounded by the prurient literature of the day, and painted in strong, true colors. The life of the profligate is here shown in its true light, not as a life that, though wicked, has its delights, but as a thing of death, now and in future life to be abhorred.—WESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Price, postpaid, Cloth bound, 75 cents. Paper bound, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, gripe, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 25 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees. 304 pages.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents, per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each: per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover, 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Balu. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on MASONRY. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Mayer Courtenay of Charleston, S. C., telegraphs that in order to shelter the homeless people before the cold weather sets in from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 is immediately required. The Mayor estimates the total damage to property by the earthquake at from five to six millions. The Produce Exchange Charleston fund amounts to $7,186, the Stock Exchange fund to $12,000, and the Cotton Exchange to $6,492. The fund at Boston amounts to $20,000. Buffalo, $4,000, and in other cities lesser amounts. Charleston had a few slight earthquake shocks Saturday. Her relief fund committee has received $44,777. Ninety deaths have been caused by the earthquake.

At Manistee, Mich., Saturday, R. L. Peters struck oil at a depth of 1,920 feet. Three or four thousand barrels flowed out in a short time.

Near Decatur, Ill., Wednesday night at a wedding supper the bride and groom and fifty guests became deathly sick, with indications of poisoning. All the doctors in the district were summoned, and the sufferers were soon out of danger. Chicken which had been prepared in a copper kettle is believed to have caused the trouble.

An attempt was made to blow up with dynamite the signal tower of the Lake Shore Railroad near the Stock Yards, south of Chicago, Saturday. The perpetrator is believed to be in sympathy with the strikers.

Canada has formally demanded the unconditional surrender of the schooner, Onward, seized by the United States revenue cutter Corwin in Alaskan waters. The peremptory character of the demand is said to reflect the spirit of the English Ministry, and our government is warned that if it does not recognize Canada's position we must take the consequences. Canada claims the Pacific Ocean free to all for any purpose.

The fire losses in the United States and Canada during August foot up $13,000,000, 80 per cent above the usual August average.

John Q. Cannon, son of the Mormon ex Congressman, and until lately a dignitary in the Mormon church, confessed to being guilty of adultery. To the astonishment of all he was cast off from the church.

New Yorkers saw a brilliant meteor in the Southern sky Sunday night about 8:30 o'clock. It rivaled the moon in brilliancy. It passed steadily from South to North, and left a train of fire behind.

S. D. Turner, a railroad engineer, killed himself Monday at Birmingham, Ala., because he had been fined for being drunk. He was to have been married Oct. 1.

An excursion train carrying the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers dashed into a coal train near Glendon, Pa., Sunday night, the fireman being killed and the engineer seriously injured. The engine and several cars were wrecked.

An explosion of natural gas in a well at Warsaw, Ill., Monday killed one man fatally wounded a second, and frightfully burned two others.

In the old Young Men's Association Building at Indianapolis Tuesday the falling of a wall precipitated twenty-one workmen twenty feet to a floor below. Four were fatally injured and three dangerously, while the remainder suffered painful wounds.

Resolutions were adopted by the Board of Trustees of the Chicago University that, as the corporation is unable to raise the money under the proposed settlement with the Mutual Life Insurance Company further educational work of the University be suspended.

The Hon. William Baxter, a leading temperance advocate, prominent manufacturer and distinguished Quaker, died at his home in Richmond, Ind., Monday night, Sept. 6th, in his 63d year.

Monday afternoon, at Daleyville, Karnes county, Texas, a battle took place between officers and two white men, backed by two Mexicans. The Sheriff, his brother, and another man were killed, while two persons were dangerously and four others slightly wounded.

FOREIGN.

The Labrador fisheries are reported to be an entire failure. Not enough fish have been caught to pay for their transportation, and as a consequence 70,000 people are destitute.

Revolutionists in Coahuila, Mexico, under the leadership of the famous Coyote, have seized El Paso and begun war against the Diaz government. A brother of the Coyote has also taken the field, and issued a proclamation calling the Mexicans to arms. The insurgents in the States of Nuevo Leon and Tamaulipas are trying to concentrate their forces in the Coahuila mountains.

It is reported that Bismarck is supporting the project of a Russian-Turkish alliance under which Russia guarantees to the Sultan the regaining of Cyprus and Egypt on condition that Turkey allows Russia's war ships free passage through the Dardanelles and supports the candidacy of the Duke of Oldenburg for the Bulgarian throne.

The Paris Univers publishes a telegram from the Bishop of Tonquin saying that 700 Christians have been massacred and forty villages burned in the Province of Manhoa, and that 9,000 Christians are perishing of hunger.

Parnell's Land bill has had a first reading in Parliament. It is aimed to prevent the evictions by non-resident landlords. It is understood that Gladstone who is now spending a season of rest on the Continent is not in favor of the measure.

BUSINESS.

SPECIMEN NUMBERS.—For ten cents we will send the Christian Cynosure for five weeks to any address, thus giving them a chance to examine the paper and subscribe if they think best. Could you make better use of a dollar of the Lord's money than to send to ten of your friends five copies of the Cynosure?

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

still remains at $2 00 per year, but the N. C. A. at its annual meeting continued the offer for another year of the special rate of one dollar and fifty cents per year in advance.

One month	$ .15	One year	$1.50
Two months	.25	*Two years	3.00
Four months	.50	*Three years	4 50
Six months	.75	*Four years	6.00
Eight months	1.00	*Five years	7.50

*To any one who will renew their subscription for two years twenty cents worth of any of our publications will be sent, or forty cents worth for three years, or sixty cents worth for four years, or eighty cents worth for five years. The renewal of your subscription for several years at a time will benefit you some, but the cause more. Try it!

PLEASE BE PROMPT in paying for your papers. It costs the reform and its friends many dollars every year to send notices that subscriptions have expired, that arrears are due. Five cents is not a large sum by itself, but when it is multiplied by hundreds and thousands, the amount lost to the cause is realized to be great. Can you not inaugurate a reform in this matter, and renew a little before your subscription expires, and if in arrears pay up at once? Would it not be a good thing to do?

But a few more orders can be filled by the N. C. A. of that "Wonderful Life of a Wonderful Woman," Mrs. Laura S. Haviland, for the reason that the edition is almost exhausted. If you are thinking of getting this book, better order at once. 520 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.75.

An encouraging number of our friends are taking advantage of the low rate for trial subscribers to sow the good seed in in new homes. Shall not many more copies of the Cynosure be sent out this year than ever before?

Do you read the donations to the fund for sending the Cynosure South? The donations this week will send the Cynosure for eight months to sixty different addresses. That the paper is appreciated is witnessed by many letters.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD

FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS FOR $1.00.

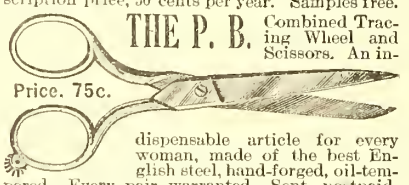
Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞"A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application. WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

EUTOCIA A Book for every woman,

Introductory preface by EGBERT GUERNSEY M. D., also preface by Dr. GEO. E. SHIPMAN, and chapters on the care and management of infants by the same experienced author. Mothers, Wives and Daughters. Not a compilation of other works and clippings, but the careful, practical study of Mrs. Dr. E. G. Cook, for over a quarter of a century. It is ENDORSED by the leading Ministers, Physicians, Daily, Weekly, Religious and Medical Press

COMPLETE LADIES GUIDE.



It treats fully on easy child-bearing, and health of children. In short a complete manual for the household. Mailed free on receipt of price where we have no Agents. Alphabetical table of contents free. AGENTS find a ready sale for it. Handsomely bound in English, Silk Cloth, $2.00. Morocco $2.75. Address for terms

ARCADE PUB. CO., 143 La Salle St., Chicago.

LADIES TO INTRODUCE our Ladies' Journal in the best homes. We make you the following Liberal Offer: We will send the paper, postpaid, from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, 1887, on receipt of ONLY 10 CENTS.

AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING

Is decidedly a ladies' journal. Published monthly, handsomely illustrated, filled with original Stories, Poems, with departments on Home Cooking, Art, Receipes, Bric-a-brac, Artistic Needle Work, Window Gardening, Flowers, Mothers' Corner, Children's Nook, Household Pets and all Home Subjects. By many of our best writers. Subscription price, 50 cents per year. Samples free.

Combined Tracing Wheel and Scissors. An indispensable article for every woman, made of the best English steel, hand-forged, oil-tempered. Every pair warranted. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Or we will send the scissors to any one that will send two subscribers to AMERICAN HOUSEKEEPING and $1.00. American Housekeeping Co., 143 LaSalle street, Chicago.

Suggestive Outline

BIBLE STUDIES

AND

BIBLE READINGS.

By JOHN H. ELLIOTT,

Author (with S. R. Riggs) of

Notes and Suggestions for Bible Readings.

TOPICS in this book in relation to Bible studies are discussed by such men as

George F. Pentecost,	A. J. Gordon,
Horatius Bonar,	William Lincoln,
Henry Morehouse,	J. H. Vincent,
George C. Needham,	Chas. M. Whittelsey,
D. L. Moody,	R. C. Morse,
D. W. Whittle,	L. W. Munhall,
J. H. Brookes,	Etc., etc., etc.

The Bible readings are by all of the above and many others. The book contains several hundred Bible readings, and is exceedingly suggestive and helpful not only to the minister and evangelist, but to the Christian who wants to understand and know how to use his Bible. 311 pages with full index of titles and index of subjects.

Do you want to take part in prayer-meeting acceptably? This book will help you. Do you want to be helped as a speaker? This book will help you. Do you want to lead meetings better? Study this book and you will do it.

Price, $1.00. Sent by mail postpaid.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

AGENTS WANTED Lady or Gentleman in every city and village in the United States to introduce our Chines Secret Laundry Glossing. Good, live agents can earn from $15 to $25 per week. Descriptive circulars and terms mailed free on application. GARDEN CITY CHEMICAL CO., 258 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill.

ATWATER'S Newspaper File is the favorite for Reading Rooms, Hotels, Libraries, Offices, &c. Lightest, Neatest, Cheapest. Sample postpaid 25c. Circulars free. J. H. Atwater, Providence, R. I.

CORNS, WARTS AND BUNIONS CURED in five days. No pain. Warranted. Mailed for 25 cents in stamps by L. O. SHAFFER Altoona, Iowa

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND

FRIENDLY GREETINGS

40 PAGES ILLUSTRATED 75 CENTS A YEAR.

Others say: "It is a charming illustrated magazine, 40 pages monthly, of anecdote and argument for the Christian home. Finely and profusely illustrated. At 75 cents a year certainly one of the cheapest extant; but better, one of the best. Full of the Gospel spirit. Excellent temperance sketches, missionary intelligence, short stories, all clean and wholesome, calculated to promote purity and knowledge in the 'Home Circle.' Whatever its circulation it ought to be doubled."—N. Y. Christian at Work.

A record of Faith Work.

GOOD PAY TO CANVASSERS.

Send 6 cents for specimen copy to the Editor and Publisher. REV. J. F. AVERY, Mizpah Cottage, Kempt Road, Halifax, N. S.

Baccalaureate Sermon,

BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD,

Is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at two cents [one postage stamp] each, or ten for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ills.

Card Photographs.

PRES. CHAS. G. FINNEY,
ELDER DAVID BERNARD,
CAPT. WM. MORGAN, and
PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Price, 10 Cents each.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPHS OF

MORGAN MONUMENT,

20 Cents each.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Price 10 cents, postpaid. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BAGSTER'S Fac Simile Series.

FacSimile Series. BIBLES!

The only Bibles that will bear the constant wear of a long life.

Extra flexible silk sewed in best Bagster morocco binding. With Maps, Index and other Helps. For sale by all Booksellers. If you cannot get them from your bookseller, send to us direct.

S. BAGSTER & SONS, Limited, London, England.